Answer to demurrer to the indictment

Filed March 9, 1944

Now comes J. Albert Woll, United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, and in answer to the demurrer to the indictment heretofore filed says:

1. That the indictment is not bad for improper joinder of offenses in one indictment, since the indictment charges but one offense, namely, the offense of treason against the United States, for the overt acts are merely indicia or evidences of that one offense and do not constitute distinct crimes in themselves. Overt Act No. 26 does not charge a conspiracy to commit the crime of treason but rather definitely charges an overt act of treason. In this relation, the overt act of treason as charged is practically identical with overt act No. 17, in the case of United States vs. Walter Otto Froehling, in which recently in this Court, the identical argument was made and overruled.

Overt Act No. 29, also definitely charges an overt act of treason, the fact that the overt act may incidentally also charge the violation of another statute, being merely incidental.

Overt Act No. 27, definitely charges a physical act done
23 with the purpose and intent of giving aid and comfort to Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission in the United States as an agent of the Government of the German Reich. It further charges that such act was done with the intent of concealing evidence and information concerning his said mission, his activities and identity, for the purpose of aiding him in this mission. It is clear that such an act constitutes an overt act of treason.

The same may be said of overt act No. 28, which contains similar allegations. These acts, clearly done as alleged for the purposes indicated, can be construed in no other way than acts in furtherance of giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States.

2. The indictment properly alleges the commission of the crime of treason, together with overt acts committed in pursuance of and carrying out of said crime.

Wherefore, the United States of America by J. Albert Woll, United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, prays that the demurrer to the indictment be overruled.

J. ALBERT WOLL,
United States Attorney.

Petition for inquiry into the sanity of Hans Max Haupt, defendant

Filed March 10, 1944

To the Honorable Judge of said Court:

Now comes Paul A. F. Warnholtz, counsel for Hans Max Haupt, the defendant, and respectfully represents to this Honorable Court that he has reasonable grounds to believe the said defendant at this time to be non compos mentis to such an extent as makes it impossible for the defendant to either plead to the charges in this cause or to defend himself thereon.

Petitioner hereby informs this court that the defendant at all times since latter part of July, 1942, has apparently been unable to communicate to your petitioner an intelligent and connected statement of facts relating to the charges contained in the indictment herein, or relating to the similar charges contained in the indictment in the case of United States vs. Hans Max Haupt et al., now pending in this court as Case No. 33481; that the interviews which petitioner had at various times since July, 1942, with the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, disclosed an impairment of memory, which apparently made it impossible for said defendant to impart such knowledge on his part to petitioner regarding facts, as is essential towards representing the defendant as his counsel in the trial on the aforementioned charges.

25 Your petitioner further informs this Honorable Court, that he has reasonable grounds to believe that the said defendant attempted to commit suicide during the early part of July 1942, while in a state of delirium, by severing or attempting to sever the veins at the wrists of one of his hands; that at the time of such attempted suicide the defendant was in the custody of agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and was being held by said agents in a basement cell of the Winnetka Police Jail; that thereupon the defendant was removed by said F. B. I. agents to some hospital, to petitioner unknown, and kept there for a period of several weeks, during all of which time the defendant was in a state of delirium;

That the defendant again attempted to commit suicide, by hanging himself, during the month of August 1942, or at about that time, while in the custody of the United States Marshall, and kept at the Cook County jail; and your petitioner further avers:

That the defendant has always disclaimed towards the petitioner any recollection whatsoever concerning such suicide attempts, but has often related to the petitioner, as actual happenings, occasions when a white bear and roaring lions entered the cell where the defendant was kept at the aforementioned Winnetka Police Jail, and has related various plots by inmates of the Cook County Jail to secretly kill and dismember the defendant and to smuggle out the various parts of his body, wrapped in newspaper; that the defendant has at various times made many other irrational statements to your petitioner, which your petitioner believes to be the result of a derangement of mind.

26 Your petitioner further avers that the defendant is apparently in a very poor state of health; that the defendant's weight in June 1942, is said to have been about 143 pounds, alleged to be his normal weight, and that his weight at the present time is about 119 pounds.

Wherefore, your petitioner, as attorney for the defendant herein, desires to submit the mental and physical condition of this defendant to this court for such examination by competent physicians and otherwise, as the court may deem best to make, in order to determine whether the defendant should at this time be required to plead and be subjected to trial herein.

(Signed) PAUL A. F. WARNHOLTZ,
Attorney for Hans Max Haupt, defendant.

Order

April 19, 1944

This cause having come on to be heard upon the application of Paul A. F. Warmholtz, attorney for the defendant, asking for a hearing to determine the present mental condition of the said defendant, and the Court having heretofore ordered that Dr. Roland E. Mackay, Dr. Loren Avery, Dr. Francis Gerty, and Dr. Harold S. Hulbert, psychiatrists, examine the said defendant to determine whether the said defendant is, as of the present time, mentally capable of understanding the proceedings against him and rationally able to advise with his counsel as to his defense, and the said psychiatrists having reported their findings in writing to the Court; a jury was impaneled and sworn to try the above issues; and the said jury having heard the testimony of the said psychiatrists, and having heard evidence presented by both sides in addition to the findings of the said psychiatrists, the said jury then and there returned a verdict, finding that the said Hans Max Haupt is able to comprehend intelligently the nature of the proceedings against him and is able rationally to advise with his counsel as to his defense:

It is, therefore, the finding of this Court that the verdict of the jury in the above entitled cause is well warranted by the evidence, and that the said Hans Max Haupt is mentally capable of intelligently understanding the nature of the proceedings against him, and that he is capable of advising rationally with his counsel as to his defense:

36 It is, therefore, ordered that the said defendant having been found to be mentally capable of understanding the nature of the proceedings against him and rationally capable of advising with his counsel as to his defense, be immediately arraigned and plead to the indictment of this said cause; and the said defendant having upon arraignment duly entered his plea of not guilty to the charges in the indictment.

Motion to quash and dismiss indictment

Filed April 24, 1944

To the Honorable Judge of said Court:

The defendant, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz, his attorney, respectfully moves the Court to quash and dismiss the indictment herein, and as reasons therefor shows the following:

That there is now a former indictment pending before his Honorable Court, entitled United States of America v. Hans Max Haupt, Erna Emma Haupt, Walter Otto Froehling, Lucille Froehling, Otto Richard Wergin, Kate Martha Wergin, case No. 33481, wherein this defendant is charged with the commission of the crime of treason; that a trial was had upon said indictment and that this defendant was found guilty, from which judgment this defendant appealed to the Honorable United States Circuit Court of Appeals; that thereupon said Honorable United States Circuit Court of Appeals reversed said judgment and remanded the cause for a new trial, which has been set for January 17th, 1944, by this Honorable Court, and that the said indictment, case No. 33481, remains pending and undisposed of.

This defendant further shows that by order of this Court he is now being held without bail under said indictment in said case No. 33481.

This defendant further avers that the allegations of the crime of treason and the Overt Acts alleged in support thereof in 42 the said indictment in said case No. 33481 are substantially the same as the allegations of the crime of treason and the Overt Acts alleged in support thereof in the indictment herein and that the prosecution has failed and refused to enter a nolle prosse in the case No. 33481 as to this defendant.

This defendant further avers that an acquittal of the defendant herein would leave this defendant in the custody of the marshal pursuant to the order entered heretofore by this Honorable Court with reference to the indictment in said case No. 33481, holding this defendant without bail; and that the continued pendency of said case No. 33481 may subject this defendant to double prosecution for the same alleged offense, and otherwise embarrass this defendant in his rights.

Dated at Chicago, Illinois, on the 20th day of April 1944.

Attorney for the Defendant.

And the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, makes the following separate and additional motions with respect to the specific overt acts charged in the said indictment:

And in support of all and each of the foregoing motions, and with respect to all and each of the said numbered overt acts in said indictment, this defendant shows unto the Court as follows:

7. There is no evidence in the cash showing any intent on the part of this defendant to commit treason against the United States.

8. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant committed any of the acts alleged in the indictment as "overt acts" with intent to adhere to the enemies of the United States and to give said enemies aid and comfort, or with any intent to commit treason against the United States.

9. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant gave aid and comfort, if any aid and comfort was given, to more than one person, or to any person other than Herbert Haupt.

10. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant intended to or did give aid and comfort to Herbert Haupt, or in any other manner assisted the said Herbert Haupt, with the intention of thereby furthering the interests of any nation with which the United States was at war, or with the intention of committing any act detrimental to the interests of the United States.

Demurrer to the indictment

Filed March 6, 1944

Hans Max Haupt, the defendant herein, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz, his attorney, demurs to the indictment herein upon the following grounds:

1. That the indictment is bad for improper joinder of offenses in one indictment, and for duplicity, in that it charges the defendant in one indictment and in a single count thereof with the commission of twenty-nine separate and distinct acts, each one thereof allegedly constituting a crime; and further in this that some of said separate and distinct acts are of the same class of crimes or offenses, and some are of different classes of crimes or offenses, and punishable by different penalties, to wit:

Overt Acts Numbered 1 to 25, both inclusive, attempt to charge the commission of twenty-five distinct acts of the crime of treason, punishable under Section 2 of Title 18, U. S. C. by death, or at the discretion of the Court by imprisonment of not less than five years and a fine of not less than $10,000;

Overt Act Number 26 charges in fact a conspiracy by and between the defendant and other persons, to commit the crime
76 of treason, punishable under Section 34, Title 50, U. S. C. and/or under Section 88, Title 18, U. S. C. by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years or both;

Overt Act Number 29 charges in fact a violation of the Espionage Act, as defined by Section 33 of Title 50, U. S. C., punishable under said section by a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than twenty years, or both.

Overt Acts Numbered 27 and 28 do not charge a violation of any known crime, and are not subject to any punishment whatsoever.

2. That the alleged offenses and each of them set forth in said indictment and charged to have been committed by this defendant, do not constitute acts of treason within the meaning of and as defined by the Constitution of the United States of America, and as stated in Section 1, Title 18, U. S. C.

Wherefore, this defendant prays judgment dismissing the indictment and discharging him from custody.

PAUL A. F. WARNHOLTZ,
Attorney for the defendant.

No. 44 Cr. 129

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Charge to jury

Filed June 9, 1944

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

1. It is the duty of the court to deliver to you instructions for your guidance in the consideration of the evidence and in your deliberations upon this case.

2. The instructions which the court will give you, in so far as they pertain to the principles of law applicable to the case, must be accepted by you as a binding control and guide in your consideration of the evidence and in your deliberations.

3. The responsibility rests upon you to determine the facts of this case, under the law as the court may give it to you, uninfluenced by any expression of opinion that the court has made or may hereafter make upon matters of fact. The court has not intended at any time during the trial of this case, and does not intent at any time, to express any opinion on any matter of fact, and if the court has expressed or does express any opinion on any matter of fact you are at liberty to disregard such opinion, and it is your duty to disregard it, if it is different from your own opinion.

4. Your verdict in this case must be reached from a consideration of all the evidence in the case, but if any evidence was admitted and was later stricken out, you must wholly disregard such evidence as was striken out.

5. During the trial of a law suit it often becomes the duty of counsel for the parties to object to questions, or to evidence, and I instruct you that you shall not take into consideration against such party either such objections or the number of them, nor permit yourselves to be in any way influenced by such objections against the parties.

6. This is a criminal case, and the law in such cases is that a defendant comes into court presumed to be innocent, and that presumption protects him until such time, if such time shall come, when the jury shall believe from the evidence in the case, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant is guilty as charged in the indictment.

7. The guilt of an accused is not to be inferred because the facts proven are consistent with his guilt, but, on the contrary, before there can be a verdict of guilty you must believe from all the evidence, and beyond a reasonable doubt, that the facts proven are inconsistent with his innocence. If two conclusions can reasonably be drawn from the evidence, one of innocence and one of guilt, you should adopt the former.

8. The defendant on trial has pleaded not guilty. This puts the burden of proving the charges in the indictment upon the Government, and you cannot find the defendant guilty unless, from all the evidence, you believe him guilty of the offense charged in the indictment beyond a reasonable doubt.

9. A reasonable doubt is what the term implies,—a doubt founded on reason. It does not mean every conceivable kind of doubt. It does not mean a doubt that may be purely imaginary or fanciful, or one that is merely captious or speculative. It means, simply, an honest doubt that appeals to reason and is founded upon reason. If, after considering all the evidence in the case, you have such a doubt in your mind as would cause 81 you, or any other reasonably prudent person, to pause or hesitate before acting in a grave transaction of your own life, then you have such a doubt as the law contemplates as a reasonable doubt.

10. You are the sole judges of the credibility, and the weight which is to be given to the testimony, of the witnesses who have testified upon this trial. In weighing the testimony of each witness you should carefully scrutinize the same; consider all the circumstances under which the witness testifies; his demeanor on the stand; the relation which he bears to the Government or the defendant; the manner in which he might be affected by the verdict; the extent to which he is corroborated or contradicted by other credible evidence, and, in short, any circumstances that tend to throw light upon his credibility. And, applying these tests which I have just stated, it is for you to determine the weight which is to be given to the testimony of each witness.

11. If you believe from the evidence that any witness in this case has knowingly and wilfully testified falsely on this trial to any matter material to the issues in this case, as I shall define them to you in these instructions, you are at liberty to disregard the entire testimony of such witness, except insofar as it has been corroborated, if you find it has been corroborated, by other credible evidence or by facts and circumstances proven on the trial.

12. You should not allow either sympathy for the defendant or prejudice against him to influence your deliberations. You should not be influenced by anything other than the law and the evidence in the case. You must also disregard anything that you may have heard from others than witnesses or read in the newspapers concerning the case.

13. Certain witnesses who have testified in this proceeding have admitted that they have been convicted of felonies. Proof of conviction of a witness of a felony is evidence tending to impeach his credibility, and, in determining the weight which the jury should attach to such witness's testimony, the jury have a right to take into consideration the fact that the witness has been convicted of a felony. You have heard the testimony of these witnesses and observed them while testifying. The fact that a witness has been convicted of a felony does not mean that he cannot tell the truth. You should weigh the testimony of such a witness by the same rules that you would weigh the testimony of any other witness. But the fact that a witness has been convicted of a felony may be considered by you in determining the credibility of such a witness.

14. The fact that an indictment has been returned is not evidence; nor is the indictment evidence; and neither the indictment nor the return thereof should be considered by you as any evidence of the guilt of the defendant. Neither should the indictment be treated by you as raising any kind of presumption or creating any kind of prejudice against the defendant. The indictment is simply the form or manner prescribed by law for preferring a charge against an individual, and must be regarded in that light, and in no other light.

15. You must consider each of the statements which I make to you not merely by itself, but as related to all other points covered by the charge. In other words, you must consider my charge as a whole.

16. The paragraphs of these instructions have been numbered for the convenience of the court and counsel but the numberings do not in any way limit my charge that the instructions shall be considered as one whole.

82. 17. Preliminary to your being sworn to act as jurors in this case you were examined by counsel as to your competency and qualifications to act as jurors in this case. As part of such examination each of you answered all questions put to you by counsel for the prosecution and for the defendant. Your answers showed that you were competent and qualified to act as jurors and the parties to this case accepted you as jurors on their faith in the truth of your answers. The answers you then made to such questions in regard to your competency, qualifications, fairness, and lack of prejudice are as binding upon you now as they were then, and should so remain until you are finally discharged from further consideration of this case. It would be improper and unlawful for any of you to disregard the answers that rendered you competent jurors.

18. The defendant in this case, Hans Max Haupt, is charged by an indictment returned by a grand jury in this District on February 25, 1944, with the crime of treason.

19. The definition of treason in the Constitution of the United States is as follows: "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort."

20. The definition of treason in the statutes of the United States is as follows: "Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States, levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort within the United States or elsewhere, is guilty of treason."

20-a. The indictment in this case does not charge a levying of war against the United States. It does charge an adhering to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort.

21. The indictment in this case alleges that Hans Max Haupt, at Chicago, in the Eastern Division of the Northern District of Illinois, continuously and at all times from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, being a person owing allegiance to the United States—in violation of said duty of allegiance, did unlawfully, feloniously, maliciously, intentionally, traitorously and treasonably adhere to the enemies of the United States, that is, to the Government of the German Reich, its counselors, armies, navies, agents, representatives and subjects, with which the United States, at all times since December 11, 1941, has been at war, and did give to said enemies aid and comfort.

22. The indictment further alleges that Hans Max Haupt has been a citizen of the United States since 1930, and a resident thereof since 1923.

23. The indictment further charges that one Herbert Haupt, an agent and representative of the German Reich, came into the United States on or about June 17, 1942, and during the period of time above mentioned, namely, June 17, 1942, to July 17, 1942, served the German Reich as a secret agent, saboteur and spy, in carrying on its war with the United States, which service to the German Reich involved the destruction of certain war materials, premises and utilities of the United States, the disbursement of money, received from the German Reich in connection with 83 the procurement, manufacture, and use of explosive substances and sabotage devices for and in the destruction of the war material, premises and utilities of the United States, and the recruiting and hiring of persons to engage in unlawful and hostile enterprises consisting in the use of said explosives and sabotage devices to destroy the war materials, premises and utilities of the United States.

24. The indictment further charges that the service of Herbert Haupt also involved the securing of information, and the employment of other persons so to do, concerning the national defense of the United States and the mental attitude of its citizens toward the war and the German Reich, and transmitting such information to the German Reich to assist it in carrying on its war against the United States.

25. The indictment further alleges that said service of Herbert Haupt also involved the making and conveying of false statements and reports within the United States, and the employment of other persons so to do, with intent to interfere with the operation and success of the military and naval forces of the United States, to the advantage of the German Reich. And said service of Herbert Haupt also involved his remaining within the United States for further orders from the German Reich pertaining to said service.

26. The indictment charges that the adherence of the defendant Hans Max Haupt, to the German Reich, its counselors, armies, navies, agents, representatives and subjects, and said giving of aid and comfort by him consisted in his receiving, harboring, relieving and assisting Herbert Haupt in transporting him by automobile and in his furnishing hospitality to Herbert Haupt from June 17, 1942, to July 17, 1942, in his aiding, abetting, meeting with, assisting, counseling and advising Herbert Haupt concerning the service of said Herbert Haupt to the German Reich; in his countenancing said service; in his carrying out requests and instructions of said Herbert Haupt in connection with said service; in his purchasing an automobile for said Herbert Haupt; in his attempting to procure employment for said Herbert Haupt; in his giving false information regarding and concealing the identity of Herbert Haupt, as a representative of the German Reich and the mission of Herbert Haupt, in the United States; in his receiving, holding, possessing, safeguarding and concealing the property and funds of said Herbert Haupt, and in misrepresenting and concealing the ownership of said property and funds, and in his maintaining, harboring, feeding and supporting said Herbert Haupt throughout said period of time.

27. It is further alleged that the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, when so adhering and giving aid and comfort to the German Reich, its counselors, armies, navies, agents, representatives and subjects, well knew all the matters heretofore set forth in the indictment, and well knew the character of said service of Herbert Haupt to the German Reich, and intended to and did adhere to said enemies and gave them aid and comfort.

28. It is further alleged in the indictment that the defendant, in the prosecution, performance and execution of said treason, and with the intention of adhering to said enemies and giving them aid and comfort did do, perform and commit certain overt and manifest acts. The indictment then enumerates certain alleged overt acts.

29. It has been proved that the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, is and since 1930 has been a naturalized citizen of the United States, and, accordingly, he was, at the times mentioned in the indictment, a person owing allegiance to the United States.

30. It has also been proved, that, at the times mentioned in the indictment, namely, from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, there existed a state of war betwsen the United States and the German Reich, and, therefore, the German Reich, the subjects, members of the military and naval forces of the German Reich, and all persons engaged by or working for that government, as agents, spies or saboteurs to assist that government in the prosecution of its war or to hamper the United States in the prosecution of our war against the German Reich were enemies of the United States.

31. Every citizen of the United States, whether by birth or by naturalization, as a matter of law owes a duty of allegiance to the United States and continues to owe this duty of allegiance at all times, though he may have been born in another country with which this country is at war.

32. Although not explicity set forth in either the constitutional or statutory provisions, an intent to adhere and to give aid and comfort to the enemy is an essential element of the crime of treason. Without such intent to adhere and to give aid and comfort to the enemy, there is no treason.

84 33. When a state of war exists any act, done deliberately and intentionally, and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined by one owing allegiance to the United States which, by fair construction, is directed toward the furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemies of the United States and gives them aid and comfort (or if that is the natural effect of the act) is treasonable in its character.

34. The words in the United States statute "adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort," and words of similar import in the Constitution mean in general any intentional act done with treasonable intent as heretofore defined by one owing allegiance to the United States which clearly indicates a want of loyalty to the United States and a sympathy with its enemies and which, by fair construction, is directly and intentionally done in furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemy, or to strengthen the enemy, or weaken the power of the United States to resist or attack the enemy.

35. Regardless of any blood relationship which may have existed between Herbert Haupt and Hans Max Haupt, if you find that the natural effect or consequence of any act or acts performed by Hans Max Haupt as alleged in the indictment and submitted to your consideration, if any were performed, was to give aid and comfort to Herbert Haupt in his capacity as an enemy agent, and that such act or acts were performed intentionally with knowledge of the fact that he was an enemy agent and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined then such act or acts were treasonable in character.

36. Applying these general principles to this case, if you find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that during the period from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, Herbert Haupt was an agent of the government of the German Reich, or an enemy saboteur, and that he was engaged with or working for the government of the German Reich to assist that government in the prosecution of its war against the United States, or to hamper the United States in the prosecution of its war against Germany, and that the defendant knew that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent or saboteur as aforesaid, and with such knowledge adhered to said Herbert Haupt as an enemy agent and with treasonable intent, as hereinbefore defined, gave him aid and comfort as such enemy as alleged in the indictment, then you may find that such defendant intended to adhere to the enemies of the United States and give aid and comfort to them.

37. If you are not satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant's intention and purpose in acting as he did was evil, that is, if you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to aid and comfort the enemies of the United States the defendant must be found not guilty. If you believe the defendant's intention in doing what he did during the period from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, was not in any way to injure the United States but merely to assist his son, Herbert Haupt, as an individual, as distinguished from assisting him in his purposes, if such existed, of aiding the German Reich, or of injuring the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty.

38. A person cannot be convicted of treason merely for having the intention in his own mind to adhere to and give aid and comfort to the enemy. This intention must be manifested by what is termed an "overt Act."

39. An "overt Act", in criminal law, is an outward act done in pursuance and manifestation of a criminal intent or design, or more simply an act performed for the object of carrying out a criminal purpose.

40. An overt act has been defined by high authority as follows: "An overt act" is such an act as manifests a criminal intention and tends towards the accomplishment of the criminal object."

41. An overt act in itself may be a perfectly innocent act, standing by itself; but it must be in some manner in furtherance of the crime.

42. The constitution of the United States provides that: "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act."

43. It is, therefore, necessary before the defendant can be found guilty of the crime charged against him in this case for the Government to establish beyond a reasonable doubt not only that the defendant intentionally, traitorously and treasonably adhered to and gave aid and comfort to the enemy, as alleged in the indictment, but also that the said defendant in furtherance of said alleged adherence and alleged giving of aid and comfort, intentionally and treasonably performed at least one of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions and that the said overt act has been established beyond a reasonable doubt by the testimony of two direct witnesses to the same act.

44. Unless the Government has established, beyond a reasonable doubt not only that the defendant intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably adhered to and gave aid and comfort to the enemy, as alleged in the indictment, but also, that the said defendant, in furtherance of said alleged adherence and the alleged giving of aid and comfort, intentionally and treasonably performed at least one of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions, and has also established said overt act beyond a reasonable doubt by the testimony of two direct witnesses to the same act, you will find the defendant not guilty.

45. By the term "witnesses," used in this connection the Court does not mean persons who testify to admissions, if any, purportedly made by the defendant before the commencement of this trial. Neither admissions, if you believe any were made by the defendant, nor persons who took the stand to testify to such admissions, if any, are "witnesses" within the meaning of the foregoing provision of the Constitution, and neither such admissions, if any, nor any persons testifying to them, if any, can be considered by the jury as a substitute for the Constitutional requirement.

46. One may not of course be convicted of treason upon evidence of an overt act, unless such act has been charged in the indictment.

47. The Court is submitting to your consideration as possible overt acts of treason, the following alleged acts, charged in the indictment.

10. Said Hans Max Haupt, on or about June 22, 1942, accompanied said enemy, Herbert Haupt, to the home of Andreas Conrad Grunau, 6361 Leoti Ave., Chicago, Illinois, for the purpose of assisting the said Herbert Haupt in securing employment so that the said enemy might conceal his identity and mission as an agent of the German Reich and be permitted and enabled to carry out and pursue his said mission.

Freemont St., Chicago, Illinois, well knowing that the said enemy was an agent of the Government of the German Reich in the United States to commit sabotage; act as a spy and an enemy agent and per[illegible]m other services for said Government as aforesaid, all with the intent and for the purpose of assisting said enemy Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich as aforesaid.

87 20. Said Hans Max Haupt, on or about June 24, 1942, harbored and sheltered the said enemy Herbert Haupt in his home at 2234 N. Freemont St., Chicago, Illinois, well knowing that said Herbert Haupt was an agent of the Government of the German Reich in the United States to commit sabotage, act as a spy and enemy agent and perform other services for said Government as aforesaid, all with the intent and for the purpose of assisting said enemy Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich as aforesaid.

21. Said Hans Max Haupt, on or about June 25, 1942, harbored and sheltered the said enemy said Herbert Haupt in the home of Hans Max Haupt and Erna Haupt, 2234 N. Freemont St., Chicago, Illinois, well knowing that the said Herbert Haupt was an agent of the Government of the German Reich in the United States to commit sabotage, act as a spy and enemy agent and perform other services for said Government as aforesaid, all with the intent and for the purpose of assisting said enemy Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich as aforesaid.

23. Said Hans Max Haupt, on or about June 27, 1942, harbored and sheltered the said enemy Herbert Haupt in his home at 2234 N. Freemont St., Chicago, Illinois, well knowing that said Herbert Haupt was an agent of the Government of the German Reich in the United States to commit sabotage, act as a spy and enemy and perform other services for said Government as aforesaid, all with the intent and for the purpose of assisting said enemy Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich as aforesaid.

83 48. By submitting the alleged overt acts above read to your consideration, however, this court does not mean to intimate or infer in any way, either its belief or disbelief that any alleged overt acts of treason have been committed by this defendant, or that any overt acts of treason have been proven by the required two witnesses. Under the law, you are the sole judge of the facts and you alone can determine the factual issues including the question of whether this defendant committed any act or acts of treason and whether any such act was proven beyond a reasonable doubt by two direct witnesses to the same overt act.

49. Since the law requires that there shall be no conviction of treason unless there are two direct witnesses to the same overt act, all the other alleged overt acts charged in this indictment are hereby withdrawn from your consideration as overt acts of treason, for even if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt they were performed, they may not in themselves be made the basis of a conviction under the Constitution. However, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did actually perform any of these other alleged overt acts which were not proven to the degree required by the Constitution, you may consider any such act in determining the question of the intent with which the defendant may have performed, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt he did perform, any of the above alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration and not withdrawn, and which other possible overt acts, not withdrawn, you find from all of the evidence are proven beyond a reasonable doubt by two direct witnesses to the same overt act.

50. If you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Herbert Haupt, as alleged in the indictment, was an enemy agent, spy or saboteur and that he came into the United States on a mission for the German Reich and was acting as such agent, spy or saboteur on such mission while here, and that the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, knowing that he was such agent, spy or saboteur, unlawfully, feloniously maliciously, intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined did adhere to and give aid and comfort to the said Herbert Haupt as an enemy, all as alleged in the indictment, and that in furtherance of or in carrying out said alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, Hans Max Haupt with treasonable intent performed any one of the above alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration and that two direct witnesses have testified to such act, then you may find the defendant guilty. Otherwise you must find the defendant not guilty.

51. It is not necessary for the government to prove by two witnesses the performance of more than one of the submitted overt acts, providing, of course, the other elements of the alleged crime are proven beyond a reasonable doubt as heretofore defined in these instructions.

52. The success or failure of any alleged mission upon which Herbert Haupt may have been engaged, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that he was engaged during the period from June 17, 1942 to July 17, 1942 on a mission for the German government, is immaterial to the issues in this case and should be disregarded by you in your deliberations.

53. As I have heretofore stated to you the treasonable intent of the defendant is an essential element of the crime charged herein, and before you can find the defendant guilty you must find beyond a reasonable doubt, not only that such defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort, but also that at the time of such alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, the defendant intended to do so. This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as a result of which he was conscious of the specific thought, "I am going to commit treason". This is not necessary, for every man in law is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts if they are deliberately done. Anyone who is conscious of his acts and his surroundings and knowingly commits certain acts must be regarded as intending the natural and probable consequences of those acts. These observations are, of course, not intended to cast any inferences one way or another on the defendant's intent.

54. In this regard, motive should not be confused with intent. If a person knowingly and deliberately adheres to and gives aid and comfort to one whom he knows to be an enemy, then he must, in law, be taken to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own deliberate act, and the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense. In other words, one cannot do an act which he knows will give aid and comfort to a person he knows to be an enemy of the United States and then seek to disclaim criminal and treasonable intent by saying that his motive was not to aid the enemy. So if you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant as alleged in the indictment, performed one or more of the overt acts submitted to your consideration and that that act or those acts were of such a nature that the natural and probable consequence of heir performance was to give aid and comfort to the enemy, and if you further believe that the defendant performed such act or acts deliberately with knowledge that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, if you find that he was, then you may find that the defendant had the criminal and treasonable intent, since he intended to do the act forbidden by the law. Under such circumstances, the fact that you may also believe that his motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was for example, to help his son, would not in such event, change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent.

55. While it is necessary that the government prove treasonable intent beyond a reasonable doubt, it is not necessary to warrant a conviction under the Constitution, that this intent be so established by the testimony of two witnesses; neither is it necessary that this intent be so proven by direct evidence, as such intent may be so proven either by direct or circumstantial evidence. Intent, being a mental state may not be susceptible of being proved by direct evidence, and, therefore, you may infer the nature of the defendant's intent from all the circumstances.

56. Circumstantial evidence is evidence which tends to prove a disputed fact by proof of other facts and circumstances, which have a legitimate tendency to lead the mind to the conclusion that the fact exists, which is sought to be established.

57. The defendant's own conduct and words, if any, may be an index as to his intent and you may infer from the defendant's conduct, and words, if any are shown by the evidence, what his intent might have been.

58. There has been some testimony of certain statements purportedly made by the defendant prior to our declaration of war with Germany. Such statements of the defendant, if you believe they were made, are not grounds for charging the defendant with treason. The defendant, as well as others, had the right to his opinions and he had a right to express his opinions and to do anything lawful in keeping with those opinions and sympathies, but those statements, if you believe any were made, may be borne in mind by you in determining what his intent may have been after this country was at war with Germany, in committing, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that he did so commit, any of the various overt acts charged in the indictment and submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions.

59. No law of the United States is violated when a person in a general discussion expresses favorable or adverse opinions as to members of any race, color or creed, or regarding any nationality.

60. The court has permitted the Government to introduce into evidence in this case certain alleged statements or utterances purportedly made by the defendant prior to the events forming the basis of the indictment in this case. Such statements or utterances, if you believe they were made by the defendant, do not constitute evidence of the commission either of the treason alleged or of the commission of any alleged overt act, but may be considered by you, if you credit them, solely in determining the intent or state of mind of the defendant in performing, if you find he did perform, any alleged overt act or acts of treason charged in the indictment to have been commited by him, and submitted to your consideration in these instructions.

61. The court has also permitted the Government to introduce evidence of certain alleged admissions made by the defendant after he was in custody. You are instructed that such evidence may be considered by you solely on the issue of the intent or state of mind of the defendant in committing, if he did commit, any of the overt acts alleged in the indictment and submitted to your consideration in these instructions. In other words, any witness who may have testified to such alleged admissions is not a "witness" within the meaning of the Constitutional requirement of "two witnesses to the same overt act."

90 62. You are further instructed that the testimony of Ernest Peter Burger and the testimony of any other witness, if any, concerning alleged events which may have taken place in Germany and France at the time of Herbert Haupt's alleged stay in those countries, and the testimony, if any, of any witness concerning alleged events in Florida, and all exhibits in evidence which may have been identified by any witness who may have testified to any such events, and all testimony, if any, of witnesses concerning alleged acts of Herbert Haupt and alleged utterances and statements purportedly made by him, both prior to and during his stay in Chicago in 1942, and out of the presence of this defendant, and all articles purportedly taken from the person of Herbert Haupt while in Chicago in June, 1942, and admitted in evidence, have been admitted for the sole and limited purpose of determining whether the said Herbert Haupt was or was not an agent of the Government of the German Reich and an enemy of the United States as charged in the indictment, and you are to consider this evidence solely on this question.

63. On the subject of the defendant's knowledge of the alleged enemy status of his son, it is necessary for the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that in adhering to and giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States, if you find that he did so adhere to them and give them aid and comfort, the defendant knew at the time that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, as alleged in the indictment. It is not necessary, however, for the Government to prove that the defendant knew in detail all of the things which this alleged enemy intended to do (if you find that he was an enemy agent and that he did come to this country as a German agent as the indictment alleges). Nor is it necessary for the Government to prove that the defendant knew all of the facts which the Government may have offered in evidence to prove Herbert Haupt's alleged enemy status. It is only necessary for the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant knew that Herbert Haupt was a spy, saboteur or enemy agent, if such were the fact.

64. The task which is imposed upon you is one which should be performed by your intellects and should not be attempted to be performed by your emotions. The psychologists tell us, as you know, that our minds are made up of two parts, our intellects and our emotions. Our intellects are those parts of our minds whereby we reason. Our emotions are those parts of our minds which generate hate, prejudice, sympathy, pity and like feelings. The task which now confronts you, as jury men and women, cannot, and should not be attempted to, be performed by your emotions. If you attempt to use your emotions to decide this case you will probably make a mistake. If you use your intellects, as you should, the possibilities of your making a mistake are minimized. Furthermore, if you attempt by your verdict to decide some question other than that submitted to you by the court you will probably make a mistake. While if you decide by your verdict only the question submitted to you by the court the possibilities of your making a mistake are minimized.

65. The question of the possible punishment of the defendant in the event of a conviction is not a matter for the jury to consider, and should not in any way enter into your deliberations. The duty of imposing sentence on a defendant rests solely upon the Court, who tries to perform it fairly and with due consideration for all the circumstances. The function of the jury is to weigh all the evidence and determine the guilt or innocence of the defendant, solely from that evidence.

91 66. You will take with you to your jury room the indictment and the exhibits which have been offered and received in evidence and which are proper to go to the jury room and which counsel will now assemble and hand to the Marshals in charge of the jury. If counsel have any differences of opinion as to which exhibits should go to the jury room they shall call such differences to the attention of the court at the conclusion of these instructions. If the court's attention is not then called to differences, the court will assume that there are none. You will also take with you two forms of verdict. One form of verdict reads, "We, the jury, find the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, not guilty as charged in the indictment." The other form of verdict reads, "We, the jury, find the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, guilty as charged in the indictment." Having arrived at a verdict, you will use the first form if you find the defendant not guilty, and the second form if you find the defendant guilty. All jurors must sign the verdict on which you agree, the foreman signing first and the other jurors following.

67. I suggest that, before commencing your deliberations, you elect one of your number foreman to preside over your deliberations.

Additional charge to the jury by Judge Barnes

Filed June 9, 1944

95 Pursuant to the written request of the jury through your foreman there has been read to you a transcript of the testimony of the witnesses Short, Hirsch, and Robe. The jury are cautioned to bear in mind that they have now heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice while they have heard the testimony of the other witnesses only once, and that they shall not allow the fact that they have heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice to cause them to give undue importance or weight to it. The jury should, on the other hand, consider the testimony of these three witnesses, and that of each of them, as though they had heard it but once and consider it together with all the other evidence in the case.

Motion for new trial

Filed June 13, 1944

And now, after verdict and before sentence, this defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz and Frederick J. Bertram, his counsel, comes and moves the Court to set aside the verdict of the jury and for a new trial in said cause, upon the grounds and for the reasons following, without prejudice to other grounds or errors which may have occurred upon the trial of said case, to wit:

1. The Court, in charging the jury, improperly and erroneously gave the following instructions and charges to the jury, concerning acts, innocent and lawful per se viz:

"53. As I have heretofore stated to you the treasonable intent of the defendant is an essential element of the crime charged herein, and before you can find the defendant guilty you must find beyond a reasonable doubt, not only that such defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort, but also that at the time of such alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, the defendant intended to do so. This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as a result of which he was conscious of the specific thought, "I am going to commit treason". This is not necessary for every man in law is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts if they are deliberately done. Anyone who is conscious of his acts and his surroundings and knowingly commits certain acts must be regarded as intending the natural and probable consequences of those acts. These observations are, of course, not intended to cast any inferences one way or another on the defendant's intent."

"54. In this regard, motive should not be confusad with intent. If a person knowlingly and deliberately adheres to and gives aid and comfort to one whom he knows to be an enemy, then he must, in law, be taken to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own deliberate act, and the fact that his motive 102 may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense. In other words, one cannot do an act which he knows will give aid and comfort to a person he knows to be an enemy of the United States and then seek to disclaim criminal and treasonable intent by saying that his motive was not to aid the enemy. So if you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant as alleged in the indictment, performed one or more of the overt acts submitted to your consideration and that that act or those acts were of such a nature that the natural and probable consequence of their performance was to give aid and comfort to the enemy, and if you further believe that the defendant performed such act or acts deliberately with knowledge that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, if you find that he was, then you may find that the defendant had the criminal and treasonable intent, since he intended to do the act forbidden by the law. Under such circumstances, the fact that you may also believe that his motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was for example, to help his son, would not in such event, change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent."

"63. On the subject of the defendant's knowledge of the alleged enemy status of his son, it is necessary for the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that in adhering to and giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States, if you find that he did so adhere to them and give them aid and comfort, the defendant knew at the time that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, as alleged in the indictment. It is not necessary, however, for the Government to prove that the defendant knew in detail all of the things which this alleged enemy intended to do (if you find that he was an enemy agent and that he did come to this country as a German agent as the indictment alleges). Nor is it necessary for the Government to prove that the defendant knew all of the facts which the Government may have offered in evidence to prove Herbert Haupt's alleged enemy status. It is only necessary for the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant knew that Herbert Haupt was a spy, sabateur or enemy 103 agent, if such were the fact." Moreover, the Court in so charging the jury, improperly and erroneously, as is set forth in said instructions and charges, numbered 53, 54, and 63, nullified the effect of the instruction number 37 in the Court's charge, which reads:

"37. If you are not satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant's intention and purpose in acting as he did was evil, that is, if you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to aid and comfort the enemies of the United States the defendant must be found not guilty. If you believe the defendant's intention in doing what he did during the period from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, was not in any way to injure the United States but merely to assist his son, Herbert Haupt, as an individual, as distinguished from assisting him in his purposes, if such existed, of aiding the German Reich, or of injuring the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty."

2. The Court improperly instructed the jury upon the law and upon the facts of the case, and the Court erred in giving the instructions and charges to the jury numbered by paragraphs in the Court's Charge as follows: "8", "9", "13", "30", "33", "34", "35", "36", "39", "40", "41", "42", "46", "47" (including the sub-paragraphs numbered "10", "11", "12", "13", "14", "15", "16", "17", "20", "21", "22", and "23"), "49", "50", "51", "52", "53", "54", "55", "56", "57", "58", "60", "64", "63", "64", and "66".

3. The Court improperly and erroneously refused to give to the jury instructions requested on behalf of the defendant and submitted to the Court for the instruction of the jury and numbered as follows: "D-1", "D-2", "D-3", "D-4", "D-6", "D-7", "D-8", "D-10", "D-11", "D-12", "D-13", "D-15", "D-16", "D-17", "D-18", "D-19", "D-20", "D-21", "D-22", "D-23", "D-24", "D-25", "D-26", "D-27", "D-28", "D-29", and "D-30."

4. The Court, in its charge as a whole, failed to instruct the jury properly upon the theory of the defense that acts done
104 by the defendant to aid and comfort his son as an individual without intention to aid the enemies of the United States would not amount in law to the crime of treason; and the Court's charge to the jury did, in fact, deprive the defendant of such defense.

5. The Court improperly and erroneously permitted to be read to the jury, over the objections of the defendant's counsel, the testimony of two witnesses for the prosecution (Witnesses Hirsh and Robe) and of one witness for the defendant (Witness Short), as requested by the Foreman of the jury, after the jury had retired and had been deliberating upon their verdict for a period of approximately twenty-two (22) hours without sleep and had been unable to agree upon any verdict.

6. The Court improperly and erroneously received in evidence the testimony of divers witnesses (viz. Witnesses Fishman, Schroeder, Poppe, et al.) concerning conversation and statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to June 17, 1942, and some of them as early as the year 1935, and the Court improperly overruled defendant's motions to exclude such testimony from the jury, all of which testimony was highly inflammatory and prejudicial to the defendant's right to a fair and impartial trial.

7. The fact that the jury were kept deliberating upon their verdict for a period of approximately twenty-eight (28) hours, without sleep and without accommodations for rest or retirement of the jury, operated to prejudice and did prejudice the right of the defendant to a fair and impartial trial.

8. The Court improperly and erroneously sustained an objection of the United States Attorney to the oral argument on behalf of the defendant made by Attorney Frederick J. Bertram, with reference to the testimony of the witnesses Hamby and Majerczak, and the Court improperly took issue with the statement of defense counsel and admonished counsel for the defendant, to the prejudice of the defendant and to the embarrassment of his counsel.

105 9. The prosecuting attorneys for the United States of America, in their arguments to the jury at the conclusion of the case, made inflammatory, prejudicial, impertinent, irrelevant, and improper argument and comments not founded upon evidence in the case, but appealing to passion, prejudice, patriotic emotions, and war hysteria, depriving the defendant of the right to a fair and impartial trial.

10. Shortly preceding the closing arguments to the jury at the conclusion of the evidence in the case, the great invasion, or establishment of a second front in France by the military forces of the United States and our allies, was announced by radio and press as the great "Invasion Day", and the jurors had heard such radio and press reports by reason of the fact that the jurors were not confined, but were permitted to go to their homes and to public places between the regular sessions of the Court and during the recesses for luncheon, and that, notwithstanding the excitement and patriotic emotions and fervor naturally engendered in the minds of the jurors by such news, and notwithstanding the duty and need for a deliberate and temperate inquiry and trial of the defendant upon a charge of the crime of treason, the prosecuting attorney, Mr. Finn, made impassioned reference to the soldiers of our country fighting in this war, and the United States Attorney, Mr. Woll, made further inflammatory references to the war and made particular reference to "invasion"; all of which matters deprived the defendant of a fair, temperate and impartial trial.

11. The Court erred in admitting improper evidence in behalf of the United States of America.

12. The Court erred in refusing to admit proper evidence offered on behalf of the defendant.

13. The Court erred in refusing to admit evidence offered by the defendant for the purpose of impeachment of the witness Majerczak.

14. The Court erred in submitting to the jury certain overt acts as "possible overt acts" upon which there was not testimony
106 of two witnesses to the particular overt act, as required by the Constitution, and that by reason of the fact that certain of said overt acts so submitted to the jury were not proved by the testimony of two witnesses as required by the Constitution, the Court further erred in instructing the jury that proof of any one of said submitted overt acts would be sufficient to convict the defendant.

15. The evidence does not show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of a criminal intent to commit treason as charged in the indictment.

16. The evidence in the case was insufficient to satisfy the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt imposed upon the prosecution to prove that any alleged act was committed by the defendant with intent to commit treason against the United States, and the decision that any act was committed by the defendant with a treasonable intent rested wholly upon speculation and no juror could make such determination without a reasonable doubt.

17. The evidence does not show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of the charges as laid against him in the indictment.

18. The verdict of the jury is the result of passion, prejudice and war hysteria.

19. The verdict of the jury is not supported by the law and the evidence.

20. The verdict of the jury is contrary to the law and the evidence.

21. The Court erred in overruling the respective motions of the defendant, made at the conclusion of the Government's case, and again made at the conclusion of all of the evidence, to direct the jury to find the defendant not guilty of the charges contained in the indictment, and in overruling the further motions of the defendant to find the defendant not guilty upon each of the overt acts charged in the indictment against the defendant.

107 22. The Court erred in refusing to receive in evidence the Statute of the State of Illinois relating to accessories after the fact in the Criminal Code of the State of Illinois, viz, Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 38, Division II, Section 4, State Bar Association Edition, 1943, chapter 38, paragraph 584, page 1208.

23. The Court erred in overruling defendant's motion for a Bill of Particulars before trial, which tended to prejudice the defendant and to hamper and embarass him in making his defense.

24. The Court erred in failing and refusing to exclude from the evidence and from the jury's consideration the evidence relating to overt acts which were withdrawn, and the Court erred in permitting the jury to consider for any purpose whatsoever the evidence upon overt acts which were withdrawn from the case.

25. The Court erred in denying defendant's motion to strike and exclude from the evidence all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to December 7th, 1941, and prior to the entry of the United States into the war.

26. The Court erred in receiving in evidence testimony of witnesses relating to conversations with Herbert Haupt and alleged statements made by Herbert Haupt outside of the presence of the defendant, and the Court erred in overruling the motion of the defendant to exclude all such testimony from the case.

27. The Court erred in denying defendant's motion to strike and exclude from the evidence all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to matters involving activities of Herbert Haupt, which occurred prior to the middle of June, 1941.

Wherefore defendant prays that the Court set aside the verdict of the jury and grant the defendant a new trial.

Motion in arrest of judgment

Filed June 13, 1944

Now comes Hans Max Haupt, the defendant, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz and Frederick J. Bertram, his attorneys, and moves that the verdict of guilty against him by a jury in this Court returned upon the 9th day of June 1944, be arrested and no judgment and sentence be imposed thereon for the following reasons:

1. That the indictment herein is bad for improper joinder of offenses in one indictment, and for duplicity, in that it charges the defendant in one indictment and in a single count thereof with the commission of twenty nine separate and distinct acts, each one therof allegedly constituting a crime: and that the said improper joinder of charges, and the said duplicity tended to the prejudice of the defendant in this that it did confuse the jury and embarrass the defendant in making his defense.

2. That the indictment herein is bad in this that some of the separate and distinct acts therein set forth are of the same class of crimes or offenses, and some are of different classes of crimes or offenses, and punishable by different penalties, to wit:

Overt Acts numbered 1 to 25, both inclusive, attempt to charge the commission of twenty-five distinct acts of the crime of treason, punishable under Section 2 of Title 18, United States Code, by death, or at the discretion of the court by imprisonment of not less than five years and a fine of not less than $10,000;

109 Overt Act number 26 charges in fact a conspiracy by and between the defendant and other persons, to commit the crime of treason, punishable under Section 34, Title 50, U. S. C. and/or under Section 88, Title 18, U. S. C., by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years, or both;

Overt Act number 29 charges in fact a violation of the Espionage Act, as defined by Section 33 of Title 50, U. S. C., punishable under said Section by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than twenty years, or both;

Overt Acts numbered 27 and 28 do not charge a violation of any known crime, and are not subject to any punishment whatsoever.

And the defendant states, that the inclusion of the said charges of different classes of crimes in one indictment, the indictment herein, tended to the prejudice of the defendant in this that it did confuse the jury and embarrass the defendant in making his defense.

3. That the alleged offenses and each of them set forth in said indictment and charged to have been committed by the defendant, do not constitute acts of treason within the meaning of and as defined by the Constitution of the United States of America, and as stated in Section 1, Title 18, U. S. C., and that by reason of the charges so made in the indictment, the jury did become confused, to the prejudice of the defendant.

4. That the Court erred in overruling the defendant's motion for a bill of particulars herein, which tended to the prejudice of the defendant and to embarrass him in making his defense.

Memorandum

Filed June 14, 1944

As the time to impose sentence on the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, approaches, I find myself impelled to speak in explanation of the sentence.

Thirteen years' experience in imposing sentences on persons who have pleaded guilty or been convicted of the commission of crime has taught me that, when I feel impelled to speak at a time such as this, the sentence under consideration does not square with my conscience. If I feel impelled to speak of the enormity of the defendant's crime, I know that the sentence under consideration is too severe; if I feel impelled to speak in extenuation of the crime, I know that the sentence under consideration is too light; and it is only when I feel that I may remain silent that I know that the proposed sentence squares with my conscience.

Now, the sentence to be imposed forces me to speak.

The statute provides: "Whoever is convicted of treason shall suffer death; or, at the discretion of the court, shall be imprisoned not less than five years and fined not less than $10,000,"

In the court's opinion, the verdict of the jury, finding the defendant guilty of treason, was fully justified by the evidence. The court is convinced that Hans Max Haupt traitorously adhered to the enemies of the United States and gave them aid and comfort and that a considerable number of "overt acts" of treason were established by the testimony of two witnesses, as required by the Constitution. No other verdict than that rendered was reasonably possible.

When a judge is about to impose sentence he considers the effect of the punishment on the defendant and on society. He remembers that inadequate punishment may harm both the defendant, by fostering a contempt for law and law enforcement, and society, by failing to deter the defendant and other like-minded persons from committing like crimes. He remembers that too severe punishment may fail of reformatory effect because of its severity, and, for like reason, may have a brutalizing effect on the person on whom it is imposed and on the society that imposes it.

Punishment for crime should tend to reform the person to whom it is applied, if reform is possible, tend to prevent him from repeating his crime, and tend to protect society by reforming the individual to whom it is applied and by deterring him and other like-minded persons from committing like crimes.

Hans Max Haupt is 50 years old, and, in spite of the fact that he has lived in this country since 1923 and was naturalized in 1930, is, and for a long time has been, a fanatical Nazi. He willingly, and apparently gladly, sacrificed his only child to the Nazi cause. The court does not believe that Hans Max Haupt can be reformed. He is and always will be a Nazi.

The court does not believe that it need by punishment try to prevent Hans Max Haupt from committing treason again. While the court believes that the defendant's mental faculties are unimpaired, his spirit is broken and he is not likely to commit treason again.

113 What punishment is necessary to be imposed in order to deter other like-minded persons from committing like crimes? My conscience tells me that there is but one answer to that question and that answer is—Death. That would be the sentence and there would be no oral or written observations thereon by the court were it not for the facts hereinafter set forth.

After the jury had rendered their Verdict and it had been entered on the records of the court, the foreman handed the court a written communication, signed by all jurors, and reading as follows:

"JUNE 9, 1944.

"Your Honor, Judge BARNES:

"Realizing fully that our function terminates with the rendering of our verdict, we, the jury, are moving humbly to beseech Your Honor's consideration in dealing mercifully with this defendant.

"In conformity with your Honor's instructions, neither pity nor sympathy has entered into our deliberations. In this plea we express only what is in our hearts.

Respectfully,

Guilford H. Rothfuss, Jos. M. Caliner, Wilbert A. Laakso, Mildred Ellwing, Fannie Joy, Helen A. Hinkley, Emma Scott, Lillian H. Lewis, Ellen M. Givler, Fred F. Rank, Earl Davis, Chas. J. St. Amand."

The twelve men and women who signed that communication share with the court the responsibility for the fate that shall overtake Hans Max Haupt. Not until after they rendered a verdict of guilty did a duty rest on the court to impose sentence. They are reasonable men and women and listened carefully to all the evidence. They heard all that the court heard. They know all that the court knows. They desire, as does the court, to do right. In deference to the request of these men and women, whose judgment may be better than mine, the sentence will be life imprisonment and, because the statute requires it, a fine of $10,000.

United States District Judge.

Notice of appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit

Filed June 19, 1944

Name and address of appellant: Hans Max Haupt; in custody of the United States Marshal for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division.

Names and addresses of appellant's attorneys: Paul A. F. Warnholtz and Frederick J. Bertram, Room 1010 at 111 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Offense: Treason.

Date of judgment: June 14th, 1944.

Brief description of judgment or sentence: Imprisonment for life, and to pay a fine of $10,000.

Name of prison where now confined, if not on bail: County Jail of Cook County, Chicago, Illinois.

I, the above-mentioned appellant, hereby appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit from the judgment above mentioned on the grounds set forth below.

Pursuant to Rule V. of the Supreme Court of the United States, Rules of Practice and Procedure in Criminal Cases, I hereby serve notice that I do not elect to enter upon the service of the sentence pending appeal.

HANS MAX HAUPT,
Appellant.

Dated June 14th A. D. 1944.

116 Grounds for appeal

1. That the indictment herein is bad for improper joinder of offenses in one indictment, and for duplicity; that the overt acts set forth in said indictment do not constitute acts of treason;

2. That the Court erred in overruling the defendant's motion for a bill of particulars.

3. That there was not "testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act," as required by the Constitution of the United States, as to certain overt acts submitted to the jury;

4. That the verdict of the jury is not supported by the law and the evidence;

5. The verdict of the jury is contrary to the law and the evidence;

6. The verdict of the jury is the result of passion, prejudice, and war hysteria.

7. The Court erred in overruling the motion of the defendant at the conclusion of the evidence in the case, to direct the jury to find this defendant not guilty of the charges contained in the indictment herein, and in overruling the further motion of this defendant to direct the jury to find the defendant not guilty upon each of the overt acts contained in said indictment.

8. The Court erred in admitting improper, incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial testimony, documentary evidence and exhibits.

9. The Court improperly instructed the jury upon the law and upon the facts of the case.

10. The Court erred in failing or refusing to give instructions asked for by the defendant in said cause;

11. The prosecuting attorneys for the United States, in their arguments to the jury at the conclusion of the case, made inflammatory, prejudicial, impertinent, irrelevant and improper arguments and comments, not founded upon evidence in the case, but appealing to passion, prejudice, patriotic emotions and 117 war hysteria, depriving the defendant of the right to a fair and impartial trial free of extraneous motives and prejudices;

12. The Court erred in sustaining divers objections of the prosecution to material evidence sought to be introduced by the defendant;

13. The evidence does not show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of a criminal intent to commit treason as charged in the indictment;

14. The evidence does not show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of the charges as laid against him in the indictment.

15. The defendant did not receive a fair and impartial trial herein, as required by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

16. The fact that the jury were kept deliberating upon their verdict for a period of approximately twenty-eight (28) hours, without sleep and without accommodations for rest or retirement of the jury, operated to prejudice and did prejudice the right of the defendant to a fair and impartial trial.

17. It was error to try the defendant on a new indictment for treason while there was and still is a subsisting and undisposed of indictment for treason, on which the United States Circuit Court of Appeals had ordered a new trial, and which involves substantially the same overt acts as in the indictment herein.

18. The Court improperly and erroneously permitted to be read to the jury, over the objections of the defendant's counsel, the testimony of two witnesses for the prosecution (Witnesses Hirsh and Robe) and of one witness for the defendent (Witness Short), as requested by the Foreman of the jury, after the jury had retired and had been deliberating upon their verdict for a period of approximately twenty-two (22) hours without sleep and had been unable to agree upon any verdict.

118 19. The Court improperly and erroneously sustained an objection of the United States Attorney to the oral argumen on behalf of the defendant, made by one of defendant's counsel with reference to the testimony of the witnesses Hamby and Majerczak, and the Court improperly took issue with the statement of defense counsel and admonished counsel for the defendant, to the prejudice of the defendant and to the embarrassment of his counsel.

20. The Court erred in overruling the motion of the defendant, at the conclusion of the Government's case, to direct the jury to find the defendant not guilty of the charges contained in the indictment herein, and in overruling the further motions of the defendant to direct the jury to find the defendant not guilty upon each of the overt acts contained in the indictment.

21. The sentence herein cannot rest upon a general verdict of "guilty as charged in the indictment" under the particular form and contents of the indictment upon which the defendant was tried in the case at bar, inasmuch as certain of the overt acts charged in the indictment and submitted to the jury were not proved by two witnesses as required by the Constitution of the United States.

147 In United States District Court

[Title omitted.]

Assignment of errors on behalf of Hans Max Haupt, defandant

Filed Sept. 19, 1944

Now comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, and, with respect to his appeal herein, says that in the record and proceedings in said cause, and in the orders and judgments entered herein and in the sentence of the defendant, there are manifest errors, and the defendant makes and presents the following assignment of errors, which he says were prejudicial to his substantial rights and which he prays may be considered upon his appeal herein, to wit:

1. That the indictment is bad for improper joinder of offenses in one indictment, and for duplicity, in that it charges the defendant in one indictment and in a single count thereof with the commission of twenty-nine separate and distinct acts, each one thereof allegedly constituting a crime; and further in this that some of said separate and distinct acts are of the same class of crimes or offenses, and some are of different classes of crimes or offenses, and punishable by different penalties, to wit:

(a) Overt acts numbered 1 to 25, both inclusive, attempt to charge the commission of twenty-five distinct acts of the crimes of treason, punishable under Section 2 of Title 18, U. S. C. by death, or at the discretion of the Court by imprison-

147-A ment of of not less than five years and a fine of not less than $10,000;

(b) Overt Act Number 26 charges in fact a conspiracy by and between the defendant and other persons, to commit the crime of treason, punishable under Section 34, Title 50, U. S. C. and/or under Section 88, Title 18, U. S. C. by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years or both;

(c) Overt Act Number 29 charges in fact a violation of the Espionage Act, as defined by Section 33 of Title 50, U. S. C., punishable under said section by a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than twenty years, or both.

(d) Overt Acts Numbered 27 and 28 do not charge a violation of any known crime, and are not subject to any punishment whatsoever.

2. That the alleged offenses and each of them set forth in said indictment and charged to have been committed by this defendant, do not constitute acts of treason within the meaning of and as defined by the Constatution of the United States of America, and as stated in Section 1, Title 18, U. S. C.

3. That said indictment, herein, is substantially defective, and legally insufficient to support a judgment or conviction of the defendant, and was prejudicial to the right of the defendant to a fair and impartial trial in this, that the alleged offenses enumerated and described in said indictment as "overt acts" merely charge an intent to commit treason without alleging the commission of any act which is or would be treasonable within the meaning of and as defined by the Constitution of the 148 United States of America, and said indictment was insufficient in law to support a charge of treason.

4. That the Court erred in overruling the demurer of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, to the indictment herein.

5. That the Court erred in overruling and denying the motion of the defendant to quash and dismiss the indictment herein.

6. That prosecution of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, under the indictment in the above entitled cause, was and is barred by reason of certain other proceedings and certain matters of fact existing as follows:

(a) That this Honorable Court in Appeal Case No. 8165 reversed and remanded said cause for a new trial of this defendant under the indictment in District Court Case No. 33481, entitled United States of America vs Hans Max Haupt et al.; and that the trial court herein erred in disregarding the mandate of this Honorable Court to conduct a new trial in said District Court Case No. 33481, and erred in trying this defendant under a new indictment for substantially the same alleged offenses as were involved in said District Court Case No. 33481, and without first dismissing the indictment in said District Court Case No. 33481 or entering a nolle prosequi therein as to this defendant.

(b) That there was, at the time of the trial of the above entitled cause, and there still is, a former indictment pending before the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, entitled United States of America vs Hans Max Haupt, Erna Emma Haupt, Walter Otto Froehling, Lucille Froehling, Otto Richard Wergin, Kate Martha Wergin, case no. 33481, wherein this defendant is charged with the commission of the crime of treason; that a trial was had upon said indictment and that this defendant was found and adjudged guilty at said trial, from which judgment this defendant appealed to the Honorable United States Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Seventh Circuit; that, thereupon, said Honorable United States Circuit Court of Appeals reversed said judgment and re-
148-A manded the cause for a new trial, and that said trial was set for January 17, 1944, but that said trial was afterwards continued and postponed without any date being set for the same; and that the said indictment, in case no. 33481, still remains pending and undisposed of as to the said Hans Max Haupt, defendant herein:

(c) That, by order of said District Court, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, was and is being held without bail under indictment in said case no. 33481.

(d) That the allegations of the crime of treason and the overt acts alleged in support thereof in the said indictment in said case no. 33481 are substantially the same as the allegations of the crime of treason and the overt acts alleged in support thereof in the indictment herein, and that the prosecution has failed and refused to enter a nolle prosequi in said case no. 33481, as to this defendant.

(e) That an acquittal of the defendant in the above entitled cause would leave the defendant in the custody of the marshall pursuant to the order theretofore entered by said District Court with reference to the indictment in said case no. 33481, holding this defendant without bail; and that the continued pendency of said case no. 33481 may subject this defendant to double prosecution for the same alleged offenses and otherwise embarrass the defendant in his rights.

7. That the Court erred in overruling the motion of the defendant for a Bill of Particulars to set forth the following matters with reference to the overt acts mentioned in the indictment herein, to wit:

(a) To state particularly what it is claimed that the defendant counseled and advised Herbert Haupt to do, at the time and place mentioned in overt act number one (1).

149 (b) To state particularly what matters were discussed or conferred about and between Herbert Haupt and the defendant and other persons, at the times and places mentioned in overt acts numbers four (4) and eight (8); and to state in what manner it is claimed that such matters allegedly so discussed and conferred about assisted or would assist Herbert Haupt to carry out his mission as an agent of the German Reich.

(c) To state what was done at the meeting referred to in overt act number seven (7) and in what manner it is claimed to have assisted Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission for the Government of the German Reich.

(d) To state in what particular manner it is claimed that Herbert Haupt was or would have been assisted in securing employment for the purposes set forth in overt acts numbers ten (10) and eleven (11), by being accompanied by the defendant at such times.

(e) To state particularly in what manner and by what acts of the defendant it is claimed that the defendant harbored and sheltered Herbert Haupt at the times and places mentioned in overt acts numbers twelve (12), seventeen (17), twenty (20), twenty-one (21), twenty-two (22), and twenty-three (23).

(f) To state particularly in what manner it is claimed that Herbert Haupt was or would have been assisted in carrying out his mission as an agent of the German Reich, by the 150 purchase of an automobile referred to in overt acts numbers thirteen (13), fourteen (14), fifteen (15), and sixteen (16).

(g) To state the place or places of the occurrences mentioned in overt act number twenty-nine (29).

8. The Court erred in receiving in evidence, over defendant's objection, testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to matters involving activities of Herbert Haupt, which occurred prior to the middle of June 1941.

9. The Court erred in overruling and denying the motion of the defendant, made at the close of the Government's case and again made at the close of all of the evidence in the case, to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to matters involving activities of Herbert Haupt, which occurred prior to the middle of June 1941, upon the grounds that the same was irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial and related to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, which said testimony tended greatly to the prejudice of the rights and interests of the defendant and deprived him of the right to a fair and impartial trial herein; and the Court erred in denying the further motion of the defendant to instruct the jury not to consider such testimony relating activities of said Herbert Haupt which occurred prior to the middle of June 1941.

10. The Court erred in receiving in evidence, over defendant's objections, testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to conversations with Herbert Haupt and relating to alleged 151 statements made by Herbert Haupt outside of the presence of the defendant.

11. The Court erred in overruling and denying the motion of the defendant, made at the close of the Government's case and again made at the close of all of the evidence in the case, all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to conversations with Herbert Haupt and alleged statements made by Herbert Haupt outside of the presence of the defendant, upon the following grounds:

(a) All such testimony constitutes hearsay evidence which is inadmissible.

(b) Said Herbert Haupt died before the commencement of this trial and his alleged statements are inadmissible as evidence against this defendant who was not present when such alleged statements were made.

(c) All such testimony was incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant to the issues in the case.

And the Court erred in overruling and denying the defendant's further motion to instruct the jury not to consider any testimony relating to such conversations and alleged statements made by Herbert Haupt outside of the presence of the defendant.

152 12. The Court erred in receiving evidence, over defendant's objections, the testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to statements alleged to have been made by the defendant herein prior to June 17, 1942.

13. The Court erred in overruling and denying the motion of the defendant, made at the close of the Government's case and again made at the close of all of the evidence in the case, to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to June 17, 1942, upon the grounds that all such testimony was irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial and related to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment and tended greatly to the prejudice of the rights and interest of the defendant and deprived him of the right to a fair and impartial trial herein; and the Court erred in denying the further motion of the defendant to instruct the jury not to consider such testimony relating to statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to June 17, 1942.

14. The Court erred in receiving in evidence, over defendant's objections, testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to December 7, 1941.

153 15. The Court erred in overruling and denying the motion of the defendant made at the close of the Government's case and again made at the close of all of the evidence in the case, to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case, all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to December 7, 1941, upon the grounds that the United States was not then engaged in any war, and that all such testimony was irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial and related to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, which said testimony tended greatly to the prejudice of the rights and interest of the defendant and deprived him of his right to a fair and impartial trial herein; and the Court erred in denying the further motion of the defendant to instruct the jury not to consider such testimony relating to statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to December 7, 1941.

16. The Court erred in denying the motion of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, for a directed verdict of "not guilty", made at the conclusion of the Government's case and again made on behalf of said defendant, at the conclusion of all of the evidence in the case.

17. The Court erred in denying each and all of the separate and additional motions of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, made at the conclusion of the Government's case and again made at the conclusion of the Government's case and again made at the conclusion of all of the evidence in the case, to direct the jury to find the defendant "not guilty" upon each of the specific overt acts charged against the defendant, designated and separately numbered in said indictment, as follows:

154 "1", "2", "3", "4", "5", "6", "7", "8", "9", "10", "11", "12", "13", "14", "15", "16", "17", "18", "19", "20", "21", "22", "23", "24", "25", "26", "27", "28", "29".

18. There was a material variance between the offenses charged against the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, and the evidence introduced on the trial.

19. There was no sufficient evidence to support the verdict of the jury against the defendant, Hans Max Haupt.

20. The verdict of the jury was contrary to the law and to the evidence in the case, for the reasons set out in the written motion of the defendant for a directed verdict of "not guilty," made at the close of the Government's case and renewed at the close of all of the evidence in the case, to wit:

(1) There is no evidence in the case proving or tending to prove that this defendant has committed treason against the United States.

(2) There is no evidence in the case that this defendant adhered to, or was guilty of adhering to, the enemies of the United States.

(3) There is no evidence in the case that this defendant gave, or was guilty of giving, to the enemies of the United States aid and comfort.

(4) There was not testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act of this defendant.

(5) There was no confession in open Court by this defendant as to any overt act or charge contained in said indictment.

(6) There is no evidence in the case that this defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States and gave aid and comfort to said enemies.

(7) There is no evidence in the case showing any intent on the part of this defendant to commit treason against the United States.

(8) There is no evidence in the case that this defendant committed any of the acts alleged in the indictment as "overt acts" with intent to adhere to the enemies of the United States and to give said enemies aid and comfort, or with any intent to commit treason against the United States.

155 (9) There is no evidence in the case that this defendant gave aid and comfort, if any aid and comfort was given, to more than one person, or to any person other than Herbert Haupt.

(10) There is no evidence in the cast that this defendant intended to or did give aid and comfort to Herbert Haupt, or in any other manner assisted the said Herbert Haupt, with the intention of thereby furthering the interests of any nation with which the United States was at war, or with the intention of committing any act detrimental to the interests of the United States.

21. The Court erred in admitting improper evidence on behalf of the United States of America.

22. The Court erred in refusing to admit proper evidence offered on behalf of the defendant.

23. The Court improperly and erroneously received in evidence the testimony of divers witnesses (viz, Witnesses Fishman, Schroeder, Poppe, et al.) concerning conversations and statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to June 17, 1942, and some of them as early as the year 1935, and the Court improperly overruled defendant's motions to exclude such testimony from the jury, all of which testimony was highly inflammatory and prejudicial to the defendant's right to a fair and impartial trial.

24. The Court erred in permitting the Government's witnesses, Ernest Peter Burger, William Leibl, and Joseph William Haas to testify concerning conversations with Herbert Haupt, who died on or about August 8, 1942, all of which conversations constituted hearsay evidence, occurring outside of the presence of the defendant with a person (i. e. Herbert Haupt) who was deceased before the commencement of the trial and which conversations occurred prior to June 19, 1942, and prior to all of the alleged "overt acts" charged against the defendant in the indictment herein; and that all of such testimony was incompetent, irrelevant, and inadmissible against the defendant herein. And the 156 Court erred in refusing to strike such testimony on motion duly made by defendant's counsel.

25. The Court erred in admitting the testimony of divers witnesses, over defendant's objections, concerning alleged remarks supposed to have been made by the defendant and concerning occurrences relating to the defendant's son, Herbert Haupt, and concerning occurrences relating to defendant's wife, Erna Haupt, which remarks and occurrences in some instances took place as much as six years prior to the alleged "overt acts" of treason charged in the indictment and all of which took place more than one year prior to said alleged "overt acts," which testimony, it was stated by the prosecuting attorneys, was offered on the question of the intent of the defendant in his alleged commission of said "overt acts," notwithstanding the fact that the particular utterances and alleged occurrences were made or occurred without any relationship whatsoever to the "overt acts" charged in the indictment against the defendant. Such evidence and testimony was wholly incompetent, irrelevant, and inadmissible to prove either an "overt act" or to prove a treasonable intent in committing such "overt act" and greatly prejudiced the jury against the defendant and misled the jury and induced the jury to believe that a treasonable intent on the part of the defendant could be established by proof of acts or utterances of the defendant occurring several years prior to the alleged "overt acts" charged in the indictment.

157 26. The Court erred in receiving in evidence, over defendant's objections, the testimony of the Government's witnesses Hamby and Majerczak, concerning alleged admissions or alleged confessions of the defendant, relating to divers "overt acts" charged in the indictment against the defendant, which were not confessions made in open Court, but were claimed to have been made by the defendant prior to the trial of said cause. And the Court erred in overruling and denying the motions of the defendant to strike and exclude such testimony from the case.

27. The Court erred in refusing to admit evidence offered on behalf of the defendant for the purpose of impeachment of the Government witness, Majerczak, which evidence offered by the defendant consisted in the transcript of the testimony of said Majerczak, given at a previous hearing in said cause.

28. The Court erred in refusing to receive in evidence the statute of the State of Illinois relating to accessories after the fact in the Criminal Code of the State of Illinois, viz., Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 38, Division II, Section 4 (State Bar Association Edition, 1943, Chapter 38, Paragraph 584, Page 1208) which was offered in evidence on behalf of the defendant.

29. The Court erred in refusing to receive in evidence a certain letter dated September 12, 1942, offered on behalf of the defendant and marked defendant's exhibit 13 for identification.

158 30. The prosecuting attorneys for the United States of America, in their arguments to the jury at the conclusion of the case, made inflammatory, prejudicial, impertinent, irrelevant, and improper argument and comments not founded upon evidence in the case, but appealing to passion, prejudice, patriotic emotions, and war hysteria, depriving the defendant of the right to a fair and impartial trial.

31. Shortly preceding the closing arguments to the jury at the conclusion of the evidence in the case, the great invasion, or establishment of a second front in France by the military forces of the United States and our allies, was announced by radio and press as the great "Invasion Day," and the jurors had heard such radio and press reports by reason of the fact that the jurors were not confined, but were permitted to go to their homes and to public places between the regular sessions of the Court and during the recesses for luncheon; and that, nothwithstanding the excitement and patriotic emotions and fervor naturally engendered in the minds of the jurors by such news, and notwithstanding the duty and need for a deliberate and temperate inquiry and trial of the defendant upon a charge of the crime of treason, the prosecuting attorney, Mr. Finn, made impassioned reference to the soldiers of our country fighting in this war, and the United States Attorney, Mr. Woll, made further inflammatory references to the war and made particular reference to "invasion"; all of which matters deprived the defendant of a fair, temperate and impartial trial.

32. The Court improperly and erroneously sustained an objection of the United States Attorney to the oral argument on 159 behalf of the defendant made by Mr. Bertram, with reference to the testimony of the witnesses Hamby and Majerczak, and the Court improperly took issue with the statement of defense counsel and admonished counsel for the defendant, to the prejudice of the defendant and to the embarrassment of his counsel.

33. The Court, in charging the jury, improperly and erroneously gave the following instructions and charges to the jury, concerning acts, innocent and lawful per se, viz:

"53. As I have heretofore stated to you the treasonable intent of the defendant is an essential element of the crime charged herein, and before you can find the defendant guilty you must find beyond a reasonable doubt, not only that such defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort, but also that at the time of such alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, the defendant intended to do so. This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as a result of which he was conscious of the specific thought, "I am going to commit treason." This is not necessary for every man in law is presumed to intend the natural and probably consequences of his acts if they are deliberately done. Anyone who is conscious of his acts and his surroundings and knowingly commits certain acts must be regarded as intending the natural and probable consequences of those acts. These observations are, of course, not intended to cast any inferences one way or another on the defendant's intent."

"54. In this regard, motive should not be confused with intent. If a person knowingly and deliberately adheres to and gives aid and comfort to one whom he knows to be an enemy, then he must in law, be taken to intend the natural and probably consequences of his own deliberate act, and the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense. In other words, one cannot do an act which he knows will give aid and comfort to a person he knows to be an enemy of the United States and then 160 seek to disclaim criminal and treasonable intent by saying that his motive was not to aid the enemy. So if you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant as alleged in the indictment, performed one or more of the overt acts submitted to your consideration and that that act or those acts were of such a nature that the natural and probable consequence of their performance was to give aid and confort to the enemy, and if you further believe that the defendant performed such act or acts deliberately with knowledge that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, if you find that he was, then you may find that the defendant had the criminal and treasonable intent, since he intended to do the act forbidden by the law. Under such circumstances, the fact that you may also believe that his motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was for example, to help his son, would not in such event, change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent."

"63. On the subject of the defendant's knowledge of the alleged enemy status of his son, it is necessary for the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that in adhering to and giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States, if you find that he did so adhere to them and give them aid and comfort, the defendant, knew at the time that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, as alleged in the indictment. It is not necessary, however, for the Government to prove that the defendant knew in detail all of the things which this alleged enemy intended to do (if you find that he was an enemy agent and that he did come to this country as a German agent as the indictment alleges). Nor is it necessary for the Government to prove that the defendant knew all of the facts which the Government may have offered in evidence to prove Herbert Haupt's alleged enemy status. It is only necessary for the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant knew that Herbert Haupt was a spy, saboteur or enemy agent, if such were the fact."

Moreover, the Court in so charging the jury, improperly and erroneously, as is set forth in said instructions and charges, numbered 53, 54, and 63, nullified the effect of the instruction number 37 in the Court's charge, which reads:

"37. If you are not satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant's intention and purpose in acting as he did 161 was evil, that is, if you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to aid and comfort the enemies of the United States the defendant must be found not guilty. If you believe the defendant's intention in doing what he did during the period from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, was not in any way to injure the United States but merely to assist his son, Herbert Haupt, as an individual, as distinguished from assisting him in his purposes if such existed, of aiding the German Reich, or of injuring the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty."

34. The Court improperly instructed the jury upon the law and upon the facts of the case, and the Court erred in giving the instructions and charges to the jury numbered by paragraphs in the Court's Charge as follows: "8", "9", "13", "30", "32", "34", "35", "36", "39", "40", "41", "42", "46", "47" (including the subparagraphs numbered "10", "11", "12", "13", "14", "15", "16", "17", "20", "21", "22", and "23"), "49", "50", "51", "52", "53", "54", "55", "56", "57", "58", "60", "61", "63", "64", and "66".

35. The Court improperly and erroneously refused to give to the jury instructions requested on behalf of the defendant and submitted to the Court for the instruction of the jury and numbered as follows: "D-1", "D-2", "D-3", "D-4", "D-6", "D-7", "D-8", "D-10", "D-11", "D-12", "D-13", "D-15", "D-16", "D-17", "D-18", "D-19", "D-20", "D-21", "D-22", "D-23", "D-24", "D-25", "D-26", "D-27", "D-28", "D-29", and "D-20."

36. The Court erred in failing to give to the jury any proper or adequate instructions whatsoever upon matters which were contained in the refused instructions requested by the defendant.

162 37. The Court, in its charge as a whole, failed to instruct the jury properly upon the theory of the defense that acts done by the defendant to aid and comfort his son as an individual without intention to aid the enemies of the United States would not amount in law to the crime of treason; and the Court's charge to the jury did, in fact, deprive the the defendant of such defense.

38. The Court, after the retirement of the jury to consider their verdict, and after the jury had been deliberating upon their verdict for a period of approximately twenty-two (22) hours without sleep and without being able to agree upon any verdict, improperly and erroneously, over the objections of defendant's counsel, permitted the jury to return to the courtroom and then and there to hear the reading of the testimony of two witnesses for the prosecution (witnesses Hirsh and Robe) and of one witness for the defense

(witness Short) and then to retire again and resume their deliberations upon their verdict; and the defendant was greatly prejudiced and prevented from having a fair and impartial trial by said irregularity and by the repetition of the hearing by the jury of two witnesses for the prosecution and of only one witness for the defendant, and by the jury's failure to hear a second time, the examination and cross-examination of all of the other witnesses for the Government as well as for the defendant.

39. The fact that the jury were kept deliberating upon their verdict for a period of approximately twenty-eight (28) hours, without sleep and without accommodations for rest, or re-
163 tirement of the jury, operated to prejudice and did prejudice the right of the defendant to a fair and impartial trial.

40. The verdict of the jury was the result of passion, prejudice and war hysteria, induced by emotional feelings produced by the war and particularly by the tremendous war events and occurrences happening at the time of the conclusion of the trial of said cause and prior thereto, and also induced by improper, irrelevant, and inflammatory testimony concerning the defendant introduced in evidence by the prosecution and by inflammatory and prejudicial argument made by the prosecuting attorneys in their argument to the jury at the conclusion of the case.

41. The Court erred in permitting and directing the jury to consider alleged "overt acts" numbers "1", "2", "3", "4", "5", "6", "7", "8", "9", "18", "19", "24", "25", "26", "27", "28", and "29" (which overt acts were supposed to be withdrawn from the jury and upon which no sufficient proof had been made), in determining the question of the guilt and intent of the defendant to commit treason in respect to the other "overt acts" which were submitted to the jury. The jury was erroneously advised by the Court in paragraph 49 of the charge to the jury that, if they believed the defendant guilty of committing any of the "withdrawn" overt acts, even though not proved, they might, on the basis of that belief, find that the defendant had a treasonable intent in committing any of the overt acts "submitted to their consideration."

164 42. The Court erred in submitting to the jury certain "overt acts" as "possible overt acts" upon which there was not testimony of two witnesses to the particular "overt act," as required by the Constitution (viz, overt act numbers "12", "17", "20", "21", "22", and "23"); and, by reason of the fact that certain of said "overt acts so submitted to the jury were not proved by the testimony of two witnesses as required by the Constitution, the Court further erred in instructing the jury that proof of any one of said submitted "overt acts" would be sufficient to convict the defendant.

43. The evidence does not show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of a criminal intent to commit treason as charged in the indictment.

44. The evidence in the case was insufficient to satisfy the burden imposed upon the prosecution to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that any alleged act was committed by the defendant with intent to commit treason against the United States, and the determination by the jury that any act was committed by the defendant with a treasonable intent must have been the result of such conjectural reasoning as could not have excluded a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jurors.

45. The evidence does not show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of the charges as laid against him in the indictment.

46. The verdict of the jury is not supported by the law and the evidence.

47. The verdict of the jury is contrary to the law and the evidence.

48. The Court erred in instructing the jury to bring in a
165 general verdict, without reference to any of the twenty-nine (29) alleged "overt acts' of treason charged in the indictment. And the Court erred in failing to require the jury to specify in their verdict as to the particular overt act or acts of which they found the defendant guilty, if they returned a verdict of guilty as to said defendant.

49. The Court erred in overruling and denying the defendant's motion for a new trial in said cause.

50. The Court erred in overruling and denying the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment filed in said cause.

51. The Court erred in sending in to the jury room for the consideration of the jury the Court's Charge to the Jury in typewritten form, thereby enhancing all the errors contained in the instructions in said Charge to the Jury, and particularly the errors contained in the instructions in paragraphs 53, 54, and 63 of said Charge, which are inconsistent with and nullify the effect of the instruction in paragraph number 37 of said Charge to the Jury.

52. The Court erred in sending in to the jury room for the consideration of the Jury a copy of an indictment containing a vicious story, complete in all parts, which the Government knew or should have known that it could not prove as treason, but which was brought to the attention of the jury as a complete story in an indictment by the wrongfully adopted medium of charging each part of such story as an "overt act." This error becomes particularly vicious and misleading when paragraph 49 of the Court's Charge to the Jury is considered, wherein and whereby a belief by the jury of treasonable intent with respect to withdrawn overt acts—not even required to be founded upon evidence—is 165 allowed to supply the treasonable intent for the submittal overt acts (which acts were innocent and lawful per se.) The Court erred in submitting and sending to the jury room for the jury's consideration on the question of intent all of the overt acts of the indictment, both those designated as "submitted" and those designated as "withdrawn", without specifically requiring that both the treasonable intent as well as the commission of a "submitted" overt act should first be proven by proper evidence, before evidence of treasonable intent concerning "withdrawn" overt acts could be considered by the jury as cumulative evidence, and as cumulative evidence only, concerning any "submitted" overt act.

53. The Court erred in sending in to the jury room a copy of the indictment for the consideration of the jury, which indictment contained a vicious narrative made up of allegations regarding many overt acts upon which the prosecution could not and did not submit any proper or sufficient evidence, and which overt acts, though ordered withdrawn from the jury, were nevertheless submitted to their consideration in determining the guilt of the defendant under the indictment, thereby permitting treasonable intent of the defendant to be supplied by a belief of the jury not required to be supported by evidence and gathered, or inferred by them, from the charges contained in the "withdrawn" overt acts. This error was particularly aggravated by the erroneous instruction contained in paragraph number 49 of the Court's Charge to the Jury.

166 54. The Court erred in permitting the jury to have in the jury room, while deliberating upon their verdict, a copy of the indictment, containing in closely interwoven manner a recital of twenty-nine (29) overt acts alleged to have been committed by the defendant, notwithstanding that the Government contended it had proven only twelve (12) of said alleged overt acts as required in cases of treason by the Constitution of the United States; and the Court further erred in instructing the jury that they could consider all twenty-nine (29) of said overt acts in determining the question of the treasonable intent of the defendant in the case.

55. The Court erred in denying the motion for a mistrial made by the defendant on account of improper, incompetent, irrelevant and prejudicial testimony given by the witness, William Max Schroeder, over defendant's objections; and the Court further erred in denying defendant's motion to exclude all of the testimony of said witness, William Max Schroeder, from the consideration of the jury. (Bill of Exceptions, pages 838 to 864, inclusive.)

56. The Court erred in receiving in evidence incompetent, irrelevant, and prejudicial documentary evidence and exhibits of physical objects without requiring proper foundation for admitting such evidence and without requiring such evidence to be connected up with the defendant in the case.

57. The Court erred in receiving in evidence, over objection of the defendant (a) testimony of the witness, Ernest Peter Burger, concerning acts, conversations, and conduct of himself and of members of his group occurring outside of the presence of 167 Herbert Haupt and after the separation of said Burger's group from the said Herbert Haupt (Bill of Exceptions, pages 99 to 149); (b) testimony of Alfred H. Grunow concerning Herbert Haupt sleeping at the Froehling home and other matters occurring outside of the defendant's presence and not connected up with the defendant in any manner (Bill of Exceptions, pages 407 to 411 inclusive; (c) testimony of the witness, Carl Eggert, concerning certain money not produced in court and concerning acts of persons and matters occurring outside of the presence of the defendant (Bill of Exceptions, pages 603 to 606 inclusive); (d) testimony of the witness, Dora Eggert, concerning matters occurring outside of the presence of the defendant (Bill of Exceptions, pages 632 to 634, inclusive); and (e) testimony of the witness, Joseph William Haas, concerning matters occurring outside of the presence of the defendant (Bill of Exceptions, pages 646 to 650, inclusive).

58. The Court erred in permitting, over defendant's objection, improper direct examination, intimidation and leading, impeaching and suggestive questioning of the witness, Carl Eggert, by the Government's attorney, on matters prejudicial to the defendant's right to a fair and impartial trial. (Bill of Exceptions, pages 607 to 610.)

59. The Court erred in permitting, over defendant's objection, improper direct examination, intimidation and leading, impeaching and suggestive questioning of the witness, Gustave Zermer, by the Government's attorney, on matters highly prejudicial to the defendant's right to a fair and impartial trial upon a charge of treason. (Bill of Exceptions, pages 513 to 521 inclusive.)

168 And by reason of said errors and other manifest errors appearing in the record herein, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, prays that the judgment of conviction herein may be reversed, set aside and held for naught and that he may be discharged from custody.

4 The COURT. You may proceed, gentlemen.

Opening statement on behalf of government

Mr. WOLL. May it please the Court:

The COURT. Mr. Woll.

Mr. WOLL. And attorneys for the defendant. Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

In the trial of every federal case it is customary for the attorneys for the defendant and for the government to outline for you the evidence that they expect will be produced in the case. The purpose of this is to merely acquaint you along the general lines with the type of case you are to try and to help you realize the importance and trend of the evidence as it goes in.

There is one thing that I do not want any mistake about. I want to acquaint you with this fact: That you should remember this; that what I say here or what the attorneys for the defendant say here is not to be considered by you in any way as constituting evidence in this case. The only evidence that you are to consider is the evidence from the witness stand, and that gathered from documents which the Court will admit in the trial of the case. So, if I say something and it is not supported by the evidence please ignore it, as you are required to do under your oath as jurors. If the attorneys for the defendant say anything to you that is not supported by the evidence ignore it.

With that understanding, that my talking to you is merely a privilege and is not to be considered as evidence, I want to acquaint you with what I believe will be the government's evidence to sustain the charge. Of course, before we look at the evidence we ought to understand the charge rather clearly. The charge, as I have stated before, is embraced in an indictment. This defendant has been indicted by a grand jury for the Northern District of Illinois. That indictment is on file in this courtroom right now. I have a copy and I will read the parts of the indictment which I think are important to a proper understanding of the case.

The indicement charges the crime of treason. Treason is defined in the Constitution of the United States. It is the only crime defined in the Constitution. It is also defined in the criminal statute. The definition of treason in the Constitution and criminal statutes is similar and in effect is that any person owing allegiance to the United States who levies war against the United States or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort is guilty of treason. In this particular case the indictment does not charge the levying of war. So that you do not have that charge to consider.

The charge before you is the adhering to the enemy, giving them aid and comfort. That is the charge in the indictment and that is the charge you have been selected to try.

The indictment states in effect that Hans Max Haupt, the defendant you see in the courtroom, continuously and at all times from June 17, 1942, up to and including July 17, 1942, in the Northern District of Illinois and in the Eastern Division, and as a matter of fact, in Chicago, then and there being a person owing allegiance to the United States, unlawfully, feloniously, maliciously, intentionally, traitorously and treasonably did adhere to the enemies of the United States, to-wit, the Government of the German Reich, its counsellors, armies, navies, agents, representatives and subjects with which the United States at all times

7 since December 11, 1941, has been at war, and did give to said enemies aid and comfort. That is the general allegation of treason in the indictment. The indictment then defines particulars, and explains more fully the nature of the charge of treason.

With reference to the allegiance to the United States, the indictment states that Hans Max Haupt has been a citizen of the United States at all times since the year 1930, and a resident thereof since 1923. That, of course, is an element which we will undertake to prove, namely, that Hans Max Haupt owed allegiance to the United States and not to Germany. The indictment goes on to say that on or about June 17, 1942, one Herbert Johanne William Godlove Haupt, alias Herbert Hans Haupt, alias Herbert Haupt, alias Bingo, hereinafter referred to as Herbert Haupt, an agent and representative of the government of the German Reich came into the United States, and throughout the period of time mentioned in this indictment served the government of the German Reich as a secret agent, saboteur and spy, in the carrying on of its war with the United States.

8 The indictment then proceeds to state the nature of this service that this secret agent and spy was to perform for the government of the German Reich; that the nature of this service involved, among other things, the destruction of certain war materials, premises and utilities of the United States, the receipt of money from the government of the German Reich and the disbursement of such money in connection with the procurement, manufacture and use of explosive substances and sabotage devices for and in the destruction of the war materials, premises and utilities of the United States, and the recruiting and hiring of persons, to said grand jurors unknown, to engage in unlawful and hostile enterprises, consisting in using said explosive substances and sabotage devices in the destruction of the war materials, premises and utilities of the United States.

The indictment refers to the defendant, Hans Max Haupt and points out the way in which this defendant, Hans Max Haupt adhered to this enemy and spy for the German government. The indictment goes on to say that the adherence of Hans Max Haupt to the government of the German Reich, its counsellors, 9 armies, navies, agents, representatives; and subjects, and said giving of aid and comfort by Hans Max Haupt consisted in his receiving, harboring, relieving and assisting Herbert Haupt in transporting said Herbert Haupt by automobile and in his furnishing hospitality to the said Herbert Haupt throughout said period of time, in his aiding, abetting, meeting with, assisting, counselling and advising Herbert Haupt in and concerning said service to the government of the said German Reich, in its countenancing said service, in his carrying out requests and instructions of said Herbert Haupt in connection with his service, in his purchasing an automobile for the said Herbert Haupt, in his attempting to procure employment for him, and that this aid and comfort was given to him as the representative of the government of the German Reich and in furtherance of his mission.

The indictment goes on to state that all of his aiding and assisting of Herbert Haupt was done with treasonable intent and with knowledge. The charge is:

"He, the said Hans Max Haupt, when so adhering and giving aid and comfort to the government of the German Reich, its counsellors, armies, navies, agents, representatives, and subjects, well knew all the premises in this indictment aforesaid, and well knew the character of said service of said Herbert Haupt to the government of the German Reich, and intended to and did adhere to said enemies and gave said enemies aid and comfort."

While you were being selected as jurors, there was some discussion about overt acts. The Constitution requires that before there can be a conviction of a defendant for treason that there be proof of an overt act, an act in furtherance of this adhering, by two witnesses—that is, a minimum of two witnesses. I do not intend now to get into any legal discussion with you as to what is an overt act. I think the Court will instruct you that an overt act is an act done in furtherance or in pursuance of this giving of aid and comfort, but you will follow the instructions, I know, of the Court in determining these overt acts.

The government in this indictment has alleged some twenty-nine overt acts done by this defendant. I do not think that I will take your time to enumerate each one of the overt acts. I think they can be analyzed rather briefly by saying that these overt acts concern the harboring of this enemy, or treating with him, or advising him, or counselling him, the purchase of an automobile for him, or attempting to help him secure employment, and with meeting with him and others, discussing plans, advice given to him, and overt acts of that nature, and the accepting of money from him also. The evidence, of course, will in our opinion prove all of these overt acts.

What are the facts in the case? What does the government intend to prove to sustain the allegations of the indictment? The government will prove that this defendant, Hans Max Haupt was born in Labes, Germany, in 1894; that when he became of age Max Haupt was married to Erna Haupt who was born in Stettin, Germany; that of this marriage there was born a son, Herbert Haupt; that this son was born in December 1919, in Germany. The government will further prove that after twenty-nine years of life in Germany, Hans Max Haupt left Germany and came to America; that he arrived in America in 1923; that he came alone; that he came to Chicago, and there he engaged in business, in Chicago; that, two years later, his wife, Erna 12 Haupt, and their son, then five and a half years old, joined the defendant in Chicago.

We will show from that time on Chicago was their home. We will show that this immigrant German family sought and received the benefits of the American way of life; that they worked here in Chicago and in surrounding suburbs; that their boy received an education in the public schools in the city of Chicago; that as this boy grew older and became of working age that he secured employment in the city of Chicago.

We will show also that after seven years of this taste of the American way of life Hans Max Haupt walked into a federal court and there in the federal court renounced all allegiance to the government of the German Reich, and renounced all allegiance to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty and swore to support and defend the Constitution and the laws of the United States against all enemies, both foreign and domestic.

We will show that he was then accordingly given the benefit of American citizenship. We will further show that while this defendant received this American citizenship, Germany 13 was his real fatherland. We will show that he loved, admired, and preferred Germany over America.

We will show that he not only preferred Germany over America, but that he taught his boy to prefer Germany over America; that he inculcated in his boy a desire to assist Germany, and a love for Germany under the leadership of Adolph Hitler.

We will show that in 1941 Herbert Haupt began to talk to his father about going back to Germany and joining the German Army. We will show that at that time he was working for the Simpson Optical Manufacturing Company in Chicago, a firm that was then engaged in defense work and was particularly engaged in the manufacture of parts for bombs; in fact, engaged as a subcontractor in constructing the Norden Bombsight used in the airplanes of America.

We will show that working with him at the same time at the same place was a boy by the name of Wolfgang Wergin; that Wolfgang Wergin was a close friend of Herbert Haupt. We will show that his parents, Otto Wergin and Kate Wergin, were very close acquaintances of this defendant and his wife.

14 We will show that in June of 1941, Herbert Haupt and Wolfgang Wergin disappeared from Chicago. We will show that they left Chicago and reached the Mexican border with another companion; that at the Mexican border this other companion turned back and that Herbert Haupt and Wolfgang Wergin proceeded into Mexico city; that in Mexico City they contacted the German Consul who made it possible for them to board a ship for Japan. We will show that Herbert Haupt boarded this ship and did go to Japan, landing at Tokio. This was about in August of 1941. We will show that at Tokio he sent a message to this defendant advising him that he was in Tokio, and staying at the Deiti Hotel; that while over there Herbert Haupt contacted the German Consul there and the result of that was that Herbert Haupt boarded a blockade runner and sailed, landing in France, that he went through France and finally landed in Berlin.

We will show that after he landed in Berlin he received an assignment from the German government to go to a school, a sabotage school, outside of the city of Brandenburg. Brandenburg is about a two-hour train ride from Berlin.

15 This school was on an estate about two miles out of Brandenburg. On this estate were approximately eight buildings. One of the buildings was devoted to living quarters and to class rooms. Another building contained a laboratory. There was another building which constituted a gymnasium where physical exercises were taken.

We will show also that there were warehouses and buildings on this property which were used in a practical demonstration of the force of explosive materials. On this estate also were railroad tracks. There was a pit, a testing pit, and also an observation tower, from which the tests made in this pit could be observed. There was also on this estate a shooting range and a lake.

We will show that at this school were eight individuals. These individuals were George John Dasch, Ernest Peter Burger, Heinrich Heinck, Werner Thiel, Edward Kerling, Herbert Haupt, and two others. I am not sure of their names. Richard Querin. I think now I have named them all.

We will show that this school was in charge of two instructors, and that in charge of the individuals was a German army officer by the name of Lieutenant Walter Kappe. We will show 16 that at this school these eight men learned chemical compositions, learned how to obtain these chemical compositions from various products that are commercially sold in the United States. We will show that they learned how to combine these chemical products or compositions so as to make explosives.

We will show that these persons also learned to manufacture fuses to light or ignite these explosives. We will also show that these men learned to make and to use detonators. We will show that they also learned to use and to make timing devices so that that explosive material could be set in for a particular time to explode, of course, after the placing of the explosives. We will also show that they were taught to manufacture and to use incendiary material, material that would cause fires. We will show also that they were taught secret writing.

We will show that they were not only taught how to manufacture these explosives, but they were taught how to use these explosives, to commit sabotage and damage.

We will show that in the teaching of how to use these it was not confined to theory, but it was also a practical proposition
17 with these Germans. We will show that they very thoroughly had practical tests on these proving grounds; that individual members of the school received assignments, that these assignments were such that they should be carried out with great secrecy so that the other members of the group would not apprehend them in carrying out their assignments; that after assignments had been carried out there was a discussion as to whether or not the assignments were well carried out and fully carried out.

They practiced blowing up tracks, practiced the destructive effects of explosives on metal, and all that.

After receiving this training at the sabotage school these eight men, including Herbert Haupt had a short vacation. We will show that at the time of their vacation Herbert Haupt and the other members went about their various ways and assembled later in Berlin.

At Berlin we will show that these individuals were taken around by Lieutenant Kappe, and by experts, to the industrial plants, in Germany, where the integral parts of these plants were pointed out to the eight men, and instructions given to them as to the most—or how most effectively to destroy vital parts.

18 We will show they were given plans of locks, and were taught how locks were constructed in this country, and were told how to destroy locks, that they examined locks in Germany.

We will also show that at Berlin these eight persons were given German military uniforms; they were given infantry uniforms; that they were also given eight boxes of explosives and sabotage equipment.

We will also show that this group was given approximately $200.00 in American money.

The group took these uniforms and these boxes of material and they put them in sea bags in Berlin; that they went to Paris and from Paris they went to Lorient, France; that at Lorient, France, they were divided into two groups.

One group was headed by George John Dasch. In his group was a man by the name of Ernest Peter Burger. Another group was headed by Kerling. In his group was Herbert Haupt. There was also a man by the name of Neubauer and a man by the name of Thiel. This group, of which Herbert Haupt was one, I will call the second group, although it left Lorient first. Before this second group left Lorient, which was on the 27th day of May, each individual member of this group was given $5,000 in fifty dollar bills. That money was placed in a money bag. Each one of these eight members was also given a little over $400 in smaller denominations.

Each group in Lorient, France after receiving the money and after receiving final instructions, repacked these sea bags and put the uniforms on themselves before marching off to board a submarine at Lorient, France.

We will show that at June 1, 1942, the German submarine pulled off the shores of Florida and that this group that was headed by Kerling, and of which Herbert Haupt was a member; landed them on the shores of Florida; that they then took off their uniforms; that they buried their explosives and uniforms in the sand and they then proceeded to Jacksonville, Florida. We will show that the landing from the submarine to the shores of Florida was made in a rubber boat.

After landing they went on to Jacksonville, Florida, and there registered at hotels, Herbert and Thiel registering at the Mayflower Hotel and Kerling and Neubauer registering at the Seminole Hotel.

This landing which I stated was the 13th of June, actually took place on the 17th of June. We will show that the group stayed at the hotel until approximately June 18th. We will further show that Herbert Haupt came back to Chicago on June 19, 1942.

We will show that on the afternoon of his arrival Hans Max Haupt received a message that he had received a call from Walter Froehling. Walter Froehling is a brother of Erna Haupt, an uncle of Herbert Haupt. The Froehlings at this time lived at 3643 North Whipple Street, in the city of Chicago.

We will show that after receiving this message or call from Froehling's home that Hans Haupt went over to the Froehling home.

We will show that at that time Herbert Haupt, this spy and this saboteur, was there. We will show that Herbert Haupt then on that occasion in the presence of this defendant and these other people told his father all about his trip to Mexico, his trip to Japan and his getting over to Germany; that he told him about his training in the sabotage school in Germany; that he told him how he had been taught to make explosives, how to use explosives, and he told him how he had come back to America for the purpose of blowing up plants and utilities and crippling and destroying, if possible, the war defense effort of America; he told him of landing from a submarine; he told him of landing with companions and he told him of coming with money and with explosives and he told him the purpose for which he had come.

We will show that this meeting lasted some time. After this meeting Herbert Haupt, the spy and the saboteur, went to the home of this defendant, and from that time on, until his arrest he was quartered and kept in the home of the defendant.

We will show that on the next day which was Saturday, June 20, this defendant and others, this defendant and his wife and Otto Richard Wergin and Kate Martha Wergin were at the Wergin home at 5634, I believe, or 5614 Wood Street on the south side of Chicago, with Herbert Haupt, this spy and saboteur; that Herbert Haupt then told the Wergins, the parents of Wolfgang Wergin, and this defendant again, of his trip to Mexico, to Japan and to Germany, and of the sabotage school at Brandenburg and of his training and of his experience there, and of his coming back to this country for the purpose of sabotaging the war effort in America.

We will show that Hans Haupt was then acquainted with the mission of Herbert Haupt. We will show that after this meeting which was Saturday night, there was another meeting held, and that meeting was held on Sunday night, and at this time all those who by now were acquainted with the mission, which were Otto Wergin, Kate Wergin, Walter Froehling, his wife, Hans Haupt, the defendant, and his wife, and of course, Herbert Haupt met again at the Froehling home.

We will show that from the Froehling home later on they went over to the Haupt home; that is, the Wergins went to the Haupt home with Herbert Haupt and the Haupts. This brings us up to Sunday, June 21st.

We will show that at this Brandenburg sabotage school Herbert Haupt was instructed to do many things. We will show that one of the things he was instructed to do was to register for the selective service. We will also show that before Herbert left America information had been received around the neighborhood that the FBI were getting inquisitive about Herbert; and we will show that Hans Haupt, when Herbert came back here was worried about that; and we will also show that Hans Haupt was worried about the fact that Herbert had not registered for the selective service.

We will show that Hans Haupt advised and counselled his son to go "over and straighten himself out" with the Draft Board so as to stop this inquisitiveness of the FBI and throw them off the trail.

We will show that on Monday Herbert Haupt accordingly went down to the Draft Board and registered for the selective service and gave as his reason for failure to register before that he had been in Mexico mining gold.

We will show that he then went to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and told them that he had straightened out his difficulties with the Draft Board, and that he no longer was delinquent.

While at Brandenburg Herbert Haupt received further instructions. He also received instructions to secure an automobile for his group so that they could transport themselves around this country readily and quickly?

24 We will also show that he received the assignment to get the explosives which had been buried on the shore of Florida and for that purpose he volunteered to use his car and stated if the car was not in good enough condition he would get a new car so there would be no trouble, and so that they could get around faster.

We will show that Herbert told his father that he needed a car to carry out the job that he had to do in America; that he needed an automobile to get around faster so that he could do as much damage to the defense industries of America as possible.

We will show then that the father, this defendant, advised Herbert that it would not be advisable for him to purchase the car and that he, the father, would purchase the car.

We will show that accordingly, on Monday night, I think it is Monday night or Tuesday—we will show that on Tuesday evening this defendant took Herbert Haupt down to the Warner Motor Sales Company on Diversey Boulevard and there made a down payment, on an automobile, giving his own name, the defendant's name, as reference.

We will show that shortly after leaving the Warner Motor 25 Sales that this defendant had a conversation with a man by the name of Gustav Zermer. We will show that this defendant said to Gustav Zermer that he was afraid to have the boy around and that the boy would also be travelling around a lot, and that what he wanted was to have Herbert Haupt live at Zermer's house. Zermer refused.

Hans Haupt asked him if he would not let Herbert use his address as a mail drop so that in his travels around this country he would be able to keep in contact with his father by writing letters to the address—that is, addressing them to the address of Zermer and then having Zermer deliver these letters to the defendant. We will show that Zermer agreed to this.

We will further show that now, having secured a mailing address, or a mail drop for this spy and this saboteur, the defendant the next night went back to the Warner Motor Sales and made a further down payment on the automobile and obligated himself on a conditional sales contract to pay the balance. We will show that thereupon the deal was completed and that Herbert Haupt, then the agent for the government of the German Reich, drove the automobile out of the garage.

26 We will also show that one of the instructions received by Herbert Haupt was that he was to get all the information he could about optical plants and to secure what plans he could of the workings of the optical companies and the parts upon which they were working. You will recall that I told you before that Herbert formerly worked for the Simpson Optical Manufacturing Company, which company at that time was manufacturing a part of the Norden Bomb sight.

We will show that Herbert attempted then to seek employment at the Simpson Optical Manufacturing Company. We will show that this defendant, although Herbert had told him according to his own statement that he intended to steal the plans from these optical companies, took Herbert over to the home of the superintendent of the Simpson Optical Company, where Herbert attempted to secure a job with this company.

We will show that he was ordered to come back and to report back on Thursday morning.

We will show that this defendant later went with Herbert to the foreman of the Simpson Optical Manufacturing Company, where it was stated that the foreman might be seeing Her-27 bert around the shop in the near future.

In addition to these acts we will also show that this defendant received and concealed money given to him by his son, which money was concealed under a rug——.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please——

Mr. WOLL. In the Haupt home.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to.

Mr. WOLL. I intend to prove it, if your Honor please.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The money was, if the Court please——

The COURT. Step into the jury room, ladies and gentlemen.

(And thereupon the jury retired from the courtroom, in charge of the marshal, and the following additional proceedings were had in Court, in the absence of the jury:)

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, I do not intend to have any

FBI agent testify as to the finding of any money in the Hans Haupt home. I do not intend to have any FBI man testify as to any envelope, or any money in an envelope, or to show that 28 money was obtained as the result of a search. I do not intend to have any FBI man testify as to the search of the Haupt home.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If the Court please——

Mr. WOLL. I will also state this to the Court——

The COURT. Just a moment.

Mr. Reporter, will you read the last part of counsel's statement to the jury?

(Record read as follows: "In addition to these acts we will also show that this defendant received and concealed money given to him by his son, which money was concealed under a rug—in the Haupt home.")

The COURT. What do you intend to prove?

Mr. WOLL. I intend to prove that he received and concealed under a rug in the Haupt home money given to him by Herbert Haupt.

The COURT. How do you intend to do it?

Mr. WOLL. I intend to prove it by a witness who will testify that is what this defendant told him, it was exactly what he did. This witness has no connection—no connection with any official of the government and the information was not obtained as 29 the result of any search of the home, either directly or indirectly.

The COURT. Get me the indictment. That was one of the overt acts you say you intend to prove; these overt acts?

Mr. WOLL. I do not think that your Honor intends we must just rely on overt acts. We must have evidence of treason before we can secure a conviction.

The COURT. But this is an overt act?

Mr. WOLL. I think even if we had not charged an overt act we could still prove treason.

The COURT. Maybe you could.

Mr. WOLL. It is charged in the indictment, no question about that.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It seems, your Honor, that the most the United States Attorney could allege is not that they will prove that the money was hidden, but that a statement was made by someone to them that the money was hidden.

Mr. WOLL. That is proof of the ultimate fact, is a method of proof.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The order, the restraining order, with respect to the express order states that:

"The United States Attorney is hereby restrained from 30 using any of the said property upon the trial or any information directly or indirectly obtained therefrom or by means thereof, by means of said search and seizure aforementioned."

Mr. FINN. This proof has nothing to do with that at all.

Mr. WOLL. I might say, if your Honor please, I have told the jury very definitely if I did not prove what I say to disregard it.

The COURT. If there is very much you do not prove I will grant a new trial, I will assure you about that.

Mr. WOLL. I will prove everything I have said.

The COURT. I do not think you should have mentioned that, Mr. Woll, without taking it up in advance with the Court.

Mr. WOLL. I just thought it was very definite in reference to what had been obtained as the result of the search.

The COURT. Do not do it again. That should not have been raised.

Mr. WOLL. It is my understanding it was not obtained as the result of the search.

The COURT. Another thing you will learn if you practice
31. before me very much, do not try to talk me down if I talk to you, sir.

Mr. WOLL. I will be glad to comply, your Honor.

The COURT. The very fact that I have sustained a motion to exclude that evidence should act generally as a red flag to you and you should take that matter up with the Court before you mention it to the jury. I want you to be very careful in the conduct of this trial. If you are not I will just discharge the jury and start over.

Mr. WOLL. I regret exceedingly, if your Honor please, not having taken this matter up with the Court. I assure you it was not intentional at all. It was because, in my mind, for which I am sorry, I felt entirely that it was not anywhere near being a violation of the order that was entered. I wish to assure this Court if there is any other question arising in my mind at any time that might possibly violate any order, I shall certainly take it up with the Court.

The COURT. Let me see a copy of the Constitution, please. Where is the definition of treason?

Mr. WOLL. It is the third article, if your Honor please.
32 The COURT. "Treason against the United States consists only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or confessions in open court."

Do you intend to prove this only by admissions out of Court?

Mr. WOLL. Your Honor, if we do not prove this particular overt act that your Honor has in mind by two witnesses, of course, a conviction could still be sustained.

The COURT. When you try to prove too many overt acts and you do not succeed there will be a new trial. I will assure you of that.

Mr. WOLL. Your Honor, our position in that regard will be this, if your Honor please: That you can prove treason by acts of the defendant, even though each one of those acts which establishes the treason is not established by two witnesses, but before you can convict, one of the alleged overt acts that has to be established by two witnesses.

The COURT. You split it too fine for me.

Mr. WOLL. I hope to be able to supply some authorities.

33 The COURT. I am telling you if you put in evidence of acts that you do not establish I will grant a new trial.

Mr. WOLL. I would like to assure this Court I most emphatically intend to, and want to follow all the Court's rulings. I am sorry if I have not taken the Court in my confidence, also the attorneys for the defendant, in this particular matter. I will add this for your Honor's satisfaction, that I will most certainly tell the jury that this is a matter we hope to establish by statements made by him. I will be perfectly willing to do that, even though it is an ultimate fact that I am attempting to establish.

The COURT. I do not think I will allow you to establish that. What you did, is you charged generally that this defendant committed treason, in general terms. Then you go on right through, and take up each and every overt act. If you can prove those overt acts by two witnesses, or by confession in open court, you are safe.

Mr. WOLL. Does your Honor intend that we shall argue that point now?

The COURT. I am telling you you may be putting error in the record. I do not think you should have said that to the jury.

34 Mr. WOLL. May I ask, so I will better understand your Honor, is it because of the fact that you feel there must be two witnesses to that matter? Is that it? Because of the fact——

The COURT. We spent a day finding out whether or not evidence of that money being hidden under the rug in the bedroom of the defendant should be excluded. I excluded it.

Mr. WOLL. Correct.

The COURT. You threw it right in. We are not going to try this case that way.

Mr. WOLL. I am sorry if I misunderstood the order. I am sorry. The search has not anything to do with the evidence at all.

The COURT. I cannot see how your evidence is admissible if you cannot prove the overt act by the testimony of two witnesses, or by confession in open court. If you cannot prove it that way why talk about it?

Mr. WOLL. Th s why I would like an opportunity to argue some of those acts and throw new light on it.

The COURT. You can argue it.

Mr. WOLL. I would say in the Steffens case in Detroit, if your Honor please, the Court of Appeals affirmed a conviction in that one particular case——

35 The COURT. I read the Steffens case Sunday.

Mr. WOLL. In that case I believe they proved a number of overt acts but only four went to the jury ultimately, and as a matter of fact the Circuit Court of Appeals found in the case of one of the overt acts it was not properly proven.

The COURT. I remember that, and they did stretch the law.

Mr. WOLL. All I can do is to follow the decisions of the Court of Appeals.

The COURT. You will follow the decision of this Court before you follow the decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

* * * * *

The COURT. Follow the decision in this Court before you follow the decision of any other court.

Mr. FINN. May I say there are a number of holdings with respect to treason on this subject of the proof of intent, in which it is held that proof of an overt act which is not proven by two witnesses, may nevertheless be considered by the jury on the question of the intent, with which other acts which are proven by two witnesses may be considered. In other words, proof of intent may be proven either by one witness to an overt act, 36 or it may be proven by an admission of an overt act, or by any number of circumstances, and that proof on the subject of intent is admissible proof on the intent with which the other overt acts are performed, that are testified to by two witnesses.

In this instance we have an admission by the defendant to a separate party, that is an admission by the defendant made to a separate party, of the receipt of a large sum of money, and the sequestration of that money under the bedroom rug. That is entirely separate and apart from the testimony of the two agents, which evidence your Honor has excluded in the case.

Of course, we expect to comply with your Honor's ruling in that respect. Nevertheless, on the question of the intent with which any other overt acts were performed, which are proven by two witnesses—this evidence is definitely admissible. For example, we have other overt acts which are proven by one witness. The evidence of that may be considered on the question of intent with which the other overt act is proven, which is testified to by two witnesses. I would like to give your Honor decisions, I can give your Honor many decisions in that respect.

37 The COURT. Have you any more questions in mind like that question?

Mr. WOLL. As a matter of fact, your Honor, there is only about a paragraph more, perhaps two or three minutes of my statement and there is no question that I can conceive of. We have a number of cases that Mr. Finn spoke about that we can supply to your Honor.

The COURT. I can see where there might be, as Mr. Finn suggests, evidence that may be admissible on the question of intent, tending to establish an overt act.

Mr. HURLEY. That is the theory, your Honor, on which we contend it is admissible.

Mr. FINN. We have a number of decisions here to that effect, in which intent has been proven by the proof of one witness to an overt act, by proof of confession, or proof of admission of various kinds, all of which have been held admissible to prove intent with which those acts which were proven by two witnesses were performed.

The COURT. Well, bring in the jury and conclude your opening statement.

(And thereafter the following additional proceedings were had in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

38 The COURT. Proceed.

(The following proceedings were had in the presence but out of the hearing of the jury:)

Mr. WOLL. There is one matter in this situation, your Honor. Herbert Haupt was arrested on June 27th. And we will attempt to prove the contact of Herbert Haupt with the defendant and that Herbert Haupt later on told them to say he had no connection with the government and in the event that they were asked to say that Herbert Haupt had gone to Mexico and not to say anything more.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is of the same character.

The COURT. Proceed.

(The following proceedings were had in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

Mr. WOLL. The government will further prove that Herbert Haupt was arrested on the morning of June 27th. We will prove that that evening there were at the Hans Haupt home this defendant and a number of persons, including this defendant; that this defendant was concerned over the absence of Herbert

39 Haupt and after expressing his concern that this defendant, according to his statement, and the others agreed that they would not tell anything about Herbert, except to say that

Herbert had been to Mexico and had come back to the United States from Mexico.

Those briefly are the facts which the government intend to prove. This it intends to do by evidence introduced in this court. I fully believe that this evidence will be produced. If it is not, however, you are not to take my statement, or what I have said here as evidence. You listen to the evidence as it goes in and then you can determine whether or not what I have said here does state the facts, as I have arrayed them to you.

It is on this evidence and other evidence that I have not mentioned, or which I may have forgotten to mention, or evidence that being so involved, as you might say that we cannot point out the details of it, but which will come in as the case goes in, so that we say at the termination of all the evidence in this case, we shall ask you to return a verdict of guilty and to find the defendant, Hans Max Haupt guilty of treason.

I thank you for your attention.

The COURT. You may proceed for the defendant.

40 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the Court.

The COURT. Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Gentlemen representing the Government, and Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

The COURT. Just a moment. I think we will take a short recess at this time.

(Whereupon a recess was taken.)

41 (On the coming in of Court after recess the trial of this cause was resumed as follows, that is to say:)

The COURT: Proceed.

Opening statement by Mr. Warnholtz

Mr. WARNHOLTZ: May it please, your Honor:

The COURT. Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And you gentlemen representing the Government and Ladies and gentlemen of the jury:

At the very beginning I want to join with the United States Attorney, Mr. Woll, in making this statement, that whatever I speak is not evidence, and if I should unintentionally make an error you want to disregard it and, of course, be governed by the actual evidence during the case, and I do assure you I will be very conservative in my statements.

Now, Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury you have undertaken to discharge a very solemn duty, that of a jury to decide a case of treason, a duty which demands of you sacrifice of time, of comfort and the employment of impartiality and courage, because you are to render a just verdict, and frequently to be just 42 means that you must be able to also be courageous.

The charge in this case, Ladies and Gentlemen, as you heard is that of treason, often referred to as the greatest crime which can be committed. Treason is defined in the Constitution of the United States of America as follows:

"Treason against the United States which shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to the enemies by giving them aid and comfort."

Now, that is the definition, but into the definition of every case we have to read two fundamental principles.

One is that a defendant is presumed to be innocent until he has been proven guilty, and when you start with this case and deal with this man, the defendant, you must deal with him as an innocent man, though he is charged with a crime. That is the law.

There is the second fundamental principle in our system of jurisprudence, in our system, a defendant cannot be found guilty until his guilt has been established beyond a reasonable doubt.

Now, with reference to the crime of treason, the framers
43 of our Constitution in their wisdom and based on experience which they gained from effort which in those days were not too remote added a third principle so that there might not be a miscarriage of justice.

That third principle reads and it was put into the Constitution:

"No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to t same overt act or on confession in open court."

I shall not define the words "overt act," but I believe there will be no objection if I state generally it means an act of treason, but His Honor Judge Barnes during the proceedings will give you the legal interpretation on that particular word, or words.

Now as counsel for the defendant it is my duty to stress every single point of advantage and of protection and of safeguard which the law and the Constitution of our country, the Supreme law of our land gives to a defendant charged with the crime of treason and that I shall aim to do.

Now, going over the facts of the case, I will make this general statement. It is, of course, the object of an opening statement that made by the Government and that made by the defend-44 ant to acquaint you in advance to some extent with the facts as will be brought before you during the trial piecemeal at the time, so that you may have a better understanding and clearer view of the entire picture that will be unfolded during the entire trial. In this case it is important to observe there is only one defendant. A single defendant and that single defendant is Hans Max Haupt, the man sitting over there.

You have heard the United States Attorney talking a great deal about Herbert Haupt. Herbert Haupt is the son of Hans

Haupt and Erna Haupt, his wife, the wife of Hans Haupt. Herbert, however, is not charged in this cause with the commission of any crime. He is dead. The evidence will show he was tried before a Military Tribunal and that he died in the electric chair. However, it is true that the government has a right and to some extent it is obliged to prove a certain contention, namely, that Herbert Haupt, the man that is not the defendant in this case was sent by the German Government, as an agent of the German Government to the United States for the purpose of acting here as a spy and as a saboteur and in other capacities
45 for the German Government. This is alleged in the indictment. Therefore let us keep this clear there are no issues in this case which relate to Herbert Haupt, the man who was executed, except this one. Namely, whether or not he was sent by the German Government to the United States to act here as a spy and saboteur or in some similar capacity, and whether he subsequently acted as such. There will be no need for the government to introduce a great deal of evidence on the point whether he was sent here as a spy and saboteur. I do here and now admit on behalf of the defense that Herbert Haupt received during—about the months of April and May 1942, instructions in Brandenburg, Germany, how to construct and complete devices of destruction and of sabotage. That these instructions were given to him in a schooling course conducted by the German Government and that the course embraced the giving of information of how to employ the knowledge which they gained there for the purpose of damaging American industry in this country.

We further admit that Herbert Haupt, together with three other persons; their names are Neubauer, Thiele and Kerling who left from Lorient, France, presumably in a U-Boat—
46 I say, "presumably" and arrived somewhere on the coast of Florida, on June 17, 1942, and at that time they had with them a number of cases filled with explosives and destructive devices which, together with the German uniforms which they wore at the time when they did land. They buried them in the sands off the coast of Florida when they arrived.

The defense will show that Herbert Haupt was instructed by the officers in charge, by his superior officer, because he was at that time a German soldier wearing a German uniform, a uniform of the German army, he was instructed not to see his parents in Chicago upon arriving in America.

It will be further shown, however, that contrary to these instructions Herbert Haupt immediately upon arriving in America abandoned the mission for which he was sent here by doffing his uniform and with it he doffed everything else in connection with his mission and he disobeyed the command of his superior officer. The first thing he did when he came to Chicago was to see his father and mother in disobedience of the orders and commands previously given him.

47 There will be no evidence, whatsoever, in this case, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, that Herbert Haupt ever committed or attempted to commit sabotage in the United States of America.

And now we will go over to the defendant. So far you heard mostly about Herbert Haupt. We will go over to the defendant Hans Max Haupt, and the only defendant in this case. The evidence will show you that Hans Haupt was born in Germany and that somewhere around 1923 he came to this country and like other people, perhaps imbued with a desire to live in the country which was freer or perhaps he knew nothing about it and what he wanted to do was to improve on his economic conditions as has been done during the last 150 years by people all over the United States. Some of them came to escape persecution in the foreign countries. Most of them came over here because they thought it was a country where they could make a better living. So did Hans Max Haupt, and about two years later his wife and his one son, Herbert, who was then around five years old followed him, and they came to Chicago, and here Hans Max Haupt spent the subsequent years. He was a man of limited education. He worked very hard at his trade, that of a bricklayer, painter, and 48 decorator, and he got along in a modest way. He had possibly very little time to become thoroughly acquainted with our American ideals, but all he did most of the time was, he just worked, and he cared for his family the best he could, trying to give them, more particularly to his son, a little more than he had himself when he was a boy; doing that which almost any father or parent would do. There is nothing wrong in that. He followed the aims of the average human being.

After he had left Germany he did not begin to hate that country. He retained love and affection for the land from which he came. Perhaps it will be brought out during the trial that before he came here he fought in the First World War, that he was a soldier for a period of four years. That he was wounded and gassed during that war as were many other soldiers of ours fighting and those of the other side, but he had not learned to hate Germany. There was nothing that caused him to hate it. He retained a great deal of affection for Germany, perhaps too much affection.

It may also be true that some evidence will be given that

49 Hans Max Haupt was unable to understand why our country should be thrown into a war, which as he saw it, did not interest us. It may be shown that respecting that point he got into arguments and one word gave the other one, he may have made some remarks which he should not have made, but those were words, those were utterances and not deeds and what is more they are not charged as being crimes. They are not mentioned in the indictment.

The evidence, ladies and gentlemen of the jury will further show you that during the summer of the year 1941, at which time his son Herbert had become 21 years old, this son left with two other boys for Mexico. After a while there came some messages, postal cards, or a cablegram from Japan: Herbert had arrived in Japan and then nothing further was heard from him until June 1942, when Herbert suddenly had returned to Chicago. To be precise it was June 19, 1942. But only seven days had fully elapsed before Herbert was arrested by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

As far as it is possible I shall try to reconstruct by evidence during this trial exactly what Hans Haupt did during those seven days after his son had returned, and you will find 50 what he did was work from morning until night, every day of the week to supply that what is necessary to pay the expense of living. There will be no evidence—and I say none that he went out and planned the blowing up, perhaps the destruction of public buildings, et cetera, or that he conspired with anybody to do it. There will be no evidence that he saw anyone of these many destructive devices which the government may put on this table later on as exhibits.

The evidence will further show you ladies and gentlemen that during these seven days he met his son, that is right, but that any act which Hans did with reference to his son were those which are based on love and affection of a father for his child, his only child, and that these acts were acts of every day occurrence such as happens in your family and in my family every day, and nothing else but that.

There will be no evidence of any acts where the father, the defendant here, helped the enemy of the United States of America, namely, the German government, either through means of his son or in any other way, or through any other person.

51 As to the charges contained in the indictment, you will possibly have the following evidence and I want you to listen closely to these. What I talk about now are the specific charges in the indictment, the so-called overt acts. There are four overt acts which relate to the purchase of an automobile. The automobile which Mr. Woll told you he will prove that Hans Haupt bought for the purpose of carrying dynamite from Florida to Chicago. The evidence, in fact, ladies and gentlemen, will show that Herbert Haupt, the boy, before he left Chicago, owned an automobile which he used for the purpose of going to his place of employment every day and possibly as young men used their cars to go out on Sundays, et cetera. When he left for Mexico, and later on for Japan, and ultimately landed in Germany, he left that automobile behind him. It was a comparatively new car, quite a new car, and after about a month or two elapsed and he had not returned, then his father, the defendant here, took the boy's automobile and used it. The father had an automobile too, an old one, one that was seven or eight years old, or something like that which he had used every day in his business as a decorator and painter and a bricklayer and which he used practically 52 as a truck and it had become rather old and delapidated, so he took over the boy's automobile and he started using that as a truck, the same as he had done with his own automobile. Then when Herbert returned he bought a new automobile, by "he" I mean Hans Haupt, the father, he bought that automobile to replace the one which he had taken over from his son, Herbert Haupt, after Herbert had returned.

Now the evidence may also show that upon the return of Herbert Haupt, this boy Herbert went to two foremen of the same concern where he had worked before, that very concern you heard a moment ago had something to do with some sort of a bomb sight, and Herbert went over to those people and he had connections with them before Herbert left, before he had left Chicago, about two years before he left, he went back over to these two foremen and asked if he could get the job back, and the evidence may show when he went there his father was with him. You will hear no evidence about the stealing of plans. It may also be shown, ladies and gentlemen, that at one time during these seven days Herbert Haupt was seen in the apartment of his parents. You may possibly also hear evidence that at one time Herbert Haupt was 53 seen leaving the apartment building, not the apartment, but the apartment building where his parents lived. It may also be shown by the evidence that Herbert Haupt was in the home of his uncle, Walter Froehling and that while he was there Hans Haupt also came to that home, it may possibly so show during these seven days.

This last day which the United States Attorney referred to when these six or seven people assembled in the home of Hans Haupt, assembled, I believe Mr. Woll stated to you on June 27th. That was the birthday of Mrs. Haupt, of Erna Haupt, the wife of Hans Haupt, and there were present at that time Erna Haupt and Hans Haupt; the brother of Mrs. Haupt, Walter Froehling and his wife and their two children and the two Wergins. Mrs. Haupt will be a witness in this case and the fact will also be brought out.

At no time during the trial will it be shown that the defendant had any treasonable intent in any act which he did at any time. Thank you.

Mr. WOLL. Our first witness will be rather long, your Honor.

The COURT. How long will he take?

(Discussion off the record not reported.)

54 The COURT. Very well. We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen, until ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Bear in mind what I told you about discussing the case or permitting any one to discuss it with you and return here at ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to Thursday, May 25, A. D. 1944 at 10:00 o'clock A. M.)

55 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge, and a Jury.

Thursday, May 25, 1944, 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard G. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys For the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America; Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * *

56 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the jury.)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please, your Honor, at this time I would like to make a motion and will make a motion that all witnesses be excluded during the trial from the courtroom except the person that is testifying at the time.

The COURT. All witnesses other than the defendant and one person who will be designated by the District Attorney go out of the courtroom and remain out of the courtroom.

Mr. FINN. Pardon me, your Honor. May I ask this.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, we have a lot of exhibits to take care of and we have two young men handling the exhibits that may be witnesses on some small point in the matter later on.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What are the two young men's names?

Mr. FINN. Mr. Murphy and Mr. Axtell.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection, your Honor.

The COURT. All right.

Mr. WOLL. One other matter before the jury come in. We 57 have been operating under an arrangement whereby if it were possible to share the table, we have a great number of exhibits and with the other two men assisting on the exhibits it will crowd us all quite a bit. I wonder if we can make some other arrangement.

The COURT. Yes. You can push your table to the right. Just push it back a little bit. Pull this other table in a little closer and then the defense may have this table.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

The CLERK. All the witnesses except the defendant and one witness designated by the United States Attorney and the two custodians of the exhibits, those designated by the United States Attorney will be excluded from the courtroom during the trial of this case. Go out of the courtroom and remain out of the courtroom except when called as a witness. Please remain in the corridor outside of the courtroom door. The burden is on all counsel to see the court's order is obeyed.

The COURT. Bring in the jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

Several JURORS. Good morning.

The COURT. You may proceed.

58 Mr. WOLL. I will call Mr. Ernest Peter Burger.

ERNEST PETER BURGER, called as a witness on behalf of the government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Mr. WOLL. Your Honor, so that we won't be missing these exhibits, may they all be marked at this time? I have them stamped Government's Exhibit so and so for identification, and we will use that stamp, if it is all right.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. All right.

Mr. WOLL. We will disregard the previous marks, if that is agreeable also.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all right.

Mr. WOLL. Is that agreeable?
MR. WARNHOLTZ. Yes.

A. Correct.
Q. Now, how were these classes divided as to instructions? Was there a theoretical part and another part?
A. Yes.
Q. Divided in any way?
A. Yes.
Q. Will you explain that, please?
A. The classes were divided into a theoretical part as you said, consisting of lectures for the purpose of making us familiar with the different chemical compounds and so on.

It also consisted of assignments in the laboratory where we would make or list the compounds according to what we learned in the lectures.

We also learned or had instructions in how to prepare and make time devices of a mechanical or chemical nature. We also had instructions in how to set and apply these time devices. How to connect the time devices with the explosives. We tested these explosives actually by setting them off again through time devices.

The instructions further consisted of writing in secret ink and we also received instructions of how to buy apparently harmless drugs. How to connect these harmless drugs with certain in-64 gredients such as flour, powdered sugar and so on which has a mixture that would form a highly destructive element.
Q. You stated before, I believe, that there was a proving or testing grounds?
A. Yes.
Q. And what instructions did you receive there in the testing grounds. What was the nature of the work that you did there?
A. Our instructions were—well, there was a space on the test ground consisting of—first to become able to approximate the effectiveness of each separate formula or compound.
Q. Of what?

A. Of explosives; of incendiaries. Second, the test ground was used to enable us to prepare the exact amount of explosives according to the thickness of the object we would attack.

The test ground was also used to give us an opportunity to approach our target under the circumstances which would be very similar to the circumstances and conditions we find over here, as for instance the railroad tracks which is located on the test ground or on the test ground, rather, which would be guarded and it would be up to us to approach this particular railroad 65 track unseen by the guards or unnoticed by men there and place our explosives onto that track, using a timing device to the explosive and make our way out of that test ground which, of course, would be similar, would represent a plant or industrial plant such as we would find over here.

Q. "Over here" you mean America or the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were there any sessions or instructions in the evenings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where would they be held?

A. The instructions that we received in the evenings at Brandenburg were held in the main room; main living room of the estate.

Q. And who was to head those discussions?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Who would be in charge of that particular session?

A. Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. The same Lieutenant Kappe you mentioned before?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was Herbert Haupt present at all times during the period those instructions were given in the classroom concerning the manufacture and use of explosives?

A. Herbert Haupt was present at all sessions where 66 instructions were given to us.

Q. By that you mean all sessions regardless of whether or not it was in that particular classroom or not?

A. That is correct.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 1 for identification and ask you if that photograph is a true likeness of Lieutenant Kappe you mentioned?

A. This is a picture of Lieutenant Kappe.

The COURT. Did you identify it by number?

Mr. WOLL. This particular number is number 1, if the Court please.

Mr. FINN. I have just marked the first one myself, if that is agreeable, I would like the court reporter to mark these with his initials and they will be Government's Exhibits 2 to 8 inclusive.

Mr. WOLL. I will show you Government's Exhibits marked "2 to 8", inclusive, for identification, and ask you if you can identify the persons who are pictured in these exhibits, which are photographs, if you will identify each picture, give the number of the exhibit on the back. I will show you first Government's Exhibit 2 for identification and ask you who that is?

A. This is a picture of George John Dasch.

67 Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3 and ask you whose picture that is?

A. Herbert Haupt.

Q. And is that exhibit a true and correct reproduction of the likeness of Herbert Haupt?

A. It is; yes.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 4 for identification and ask you whose picture is in that exhibit?

A. This is a picture of Heinrich Heinck.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 5 and ask you whose picture is pictured there?

A. This is a picture of Edward Kerling.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 6 and ask you whose picture is pictured there?

A. This is a picture of Hermann Neubauer.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 7 and ask you whose picture this represents?

A. This is a picture of Richard Quirin.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 8 for identification and ask you whose picture is pictured there?

A. This is a picture of Herman Thiel.

Q. Now, each person whose picture you have identified is the same person that you mentioned here in the courtroom as being in the school at Brandenburg?

A. Yes.

68 Q. The Herbert Haupt you mentioned in your testimony is the Herbert Haupt whose picture you just identified?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe you stated there was a lake on this estate; is that so?

A. There were two lakes.

Q. Two lakes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was there a lake entirely within the estate?

A. Yes.

Q. What would you say the size of that lake was; can you give me any idea?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, was that lake used for any purpose?

A. No.

Q. Now, you say there was another lake?

A. There was a large lake, or something a border of the estate of the area.

Q. Was that lake used for any purpose?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was the purpose that that lake was used for?

A. We had several landing maneuvers on that lake.

Q. Were you instructed how to approach and perform those landing maneuvers?

A. We were instructed—we would try to land in a rub-
69 ber boat, on the lake, as fast as possible on the beach.

Q. Were you informed at that time by anyone of the school as to the purpose of landing; how to land from this rubber boat?

A. We were told we would have to know this for our future assignments.

Q. Now did you mention in your testimony that you were instructed in the use of incendiaries?

A. No; I didn't mention that.

Q. Were you instructed in such articles?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is an incendiary?

A. An incendiary is a highly inflammable material which would be very hard to extinguish and which would spread and also start fires with any material it would get in touch with.

Q. And were you instructed in any particular type of incendiary?

A. We were instructed in several types of incendiaries.

Q. Well, what types were you instructed in?

A. We were instructed the so-called slow hard burning incendiary and also in the fast burning incendiary.

Q. I believe you stated that you were also instructed 70 how to use timing devices?

A. That is right.

Q. Will you explain what you mean by a timing device?

A. A timing device is used to delay explosives or the fire if it is connected with an incendiary.

Q. And were you instructed in various types of time devices?

A. Yes.

Q. And what types were you instructed in?

A. We were instructed in mechanical and chemical time devices.

Q. And do you know what a chemical device is?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you instructed, tell me your instructions in regard to a chemical time device?

A. We were instructed in a great number of chemical time devices, that is, in the manufacture of a timing device and also in the use of this particular time device. We were instructed to prepare for instance a chemical timing device consisting of a sulphuric acid which would be separated from a chemical compound by cellophane and which would eat through this cellophane in a certain time, according to the thickness of that separating cellophane. It would eat through and get in contact with 71 that chemical compound which would result in an immediate high dangerous flame; highly destructive flame.

Q. Now, did you have the various types of chemical devices in the school at Brandenburg?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Can you describe any of the chemical devices that you handled or were instructed in?

A. One of the chemical time devices we used or we were instructed in consisted of an ordinary pocket watch whose hands would be connected with a wire and upon touching it it would result in a contact and the contact would result in the explosion.

Q. Now, going back to the shooting field, what instructions did you use in connection with the railroad tracks that were on the estate?

A. We used the railroad tracks on the test grounds to place, first the school of how to form a—how much of our explosive material we would use to destroy this particular type of track.

Second we would prepare our chemical compound or that explosive and we would place our explosives on the tracks. We would also attach to the explosives our timing device in such a manner that any passing train would automatically bring 72 that timing device to explode, that is the timing device and the explosives.

Q. Now, you mentioned a tower on the estate, was that used for any purpose?

A. Yes.

Q. That was used for tests also?

A. For observation purposes, also for our protection.

Q. Was the tower protection for the buildings?

A. It was a very strong stone building.

Q. Were experiments on these explosive materials carried on in what was called a pit in the estate?

A. Yes.

Q. Now you stated before in the evening there would be instructions headed by Lieutenant Kappe?

A. Yes.

Q. In general, what was the nature of the instructions; what would they consist of?

A. They were concerned with the personal history of each one of our crew.

Q. Was there a discussion concerning such history, instructions given in that regard?

A. There were constant instructions.

Q. Over how long a period did those instructions last?

A. These instructions lasted from the first day until the last day.

73 Q. And was Herbert Haupt present at those instruction periods?

A. Herbert Haupt was present.

Q. Did Herbert Haupt receive any instructions from Lieutenant Kappe?

A. Yes.

Q. Concerning his identity?

A. Yes.

Q. And what were those instructions that he received—wait just a minute—go ahead.

A. Herbert Haupt received instructions regarding his identity to use his own name in a vicinity or among people where he was known; on the other hand he also received orders or instructions to use a different name in the vicinities where he was unknown.

Q. Did he receive any further instructions about what he was to do immediately upon coming to America or to the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. And what were those instructions?

A. Herbert Haupt received instructions to proceed from the landing point which at that time was not designated, to proceed from his landing point directly to Chicago. He also received orders to procure an automobile and put this automobile to the disposal of our group or our troup.

Q. By "your group" you mean the men whose pictures
74 you have identified?

A. Yes. He also received orders to procure information and details concerning the optical industry in Chicago, especially of the Norden Bomb sight, and furnish us information which was done in order to equip us to carry out our assignments. He also received order to register with the army. He also received an order to contact trustworthy political people and to deposit a certain amount of money with them as a contingent fund for our groups in case of emergency.

Q. Did you receive any particular instructions?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were the instructions received while you were in Brandenburg or were they received later, the ones you have mentioned as to Herbert Haup, were they received in Brandenburg?

A. These instructions were officially given us on the last day at Brandenburg.

Q. Were the instructions concerning this matter discussed down at Brandenburg, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, was there any discussion at Brandenburg about the use to be made of this car, of this automobile which you 75 state Herbert Haupt was instructed to obtain?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that discussion?

A. The purpose for purchasing an automobile was to, first, remove our explosives from the place where they were cached, or hidden or buried, back to a place which in the meantime would be prepared. The second purpose for a car was to give us range for our operations.

Q. Now, was there a discussion concerning the identity of any others of the group at Brandenburg?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall any particular individual about whom this discussion resolved or concerned?

A. Our discussions concerned the identity of each one of our members, concerned each one.

Q. And there was no definite instruction concerning that, however, until later, is that correct: in other words, was your identity established at the school or later on?

A. My identity was established at the school.

Q. And what was your identity?

A. Well, you see——

Q. Did you receive instructions as to your identity at the school or before you left Germany?

76 A. I received instructions as to my own personal identity.

Q. And what were the instructions what you were to do?

A. My orders—my final orders in that regard——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to this, your Honor, unless he is asked where the final orders were given.

Mr. WOLL. I think I can clear this up now.

Q. You received instructions at Brandenburg; you received final orders some place else?

A. At Brandenburg.

Q. At Brandenburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About when did you receive these final orders?

A. At the last day at Brandenburg.

Q. And from whom did you receive your final orders?

A. From Ligutenant Kappe.

Q. And what were your final orders which you received?

A. Concerning my identity?

Q. Yes.

A. The final order concerning my identity was to proceed to Chicago, to open a commercial artist studio and to join the Artist Guild or organizations and to build up a complete picture of the ordinary American commercial artist. This identity was built up on my previous experience as a commercial artist or due to my ability to work as a fashion designer.

77 Q. Do you recall any other orders concerning any other member of the group about identity?

A. I recall the orders given Hermann Neubauer who at some time worked in the United States as a cook. His experience as a cook would enable him to buy a small restaurant as a berth for the actual activities and this restaurant, in turn, would enable us to help him inconspicuously.

Q. Where were these final orders to those individuals given?

A. Also in Brandenburg.

Q. And by Lieutenant Kappe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now did you and the members who attended this class with you in Brandenburg receive any assignment as to the work that was to be performed in America?

A. Yes.

Q. And from whom did the group receive the assignment?

A. From Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. Lieutenant Kappe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how was this assignment received?

A. We received this assignment in writing.

78 Q. And will you tell us the manner of receiving this in writing; how was the writing distributed?

A. At that time the entire group assembled in the class room and Lieutenant Kappe announced officially that our destination would be the United States; that he would now hand us a typewritten sheet of paper containing the specific assignments of each group. At the same time he divided us into two groups. He also furnished us with a map showing, with blue and green pencil marks and the exact targets we would have to approach in the United States. He also gave us an outline of what we really had to do after we landed in the United States.

Q. Now after you received this piece of paper containing the assignments and after you received the maps and orders with the assignment sheets and the maps, then what did you do?

A. We had to hand them back to Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. And do you recall the assignment that your group had?

A. I do.

Q. Will you state it please?

A. The assignment sheet of my group which was called or designated group number 1 contained first, the names of group number 1. It also informed us that we had the western 79 section of the western country—yes, that is right—the western half of the United States——

Q. Now, may I interrupt you? Never mind, go ahead.

The WITNESS. (Continuing). It also contained a number of names of different plants we would have to attack. It also contained that we would receive our information concerning optical industries from Herbert Haupt even though he was a member of group 2.

Q. Now you say that your assignment contained the names of some plants?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were those plants located; in what country?

A. The United States.

Q. Do you recall the names of any of those plants?

A. I recall the name of Alcoa.

Q. Is that the Aluminum Corporation of America?

A. That is the name of a small town. It was the name of the Aluminum Corporation of America. I also recall one plant which was located in Oregon and one was located in the vicinity of Los Angeles, and there was one plant down in Tennessee where they—I don't recall the exact name.

Q. Now, you say that you were at that time divided into two groups?

A. Yes.

80 Q. So that the assignments you received, or your group received was the assignment of the western part of the United States?

A. Correct.

Q. I now ask you what point west?

A. There was an imaginary line starting at Chicago north running straight down south.

Now the country west of this line was assigned to group number 1.

Q. And that was your group?

A. That was my group.

Q. And who composed that, do you know?

A. George John Dasch, Heinrich Heinck, Richard Quirin, and myself.

Q. Did you see the assignment of group number 2 at that time?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall any of the assignments that group number 2 had?

A. I do.

Q. And what was that assignment, the best you recall?

A. I recall one assignment, namely Hellgate Bridge, the eastern part, as I recall of the country and a plant outside of New York and I forget the other name.

Q. Now you state that it was Herbert Haupt who was 81 to have the undertaking regarding this as to both groups 1 and 2?

A. That is right.

Q. He was to furnish the information for both groups 1 and 2?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that information again?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to unless it is now shown, he shows that information, what information came from group 1 or 2.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. When you received your assignment, you were assigned to group number 1?

A. Yes.

Q. You stated that assignment was in written form?

A. Yes.

Q. And was there anything on your assignment, written assignment relating to any activities of Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to. That has been asked and answered before.

Mr. WOLL. You object because it has been answered?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That very point was answered and it would only be cumulative.

82 Mr. WOLL. It may have been answered and if so, I will drop that.

The COURT. Are you pressing the question?

Mr. WOLL. I am informed by counsel that it has been answered, but I would like to clear it up.

The COURT. Well, let him answer it again.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Now, was this assignment that Herbert Haupt had a written assignment which you received as group 1?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that assignment?

A. May I correct that point?

Q. Yes.

A. The assignment that Herbert Haupt had was written on both sheets of paper, on both assignments, an assignment to group number 1 and an assignment to group number 2, because he happened to be the only one who was authority and was familiar with optical matters.

Q. Now, at any time there was a discussion at this school in Brandenburg concerning the identity was the name of any particular optical company mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the name of that particular Optical Company that had been mentioned?

A. There was only one particular name mentioned and 83 that was the name of the Simpson Optical Company in Chicago connected with the Norden Bomb sight.

Q. Do you recall what instruction, if any, Herbert Haupt received in connection with the Simpson Optical Company?

A. Yes.

Q. What were those instructions?

A. Herbert Haupt had the assignment to procure information of the incendiary lay-out and also information about vital machines, and parts in this particular Simpson Optical Company. He had to furnish us with this information in order to equip us to attack the different particular parts, and if I may say, all important bottlenecks in this plant.

Q. You said he furnished the information to the group?

A. Yes.

Q. Was anything said about employment in the Simpson Optical Company?

A. Yes.

Q. What was said?

A. Herbert Haupt received the order that he had to find employment with optical plants, due to his former experience in this line of work and to use this employment to get information——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that answer and I ask that it
84 be stricken. The question asked referred to the Simpson Optical Company.

The COURT. Overruled. That objection isn't good. I will rule that objection is not good unless made by the examining counsel.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. When did the classes end at Brandenburg?

A. On the 30th of April.

Q. And what happened then, did you have a vacation?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the group later reassemble?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you say "group" I mean group 1 and group 2?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did the groups reassemble?

A. In Berlin.

Q. And was Lieutenant Kappe there when they reassembled in Berlin?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you receive any further instructions in Berlin?

A. Yes.

Q. In connection with these instructions did you go anywhere in Berlin with Lieutenant Kappe?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go? When I say "you," I mean the 85 group?

A. During the final instructions we received in Berlin, we visited a large railroad yard, railroad repair shop, or railroad yard, where we received detailed instructions on how to destroy railroad engines; how to destroy railroad stock, rolling stock and railroad installations.

The COURT. And railroad what?

A. Railroad installations. We also visited during our stay in Berlin a canal lock in order to learn the vital parts of this particular lock. We received directions and information by an expert of this lock compared with American locks. We received information of the exact dimensions of locks in the United States. We also learned the difference between the gates of the different locks, how they would open sideways, backwards, upwards, and so on. We also were pointed out where the vital parts, moving parts, and hinges of the different locks are located and how to place the explosives on these parts and what particular place. We also learned the thickness of the gates and of the locks we would find in the United States and we were informed as to how the amount of explosives we would have to prepare for to place in the locks over here. That covered our instructions in Berlin.

86 Q. Now did you visit any industrial plants in Berlin?

A. Not in Berlin; no,

Q. Did you visit any industrial plants outside of Berlin?

A. We did.

Q. Did you visit those industrial plants outside of Berlin after you reassembled in Berlin?

A. Yes.

Q. And what type of plants were those?

A. We visited several aluminum and light metal plants.

Q. Did you receive instructions when you visited those plants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were those instructions?

A. Our instructions regarding the aluminum plants or light metal plants were given us by experts for different particular plants. We were shown the vital parts and installations of those aluminum plants. It was pointed out to us how to destroy these vital parts. How to find these vital parts. How to place our explosives or what to do in regard to these vital parts. We were instructed how to paralyze this particular aluminum plant and cause a breakdown. We were shown how to remove a high 87 tension power line for the purpose of cutting off the current or supply of articles of power which in turn would cause the pots and aluminum ovens to freeze. We were also shown how to destroy transformers and equalizers.

Q. Now did you eventually leave Berlin?

A. I did.

Q. Now, before leaving Berlin was there any equipment furnished you, when I say "you" I mean the entire group?

A. Yes.

Q. And what equipment was furnished the entire group of which Herbert Haupt and yourself were members?

A. We received a number of boxes containing equipment. We also received uniforms. We received shovels. We received identification papers.

Q. Now what was the uniform you received; will you describe them, please?

A. The uniforms we received consisted of shoes, socks, trousers, coats and caps.

Q. And were those uniforms, uniforms used in any branch of the German army or navy?

A. They were certain uniforms used by the marines and infantry which is equivalent to your marines and navy.

Q. A marine and infantry?

A. Yes.

88 Q. Of what government?

A. German government.

Q. Now, you say you received some boxes?

A. Yes.

Q. How many boxes did you receive? That is, the entire group.

A. Eight boxes.

Q. Eight boxes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were in the boxes you received?

A. The boxes contained TNT blocks. The boxes also contained chemical equipment and fuses and detonators, certain timing devices, fountain pen sets and a great number of small items which were used in our operations.

Q. Now, were these boxes at that time divided between the two groups?

A. Yes.

Q. And how many boxes did each group get?

A. Four boxes.

Q. Now, was anything else distributed at Berlin other than the boxes containing the explosive materials, devices and the uniforms?

A. We also received shovels and sea bags.

Q. And sea bags?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else that you recall?

A. Identification papers.

Q. When you say "identification papers" what do you mean? Will you describe them?

89 A. I mean we received two types of identification papers.

Q. Yes.

A. Namely a draft registration card and also social security card.

Q. One was a draft registration card made out to the individual or were they a blank?

A. There was one in blank and also one made out in the name of the individual.

Q. There were two draft cards, you say?

A. For each man.

Q. For each man; one was made out in blank and the other was made out to the man?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about the social security card? Were there one or two of those, if you recall?

A. As I recall we received two social security cards. I am not sure, though.

Q. Now, then, before you said that I believe Herbert Haupt received instructions from Lieutenant Kappe to register for the army. What do you mean by registering for the army?

A. That Herbert Haupt had the orders to register under the National Service Registration Act.

90 Q. National Service, therefore the Registration Act?

A. Exactly.

Q. Selective Service Act?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, when did the two groups leave Berlin?

A. We left on the 22nd of May.

Q. Of what year?

A. 1942.

Q. Did Lieutenant Kappe leave with the group?

A. Yes.

Q. From there where did the group go?

A. Paris, France.

Q. And from Paris where did the group go?
A. We went to Lorient.
Q. France?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, do you recall when the two groups landed in Lorient with Lieutenant Kappe?
A. We landed on the 26th of May.
Q. And how long did the second group stay in Lorient, France?
A. Group number 2 stayed from the 22nd to the 27th. I think, that is right.
Q. Now, between the 26th of May and the 27th of May, were any instructions given to group 2, any further instructions given concerning their destination?
A. Their mission.
Q. Or the purpose of their destination?
91 A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall those instructions?
A. These instructions were first concerning me.
Q. Yes, what was done or said in that regard at Lorient, France at that time?
A. At that time Group number 2 received their money belts and also another amount of money, around $400 in smaller denominations.
Q. And how much did each individual member of group 2 receive in the money belt?
A. Each member in group number 2 received an amount of $5,000 in the money belt in addition to the $400 in small denominations.
Q. Now what was the denominations of the $5,000 the group received in the money belt?
A. The denominations of money in the money belts were $50 bills.
Q. $50 bills?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the four hundred odd dollars was made up in smaller denominations?
A. In smaller denominations.
Q. Who was the leaders, who was appointed leader of the second group?
A. Edward Kerling.
Q. Did he, as leader, have any money in addition to 92 the $5,000 and the four hundred odd dollars?
A. Yes.
Q. How much did he have?
A. Edward Kerling had charge of the emergency fund of group number 2 which was divided or placed in two separate zipper bags.

Q. In what?
A. Zipper bags.
Q. Zipper bags?
A. Yes.
Q. How much was in one bag?
A. In one bag was approximately $60,000.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. How much?
A. $60,000.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. How much?
A. $60,000.
Q. And the other bag?
A. Around ten thousand dollars.
Q. Now you stated group 2 eventually on the 27th, I believe, left Lorient, France?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, do you recall anything else that occurred in Lorient, France, in connection with the second group before it left in regard to any instructions from Lieutenant Kappe of furnishing any material or equipment to the second group?

93 A. I only recall an announcement made by Lieutenant Kappe that now they would leave to fight for Germany. That they would now enter the submarine. That they would now go on our mission which would bring them over to the United States, that they would have to consider, or that we would have to consider ourselves as soldiers and that this second group which is about to leave, and should all do our best for the advantage of our country.

Q. Now before the second group left was anything done concerning packing the sea bags?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you assist in packing the sea bags?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, will you describe what you did in assisting in packing the sea bags of the second group?
A. When Lieutenant Kappe announced that group number 2 should prepare itself to get ready to leave, we all were in our civilian clothes, so group number 2 took their sea bags and their equipment downstairs in a smaller room in the hotel and changed from their civilian clothes into the uniform which we took out of that sea bag and we unpacked therefore that sea bag, took out the boxes, distributed these uniforms to each particular 94 member of that group and repacked the civilian clothes in the boxes into the sea bags.

Q. Now going back to Berlin, the date before you left Berlin, were any contracts drawn of any kind?

A. Yes.
Q. Or were any contracts drawn at any time?
A. Yes.
Q. And where were they drawn?
A. In Berlin.
Q. In Berlin?
A. Yes.
Q. And was that just prior to your leaving for Lorient?
A. It was prior to our leaving for Paris.
Q. For Paris?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, did you sign one of these contracts?
A. I did not, no.
Q. Did you see any of these contracts which were signed?
A. I saw all of the contracts that were signed.
Q. And were the contracts that you saw similar or were there differences in the contracts?
A. The contracts were exactly alike as to their text. They differed in the names of relatives and in the amounts of money.
Q. And did they differ also in the parties to the 95 contract?
A. Yes.
Q. And who was the party, you understand what I mean, the party to the contract?
A. Yes.
Q. Who was one party to the contract?
A. One party to the contract was represented by Lieutenant Kappe.
Q. Who did he represent?
A. The German army.
Q. And was that party the German army a party to each contract you saw?
A. Yes.
Q. And then the contracts were they made with the individual members of the group, is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, do you recall any conditions of the contract?
A. I do.
Q. Just briefly did the German government contract to pay any amount of money to the individuals?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, why didn't you sign such a contract?
A. Because I was a member of the German armed forces. I was a soldier and still am a German soldier, not an agent, not a paid agent——

96 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please, that is asking for a conclusion and I object to the question and ask that the answer be stricken.

The COURT. Oh, no, let it stand.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Now, after you helped pack the sea bags of the second group, did you leave the hotel with the second group?

A. We left the hotel to carry out, to help carry out the equipment to a waiting car.

Q. Did you assist in putting the equipment in the car?

A. I did.

Q. Then what happened?

A. Then the car left and we said good-bye, gave each other our best wishes, reminded each other we would see each other again over here and the car left.

Q. Now, to go back to the hotel, did you go back to the hotel in Lorient?

A. I did.

Q. Did Lieutenant Kappe go with the second group in the automobile?

A. He did.

Q. Now after he left did he come back to the hotel?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he come back the same day?

A. Yes, sir.

97 Q. After he came back did your group receive any instructions?

A. We were informed that group number 2 is now on the way to the United States.

Q. Did he say how it was on its way?

A. Yes, told us the submarine was waiting at the train when they arrived at the pier and they entered the submarine; that he had introduced group number 2 to the Captain of that particular submarine and that he waited and watched them leave the harbor——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please I object to all this and ask that it be stricken. This was after Herbert Haupt left. Herbert Haupt was not present and is not present and we cannot possibly refute this. Herbert Haupt was out of the picture at that time.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Will you continue, please?

A. Lieutenant Kappe informed us that the group number 2 was now on its way to the United States, that he had brought them on to the pier. That he had entered the submarine with them to introduce them to the Captain of that submarine and he also informed us that our submarine was expected to come the next day.

98 The COURT. We will take a recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon a recess was had and on the coming in of court after recess the trial of this cause was resumed as follows, that is to say:)

The COURT. Proceed gentlemen.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the Court I move that all the instructions given to Herbert Haupt, the answers given by the witness with reference to it be excluded from the record on the ground they constitute hearsay. Herbert Haupt is dead. The defendant in this case was not present. It seems conversations should not be admitted between Herbert Haupt and some other person and to ask what instructions were given is just circumventing the question. He should ask what did he say, did he say so and so, and conversations are hearsay and they should not be admitted.

The COURT. What do you say?

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, there are numerous cases including the Cramer case in which an identical proceeding was approved, as to these questions. The nature of the mission which

99 Herbert Haupt was over here on——

The COURT. Overruled. Proceed.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I believe just before the recess, Mr. Burger, you stated that Lieutenant Kappe told you that a submarine for your group was on the way, words to that effect?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that group eventually leave Lorient, France?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did your group leave?

A. We left on the 28th.

Q. 28th?

A. 28th of May, 1942.

Q. Prior to your group leaving did Lieutenant Kappe give you any further instructions?

A. Yes.

Q. What instructions did you receive from Lieutenant Kappe, that is, your group?

A. We received instructions or orders.

Q. Orders?

A. We had to prepare ourselves——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Your Honor, I shall object to this for the simple reason this does not prove the status of Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WOLL. Herbert Haupt and this man were together.

100 : The COURT. Well, if for no other reason, I think each one of these eight men are being considered together. Aside from that general proposition the witness has testified that Herbert Haupt furnished both groups with information concerning one certain class of industry in this country and if for no other reason I think the activities of the other four would be pertinent here. Objection overruled.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. What was the order that you received?

A. We received the orders to prepare ourselves to get ready to leave at six o'clock in the evening.

Q. Did you prepare yourselves to leave?

A. We did.

Q. What did you do in preparing yourself to leave?

A. We changed from civilian clothes into our uniforms. We repacked our material and got ready to leave.

Q. What material did you have with you in your group?

A. We had four boxes.

Q. What was in the boxes?

A. Containing TNT blocks and additional equipment.

Q. What other material did you have?

A. We also had two shovels.

Q. I believe you stated you changed into military uniforms?

101 A. That is right.

Q. What did you do with your civilian clothes?

A. We repacked our civilian clothes into our sea bags.

Q. What else did you put into the sea bags?

A. We put the shovels in the sea bags—box and our clothes.

Q. Boxes, you mean?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you receive any money at any time at Lorient, for your group?

A. No.

Q. Did you finally leave the hotel?

A. Yes; we left the hotel.

Q. When I say "you" I mean your group.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Lieutenant Kappe go with you?

A. Lieutenant Kappe went with us.

Q. And where did you go?

A. We went to the pier in the harbor of Lorient.
Q. When you got there what did you do?
A. We entered the submarine.
Q. What kind of a submarine was it?
A. It was a German submarine.

Q. And was the submarine in command of any par-
102 ticular person?

A. The submarine was commanded by a German captain.
Q. By a German Captain. Do you mean a captain in the military forces of Germany?
A. I mean a Captain of the German navy.
Q. Did he wear a uniform?
A. Yes.
Q. What uniform did he wear?
A. The uniform of the German navy.
Q. Was there a crew on this submarine?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did they wear uniforms?
A. Yes.
Q. What uniforms did they wear?
A. They wore the uniforms of the German navy.
Q. At the time that your group boarded the submarine, were you in the uniforms you have described before?
A. Yes.
Q. Did Lieutenant Kappe go on the submarine with you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did he remain on the submarine?
A. Well, he remained in the submarine for about a half an hour.
Q. And did you receive any further instructions at that point?

A. I believe I have to correct that word, substitute
103 a different word for instructions.

Q. Was there a conversation at that time with Kappe and your group?
A. We had a conversation but among German soldiers there are no conversations or instructions. We have orders.
Q. You refer to those as orders?
A. There was not at any time—there was not at any time any private conversation, or any way of communicating which could be described as conversations. We are soldiers. That is, we were subject to military command given by Lieutenant Kappe and we received these orders and he gave them, but there were no conversations, there was not any conversation in the general sense of conversations.
Q. In other words, you received orders, did not carry on conversations with commanding officers?

A. Yes. We received final orders as to how to behave on board ship, as to the length of our voyage and I would say for about a half an hour, and we were also introduced to the commanding officer on board. Then Lieutenant Kappe left.

Q. Who was the leader of that group?

A. George John Dasch.

Q. Who were the members of the group?

104 A. Heinrich Heink, Richard Querin and myself.

Q. Who were the members again of the second group who left Lorient the day before you did?

A. Edward Kerling, he was the leader of group number 2, Herbert Haupt, Herman Neubauer and Werner Thiel.

Q. When you were on the submarine, was there any distribution of money?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you describe that distribution for us, please?

A. Shortly before we landed on Long Island we received our money belts and we also received $418 in smaller denominations than $50 bills.

Q. Was there money in the money belts?

A. Yes.

Q. How much money was in each money belt distributed to the group?

A. Approximately $5,000.

Q. Did Kerling, as leader of your group have additional funds?

A. Kerling was not the leader of my group.

Q. Did Dasch, as leader of your group, have any additional money?

A. Yes.

Q. How much did Dasch have as leader of the group?

105 A. Dasch had an emergency fund of $82,000.

Q. At any time while you were in Bradenburg or Berlin or Lorient, did you receive orders concerning the use of this emergency money?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you receive those orders?

A. We received orders on several occasions.

Q. You received orders several times in regard to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall the first orders you received in that regard?

A. I recall that I signed for the receipt of $5,000 in Berlin, which, I of course at that time had not received at all. I received that money on board the submarine.

I also recall an order given to us by Lieutenant Kappe that an emergency fund existed, that this contingent fund should be located or deposited with some politically trustworthy person—naturally in the sense of the National Socialist Party—and that in case of the loss of our leader, our group leader, each one of us would know where to get that, to get a hold of that money.

Q. When you just gave your testimony, did you intend 106 to mean that when you used the word "political" acquaintance or friend, did you mean someone sympathetic to the party, the German party, is that what you meant?

The COURT. "Politically trustworthy" is what he said.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. What did you mean by "poltically trustworthy?"

A. When I say "politically trustworthy" I mean in the sense of the National Socialist Party, of the German National Socialist Party.

Q. You do not mean anybody in politics in America?

A. Not at all.

Q. You stated that you received this money before you landed at Long Island. Did the submarine land at Long Island?

A. Yes.

Q. On what day?

A. On the 13th of June 1942.

Q. What time of day was that, about?

A. It was between twelve o'clock and one o'clock in the morning.

Q. In the morning of the 13th?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your group leave the submarine?

A. Yes.

107 Q. How did you leave the submarine?

A. We left the submarine in a rubber boat?

Q. Who was in the rubber boat?

A. George Dasch——

Q. The members of your group?

A. Yes.

Q. Any one else?

A. Two sailors.

Q. What equipment, if any, did you have in that rubber boat?

A. We had the sea bag containing that box of explosive. We had a suit case containing $82,000, and also had our civilian clothes and shovels when we landed.

The COURT. What?

A. When we landed.

Q. When you landed?

A. Yes.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. After landing did the sailors who rowed you to the shore remain?

A. No.
Q. What did they do?
A. They went back to the submarine.
Q. Did the submarine leave immediately upon your landing?
A. I do not know.
Q. What did you do after that? What did you do
108 after you landed?
A. I carried a sea bag—no, I carried a suit case to land and started to change my clothes.
Q. When you say "suit case" will you describe that object for us?
A. The suit case was a regular standard leather suit case, and in the cover of that suit case was a money place.
Q. You spoke before about a zipper bag, and I believe you stated the leaders of the second group had two zipper bags?
A. Two zipper bags.
Q. When you say suit case do you mean the same type object or a different type object?
A. Different type.
Q. After your group landed on the shore of Long Island, then what happened as far as the explosives were concerned, or explosive material?
A. We buried the boxes containing the explosives in the sand on the beach.
Q. Did you finish your answer?
A. On the beach.
Q. What happened to the shovels?
A. We buried them, also.
Q. What did you do with the uniforms?
109 A. We buried the sea bags containing the uniforms close by where the explosives were buried.
Q. You took your uniforms off on the beach, did you?
A. Yes.
Q. Then dressed into civilian clothes?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know approximately at what point on Long Island you landed?
A. Amagansett.
Q. Amagánsett?
A. Yes.
Q. After arriving at the beach did you go to a railroad station?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the name of the railroad station?
A. Amagansett, Long Island.
Q. Did you leave that railroad station?
A. I did.

Q. Where did you go?
A. Went to Jamaica.
Q. Did you do anything in Jamaica?
A. We bought clothes.
Q. Was that the entire group?
A. Yes.
Q. Did the group buy clothes or just you?
A. When we came to Jamaica we split into two groups and 110 each—two each, and bought our clothes, and finally proceeded to New York.
Q. Who was your companion then in going to New York from Jamaica?
A. My companion was George John Dasch.
Q. That left two to travel into New York?
A. That left Heinrich Heink and Richard Quirin.
Q. Do you know when you landed in New York?
A. Yes, on the 14th.
Q. 14th of June?
A. 14th of June 1942.
Q. When you say "New York" do you mean New York City?
A. I mean New York City.
Q. Were you subsequently apprehended by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?
A. Yes.
Q. On what day were you apprehended?
A. On the 20th of June.
Q. On the 20th of June? A. Yes.
The COURT. What day did you get to New York?
A. On the 14th of June, 1942.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Did you at any time receive any orders from Lieutenant Kappe as to when you would begin your operations in America, in the United States?
A. Yes.
111 Q. Where did you receive those orders?
A. In Berlin.
Q. Did Lieutenant Kappe give those to you?
A. I beg your pardon; not only in Berlin but also in Brandenburg.
Q. What were the orders that he gave, were the orders given to your two groups?
A. Yes.
Q. What were the orders received by the two groups concerning when they were to begin operations in the United States?
A. The orders, when we should begin our operations in the United States were three to four months after our landing, provided we had at that time established our identities.

Q. And by establishing identities, you mean the identities you referred to earlier in your testimony?

A. That is right.

Q. Concerning those identities, did Kerling have an identity to establish?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what his identity was to be?

A. Kerling's identity was built up on his previous experiences as a domestic employee, a gardener, and so on. He was 112 supposed to buy a farm which would later on serve not only as a meeting place for the rest of his group, but also as a hiding place for the explosives which in the meantime would be brought up from the landing place.

His buying a farm would also enable him to buy inconspicuously drugs and chemicals which we could later on use to prepare explosives.

Q. Had any orders been given by Lieutenant Kappe concerning any meeting of the leaders of the group in the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall where those orders were given?

A. They were given in Brandenburg.

Q. Do you recall the orders in that connection?

A. I do.

Q. What were those orders?

A. I recall distinctly that the leaders of those two groups were to meet in Cincinnati on July 4, 1942.

I also recall that each member of the group had to give an address of some trusted person over here, where in an emergency case the other members of his group could find him, or could find out his whereabouts.

Q. At the school at Brandenburg was Lieutenant Kappe 113 called upon at any time to make a decision as to Herbert Haupt taking part in this mission?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the circumstances surrounding that?

A. I believe I recall the circumstances.

Q. Did Herbert Haupt at that time inform Kappe of his feeling concerning making the mission?

A. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that question, your Honor, regarding any statements made by Herbert Haupt as being hearsay, not in the presence of the defendants, and Herbert Haupt is dead.

The COURT. You may step into the jury room ladies and gentlemen. Come into chambers, gentlemen, with the reporter.

(And thereupon the jury retired, and thereafter Court and counsel entered the chambers of the Court where the following additional proceedings were had, in the absence of the jury:)

The COURT. What do you propose to show?

Mr. WOLL. I propose to show that at that time there was a question raised because of Herbert Haupt's age, whether 114 or not he would be sufficiently strong to carry out this mission; that Kappe determined that he would be a proper person to send on this mission because he had shown his courage in running the British blockade; that he had received the German Iron cross; that at that time it was determined definitely that Herbert Haupt would be one of the members of the mission; that discussion was had, as I remember—you can correct me, Mr. Finn, that discussion was had on Herbert Haupt in his presence.

Mr. FINN. As I understand it, and I think I am correct, some question arose because of Herbert Haupt's age, as to whether or not he was courageous enough to go through with the mission. Kappe explained to the rest of the group that this boy was a hero, that he won the Iron Cross by breaking through the blockade; therefore they should consider him as such, as a hero, no question but that Herbert Haupt could go through with the mission. That is the basis.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think that would be very prejudicial. There is only one purpose for which this testimony is being received, which is to establish the status of Herbert Haupt. They want to show now that he was not only a member of the groups and so forth, but that he was an outstanding member, and to pile in 115 something which is just like poison, that creates prejudice and it is not necessary for the purpose they are offering it for. I understand this is not being offered against the defendant. There is a limitation of proof.

Mr. FINN. That is right. This is being limited to that issue.

Mr. BERTRAM. It was the status of Herbert Haupt, and it does not establish the status of the defendant and it is putting in something which is very detrimental and harmful to the defendant, who is the father of this boy.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. This is not connected with the overt acts. That is the actual purpose of it, to connect with the overt acts. The only question here was evidence of overt acts, and the status of that, whatever it may be.

Mr. FINN. How does this convict of an overt act? You have raised the point when you said Herbert Haupt abandoned the mission when he came over here.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You brought in that the money was to be in $50 bills.

Mr. FINN. Certainly, for the sabotage. You have raised the issue by your opening statement by saying that Herbert Haupt immediately abandoned the enterprise when he came over 116 here, so it would appear to me that we would have a right to show that he was enthusiastic about the enterprise.

Mr. WOLL. If he had not brought that in, nevertheless I think it would be competent evidence.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is action subsequent to the time that I stated that he abandoned it. This is for the purpose of establishing the status of Herbert Haupt, as an enemy. Without that none of this would be admissible because the defendant was not present and the only excuse that you have is to establish his status as an enemy.

Mr. FINN. Does not the overt act of being a British blockade breaker constitute part of the mission, as establishing the enemy status?

Mr. BERTRAM. I would submit, it tends to prejudice and create prejudice in offering that evidence.

Mr. FINN. That is not prejudicial. This is a question. Let us assume that you had a question like this, that Herbert Haupt was a German soldier. We would be allowed to prove that he was a private, a lieutenant or a major. The fact that he was a major, that he had won the Iron Cross would be somewhat similiar.

Mr. BERTRAM. He has already proven that. We have ad-
117 mitted the instruction in Germany. That has been proved for that purpose. Now, you are trying to pile in something that is going to be damaging to this defendant who is on trial here, something that is personal to Herbert rather than affecting the status of his father.

Mr. WOLL. If I may add a word. I think it particularly important in view of the opening statement, to show that we have established the enemy status, which you say he later on abandoned. I think we are entitled to show whether this man was made a reluctant member of his group or whether he was an authorized enthusiastic member of it, and whether he by his acts or statements indicated a desire to go through with this mission. I think that we would be in a position, in view of the opening statement to have this evidence in there. I think it would be admissible despite the opening statement, but I think particularly in view of the opening statement it certainly is admissible.

The COURT. Well——

Mr. BERTRAM. If I may say, without interrupting, that I think all of this is hearsay testimony that cannot be combated in any way by the defendant, because we were not present and Herbert, the subject of it, is dead.

The COURT. I think the government has the right
118 to show, certainly—has a right to show that the person with whom the defendant is alleged to have adhered was an enemy of the United States. It has that right. If it did not have that right it could not prove its case at all.

You have a right to show that the person to whom the defendant is alleged to have adhered was an enemy of the United States. I think the government has a right to show the character and characteristics of that enemy.

Mr. BERTRAM. Can they show it by conversation?

The COURT. Yes, I think so.

Mr. WOLL. I should like to refer, your Honor, if I might, to this point and to indicate exactly what his testimony was in the last trial, because I do not think you have had the benefit of that.

The COURT. You intend to show it?

Mr. WOLL. I believe my recollection is correct. My recollection of what he will say—I will have to look at the record to make certain, but I think I am correct——

The COURT. The fact that counsel for the defense in his opening statement indicated that it is going to be at least an 119 element of the defense that Herbert Haupt, the person to whom the defendant is alleged to have adhered, and to whom he is alleged to have given aid and comfort, abandoned his enterprise upon his arrival in this country and thereupon ceased to be an enemy—I think is only incidentally involved. The fact that this testimony that is now proposed to be presented might in a sense negative that idea is only incidental—an incidental effect of the testimony.

I do not think the Court needs to go any further than to say that the government has a right to show the character and the characteristics of the enemy that the defendant—or to whom the defendant is alleged to have adhered, and to whom he is alleged to have given aid and comfort. I accordingly overrule the objection.

(And thereupon the following additional proceedings were had in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury.)

The COURT. Proceed, Mr. Woll.

Mr. WOLL. Will you read the last question, Mr. Reporter?

(Record read as follows: "Did Herbert Haupt at that time inform Kappe of his feelings concerning making the mission?"

120 "A. Yes".)

Q. Do you recall where this took place?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. In Brandenburg.

Q. Pardon me?

A. In Brandenburg.

Q. That was during the period of time that your group was receiving instructions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you describe the circumstances surrounding it?

A. At the time of that incident some of the members of our group expressed their doubts as to the ability of Herbert Haupt because of his age. He was very young, and because of his lack of previous experience.

Lieutenant Kappe informed us at that time that Herbert Haupt had received the Iron Cross, second class, for his merits on board the blockade breaker and his coming from Japan to Germany.

He also informed us that he was perfectly capable of carrying through his particular assignments, and that he himself would guaranty to the full extent for the loyalty of Herbert Haupt.

Q. Did you testify concerning the distribution of the money to members of the second group? Do you recall whether I asked you about that?

121 A. I do not recall that.

Q. Was money distributed to the second group in your presence?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did that distribution take place?

A. Lorient.

Q. Who distributed the money?

A. Kappe.

Q. How much did each member of that group receive? First in the money belt, how much was received by each member?

A. Each member of the group, group number 2 received $5,000 or approximately $5,000 in the money belt.

In addition to that each member received around $400 in smaller denominations, smaller than $50 bills.

Group number 2 on that occasion also received orders concerning money in the adversity fund.

Q. Did Herbert Haupt receive the $5,000 or approximately $5,000, and also the smaller sum of $400?

A. Herbert Haupt at that time received $5,000 in a money belt and he also received $400 in smaller bills; and he also received a zipper bag with the order to take particular care of that 122 zipper bag because it contained approximately $10,000.

Q. Did you know the denominations of the $5,000, that was given to Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What denomination bills were they?

A. They were $50.00 bills.

Mr. FINN. May this be marked for identification, Government's Exhibit 9?

(The object produced by counsel was marked for identification, "Government's Exhibit 9.")

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 9 for identification, which is a zipper bag and ask you if you recognize that bag?

A. I do.

Q. Do you recall the first time you saw this bag?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was it that you saw this bag?

A. In Berlin.

Q. At the time you saw it in whose possession was it?

A. In the possession of Edward Kerling.

Q. Did you later on see this bag in Lorient, France?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I cannot hear that, Mr. Woll.

Mr. WOLL. I am sorry.

123 Q. Did you later see this bag anywhere else?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where did you see it?

A. I later saw this zipper bag in Paris, when I carried it myself, and I again saw this zipper bag on the train from Paris to Lorient. I also saw this particular zipper bag in Lorient.

Q. Did you carry this particular bag from Berlin to the train, going to Paris?

A. Yes.

Q. After you reached Paris did you handle this bag at all?

A. I beg your pardon? Will you repeat the last question?

Q. Did you have charge of or carry this bag from Berlin to Paris?

A. No.

Q. Where did you say you carried it?

A. I carried this bag from our hotel in Paris to the railroad depot in Paris.

Q. After that did you carry this bag at any time?

A. No.

Q. At the time when you saw it in Lorient, France, it was in whose possession?

A. In Edward Kerling's possession.

124 Q. Did you see this bag leave the hotel at Lorient, France?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In whose possession was it then?

A. In Edward Kerling's possession.

Q. I will refer you to this bag and ask you if this bag is in the same condition now as it was at the time you saw it leave the hotel in Lorient, France, in Kerling's possession?

A. It is not in the same condition.

Q. What is different about it?

A. The bottom is opened, or sliced, I think you call that sliced—anyway opened up. The bottom is loosened and I see where there is a piece cut out.

Q. Was there more than one zipper bag?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the hotel in Lorient, France?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many zipper bags were there?

A. Three zipper bags.

Q. And who had respectively the zipper bags at Lorient, France?

A. One zipper bag was carried in the possession of 125 Edward Kerling. One zipper bag was carried by Herbert Haupt. One zipper bag was carried by Werner Thiel at the time I saw them in Lorient.

Q. Do you know whether or not those zipper bags were identical?

A. They were not identical.

Q. What was the distinction between the zipper bag, if you recall?

A. I recall one zipper bag with two leather straps on the side as distinguished from the other two zipper bags which had, to the best of my recollection no leather straps on the side.

Q. Do you know where these zipper bags came from?

A. Yes.

Q. Before that I will say, will you state do you know where this zipper bag came from?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did it come from?

A. From Berlin.

Q. Do you know where it was manufactured or made?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Because when I was at Brandenburg, Lieutenant Kappe asked each member of the groups if they had in their possession any original American equipment like clothes, bags, suit
126 cases, underwear and so on; and he collected two zipper bags which originated from the United States and I recall that one zipper bag, namely this one here you are holding in your hand was manufactured according, corresponding to the other, the original American zipper bags.

Q. Did you at any time examine the bottom of this zipper bag?

A. I did.

Q. Where did you examine the bottom of it?

A. I examined the bottom of this zipper bag in the hotel in Paris.

Q. Did you see any of the contents of it?

A. I did not.

Q. Could you tell anything at that time by opening the bag and glancing into it, could you see whether it had any contents or not?

A. Do you mean in the bottom?

Q. I am speaking of the bag, as you looked into the bag, could you see anything in the bag?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether there was anything underneath the bag?

A. Yes, I knew there was underneath, that there was money underneath.

Q. Was there a place in the bottom of the bag?

127 A. There was a place in the bottom of that bag.

Q. What was in the place in the bottom of the bag?

A. When Kerling had it, a false bottom of this bag with approximately $60,000.

The COURT. We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen until two o'clock.

Remember my instruction concerning discussion of the case, and do not discuss the case, nor permit any one to discuss it with you. If any one attempts to communicate with you about the case report that fact at once to the court.

Return here at 2:00 o'clock promptly, please.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to two o'clock of the same day, being Thursday, May 25, 1944.)

129 The COURT. Bring in the jury. Proceed, gentlemen.

ERNEST PETER BURGER, resumed the stand for further examination, after having been previously sworn was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination (resumed) by Mr. WOLL:

Q. You are the same Mr. Burger who was testifying before the noon recess, are you not?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe I was asking about Government's Exhibit 9 for identification and I believe you stated that this was the bag that Kerling carried out of the hotel in Lorient, France, prior to going on the submarine?

The WITNESS. A. Yes. May I ask your Honor's permission to correct my statement I made before recess?

The COURT. Yes.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. What statement is that, Mr. Burger?

A. I made the statement that this particular bag——

Q. Government's Exhibit 9?

A. Yes, contained $60,000. I made a mistake and I realized this mistake as soon as I walked out of the courtroom. This 130 particular bag contained approximately $10,000. I confused this bag with the other one.

Q. Are you certain at this time that is the bag that Kerling carried out of the hotel at Lorient, France?

A. I am quite sure.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

The WITNESS. That this bag was given to Herbert Haupt to take care of, and to deposit this bag with a trustworthy person, as I mentioned before, of his acquaintance.

Q. Was there a second bag which contained $60,000?

A. Yes.

Q. But this one contained the $10,000?

A. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Mark this "Government's Exhibit 10."

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Government's Exhibit 10" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 10 for identification and ask you if you recognize this exhibit?

A. I recognize this money belt is the very same money belt I myself wore at the time of landing in the United States.

131 Q. Was that the money belt which was issued to you?

A. This is the money belt which was issued to me, and signed by me with my initials.

Q. Was this money belt identical with the other money belts that were issued to the other members of the group?

A. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mr. Woll, may I see it, please?

Mr. WOLL. Yes. Mark this "Government's Exhibit 11" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Government's Exhibit 11" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 11 for identification and ask you if you recognize that exhibit?

A. I recognize this shovel as a shovel I received in Berlin and I, myself, attached this piece of rope to it.

Q. Now, I believe you stated there were other shovels also issued to the two groups?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many shovels were issued to each group?

A. Two shovels.

132 Q. Making a total of four shovels to the entire group?

A. Correct.

Q. And this is the shovel you personally had?

A. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Mark these "Government's Exhibit 12 and 13" for identification.

(Thereupon the documents were marked as requested, "Government's Exhibits 12 and 13" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit for identification number 12 and Government's Exhibit for identification number 13 which are two shovels and ask you if these shovels are identical with the shovels which were issued to the two groups?

A. This shovel is exactly the type of shovel which we received in Berlin from Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. Is there anything peculiar about these shovels, Government's Exhibits 12 and 13?

The COURT. Let me see one of those.

The WITNESS. A. There was one peculiarity which is that this shovel is not extended army type shovel used, standard army type shovel used by the German army.

Q. It is not the standard type?

A. It does not correspond in dimensions and in general
133 appearance with any shovel used by the German armed force in regular service.

Mr. WOLL. Q. Those two shovels correspond in construction and appearance as the shovels that were issued to the groups?

A. Exactly.

Mr. WOLL. Mark this "Government's Exhibit 14."

(Thereupon the document was marked "Government's Exhibit 14" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 14 for identification and ask you if you recognize this exhibit?

A. I do.

Q. And is that exhibit identical to one of the boxes that was furnished the two groups at the time they left Lorient, France?

A. It is, yes.

Mr. WOLL. Mark these "Government's Exhibits 15, 16, 17 and 18" for identification.

(Thereupon the documents were marked as requested, "Government's Exhibits 15, 16, 17 and 18" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibits for identification 15, 16, 17 and 18 and ask you if you recognize these exhibits?

134 A. I do. May I see them, please?

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

The WITNESS. I do.

Q. And these exhibits are uniform caps, are they?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they identical with the caps that were worn by the two groups after they left the hotel in Lorient, France?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Would you mind explaining, if you can, the insignia on these caps; I will show you exhibit 15 which is the same as exhibits 16, 17 and 18, and ask you to explain the insignia on Exhibit 15.

A. These caps in the German armed force are the same in color and in general appearance or cut, and the distinguishing mark is this yellow line which indicates that this particular cap is worn by members of the so-called marine-infantry or the equivalent in the United States with the marines.

Q. Did Herbert Haupt wear such a cap when he left Lorient, France?

A. He did.

Q. I asked you before if the members of the group were issued the money belts such as I showed to you and you stated 135 "yes." You mean by that to include all members of the group?

A. Yes.

Q. Or in just your group?

A. No, in all groups.

Q. Including Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 19 for identification and ask you if you recognize that exhibit?

A. It is a ring that has been worn by Herbert Haupt while in Germany and in France.

Q. I will show you this exhibit for identification number 20 and ask you if you saw that card or a card identical to that one in Germany?

A. I did.

Q. And what is that card?

A. This is a registration certificate for the Selective Service.

Q. And was that card identical with the cards that were distributed to the two groups?

A. Yes.

Q. Concerning which you have previously testified?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether at the time of issuing these cards they were blank?

A. We received two.

136 Q. You received two cards?

A. Yes, we received one with the name in and one blank.

Q. Each individual of the group received two cards?

A. That is correct.

Q. I believe you stated before that there was issued to the groups a social security card?

A. Yes.

Q. I will show you—by the way, mark these documents "Government's Exhibits 19, 20, and 21" for identification.

(Thereupon the documents were marked as requested, "Government's Exhibits 19, 20, and 21" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 21 for identification and ask you to examine that instrument and tell me if you know what that is?

A. This is a certificate, a social security card, which was issued to us by Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. Did you examine those social security cards, did you know they were issued?

A. I did.

Q. And will you tell us just what you did in examining those cards?

137 A. I was told by Lieutenant Kappe to take my social security card, that is the social security card containing my name and in order to do so I had to remove all the cards or look them over to find my name and my social security card, the social security card with my name happened to be on the bottom.

Q. Did you see any social security card there made out to Herbert Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. Is that the card or identical with the card you saw?

A. This appears to be the card I saw in Berlin.

Q. I believe you stated before that the two groups received a total of eight boxes?

A. Yes.

Q. That thereafter at Lorient, France, a second group left the hotel first and they had four boxes?

A. Yes.

Q. That your group left next and your group had four boxes?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were the contents of the four boxes of the first group identical with the contents of the second group, I mean, the same type of material and equipment?

A. We were told they were identical.

Q. You were told that by whom?

138 A. By Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. Now, do you know what was in the four boxes that were taken by the group of which Herbert Haupt was a member?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you help back those boxes?

A. I helped pack one box.

Q. One box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was in the box that you helped to pack?

A. Various equipment.

Q. Now, do you know how these four boxes were divided insofar as explosives were concerned, the equipment was concerned?

A. Yes.

Q. How many boxes contained explosives of the four boxes into each group—do you understand my question?

A. Yes, I understand your question. I am trying to recall it. I believe two.

Q. You believe two?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The two remaining boxes contained what type of equipment?

A. They contained different kinds of mechanical 139 devices, of mechanical time devices, detonators, fuses; that is about all.

Q. Do you recall any particular type of time devices that was in one of these two boxes?

A. Yes.

Q. And what particular kind, do you recall?

A. I recall a time clock.

Q. A time clock?

A. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Mark this document "Government Exhibit 22" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested "Government's Exhibit 22" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 22 for identification and ask you if you recognize that exhibit.

A. This appears to be one of the time clocks we were shown in Germany.

Q. Will you examine it, please, look at it, take it out of there?

A. Yes, this is exactly the same type of time clock we had over there.

Q. And by "over there" you mean in Germany?

A. Yes.

140 Q. Now in your earlier testimony you referred to a fountain pen and pencil set?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those actually fountain pen and pencil sets?

A. They could be used as fountain pen and pencil sets.

Q. Did they have any other use?

A. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I shall object at this time, if the Court please, to cumulative evidence. If the inquiry is merely for the purpose of establishing enemy status of Herbert Haupt, I do not believe it is necessary to introduce all these exhibits which in effect may prejudice the jurors against the defendant. We have admitted his enemy status especially if this should continue now with these exhibits numbering 10 or 20 or 40 or 50 or 100 more exhibits——

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, if I may say this, because of counsel's statement, we are definitely going to limit the amount of this type of evidence that will go in. We would like to put in a few of these exhibits only. We are cutting down the amount of the exhibits in that regard.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. All right.

Mr. FINN. We don't intend to put in all these exhibits, although I think they are admissible. We don't intend to put them all in.

141 The COURT. Very well.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I believe you stated that they had two purposes, one was as a fountain pen and pencil set and you were explaining the other purpose. Will you now continue on your explanation of the other purpose?

A. The second purpose for the fountain pen and pencil set was as a time device for incendiary and also for explosives.

Q. Do you know when they operated as a time device and incendiary?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain, that please?

A. The fountain pen contained a small container with sulphuric acid and separated by a mixture of chloride and sugar and by a small piece of cellophane and after the sulphuric acid is in the fountain pen and that fountain pen is placed in a certain position, then this sulphuric acid would eat through the cellophane and get in contact with the chloride and sugar mixture and immediately start into a flame.

Q. In connection with the fountain pen is it necessary to use any portion of the pencil?

A. It might be.

Q. You use the pencil to operate the fountain pen part as an incendiary?

142 A. It is possible to use part of the pencil attach—that part to the fountain pen for separate purposes.

Mr. WOLL. Mark this "Government's Exhibit 23" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Government's Exhibit 23" for identification.)

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 23 for identification and ask you if you recognize this exhibit.

A. I do.

Q. And is this exhibit such a fountain pen and pencil set such as you have described?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you look at it carefully?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that exhibit such a type of fountain pen and pencil set you received, the two groups received in Germany?

A. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Mark this "Government's Exhibit 24" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Government's Exhibit 24" for identification.)

143 By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 24 for identification, containing two objects, one cardboard paper and the other a metal article and ask you if you recognize, first the cardboard paper?

A. I do.

Q. And do you know whether or not that cardboard paper is the exact cardboard paper you saw in Germany?

A. This is the exact cardboard paper I saw and handled in Germany.

Q. And how do you recognize that as being the exact one?

A. By the writing.

Q. And what is written on that cardboard exhibit?

A. That cardboard exhibit is written in German. Siebzig Minuten.

Q. Do you know the English translation of that?

A. I think I do.

Q. Will you name that, please?

A. Seventy minutes running time.

Q. At the time you saw that cardboard in Germany, did it cover any article or articles?

A. Yes.

Q. What did that cardboard paper cover at that time?

A. It covered delay devices as this one here.

144 Q. Such as the metal part of that exhibit, now what is a delay device?

A. May I explain that in my own words?

Q. Yes.

A. It is impossible to bring explosives to detonation by standing there and lighting, so in order to protect the man who actually places the explosives he has to have the delay between the time he places the explosives and the time of detonation in order to get away and for several other reasons, so this time device is one of the delay devices, one of the different types of delay devices which we handled and were instructed in in Germany.

Q. Does the delay device form a part of that exhibit such as the type of delay device that was in the box that was covered by the papers, the cardboard cover you identified in that exhibit?

A. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Mark this "Government's Exhibit 25" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Government's Exhibit 25" for identification.)

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 25 for identification and ask you if you know what this photograph is a reproduction of?

145

A. Yes.

Q. What?

A. This photograph portrays exactly one of the camouflaged lumps of coal which are shown us in Germany which had under a crust of plastic highly destructive TNT.

Mr. WOLL. Mark this "Government's Exhibit 26" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Government's Exhibit 26" for identification.)

Q. I will now show you Government's Exhibit 26 for identification which is a photograph and ask you if you recognize any one of the objects represented in this photograph as being an object which was taken by either one of these groups from the hotel in Lorient, France?

A. The photograph shows a number of wooden boxes, one of which I am able to identify for you exactly as the very same box we had with us at Lorient, France.

Q. And what is the means of that identification?

A. An "X."

Q. Is that mark on one of the boxes?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that photograph correctly and truly represent the mark that was on the particular box in Germany that you have reference to?

146

A. Yes.

The COURT. Are you going to have some further proof with respect to some of these items that have just gone before that simulated the lump of coal?

Mr. FINN. I will connect it up with another witness who took these photographs, your Honor, and they will speak themselves; as the witnesses dug them up in Florida they took photographs of them.

Mr. WOLL. I think this witness testified that they were given to the groups in Germany. I will ask that question.

Q. The various objects that you have described on the witness stand as being identical to the objects that you saw in Germany, and the objects which you subsequently had, and which I showed you photographs of or the article itself, were those objects such that you received in Germany as were placed in these wooden boxes and were carried out of the hotel at Lorient, France; do you understand that question? It is rather involved?

A. I understand your question. They were not only such as I received of the same type, but some of them identified very 147 clearly as the very same objects we received and the very same objects I handled myself.

Q. Were there any other articles or objects or devices taken by the groups in these boxes when they left Lorient, France, other than you have described in this courtroom?

A. Yes.

Q. And all the articles that you have described in this courtroom were articles you yourself had in Germany, or were articles identical to the articles that were taken by the two groups from the hotel room in Germany and from the hotel room in Lorient, France?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, did you at any time in Brandenburg or in Berlin, or in Lorient, France, participate in any conversation with Herbert Haupt in which the matter of his intention to carry out his mission or not to carry out his mission in America was discussed?

A. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I wish to object to that, your Honor on the grounds that it is hearsay evidence. That Herbert Haupt is dead and we canont rebut this. We have no means of showing that this was not now manufactured to fit into the picture and it
148 is absolutely impossible for us to—if this was only for the purpose of establishing the enemy status I believe sufficient of that has been introduced and without that we have to go to something that is not received at all, according to the rules of evidence.

The COURT. I am inclined to susfain the objection to that.

Mr. WOLL. I expect to show it by a conversation with Herbert Haupt himself.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that.

Mr. WOLL. As to his purpose and intention, what he intended to do when he got here after carrying out his mission. Now, if you will note the indictment charges that he came here on this mission and intended to carry out his mission in this country at the time he came here. Now, I certainly think we are entitled to show that when he was here he had the intention.

The COURT. Step into the jury room, gentlemen.

Mr. WOLL. If the Court please we will withdraw the question for the time being.

The COURT. How does this shovel differ, Mr. Warnholtz?

The WITNESS. Your Honor, this shovel is longer, also the army shovel is flat. It has no bulge as this has here, if I may show you. On the other hand, this little point, the standard army 149 shovel has on the handle of the shovel no side bar. It is rounded off like this, and one more point is that the edges of the blade are not of this nature, because they are made to fit into a little container is little pocket, to be carried on the back and this would be too clumsy to be carried in a skirmish.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Now after you arrived in New York in June 1943, did you thereafter see Herbert Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. Where did you next see Herbert Haupt?

A. I saw Herbert Haupt next in Washington.

Q. In the city of Washington?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the United States?

A. Yes

Mr. WOLL. You may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Burger, will you kindly state your age?

A. 37.

Q. 52 years?

The COURT. 37.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. 37.

Q. When did you arrive in Chicago prior to your testi-
150 mony you are giving today? When did you come to Chicago, yesterday, the day before yesterday, a week ago, or when?

A. I came in the last week.

Q. Last week?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately what day, do you know?

A. I think Friday.

Q. Upon arriving in Chicago, did you talk with any member of the District Attorney's office?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. With whom did you talk?

A. I talked with Mr. Woll, the United States Attorney.

Q. The same day when you arrived?

A. No, no, no, not the same day.

Q. The next day or Saturday?

A. No, not on Saturday.

Q. On Sunday?

A. Yes. I think it was Sunday.

Q. Is that the only time you talked to him between Sunday and now, or have you talked to him since that time?
A. I can't understand your question. I am sorry.
Q. Mr. Burger, you talked on Sunday, as far as you remember?
A. Yes.
Q. With Mr. Woll?
A. I am quite sure on Sunday.
151 Q. Did you talk with him after that, on Monday or Tuesday?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. When?
A. I said, "Hello, Mr. Woll" on Tuesday, I think.
Q. On Tuesday?
A. Uh huh.
Q. Did you talk to him after Tuesday?
The WITNESS. I beg your pardon, you confuse me, what day is today?
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thursday is today.
The WITNESS. Thursday?
Mr. WARNKOLTZ. That is right.
The WITNESS. Yes; I saw Mr. Woll yesterday, and I had an opportunity also to say "Hello" to Mr. Woll.
Q. About how long did you talk to Mr. Woll on Sunday?
A. On Sunday, I don't recall.
Q. Well, will you say about two or three hours?
A. I wouldn't say two or three hours.
Q. Would you say less time or more?
A. I recall on Sunday it was a very short time.
Q. You saw him only once last Sunday?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You didn't see him twice on that day?
152 A. No; I didn't see Mr. Woll twice.
Q. Just once on Sunday?
A. Just once on Sunday.
Q. Did you see any other member of the District Attorney's office on Sunday or any other day during this week?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Who did you talk to besides Mr. Woll, this gentleman here?
A. Yes, exactly.
Q. Which one?
A. I said "Hello" to Mr. Finn.
Q. Yes.
A. I also said "Hello" to Mr. Hurley, I believe.
Q. Did you talk to either of them for any length of time?
A. No, no; of course, that is relative, but you understand, Mr. Warnholtz, the length of time, you say five minutes——

Q. Did you talk a half hour there to each of them?
A. To whom?
Q. To Mr. Finn or to Mr. Hurley?
A. No; not without interruption, I mean me going out or things of that kind. I happened to say to Mr. Finn, to see Mr.
153 Finn on that day a few times, you see.
Q. Did you discuss this case with Mr. Woll or Mr. Finn or Mr. Hurley on Sunday?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. On Monday?
A. I don't recall to having discussed this case on Monday.
Q. Did you talk to any of those gentlemen last night after four o'clock?
A. No.
Q. Last night?
A. You mean yesterday afternoon.
Q. Four o'clock, that is right.
A. I think I did.
Q. Do you know or do you only think so?
A. I was told that I was—I am not required to go on the stand.
Q. Is that all you discussed?
A. Naturally had to do directly with this case.
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, exactly.
Q. Is that all that you discussed with them, or any talk?
A. That is about all.
Q. Last night?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you discuss at all the facts of the case with them last night?
154 A. Did I discuss what?
Q. The facts of the case, any talk with them about this case last night?
A. Last night?
Q. Yes, or yesterday afternoon, whichever way you want it, after four o'clock?
A. Mr. Woll don't speak to me about the facts of this case.
Q. What did he speak to you about?
A. He said my appearance as a witness is not required—would be—
Q. Mr. Finn talked to you about four o'clock?
A. If you would mind not interrupting me, please, Mr. Warnholtz. If you want me to finish my sentence. Mr. Woll was informing me that I would be required to be on the stand today.
Q. And that is all he said?

A. That is approximately all.
Q. Mr. Finn did?
A. You mean Mr. Finn?
Q. Yes, the second gentleman here.
A. Yes, he also spoke to me.
Q. What did he say?
A. He told me the same thing.
Q. And Mr. Hurley, what did he say to you?
A. I didn't see Mr. Hurley yesterday?

155 Q. You have testified in this case before, haven't you, Mr. Burger, that is about one year and a half ago in the case of the United States of America against Hans Max Haupt and several other defendants involving the same statement of facts. You remember that, do you? Certainly. How often have you told your entire story or similar story to various juries all over the country——

Mr. WOLL. I object, if your Honor please.

The COURT. Well, to the form—I will sustain the objection to the form.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Have you testified concerning these facts or similar facts of your coming over here and the other seven men coming to the United States in any other case?
A. I never testified to similar facts, Mr. Warnholtz.
Q. Did you testify to the same facts as you testified here today?
A. I testified to the truth. I testified to the fact which came out today exactly here to the best of my recollection.
Q. How many times did you so testify?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Well, did you testify against a man by the name

156 of Cramer in New York?
A. I did.
Q. Did you testify against a man by the name of Leiner in New York?
A. I did.
Q. And against a man by the name of Stevens in Detroit?
A. I believe I did.
Q. Or Steffans?
A. Oh, no.
Q. Do you remember anybody else against whom you testified?
A. I don't know. I don't remember anyone by the name of Steffans or anything.
Q. Do you remember anybody else outside of Cramer and Leiner?
A. Certainly. I recall having seen you, for instance, two years ago.

Q. In other case. Did you testify outside of Cramer and Leiner and Haupt case here in Chicago?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Do you know how many times you have testified in court regarding this entire matter?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Would you say more than ten times?

A. I would say considerably less.

157 Q. More than five times?

A. I still would say less.

Q. Did you at any of these trials meet any of the other seven men who came over here with you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. As far as you know you only testified concerning the facts, right, Mr. Burger?

A. That is correct.

Q. Mr. Burger, did you ever see the defendant, Mr. Haupt, Hans Haupt, the man sitting over there, did you ever see him prior to the day, prior to the time you testified the last time?

A. I don't think I did.

Q. Did you ever see his wife Erna Haupt prior to the last time you testified?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where did you see her first?

A. I saw her in Washington.

Q. At the military trial of the eight men who came over here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to that date did you ever see her?

A. I might have.

Q. That you know of?

A. No.

Q. Regarding these instructions which you claim
158 Herbert Haupt received in Germany and which you stated today consisted of the following:

First, that he should use his own name in the same neighborhood where he was known and a different name when he was away from his home grounds?

Second, that he should immediately proceed, upon landing to Chicago?

Third, that he should procure an automobile.

Fourth, that he was to procure information in detail about the optical industry and especially regarding the Norden Bomb Sight?

Next he should register with the army, and next that he should contact a politically trustworthy person with whom to deposit certain money. With reference to these statements I will ask you if you now—did you make the same statements when you first testified in this case?

A. I don't recall what I testified to at the first trial.

Q. You do not remember that?

A. Correct.

Q. But you do remember further back when these statements were first—when these orders were first given to Herbert Haupt?

A. A German soldier never forgets an order Mr. Warnholtz.

159 Q. But he will forget his testimony, is that the answer?

A. I don't know what you mean by testimony.

Q. You gave testimony in this case about one year and a half ago?

A. Correct.

Q. That you forgot?

A. I didn't say that I forgot the testimony, but I forget if I mentioned these various facts in that sequence one other time in that trial.

Q. Mr. Burger, did you state that Haupt had instructions to buy an automobile which was to be used for the purpose of conveying dynamite and this equipment?

A. No dynamite; I beg your pardon.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. No dynamite.

Q. Well, this various equipment, whatever it was, that was your testimony today; is that right?

A. That was my testimony.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Burger, that you stated today Herbert Haupt was not to come to Chicago to see his parents. You do not remember having stated that today?

A. Today?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

160 Q. Do you remember that you stated that very distinctly about two years or two years and a half ago when you first testified in this trial?

A. Yes, but not in that form.

Q. Sir?

A. Not in that form.

Q. What did you say at that time?

A. I stated at that time it might be. I even stated too, I don't recall exactly, but I distinctly recall it that I testified last time that Herbert Haupt had the order not to approach his parents. He had the order, though, to come to Chicago. I believe, I am afraid Mr. Warnholtz you misrepresented that just now.

Q. Let me ask this, Mr. Burger, why did you forget today to state that particular instruction that he should not approach his parents?

A. I do not believe that any one, any one, any human being could give a reason for forgetting it.

Q. You forgot, you stated soldiers never forget orders, is that what you stated?

A. Mr. Warnholtz, if you might not interrupt me, he either forgets or he doesn't forget.

Q. Turning and reading from the official record of the last case, I will ask you if this refreshes your memory of what 161 you stated at that time: You were asked these questions while you were on the witness stand by Mr. Woll:

Q. Did your instructions take in anything other than the manufacture of explosives and incendiaries and detonators, timing devices and fuses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what other manner were you instructed?

A. We were instructed in the preparation of our identity over here.

Q. What were the instructions? Do you know the instructions that were given to Herbert Haupt in that regard?

A. I do.

Q. Who gave the instructions?

A. Kappe.

Q. Who was Kappe?

A Lieutenant Kappe was in charge of the assignments.

Q. What were the instructions he gave?

A. The instructions given to Herbert Haupt were first, not to visit his parents in Chicago after his arrival over here, second, to get employment in the Optical Industry, third, to regis-162 ter as soon as possible for the army, relative to registering, as soon as possible, do you recall the particular instructions that were give or in substance what was said?

A. He received the instructions to register immediately after his arrival.

Q. Was the name of that Optical Company mentioned in the instructions?

A. The Simpson Optical Company was mentioned.

Q. What Company? Simpson Optical Company. Was anything said there relative to how he was to get around in America?

A. Haupt also had the assignment to furnish a car for his group.

Q. Were there any instructions given relative to what should be said in the event of being questioned as to your whereabouts or as to Herbert Haupt's whereabouts?

A. He had instructions to state that during his absence he stayed in Mexico.

Q. Who were present when these instructions were given to Herbert Haupt?

A. I was.

Q. Where were these instructions given?

A. At the School.

Now, do these refresh your recollection, Mr. Burger, or maybe I better read and give you the questions and answers on cross examination?

Being your testimony at the same trial at that time I asked you as follows: "You stated, Mr. Burger, that Herbert 163 Haupt after arriving in America was not to visit his parents in Chicago. He was to get employment with an optical concern. That he was to register in the army, that is for Selective Service immediately after arriving here; that the name of the company with which he was to associate himself was the Simpson Optical Company, that he was to purchase an automobile and furnish that to his particular group, that he was to say that he had been in Mexico during all of the time that he had been absent from the United States. You made the following statement; that Herbert Haupt received instructions from Lieutenant Walter Kappe, that upon arrival in America he was not to visit his parents; answer: "that is correct."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Does that refresh your recollection now very distinctly?

A. I am very grateful to you, Mr. Warnholtz——

Mr. WOLL. I object to the question. He said he recollected—he did testify to that on the first trial. This is not impeachment in any sense of the word.

The COURT. Well, I don't think it is. The question was, does it refresh your recollection. He may answer.

164 By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Burger, do you remember when you first heard the name, "Simpson Optical Company" and where you first heard it?

A. You mean in the United States or in Germany?

Q. Anywhere?

A. I heard that first in Brandenburg.

Q. In Brandenburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the occasion?

The COURT. I didn't get that.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. And what was the occasion?

A. The occasion was the very first time I heard the name in a personal conversation between Herbert Haupt and myself, when he told me he had worked there before. If I am not mistaken, that is the best recollection.

Q. Let me ask you, Mr. Burger, about this exhibit number 9, this zipper bag. May I have that bag, please—Where did you first see this?

A. In Germany.

Q. Do you know where it came from?

A. I think I do.

Q. Where do you think it came from?

A. I was told that this particular zipper bag was made in Germany.

165 Q. Who told you that?

A. Edward Kerling and Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. And what else did they tell you about some party of some other zipper bags, American-made zipper bags, or what was that story?

A. I don't know what story you are referring to.

Q. What did you tell us on the stand before that this was copied from some American bag, or what? I was sitting a little far away, and I couldn't quite get it.

A. You mean, in other words, you want me to repeat my testimony of this forenoon.

Q. On that point, yes.

A. As to which point, Mr. Warnholtz?

Q. As to the point of the zipper bag when they first used it, it was a copy of some other bags or something?

A. Yes; that is right.

Q. Is that what you stated before, if you remember it?

A. I stated that we had in our possession two American-made zipper bags and that little zipper bag was manufactured, made according to corresponding to the dimensions and to the general appearance or style or whatever you call it of the other zipper bag.

166 Q. What became of those two American zipper bags?

A. I don't know.

Q. When you say, "We had them in our possession," who is we?

A. Our groups.

Q. Who had charge of them?

A. Lieutenant Kappe.

Q. And he showed them to you?

A. Certainly he showed them to me. He showed——

Q. What was it he already showed those to you?

Mr. FINN. Keep your voice up, please, it is rather difficult to hear you.

The WITNESS. I am sorry. I believe it is not correct, Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What is not correct?

The WITNESS. Let me finish, please?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Certainly.

A. I do not believe it is correct to refer to Lieutenant Kappe showing this zipper bag to me or did he have a conversation or did you do this or that. I would like to state right here that we were never alone: we were one compact unit. Trained together. School together. Lived together, so anything what occurred occurred in the presence of all of us. That is that point.

167 Q. And he showed them to all of you, I mean the bags?

A. He did not come in the room. We were there together. If he showed something to us we were all there, that was the case.

Q. Didn't you state a moment ago that the two groups had those two bags, those American bags?

A. Execatly.

Q. From whom did you get them?

A. I don't know where they originally came from, but I stated that Lieutenant Kappe at the beginning of our course asked each one of us if we had or everyone who had certain object originally, genuine American objects of any kind of apparel or equipment, like, for instance clothes, underwear, shoes, hats and among them were also zipper bags, because, of course, it is obvious that he could not let under any circumstances on the American shore any of us carry German suit cases.

Q. Now, Mr. Burger, do you know who contributed these two bags?

A. I don't recall who contributed that particular bag, or the other bag.

Q. The two zipper bags, American bags?

A. I know the two zipper bags were contributed by some members of our unit.

168 Q. Do you know if those identical bags were later used again by the two groups, the identical bags, which were first contributed?

A. I don't know what you mean.

Q. Well, two bags were contributed by members of the group?

A. Right.

Q. Were those same bags later on used again for use when you all left in carrying, putting money in it and taking it along?

A. No.

Q. The bags which were used were newly made bags in Germany?

A. No. You asked me where these two bags, these two original American bags were used to carry money in and I said, yes, one of them was used.

Q. One was?

A. That is right.

Q. Is this the one?

A. No, this is not the one, I stated before this is not one of the original genuine American zipper bags. This is one bag that was made, manufactured in Germany, according to the dimensions or corresponding to the size and so on and so on with the two original zipper bags.

Q. How do you know that this is the one that was 169 made in Germany?

A. Because I was told that this is the particular bag and was made over there. As a matter of fact, Lieutenant Kappe had great delight and joy in describing and showing us how perfectly the imitation was. That is the reason why I happened to know that this particular bag with the two leather straps was manufactured over there.

Q. Did you tell the same story to the FBI when they first apprehended you, Mr. Burger, about this zipper bag?

A. I don't recall if the FBI needed my information.

Q. When you testified the first time in this case about one year and a half ago, you did not mention the Norden Bombsight; do you remember whether or not you did; when did that come to your mind again?

A. I don't recall that, Mr. Warnholtz.

Q. Now, about this money which the two groups got in a belt, a money belt, did you see the money that was put into each belt?

The WITNESS. May I ask you to speak louder, Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Louder?

The WITNESS. Yes, please.

Q. Did you see the money that was put into each belt?
179 A. When it was put in?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. One second please, one second. Let me correct myself. I saw the money which was put into the money belts of Group number 2.

Q. When did you see that money first, before it was put into the belts or after it was taken out?

A. After it was taken out.

Q. When you saw the belts first they were closed and the money was——

A. Pardon me; pardon me?

Q. When you saw the belts first they were closed and the money was inside?

A. No; when I first saw the belts they were empty.

Q. They were empty?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after you saw the belts again, what condition were they in?

A. They were closed, and they were filled with money.

Q. And where was that?

A. In Lorient.

Q. How do you know there was money inside?

A. Because we took it out.

Q. Who is "We"?

171 A. All eight of us.

Q. Had you already received your own individual money belt?

A. No.

Q. When did you get that?

A. On board the submarine.

Q. You had taken out the money, the first group had taken it out of the belts?

A. Oh, we didn't give it to the first group, but group number 2.

Q. Well, group number 2?

A. Yes.

Q. You had taken that out?

A. Yes, I was asked to take that out.

Q. By whom were you asked?

A. You see, we all took it out.

Q. By whom were you asked?

A. By one of the boys.

Q. Did you take it out of the belts?

A. Oh, no, no, no.

Q. Did each one get a belt?

A. Yes.

Q. Who had the right of disposition over those belts?

A. The owner of that belt.

Q. Only one of the boys told you to take it out of all of the belts?

172 A. No, no.

Q. Each one asked you to help him take it out?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see the money that was put into the zipper bag?

A. No.

Q. The answer is "No," correct?

A. That is right.

Q. You stated, Mr. Burger, that this particular zipper bag, Government's Exhibit A for identification was given to Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes.

Q. When and where?

A. In Lorient, France.
Q. And where, in what place in Lorient?
A. At the hotel.
Q. At the hotel?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who gave it to him?
A. Lieutenant Kappe.
Q. And what did Herbert Haupt do with it after he got it?
A. I don't know what he did with it.
Q. Who carried it down to the car, or the automobile, or whatever it was?
A. I don't recall who carried it down.
173 Q. Did you see Herbert Haupt carry it down?
A. Mr. Warnholtz, I just made the statement——
Q. Answer the question, please.
A. That is what I am trying to. I am trying to. I just made the statement I don't recall who carried it down, so when you asked me did Herbert Haupt carry it down, I don't know, because I don't recall which one, which individual took this particular bag and carried it down the stairs.
Q. You do not know?
A. I don't recall, no.
Q. When you state, Mr. Burger, that certain articles are identical with those you received in Germany, please state what you mean in the use of the word "identical"?
A. When I say "identical" I mean the very same. I mean of such an extreme likeness. Of such an extreme likeness that it corresponds to every regard to the object in question.
Q. I now refer you to Exhibit number 25 for identification, will you say you have seen this exact lump of coal which appears to be a lump of coal, this exact one?
A. Would you mind showing that to me, please?
174 Mr. Warnholtz. Yes; I would be glad, because you saw it before, it is the same one.
A. Thank you, sir. Now, what was your question?
Q. Will you state you saw this exact lump of coal that is a photograph here of it?
A. I did not state that.
Q. Would you say it is identical with any lumps of coal that you had in your possession, you saw over there?
A. I would state that this picture portrays exactly the lump of coal shown to us in Germany, because it corresponds exactly with that particular lump of coal shown us in size; in general appearance, in color, in the boring of one end of the approximate size of a detonator, and that is all.
Q. And all of that time you covered by the term "identical" is that correct, is that the understanding, what you mean by that term?

A. Yes.

Q. That is identical, then?

A. I didn't say that is identical.

Q. Well, the record will show what you said.

A. It should.

Q. Referring to Exhibit 24 for identification, this cardboard which has writing on it translated it means seventy minutes;
175 timing seventy minutes, now you state you had this identical, this here cardboard?

A. That is what I stated.

Q. This very one, you don't mean identical now, you mean you had in your possession exactly this particular article that I now hold in my hand?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the handwriting of the man who wrote this on there? Did you write that?

A. I did not write that.

Q. Do you know who wrote it on there?

A. No.

Q. If the same man that had written this identical text, on several cardboards, there being no difference in the cardboards, would you know which one you had?

A. I saw this handwriting once in my life. This particular handwriting is so out of order of all ordinary handwriting that any one who sees this particular handwriting once would remember that for all times for the simple reason that the two words are written in two different styles of writing. One is written in Roman printed letters and the other is written in German script.

Q. That is your only method of identification, is that right?

A. That is my method of identification.

176 Q. For stating this was exactly the same article you had?

A. Correct.

Q. And you made the same statement and picked out this particular article, that was in New York in the testimony against Cramer, do you recall that?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Mr. Burger, have you ever been convicted of a crime in the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. When and where?

A. In 1942 for the attempt of espionage and sabotage.

Q. That was before the military tribunal?

A. Correct.

Q. What was the sentence of the court?

A. Death.

Q. What happened after that with reference to that sentence?

A. It was commuted to life.

Q. Conditionally or absolutely?

A. What do you mean by conditionally?

Q. Subject to things you may do in the future, something that may happen in the future?

A. Mr. Warholtz, I would like to tell you some-
177 thing. I know that I am under oath——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Answer my question, please.

A. That is my way of answering the question. I know I am here under oath. I know what that means. It means that God is my witness.

MR. WARNHOLTZ. I object to his making a speech your Honor. I asked him to answer the question and he should be so instructed, I believe.

The COURT. I think that under the circumstances he may answer the question.

A. I think this, your Honor. I said I am fully conscious of the meaning to be under oath. That means I know God is my witness. I did not receive, at any time, any condition, offers or promises by the United States Government. I did not offer anything on my side and I did not consider my personal safety before the service of duty to my country. I don't believe that I acted a single time against my honor as a German soldier, and what more, a storm trooper. This is not a statement to defend myself, Mr. Warnholtz, but this is correct, once and for all.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Well, now, Mr. Burger, what happened to Mr. Dasch, what was his sentence, also sentenced to death?

A. Yes; I believe so.

178 Q. Also commuted to life imprisonment?

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know whether he is living or dead today?

A. I do not.

Q. When did you last see Herbert Haupt?

A. I saw Herbert Haupt last, oh, I don't remember the date, after the trial was over.

Q. Where?

A. In Washington.

Q. Where did you see him last, in Washington or in some jail or courthouse or where?

A. I think I saw him the last time, I don't recall exactly. I either saw him in the courthouse, when we shook hands, when we said goodbye, or I saw him in his cell.

Q. When you saw Herbert he was in custody or was it at the military trial when you saw Herbert Haupt in Washington?

A. Certainly.

Q. He was in custody?

A. Absolutely.

Q. The last time you saw Herbert Haupt was the last time you saw your companion Thiel?

A. That is correct.

Q. And your companion Neubauer.

A. All my companions.

Q. And your companion Kerling?

A. Yes.

179 Q. And Quirin?

A. Yes.

Q. And who is left?

A. I think Dasch is left.

Q. And lastly you are short one. Who was that?

A. Dasch.

Q. He was the only one that was left?

A. Yes.

Q. You never saw or heard Dasch testify in any court, did you?

A. No; I did not.

Q. Nor have you seen him elsewhere, have you?

A. Elsewhere, where?

Q. After the trial? After you last saw Thiel and Neubauer and the rest of them, did you see him again later on?

A. Dasch?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I did.

Q When did you see him last?

A. Last?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't recall when I saw him last.

Q. About how long ago?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Where did you see him last?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. During the last trial, Mr. Burger, on cross

180 examination I asked you this question:

"Q. When did you first learn the name of the Simpson Optical Company in the United States; who mentioned it first to you?"

Mr. Warnholtz. And your answer was:

"A. It was mentioned at the trial?

"Q. In Washington; that is correct?"

The Witness. That is correct.

Q. Is that the first time you ever heard the name?

A. In the United States, in Washington.

Q. You never mentioned that to any of the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation when you were first apprehended by them?

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. Before you appeared at the trial, were you not asked questions by a group of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. When I was apprehended by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Mr. Warnholtz, as the last one of my group, the FBI was in the possession of all the information I testified to here. See?

Q. They didn't ask you anything?

A. How to testify?

Q. They didn't ask you anything at that time?

A. Certainly they asked me questions.

181 Q. Did they ask you about the Simpson Optical Company?

A. I don't recall, but I would like to state this, Mr. Warnholtz.

Q. You have answered.

A. I have not testified to any military secrets of the German Wehrmacht, not known to the FBI.

Q. Well, was it a military secret as to whether or not you knew anything about the Simpson Optical Company, on which your memory now is so weak?

A. I told you I don't recall being questioned about it.

The COURT. Take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(Whereupon a recess was had.)

182 By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Burger, do you know why you were not executed together with your companions?

A. I surmise. I was not informed why I was not executed.

Q. What do your surmise?

A. I surmise I escaped the death penalty because I am a soldier and not an agent for hire. I did not come to this country like, for instance, Herbert Haupt did, for money, but I came over here in the line of my duty.

I also did not inform anyone in this country of my mission. I did not brag about trying to be a German Lieutenant. I did not tell stories about flower girls saying goodbye to me when I entered the submarine as Herbert Haupt did.

I did not cache any money with anyone. I registered in hotels under my own true name, and there are several other reasons I could add. That is my surmise, Mr. Warnholtz.

Q. Mr. Burger, did you talk with anyone—I am not now referring to members of the office of the United States District Attorney. Did you talk with anybody about this case after four o'clock yesterday afternoon?

A. I do not think I did.

183 Q. Well, will you state you do not know that you did not?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Would you state you know you did not?

A. No; I cannot state that I know I did not.

Q. You are not sure whether or not you talked to anybody?

A. I said I do not recall if I did. That means my memory at the present time does not tell me if I did or if I did not.

Q. May you have had a lapse of memory between four o'clock yesterday afternon and now?

A. The question is not lapse of memory. The question is that I am under oath. I want to give the correct, the truthful answer. What I am not sure of I say so.

Q. But you are not sure whether or not you talked with anybody about this case since four o'clock yesterday afternoon?

A. I don't recall if I said anything, if anybody spoke to me after four or before four o'clock or in the evening or at any other time.

Q. Well, at any time during the afternoon?

A. Probably I did, perhaps. I do not know. I do not recall.

184 Q. Tell me, Mr. Burger, or try, please: Were you asked before you testified in any of these cases that we have mentioned, whether or not you would be willing to testify?

A. Mr. Warnholtz, I had the experience with you two years ago, to remind you that I am a German soldier.

Q. Will you answer the question yes or no?

Mr. Warnholz. I want an answer to this, your Honor.

The Court. What is the question? Read the question:

(Question read as follows: "Were you asked before you testified in any of these cases that we have menfioned, whether or not you would be willing to testify?")

The Court. You may answer yes or no, and if that does not tell the whole truth you may add to that answer whatever is necessary.

A. I was not questioned or asked at any time by any official or by any other person, if I would be willing to testify at any place in the United States. Your Honor, may I just add something to this statement?

The Court. Yes.

The Witness. To this answer?

185 The Court. Yes.

A. In being called to testify the choice is not up to me, but even if the choice would be up to me, I would see it as my duty to testify and thereby bring all these facts to the knowledge of my country.

This is the only means for me to communicate to my country what has happened, Mr. Warnholtz.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. In order to communicate that knowledge to your country, I presume you mean Germany, you think you have to so testify to the same things over the same period for two or three, or five or six times?

A. You presume right when you presume it is Germany.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. Mr. Burger, will you please explain what happened in regard to the opening of the money belts? Will you just give us in your own language what happened on that, at that time, at Lorient?

A. You mean in Lorient?

Q. At Lorient?

A. Shortly before group number 2 left we all were 186 assembled into one room and at that time group number 2 received their money belts.

In addition to us receiving money belts group number 2 received, as stated, $400 each, in smaller denominations.

Now, Herbert Haupt happened to be—Herbert Haupt looked at these different bills, these smaller bills carefully through and found that some of these bills were so-called gold certificate or yellow backs, and they were put aside.

After this was done one of the members had the idea that there might be in the money belts also a number of gold certificates, and we all decided to open up the money belts right then and there and take out all the money which consisted of fifty dollar bills, packed in these different compartments of the money belts, and checked them carefully, if there were any more gold certificates, which we did.

And that was the reason, or the occasion when I handled one pack or several packs of this particular money which was taken out of these money belts. That is my explanation of this incident.

Q. At that time did Herbert Haupt say why he excluded these gold certificates?

A. Yes, he did.

187 Q. What did he say?

A. He informed us that they were not valid over here.

Q. Mr. Warnholtz asked you some question and he used the word dynamite and you said not dynamite?

A. We did not have any dynamite in our possession.

Q. What did you have?

A. We had TNT.

Mr. WOLL. At this time, if your Honor please——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would like to ask a question with reference to that.

Mr. WOLL. I am sorry. Very well.

Recross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Did Lieutenant Kappe apologize and tell you that the German government did not know anything about the validity of gold certificates, and the error about putting them into the money belt?

A. Mr. Warnholtz, you especially should know that a German Lieutenant does not need to apologize to any of his men.

Q. Did he make any remarks about it?

A. There were no remarks.

Q. You did not ask him whether or not the German 188 government did not know more than that, did not know these gold certificates would lead to discovery?

A. A German soldier never asks questions of that kind from a superior officer.

Q. What was your rank?

A. Do you mean in the army?

Q. Yes.

A. Or in the party?

Q. Army?

A. Do you mean in the army or in the party?

Q. In the army?

A. A Private.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Mr. WOLL. Is that all, Mr. Warnholtz?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. I would like at this time, if your Honor please, to offer in evidence Government Exhibits 1 to 8, inclusive, which consist of pictures of Lieutenant Kappe and of the seven persons who received training at the Brandenburg School, with the witness, Mr. Berger.

The COURT. Any objection?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection, restricted to the status of Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WOLL. It is for the purpose of identifying the persons there. I think we have it in, as to the testimony.

189 The COURT. Any objection?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I understand it is for the purpose of identifying especially Herbert Haupt, for that purpose?

Mr. WOLL. It is for the purpose of establishing the identity of the persons who were with Mr. Burger at this school and the picture of the man who was in charge of the school. That is what it is.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. In connection with that?

Mr. WOLL. In connection with that.

The COURT. They may be received.

(The documents so offered and received in evidence marked "Government's Exhibits 1 to 8," both inclusive, are in the following form, to wit:)

190 Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, I would also like to offer in evidence at this time Government's Exhibit 11 which you will recall this witness stated is the exact shovel that he had himself.

The COURT. It may be received.

(The object so offered and received in evidence marked "Government's Exhibit 11" is made a part of this record by reference.)

191 Mr. WOLL. I would like also to offer in evidence as Government's Exhibit 10 the money belt which this witness stated was his money belt and which has his initials on it.

The COURT. It may be received.

(The object so offered and received in evidence marked "Government's Exhibit 10" is made a part of this record by reference.)

192 Mr. WOLL. I believe that will be all, if your Honor please.

The COURT. Very well. You may step down.

EARL J. CONNELLEY, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Earl J. Connelley.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Assistant Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. How long have you been Assistant Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. About five years, about five or six years.

Q. How long have you been connected with the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Twenty-four years and four months.

Q. As Assistant Director did you have charge of an investigation into the saboteur situation that arose in 1942?

A. I did.

193 Q. Calling your attention to on or about the 25th day of June 1942, did you make a trip to any State in connection with that investigation?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go?

A. To Jacksonville, Florida.

Q. Will you state what you did at Jacksonville, Florida?

A. On June 25 I met at the station there various agents from the New York office, together with Edward D. Kerling.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 5 for identification and ask you to tell us what that is?

A. This is a picture of Edward D. Kerling.

Q. Is that the man you met in company with the agents that day?

A. That is right.

Q. Who was in this party besides yourself and Mr. Kerling?

A. Special Agents G. R. McSwain, John A. Holzman, M. R. Griffin and D. M. Brightman, who had brought Kerling to Jacksonville, Florida, and I met them at the station with other agents including Special Agent in charge R. J. Danner, and from the Miami office Special Agent Leon O. Prior and Special Agent G. F. Lindsey.

194 Q. Were you joined also by Mr. Parsons?

A. Mr. Parsons was also there.

Q. What is his first name?

A. D. J. Parsons.

Q. What is his occupation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. He is a laboratory expert on explosions.

Q. After this party had gathered, what did you do?

A. We proceeded in an automobile south from Jacksonville to Jacksonville beach and then to Ponte Vedra, and I believe it is four miles or 4.1 south of Ponte Vedra.

Q. Where is Ponte Vedra located with reference to Jacksonville?

A. South of Jacksonville on highway 140, which is around the coast line, the coast line of Florida, the East Coast line.

Q. After you gone to Ponte Vedra, what did you do?

A. John A. Holzman, G. R. McSwain, Edward D. Kerling and myself proceeded out on to the beach, just about three miles down the beach south, then returned north, around the highway, to approximately the same point that we had started out from.

195 Then we proceeded along on the beach to the top of a sand dune, along the beach until we arrived at a place around 4.3 miles south of Ponte Vedra, on the beach.

Q. What happened there?

A. At this place Edward D. Kerling pointed to the ground on the beach there, or on the sand dune.

Q. What happened, just tell us.

A. Thereafter Special Agent D. J. Parsons dug into the sand and uncovered four boxes which were taken out of the excavated place at that time.

Q. As the digging operations took place, did any one photograph the operation at different stages and the different objects which might have been found in the sand there?

A. The Bureau photographer, J. R. Dunlop photographed the place before we started digging; and thereafter as the boxes were uncovered he made two other shots, one when the boxes first were exposed, and thereafter when all boxes had been exposed in the hole; and thereafter when the boxes had been removed from the hole, on the side of the sand dune.

Mr. FINN. I will ask that these be marked for identification "Government's Exhibits 27 to 34," both inclusive.

196 (The documents produced by counsel were marked "Government's Exhibits 27 to 34," both numbers inclusive.)

Q. Mr. Connelley, after these boxes had been uncovered, just what was done with them?

A. After they had been uncovered or taken out of the hole I marked each of the boxes for identification.

Q. Then what was done?

A. Thereafter they were taken to an automobile on highway 140 south, in charge of Donald J. Parsons and J. R. Dunlop who proceeded in the automobile with the boxes to Jacksonville.

Q. Did you proceed with them to Jacksonville or not?

A. No; I did not.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibits 27, 28 and 28 for identification and ask you if those correctly portray the digging operations which you have described in the various stages?

A. They do.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What was that first number?

Mr. BERTRAM. What was the first number, pardon me?

Mr. FINN. These are Government's Exhibits 27, 28, and 29 for identification. I also have Government's Exhibit 34 for identification.

197 Q. I ask you if that portrays correctly the place after the boxes had been taken out of the ground?

A. That is right.

Q. What did you do thereafter, Mr. Connelley?

A. Thereafter at 5:00 o'clock I met with D. J. Parsons and J. R. Dunlop in a garage at 2149 St. Johns Avenue, Jacksonville, Florida, where the boxes were then located.

A. At that time were the boxes open or were they still closed?

A. The boxes were still closed.

Q. And after that, you saw them there, did you, in the garage?

A. That is right.

Q. While you were there were the boxes opened?

A. These boxes were opened at that time in my presence.

Q. Were they the same boxes which you had seen at the time, out of the sand?

A. Those were the same boxes.

Q. Still containing the identification marks?

A. That is right.

Q. Intact?

A. Yes.

Q. What happened then? What did you do?

198 A. The boxes were opened, the tin container therein was taken out and opened and the contents of each box were taken out and placed in order and photographed by J. R. Dunlop in my presence.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 26 for identification and ask you if that correctly portrays the boxes as they were in the garage prior to being opened?

A. That is right.

Q. Government's Exhibit 33 for identification portrays what?

A. That is a picture of the number 1 box after it had been opened and assembled in the position indicated and photographs of the material therein assembled taken.

Q. Does that correctly portray the box and the contents thereof as it was opened in your presence?

A. That is right, it does.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 30 for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. That is box number 4 had been opened and the contents thereof assembled and photographed, and placed therein as indicated as recited by me and photographed in my presence.

199 Q. Government's Exhibit 31 for identification portrays what?

A. It is the contents of box number 3 after it had been opened and assembled in the position indicated, and photographed in my presence at that time.

Q. Government's Exhibit 32?

A. That is the photograph of the number 2 box, opened, and the contents thereof assembled and photographed in my presence at that time.

Q. After the boxes had been opened and photographed and so forth, what was done?

A. The boxes were then individually reassembled and as each operation was completed on each box and everything placed in the box, the boxes were sealed up and left in the possession of D. J. Parsons.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 14 for identification as previously marked and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. That is the wood box from the number 1 box and my initials E. J. C., June 25, indicating that end or side, and there is an additional notation here of N. A. M.

Q. Is this the identical box number 1 as you marked it when it was uncovered in the sand near Ponte Vedra?

200 A. This was the box from the beach on—south of Ponte Vedra.

Q. What was done after you had put the contents of the boxes back in the boxes? What was done with the equipment?

A. All the boxes were again nailed up together, securely and placed in an automobile and taken to Jacksonville Federal Building and placed in the safe there in the possession of D. J. Parsons.

Q. What did you do thereafter?

A. On the following day I proceeded to New York.

Q. At some time subsequently in New York, did you have a conversation with Herbert Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. After that conversation did you make a telephone call to anyone?

A. I did.

Q. Who did you call?

A. I called Special Agent Leon O. Prior of the Miami office on the telephone.

Q. Did you give him some instructions?

A. I did.

Q. After you had given him these instructions by telephone did you later receive any other equipment from this beach down there at Ponte Vedra?

A. There was a package by express sent to the 201 Washington headquarters, arrived there about July 4, consisting of four caps and shovels.

Q. To whom was that directed? To you?

A. It was directed to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Washington, D. C., said to have been shipped by Leon O. Prior.

Q. Did you open that box?

A. It was opened at that time, yes.

Q. Did you examine the contents thereof?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibits 15, 16, 17 and 18 for identification, being four German military caps previously identified by Mr. Burger, and ask you if those are the caps which you received at that time or identical with them?

A. These are the caps with the four caps which we received at Washington at that time.

At that time they had a tag, probably put on by Leon O. Prior on each cap, marking them, which is now removed.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 13 and 12, for identification, and ask you if you can tell us what those are?

A. These are identical shovels. At that time they also 202 had tags of identification with the name of Leon O. Prior, plus the mark here, and a mark on the top of the shovel handle here, Leon O. Prior which is marked here and the date, July 2, 1942.

Q. Are those two markings that you have referred to the same on the top of the shovels, the same as the markings that you noticed on the shovels immediately when you received them?

A. That is right.

Q. In New York?

A. In Washington.

Q. Washington?

A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. I think that is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination.

(No cross-examination, witness excused.)

LEON O. PRIOR, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Leon O. Prior.

A. What is your occupation, Mr. Prior?

A. I am special agent of the Federal Bureau of 203 Investigation.

Q. How long have you been connected with the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Four and a half years.

Q. To what office are you assigned?

A. Miami, Florida, division.

Q. Were you assigned to that office in June and July of 1942?

A. I was.

Q. Calling your attention to on or about June 25, 1942, did you accompany Mr. Earl J. Connelley, Mr. Parcons, together with a number of other agents, together with a prisoner, Edward Kerling, out to a place near the sands of Ponte Vedra, Florida?

A. I did.

Q. Were you present when these photographs of the digging operations took place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that spot after that time? Did you know the spot where the boxes had been uncovered?

A. I did.

Q. To shorten this up, these boxes were taken from that point to a garage in Miami or Jacksonville, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

204 Q. Subsequent to that time, a day or so later, did you receive a telephone call with instructions from Mr. Connelley?

A. Yes.

Q. Pursuant to those telephonic instructions, did you go out to the place where these digging operations had taken place?

A. I did.

Q. What did you do when you got there?

A. I dug some more in the vicinity of the place where the boxes had been found.

Q. How far did you dig from there, how did you know which way——

A. I dug north of the hole a distance of approximately forty feet.

Q. Will you tell us what you found there?

A. At a point of about thirty feet directly north of the hole where the box was exposed I recovered two trench shovels and four German marine caps.

Q. What did you do with those trench shovels and the German marine caps?

A. I sent then to the Federal Bureau of Investigation laboratory, Washington, D. C.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibits 15 to 18, inclusive, being four German military caps and ask you if you can tell us whether those are the caps involved?

205 A. Yes; those are the caps that I uncovered.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits numbered 12 and 13 for identification, and ask you if you can tell us what those are?

A. Yes. These are the two shovels that I uncovered.

Q. You sent those to the Bureau in Washington, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. That is all with this witness, Mr. Prior.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination.

(No cross-examination; witness excused.)

DONALD J. PARSONS, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Donald J. Parsons.

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Parsons?

A. I am Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. How long have you been a Special Agent of the 206 Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Approximately 10 years.

Q. Did you work in any particular field with the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Yes; I am the Special Agent in charge of the Physics and Chemistry Laboratory of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. How long have you been employed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in that capacity?

A. In charge of the laboratory for less than a year.

Q. And prior to that time?

A. I have been in the laboratory almost the entire period of my service.

Q. Before joining the Federal Bureau of Investigation, what, if any scientific education did you have to equip yourself for this type of work?

A. I am a chemist, have a degree in chemistry from George Washington University and studied since my schooling, in other laboratories, commercial laboratories.

Q. Will you tell us in general what your duties are at the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. They are concerned with the scientific examination of physical evidence required in any of our investigations. My 207 particular field concerns explosives, sabotage devices, and munitions and related materials.

Q. What, if any experience have you had in that particular field?

A. Well, I have had the experience of a large number of examinations, covering the literature and the text books on the subject and working and consulting with other laboratories in that field.

Q. When sabotage devices are sent into the Bureau is it your duty to examine them, test them, determine what they are, and so forth?

A. It is.

Q. To take them apart?

A. Yes.

Q. Calling your attention to the 25th day of June, 1942, did you proceed from Washington; or just prior to that date did you proceed from Washington to Florida?

A. I did, I arrived in Jacksonville, Florida, on June 25, 1942.

Q. I want to shorten this up. You won't object. Did you come to a point near Ponte Vedra?

A. I did.

Q. Where Kerling pointed to a spot in the sand, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Then you started to dig?

208 Mr. FINN. Do you mind if I lead a little bit? I want to shorten this up?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection.

A. I did.

The COURT. Just a minute.

(Conference between court and counsel not made part of the record.)

The COURT. Proceed.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. As these digging operations took place there were photographs made, were there not, of the various stages of the operations?

A. There were.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits 27, 28 and 29 and 34. Do those correctly portray the boxes and equipment, explosive equipment, and so forth that you found in the sand there at Ponte Vedra?

A. These are correct pictures of the scene and the progress of the uncovering of the boxes.

Q. After you had uncovered these boxes did you take charge of them?

A. I did.

Q. Will you tell us what you did with them?

A. I placed them in an automobile and placed them in a private garage in Jacksonville, Florida. In that garage they were opened, photographed and repacked.

209 Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 26 for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. These are the four boxes recovered on the beach after they had been removed to the garage and photographed in the garage.

Q. That was before they were opened?

A. Before they were opened.

Q. Will you tell us what Government's Exhibit 33 for identification is?

A. For the sake of convenience we considered the boxes by number. This is a photograph of the first box or box number 1 that was opened.

Q. Did you examine the contents of that box thereafter?

A. I did.

Q. Will you tell us what was in the box?

A. In the box there were eighteen blocks of Trinitrotoluene or TNT as it is more familiarly known, which is a high velocity explosive.

Q. What do you mean by a high velocity explosive?

A. I mean the speed of this explosion is sufficiently high, it is used for demolition purposes and such things as cutting steel.

Q. Did you open up any of those blocks, that is, take off the paper wrapping and so forth?

210 A. I did.

Q. Will you describe one of those blocks to the jury?

A. Each block weighs approximately 1 kilogram which is the equivalent of 2.2 pounds. The blocks are approximately 5½ inches in length, 3¼ inches in width, about 2½ inches in thickness.

Each block has in the one end a hole to accommodate the detonator or initiating device, which is necessary to cause the explosion of such materials as TNT.

The blocks are solid material, yellow in color.

Q. Will you examine Government's Exhibit 32 for identification and tell us what that is?

A. This is a photograph of box numbered 2 after having been opened and the contents of this box were the same as those of number 1. That has 18 of the TNT demolition blocks.

Q. Did you open the other two boxes also?

A. I did.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 30 for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

211 A. This is a photograph of box numbered 4 after it was opened and showing the contents of that box.

Q. Will you tell us the various things that were in that box?

A. In this box there were no high explosives or bombs. This box contained exclusively detonators, fuses, incendiary devices and time mechanisms and materials; in other words, initiating devices or materials that would be used to set off the explosive or incendiary charge.

Q. Mr. Parsons, will you examine Government's Exhibit 31 for identification and tell us what that is?

A. That is a photograph of box number 3 after it had been opened and showing its contents.

Q. What did it contain?

A. It contained ten more of the TNT demolition blocks, four objects which were made to simulate lumps of coal and contained TNT charges, four coils of safety fuse, and one coil of detonating fuse.

Q. In general, will you describe, in order to shorten this—will you describe the various types of incendiary devices, detonators, and explosive equipment that you found in these boxes; in these two boxes?

212 A. In addition to the demolition blocks which I have described and the four coal bombs which were high explosives, there were various materials that were used, or could be used, in a variety of ways to set up an explosive train or an explosive system, which would set off other bombs or charges or incendiaries.

That consisted of fuses which could be lighted and which would burn slowly, and fuse lighting devices or fuse lighters which contained the detonators, which are necessary in using high explosives, such as dynamite and TNT.

And detonators and several types of fuses that could be used with safety fuses, or could be used with various delayed devices, and time mechanisms.

It also contained adapters so that the special detonators could also be used with safety fuse. It contained small incendiaries so that the same system that is set up to explode the high explosives can also be used to start a fire after placing the small incendiaries.

In addition to that there were both chemical and mechanical delay devices. Such a mechanical delay device is this clock mechanism which provides for a delay of fourteen days.

There were a number of chemical delays, one disguised
213 as a pen and pencil set, and there were a small number of similar devices, such as to be used with sulphuric acid, after a shorter delay period.

Then there was one box containing abrasive materials for damage of lubricative machinery.

Q. You photographed each one of these things specifically, did you not?

A. They were photographed under my supervision.

Q. I am not going to ask you to describe many of these; just a few.

Calling your attention to Government's Exhibit 25 for identification, will you tell us what that portrays?

A. This is a photograph of what we call, or the device referred to as a coal bomb which contained a block of TNT, and then it is covered with a black plastic material and has an irregular surface that resembles coal. In one end of it there is a hole so the detonator can be inserted to set off the high explosives.

Q. Showing you Government's Exhibit 23 for identification, will you tell us what that is, Mr. Parsons?

A. This is one of the pen and pencil delay devices which were recovered in Florida.

214 Q. Will you explain to the jury how that operated? By the way, did you test any of these?

A. Yes; I tested all of the items. The pen and pencil part of it, of course, is simply a means of disguising. Actually the pencil originally contained a detonator which I removed. The pen contained a chemical combination of acid so that when the pen and pencil were put together in proper manner they formed a delay device.

Then by turning the end of the pen it is possible to start a reaction in a period of approximately eleven to thirteen hours, which would set off the detonator and which in turn would cause the explosion of the TNT.

Q. May this also be used as an incendiary?

A. Yes; it may be, by the substitution of one of the incendiary devices for the detonator that was contained in the pencil. All those items are interchangeable. It could be used to start a fire.

Q. By the way, do these write?

A. Yes; they write.

Q. I will now show you Government's Exhibit——.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, the reporter wrote on the cellophane and I will have to describe it. I will show you Government's Exhibit, with the previous mark of Government's Exhibit 215 35 on it, consisting of a cardboard box flattened out.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is exhibit 24.

Mr. FINN. 24, thank you.

(The Exhibit was marked "Government's Exhibit 24.")

By Mr. FINN:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 24 for identification and ask you if you can tell us what this is?

A. Yes. This is a type of small cardboard box which was contained in box numbered 4 and in this small box was contained what appears to be a plastic delay device, one of which is also in this envelope.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 22, for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. This exhibit is one of the mechanical delays or time clock devices and can be used to set off either an explosive charge or an incendiary charge which would permit the delay of anything up to fourteen days.

Q. How is that operated, Mr. Parsons?

A. That is operated by winding the jewel mechanism and then setting the small firing pin which fires the little primer which is contained in the envelope.

Q. How many of those were in that box, of that equipment?

216 A. There were ten in the box in Florida.

Q. How many pen and pencil sets in there?

A. There were five.

Q. Were all of these exhibits contained in these boxes which you uncovered in the garage there at Jacksonville?

A. That is correct.

Mr. FINN. I think we might as well adjourn now.

The COURT. We will recess at this time until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Ladies and gentlemen, do not discuss the case nor permit anyone to discuss it with you and return at ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Just a moment please. Will counsel step up here a moment, please?

(Conference between court and counsel not made part of record.)

The COURT. I will tell you at this time that we will hold court tomorrow and on Monday; that there will be no court on Saturday so far as this case is concerned. There will be no court on Tuesday, being Decoration Day.

We will hold court tomorrow and on Monday but not on Tuesday. We will hold court again on Wednesday. I am telling that to you now so that you may make your arrangements 217 accordingly. Report tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to Friday, May 26, 1944, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A. M.)

218 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois Eastern Division, at Chicago

v.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge and a Jury

Friday, May 26, 1944, 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard C. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America; Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram appeared for the Defendant.

219 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the court, I should like to bring up something I do believe might be better discussed in your chambers.

The COURT. Very well. Step in the chambers, gentlemen.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court's chambers outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would like to state to your Honor, I feel somewhat disturbed about the testimony of Burger. I am more than convinced that man committed perjury.

I would like to state, because all of us being officers of the court, I think we are interested to the same extent to see that does not prevail.

I do remember Mr. Woll night before last, five minutes to four, after the close of the opening statement, I believe it was, about this way. It was a kind of a whispered conversation held between all of us. That he stated I should like to talk again with Mr. Burger before putting him on the stand. He asked if we had any objection to it. It was stated, no, we did not.

Now, yesterday Mr. Burger stated toward the end of his testimony that he had not discussed the matter as far as he could 220 remember with anyone after four o'clock of that day. He has, however, changed his testimony from the last time to fit my opening statement and, of course, I will be glad to take his word, the word of the District Attorney for it, whether or not he did. He committed perjury, Mr. Burger did, he stated he did not remember, and he certainly must have remembered everything as to the preceding day whether or not he discussed the case.

Mr. FINN. As far as I know, I don't think Mr. Woll talked with him.

Mr. HURLEY. I didn't even see him that day.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was there at the time, but I do know that at the first trial of this case his testimony was different. At that time he stated distinctly Herbert Haupt should not see his parents in Chicago. He never made one single remark Herbert should come to Chicago. Yesterday in his direct examination he stated Herbert should come to Chicago at once.

Mr. FINN. My understanding is that the instructions, Mr. Warnholtz in his opening statement said that was one of his instructions, we don't deny that at all. My heavens, this man testified four hours, and because he omitted one little detail or thing——

The COURT. Well, of course, I remember Mr. Warnholtz's
221 opening statement was concluded about four o'clock, and Mr. Woll stepped up to me and said over the bench and in a whisper, the first witness for the United States will take some few minutes to get him here, and I inquired how long he would testify and was told he would be a long witness, somebody said he would take most of the day, and I think I suggested, perhaps, it would be better to wait until the following morning to put on the witness for whom we would have to wait a few minutes anyhow.

Now, what else was said, I don't know. Now, of course, I am not to judge that. The burden is not put upon me preliminarily to judge the truth of falsity or credibility of a witness, but I did observe this about that witness; he answered your specific question every time as meticulously as I have ever observed a witness answer, and whatever specific question you asked was answered.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes.

The COURT. I don't have any hesitancy in saying, as far as I could tell the man was telling the truth. Now, when you asked him if he had a conversation with anybody after four o'clock—in the first place, the man, I think, didn't know what day it was until he was orientated; that is, he is in custody. He doesn't have to go to work at five or six o'clock, or in five or six days. I think honestly he didn't know what day it was when he was testifying until he got orientated, and somebody told him it was Thursday. Now, you are asking him if he had a conversation after four o'clock, and he said in effect he didn't know or he didn't remember, or he said, I don't recall.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Did not remember.

Mr. BERTRAM. Mr. Woll brought it, and he apparently was quibbling about it, and he said——

The COURT. Now you say quibbling; as far as I could tell that man was answering the very questions submitted to him, and no other.

Mr. BERTRAM. He has got great mental ability, there is no question about it.

The COURT. Yes; he has extraordinary ability.

Mr. BERTRAM. And personality.

The COURT. A very extraordinary mental capacity. I thought he did a good job answering these specific questions, as well as I have ever seen it done, so I wouldn't think he was lying when he said he didn't remember whether he talked before four o'clock or after. He is in custody. He doesn't have to worry about getting to work at five o'clock or four-thirty, or any other time. He just gets up, I assume, when somebody awakens him, and he eats breakfast if somebody brings it to him, and he eats lunch if somebody brings it to him, and many other things, he does the best he can to kill time. I think I would, under the circumstances, try to forget the passage of time; otherwise I don't see how a man in custody could live if he couldn't get away from some of that. I don't know. Where is Mr. Woll?

Mr. FINN. He will be here in a few minutes. I think we can get him up here if you want him.

The COURT. If he said he didn't talk with him, that is the end of that.

Mr. FINN. Just a minute, your Honor, I recollect now, I have a distinct recollection now of some circumstances that might have something to do with this. You would be surprised, Mr. Burger has a very high pulse.

The COURT. I wouldn't be a bit surprised at that.

Mr. FINN. I talked with Mr. Woll on Sunday when the question came up. I recollect now when the question came up, whether we should talk with him last night before he went on the stand, and Mr. Connelley informed us that the doctor said he 224 didn't think it advisable to talk to Mr. Burger last night.

I recollect now, I didn't before, and for that reason he was not brought down last night or the night before.

The COURT. I wouldn't be surprised if that man did have a high pulse. I would be surprised if he didn't. That man is not without stress and strain.

Mr. FINN. His pulse was 160 when he got off of the stand yesterday, and for that reason, Mr. Connelley, the doctor advised him it wasn't advisable to talk to Burger, and we didn't talk to him.

Mr. BERTRAM. We include anyone.

Mr. HURLEY. I didn't talk to him.

Mr. FINN. I didn't talk to him.

Mr. HURLEY. I didn't see him.

Mr. BERTRAM. The Department of Justice, the FBI, that includes them. He was not going to talk to anyone that afternoon.

Mr. FINN. Well, he didn't; as far as I know, he didn't. Now that the circumstances are recalled to me, Mr. Woll told me that Mr. Connelley had called him to one side and said he didn't think it advisable to talk to Mr. Burger because his pulse was high and it excited him.

225 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, we will be glad to accept that.

One slight other point, if your Honor please, the matter of overt acts that will be brought up on which there will be only one witness. I believe Mr. Finn stated the law to be that that is entirely in harmony with many cases. I have not found any of them. I think we should submit a brief, because that will come up during the trial.

The COURT. What is that? I beg your pardon.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The matter of bringing up the overt acts. The government knows there is only one witness and Mr. Finn maintains there is a long line of cases which permits it. I have not found such cases. I do know this, however, that in the Aaron Burr case——

Mr. FINN. I can give you the decision in the cases.

The COURT. Here is Mr. Woll now.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mr. Woll it is questioned whether or not Mr. Burger testified falsely when he stated he did not remember whether or not he discussed the case with you in the afternoon was my first question after four o'clock.

Mr. WOLL. I think I remember your question.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And I was under the impression someone had talked to him.

226 Mr. WOLL. I didn't talk to Burger from Sunday until I put him on the stand.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, we are quite satisfied with that, with the exception he said, you said, "Hello" to him before he went on the stand.

Mr. WOLL. I didn't talk to him about the case at all; not one word about the case from Sunday on.

Mr. BERTRAM. We thought you might.

Mr. WOLL. I will tell you now, I was in St. Louis, and I came back from St. Louis Saturday night and I talked with Burger Sunday, and you know we went right into the trial Monday and Burger wasn't even told, as far as I know until morning of the night before we put him on the stand.

Mr. BERTRAM. And you didn't get a chance to ask him until after adjournment?

Mr. WOLL. No.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I am quite well satisfied then.

Mr. WOLL. I think you can understand that very well. There were a lot of guards around him. The man is in custody.

Mr. BERTRAM. Nobody talked with him, you said.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We are satisfied, Mr. Woll. Thank you very kindly.

The COURT. The question whether or not they may 227 put in proof of overt acts where a certain incident is charged as an overt act, and they only put in evidence of one witness——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right.

The COURT. Whether that can be done?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes, sir.

The COURT. Well, you will have briefs on that, I suppose.

Mr. WOLL. Well, of course, it is our contention there is no question about it, but it can be done.

The COURT. Have you seen this?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I have a copy right here.

Mr. BERTRAM. The rest is in the brief.

Mr. FINN. It is about 250 pages long, Judge, the actual recording in the District Court, what it actually was in the Berg case.

The COURT. This is not for the record.

(Discussion off the record not reported.)

The COURT. All right, we will proceed with the trial.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. You may proceed. Bring in the Jury.

228 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

Several JURORS. Good morning.

The COURT. You may proceed.

Mr. FINN. Mr. Parsons.

D. J. PARSONS, resumed the stand for further examination, after having been previously sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination (resumed) by Mr. FINN:

Q. You were on the stand, Mr. Parsons, and you were testifying in this courtroom yesterday afternoon when we adjourned?

A. I was.

Q. Mr. Parsons, in addition to the various exhibits and photographs, which you have identified here, there were a number of other exhibits and photographs, were there not?

A. Yes; there were many of them that are material, of course, that have not been exhibited because they are explosives and dangerous to handle.

Q. This represents photographs of the boxes after 229 they were opened, however, and include all those materials, do they not?

A. They do.

Q. And in general were described by you in your general description of the material and files; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. In that event, I think, Your Honor, I will offer just these that have been identified, and I should like to offer at this time, Your Honor, the following Government's Exhibits.

Government's Exhibit No. 22, which is a time delay clock, and which was identified both by Mr. Burger, and testified to by Mr. Parsons as having been found in this cache in Florida.

Government's Exhibit 23 is a fountain pen and pencil set which was identified by Mr. Burger and testified to by Mr. Parsons as having been found in the cache in Florida.

Government's Exhibit 24, being a cardboard paper and metal detonator, which was positively identified by Mr. Burger and Mr. Parsons alike as having been found in Florida.

Government's Exhibit 25, being a photograph of the coal,

230 and also identified by Mr. Burger and by Mr. Parsons, and Mr. Parsons testified further, found in Florida.

Government's Exhibit 26, being a photograph of four wooden boxes taken at the garage before they were opened, which was identified by Mr. Burg[illegible] and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit 27, which is a photograph of the Ponte Vedra Beach before the digging operation began, and identified by Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit No. 28, being a photograph of two boxes in the pit at Ponte Vedra, identified both by Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit No. 29, being a photograph of box number 4 in the sand pit at Ponte Vedra, identified by both Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit 30, which is a photograph of four boxes, number 4, after it was opened in the garage in Jacksonville, and identified by Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit 31, being a photograph of box number 3 after it was opened in the garage in Jacksonville, and identified by Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit 32, being a photograph of number 231 2 box after it was opened, and identified by Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit No. 33 is a photograph of box number 1 after it was opened and identified by Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

Government's Exhibit No. 34 is a photograph of the four boxes after they had been taken out of the sand in the pit in the beach of Ponte Vedra, and identified by both Mr. Parsons and Mr. Connelley.

All of those exhibits are offered for the purpose of showing Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent and that he came to this country on a mission of sabotage for the German Government and are to be limited to that issue.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would state, Your Honor, the defense has no objection to the introduction of this evidence for the purpose of showing the enemy status of Herbert Haupt and for the time and up to the time that he landed in Florida, and for the purpose of showing that he was sent to this country on a mission and subject to instructions by the German Government.

We do not wish to admit that he carried out any part of that mission or had it in his mind. These others, perhaps, better be eliminated or let it be stated that these exhibits are received 232 for the purpose of proving the enemy status of Herbert Haupt at that particular time he landed in Florida.

Mr. FIXX. Well, the exhibits are offered for the purpose of proving the allegations of the indictment to the effect that Herbert Haupt was engaged in a mission to this country for the German Government.

The COURT. I think they may be received.

(Thereupon the documents, so offered in evidence, were marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibits 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

Mr. FINN. Pardon me, I have some more.

I also wish to offer in evidence at this time Government's Exhibit 14 for identification. This box was uncovered in the sands of Florida, and identified by both Mr. Connelley and Mr. Parsons.

The COURT. What sort of metal was that in that box?

The WITNESS. Pure tin.

Mr. FINN. I also wish to offer in evidence at this time Government's Exhibit 12 and number 13, being the shovels and spades which were identified by Mr. Leon Prior, and also identified by Mr. Burger.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Thereupon the documents, so offered in evidence, were marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibits Nos. 12 and 13," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:).

By Mr. FINN:

Q. I will show you this box marked "Government's Exhibit 14" for identification, and ask you if you have ever seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Where did you first see it?

A. In the sand on the beach at Ponte Vedra, Florida.

Q. After you had uncovered it from the sand pit there, did anyone mark the box?

A. Yes.

Q. Who marked it?

A. Mr. Connelley marked it in my presence.

Q. And do you recognize the mark on this box now that was put on there by Mr. Connelley at that time?

A. I do.

Q. And subsequently took charge of this?

A. What is that?

Q. You subsequently took charge of this?

A. I did.

Q. And opened it in the garage subsequently in Jacksonville; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Mr. FINN. I also desire to offer in evidence at this time Government's Exhibits 15, 16, 17, and 18 for identification, being the four German Marine caps which were identified by Mr. Burger and Mr. Leon Prior; both. These exhibits and the box are also offered to prove the same issues as the other exhibits. I take it, 14 is also received.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Thereupon the documents, so offered in evidence, were marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibits 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

236 Mr. FINN. I think that is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination.

Mr. FINN. Mr. Leibl.

WILLIAM FRANCIS LEIBL, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

A. L-e-i-b-l.

Q. Where do you live now?

The COURT. How is that spelled?

A. We drew rations from Camp Forrest, Tennessee.

Q. You have a sort of a roving address, I take it?

A. That is right.

A. About one year and four months.

Q. And prior to that time where were you?

A. Before that month, before joining the Army in the Marine Corps for two months.

Q. Now, were you born in this country?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. And how long did you live in this country before you went anywheres else?

A. Sixteen years.

A. That is right, sir.
Q. When did you leave for Germany?
A. We left, as I told you, April 27th, 1939.
Q. What business was your father employed in before he took you and your family to Germany?
238 A. He was an interpreter at the Studebaker in South Bend.
Q. Was he born in this country?
A. No; he wasn't. He was born in Germany.
Q. Now, after you had gone back to Germany, where did you live?
A. For three months; the first three months we lived in Hamburg, Germany.
Q. I forgot what you said when you went back. Tell me again, please.
A. In April 1939.
Q. What occupation did your father take up in Germany?
A. Well, in Hamburg he was given a position as translator for the German Labor Party temporarily.
Q. And after that?
A. After that we moved to Stuttgart, and then he worked——

A. For the German Propaganda Ministry.
Q. Where did you live during that period of time?
A. In Stuttgart.

A. The first year I worked as an electrical apprentice; then after as a milling man. The last two years I was in Germany I studied photography.
Q. Your father was employed by the German Propa-
239 ganda Agency, is that correct?
A. That is right.
Q. Who headed that agency?
A. Joseph Goebbels.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object as immaterial to bringing this out.
By Mr. FINN:
Q. Now, how long, do you remember?
The COURT. Let it stand.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Now, how long do you remember, did you remain in Germany before you came back to the United States?

A. Three years.

240 A. He came to visit my father in our homes on a social visit.

Q. Were you there when he arrived?

A. No, I wasn't; I was at work.

Q. Well, did he come back later on in the evening.

A. Yes, he did; he came about six o'clock in the evening.

Q. Were you there when he arrived then?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Will you tell us just what he did when he first arrived there?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that, your Honor. I do know what the response is Mr. Finn wants.

It relates to a conversation between Herbert Haupt, who is now dead, and we cannot refute the testimony. It is absolutely hearsay testimony. It is not essential for the purpose of proving the enemy status of Herbert Haupt. It is made for the purpose of prejudicing the minds of the jurors as to that particular time.

The COURT. You may step in my chambers.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court's chambers outside the hearing and presence of the Jury:)

The COURT. What do you expect to prove?

Mr. FINN. I expect to prove—[reading.]

241 Off the record.

That is in substance what we desire to prove by this witness.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I point out the type of testimony, the very specific question, what was the first thing Herbert Haupt did. He said Heil Hitler—it is for the purpose of creating prejudice, not for the purpose of proving the enemy status of Herbert Haupt. We have no means of refuting any of this, and it is strictly hearsay evidence. We object to bringing in such evidence of his status.

If it is permissible at all—however, it is also cumulative and when the Government gets through with their part, the Jury is so prejudiced that we will be totally unable to change their minds by reason of the prejudice created by it.

The COURT. I think the Government is entitled to show the character of the person to whom the defendant is alleged to adhere and to whom he is charged to give aid and comfort. I think the evidence is permissible for that purpose. Evidence is not excluded for the reason it is impossible and difficult to refute. That is not the reason evidence is excluded.

242 Mr. BERTRAM. Our objection is under the hearsay evidence rule.

The COURT. Well, it is received as verbal acts of what he did say and do, and among other things, he talked and uttered sounds by means of his mouth; verbal acts.

Mr. BERTRAM. Well, usually under the hearsay rule, to permit a witness he had a conversation——

The COURT. That is where hearsay applies. No; I think it is admissible as verbal acts. What did he do? You are trying to find out what kind of a man he was at that time. What did he do and say, and that is the way to find out. Overruled.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

Mr. FINN. Read the last question.

(Last preceding question read by the reporter.)

The WITNESS. The first thing he did was to raise his hand and make a German salute and said, "Heil, Hitler."

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Now, who was present that evening at your home?

A. My mother and myself when Haupt came in.

Q. And did your father later come there?

243 A. That is right.

Q. Anyone else?

A. And my brother and another boarder.

Q. What was his name?

A. Deidrich Busch.

Q. How long did Herbert Haupt remain at your home that evening?

A. About two hours.

Q. And after that two hours had expired, did you go anywhere with him?

A. Yes; we went to Stuttgart first.

Q. When you say "we," whom do you mean?

A. My brother, Herbert Haupt, this boarder, Deidrich Busch, and myself.

Q. You say you went to Stuttgart?
A. That is right.
Q. How far did you live from Stuttgart at that time?
A. About three miles.
Q. And what did you do at Stuttgart?
A. We stayed at the train station and I suggested we go out on a party. My brother didn't have his clean clothes on. He went back with Deidrich Busch and after we were at the station, we then went to Untuerkheim.
Q. What is that?
A. That is a small city outside of Stuttgart.
244 Q. What did you do there?
A. We went to his hotel where he said his aunt was living, and we met his aunt, and he told her that we were going out on a party to Stuttgart.
Q. When you speak of his aunt, how did he speak to the aunt, in German or in English?
A. In German.
Q. Now, after he had spoken with the aunt after you had met her, did you go anywhere thereafter?
A. We went back to Stuttgart to a night club where we met my brother and his other friend.
Q. And how long did you remain at the night club, if you remember?
A. Until about one o'clock.
Q. Now, during the course of the evening that you spent with Herbert Haupt, did you have any conversations with him relative to how he happened to get to Germany or what he was doing in Germany?
A. Yes; we did.
Q. Will you tell us what he told you on that occasion, first go slowly and keep your voice up so that we can hear you?
A. He said that he was being trailed by the FBI here in the United States and that was for operating Nazi propaganda,
245 so he had to leave the country, whereupon he went to New Mexico, and he said he crossed the Rio Grande.
Q. Did he say who went with him?
A. He said that two friends had went with him, he didn't mention the name of the friends and they crossed the Rio Grande and they dumped their car there by the Rio Grande and while crossing, that is when one of the buddies was shot.
Q. What else did he tell you?
A. He said after that he went to Mexico.
Q. Did he tell you where the other boy who had been with him, whether he continued on to Mexico with him?
A. That is right.

Q. Tell us what he said they did.

A. They went to Mexico City and contacted the German Consul.

Q. Yes.

A. And received enough money to charter a plane to South America, and from South America——

Mr. FINN. Go slowly, please.

The WITNESS (continuing). They got on to a Japanese freighter and went up to San Francisco, and from San Francisco they went to Yokohama.

Q. Did anything happen in San Francisco Harbor there?

A. Yes. He said in order to keep from being arrested by the FBI he had the Japanese Captain put him in chains
246 as a political prisoner for Japan.

Q. Where did you say he went to from San Francisco?

A. To Yokohama.

Q. What did he say they did in Yokohama?

A. I believe they contacted the German Consul there and received enough money to go to Tokio and in Tokio they stayed there until they got aboard a German freighter.

Q. Tell us about that.

A. He said they traveled 180 days around Africa into France.

Q. Did he tell you what they did when they got to France?

A. They stayed about one day in France, then went to Berlin.

Q. Go ahead and tell us what else he told you.

A. He said he was doing some secret work in Berlin for the German Army, and he then came down to Stuttgart and visited my father.

Q. By the way, did he say for whom he worked?

A. Yes; worked for Walter Kappe.

Q. Did you know Lieutenant Walter Kappe?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. By the way, had you ever met Kappe in the United States before you had come over to Germany?

247 A. No; I hadn't.

Q. What position did Lieutenant Walter Kappe hold in the German Army at that time, if you know?

A. Lieutenant in the Infantry.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 1 for identification and ask you if you recognize that photograph?

A. That is Lieutenant Kappe and his wife.

Q. Where did they live, these Kappes?

A. Stuttgart.

Q. Now, was there any conversation either at your home that evening, or at the night club with reference to your proposed traveling back to America?

A. Yes; there was.

Q. Where did that conversation take place?
A. At the dinner table at home.
Q. Will you tell us what was said?
A. My father told him that I was going back to the United States very shortly.
Q. Had you previously informed your father you were not going to stay in Germany, is that right?
A. That is right.
Q. I take it, you didn't agree with him on his political affiliations?
A. That is right.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to, your Honor.
248 The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Now, what did Herbert Haupt say when your father said that?
A. Well, he said that the German Gestapo would remember all of those persons who went back to the United States at this time.
Q. Now, you remained with him, I think you said, until about one o'clock in the morning?
A. That is right.
Q. Where did you go then?
A. From there we took a train back to where we lived and then went to Untuerkheim also, and——
Mr. FINN. Go slowly, please.
The WITNESS. We got off the train there and Herbert Haupt went on further.
Q. That is the last time you saw him, I take it?
A. That is right.
Q. Did you see him at all after that?
A. No; I didn't.
Q. Now, when did you leave Germany?
A. I left Germany May 16, 1942.
Q. And how did you get back to the United States?
A. By diplomatic exchange.
Q. What vessel?
A. S. S. "Grottningham."
Mr. FINN. I think that is all with this witness.
249 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination, your Honor.

Q. And can you tell from the records, Mr. Speer, the time that the individuals checked out of the Mayflower Hotel?

258 A. That should be time stamped; yes, sir, on the account cards, they checked out on June 18th, at 8:03 A. M.

Q. 8:03 A. M.?

A. That was William Thomas, and Herbert Haupt checked out and paid his account on June the 18th, at 7:37 A. M.

Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I see the exhibits, please?

No cross-examination your Honor.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. HURLEY. Mr. Driver.

JAMES A. DRIVER, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. My name is James A. Driver.

Q. How do you spell your last name?

A. D-r-i-v-e-r.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Driver?

A. Jacksonville, Florida.

Q. And what is your business or occupation?

A. I am manager of the Mayflower Hotel.

259 Q. How long have you been manager of the Mayflower Hotel?

A. Eight years.

Q. And that hotel was located in Jacksonville, Florida, and is, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were therefore the manager during the month of June 1942; is that correct?

A. I was, right.

Q. Mr. Driver, I will show you Government's Exhibit 36 and Government's Exhibit 37, and ask you if they are part of the records of the Mayflower Hotel in Jacksonville, Florida, of which you are the manager?

A. They are; yes, sir.

Q. I will also show you Government's Exhibits 38 and 39, and ask you if they are also a part of the permanent records of the Mayflower Hotel?

A. Yes, sir; they are.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 40, and ask you if that is part of the records of the Mayflower Hotel?

A. It is; yes, sir.

Q. And what is that particular record, Mr. Speer?

A. That is the bellboy record of calls that are made from 260 guests requesting any one of a half dozen things; ice, or baggage, or something like this, and this is a record we keep when the bellboy goes to the room to bring something down, or goes up and takes something up there. It is a service record.

Q. The entry there, 716, that was made to room 716 at that time?

A. It indicates that 716 called up.

Mr. HURLEY. Speak up.

The WITNESS. The man in this particular room called up and asked that a boy come up there, and all that, what it was.

Q. And Government's Exhibit 43—42 and 43, are those part of the permanent records of the Mayflower Hotel?

A. They are; yes, sir.

Q. And they are the account records, isn't that correct?

Q. And now these exhibits which I have just shown to you you stated are part of the permanent records of the Mayflower Hotel?

A. They are.

Q. They are kept in the usual ordinary course of business, is that correct?

261 A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are kept under your supervision as manager of the Mayflower Hotel?

A. That is right.

Mr. HURLEY. At this time, if the court please, I will offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, and 43.

Mr. WAINHOLTZ. May I ask the court to have an opportunity to examine those records? I know there are objections to some of them. I have not had an opportunity to see which is which, and it is almost impossible to hear what Mr. Hurley says.

Mr. HURLEY. There is no objection if he wants to examine them.

262 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please we object to the introduction of the exhibits marked for identification, "Government's Exhibits 37, 38, 41, and 42," being transactions with a party by the name of Thomas. We do not know a Thomas, and he is not a party to this case, nor has he anything to do with the transaction involved as far as I can see it.

Mr. HURLEY. Which ones are you objecting to?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will give you the numbers again, 37, 38, 41, and 42.

The COURT. Has the photograph of Thomas been identified?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We do not know who he is so far.

Mr. HURLEY. He has not been identified in Florida.

The COURT. Has the photograph of the man registered as Thomas been identified?

Mr. HURLEY. No, it has not.

Mr. BERTRAM. Not in this evidence. The offer would be premature.

Mr. WOLL. Is the matter just Thomas?

Mr. HURLEY. We will temporarily withdraw those with reference to Thomas at this time.

The COURT. Very well. The others may be received.

(The documents so offered and received in evidence, marked "Government's Exhibits 36, 39, 40, and 43" are in the following words and figures, to wit:)

263 Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination.

(No cross-examination. Witness excused.)

Mr. HURLEY. Mr. Andrew.

GARNETT ANDREWS, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HURLEY:

Q. What is your name?

A. Garnett Andrews.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Andrews?

A. I live in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Q. During the year 1942 where did you live?

A. I lived in Jacksonville, Florida.

Q. What was your business or occupation in Jacksonville, Florida?

A. I was Manager of the Seminole Hotel.

Q. And where is that located in Jacksonville?

A. The corner of Forsyth and Hogan Streets, downtown Jacksonville.

Q. Were you engaged as manager during the entire month of June of the year 1942?

264 A. I was.

Q. As manager did you have the supervision and control of the records of that hotel?

A. I did.

Q. How far is that hotel from the Mayflower?

A. It is about a block and a half, two blocks.

Mr. HURLEY. May these be marked for identification?

(Said documents produced by counsel were marked for identification, "Government's Exhibits 44 to 45.")

Q. I show you "Government's Exhibit 44," marked for identification, and ask you if that is a part of the records of the Seminole Hotel of Jacksonville, Florida?

A. That is, yes.

Q. That is covering what?

A. That is a registration card.

Q. Was that the registration card of Edward D. Kelly, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. To what room was he assigned in the Seminole Hotel?

A. Room 402.

Q. That was on what date?

A. That was on June 16, 1942.

265 Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit——

A. Just a minute. May I look at this? Let me see this just a second. Mr. Hurley this question arose about this date on here. The card is dated June 16th but actually it was June 17th. This, of course, was checked not only by this card but also the other records of the hotel which I checked.

Q. Does that other record refer to the transcript sheet?

A. Yes, sir. And also evidence by our serial number on the card. It just so happened that the day that this party registered in the hotel we had a convention in the house and we were quite busy. It is possible that the clerk in his haste used the June 16th stamp instead of June 17th. You can understand that.

Q. In other words, they had entered the hotel——

A. June 17th.

Q. 1942?

A. That is correct.

Mr. HURLEY. Will you mark this for identification?

(The document produced by counsel was marked for identification, "Government's Exhibit 46.")

Q. Showing you Government's Exhibit 45, was that a part of the records of the Seminole Hotel?

266 A. Yes.

Q. That had to do with the same person, Edward D. Kelly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He registered on the 17th, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And Government's Exhibit 45 covers what?

A. That is the transient ledger card. That is the transient ledger card on which the account of the guest is kept.

Q. That date is what?

A. 17th.

Q. 17th and 18th?

A. Checked out on the 19th.

Q. Showing that he entered there on the 17th, is that correct?

A. That is correct; yes, sir.

Q. Showing you Government's Exhibit 46 for identification, is that a part of the records of the Seminole Hotel?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And what is that known as, Mr. Andrews?

A. That is known as the transcript.

Q. Were all of these records kept under your supervision?

A. Yes, sir; they were.

267 Q. And control?

A. Yes.

Q. Made in the usual and ordinary course of business, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are true and correct, except that on Government's Exhibit 44 for identification you say the date was June 17, 1942, is that correct?

A. Yes; that is correct, sir.

Q. How many persons occupied room 402, can you tell?

A. Yes. I will show you how you can tell that two people occupied room 402. Before the OPA we did not in the records, did not require people to register and the figure on the account card shows two people. That figure right there.

Q. You are referring to Government's Exhibit 45?

A. That is correct. That shows two people occupied the room.

Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination, if your Honor, please.

(No cross-examination. Witness excused.)

Q. Calling your attention to the 7th day of December 1941, Pearl Harbor Day, did you have a conversation with either Mr. or Mrs. Haupt, or with Mrs. Haupt when Mr. Haupt was 286 there in the house, that evening?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to the question, your Honor. It is a double form of question.

The COURT. Well, she may answer yes or no.

Mr. BERTRAM. It might call for one answer that might be incompetent, he called first for an answer——

Mr. FINN. Pardon me, I will reframe the question, counsel.

A. Not yet. I did not talk to them.
Q. Just tell us what was said, who talked and what was said there? This was had in the presence of Mr. Haupt?
A. Yes.
Q. Just tell us what was said.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that. That is leading.

294 The COURT. Read the question.

A. Only a couple of minutes.
Q. And then what did they do?
A. They drove away in Mr. Haupt's car.

A. That is correct.
Q. Now, later on during that week did you see Herbert Haupt around the house there?
A. Only a couple of times.
Q. When was the next time? You have described seeing him on Monday morning and Monday evening. When was the next time after that that you recall seeing him?
A. I saw him go away once with a taxi.
Q. When was that, as you recall?
A. I cannot prove that, whether it was Tuesday or Wednesday.

295 The COURT. Went away with what?

A. With taxi, went away.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Was it either Tuesday or Wednesday?

A. Yes.

Q. About what time of day was it, Mrs. Kluczyk, as best you remember?

A. I could not tell that, either.

Q. Was it early morning, noon, nighttime or as you best recollect?

A. I do not know.

Q. Was he alone at that time or was someone with him?

A. He was alone.

Q. Where did the taxi come from?

A. I think from the north side of the street because it went south.

Q. What did you see Herbert Haupt do?

A. Just go in the taxi and then drive away.

Q. After that did you see him on any other occasion during that week?

A. Yes. It was on Wednesday noon.

The COURT. What?

The WITNESS. Wednesday noon, around eleven or twelve.

296 Q. Where were you at that time?

A. In our apartment.

Q. Were you in the kitchen, the front room or the dining room?

A. In the front room.

A. With his mother, Mrs. Haupt.

Q. Just tell us what you saw him do?

A. They were walking south.

Q. What is that?

A. Walking south on Fremont Street towards Webster Avenue.

Mr. WOLL. South on what?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Let the reporter read the answer.

(Answer read.)

By Mr. FINN:

Q. When you say them, who do you mean?

A. Mrs. Haupt and Herbert.

Q. You believe it was about twelve o'clock on Wednesday is that right, or Wednesday noon?

A. Yes.

Q. How far from the front of your apartment building were they when you noticed them, or did you see them come out of the building?

297 A. No; I did not see them coming out.

Q. How far were they from the building when you first noticed them?

A. I think they were a house away then.

Q. A house away?

A. Yes.

Q. In which direction?

A. Going south on Fremont, I said.

Q. Do you mean south of your building?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the front of your building?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see them later on that week?

A. No.

Q. Do you recollect what type of cab that was you saw Herbert enter?

A. Cab?

Q. Cab, taxicab?

A. Yellow.

Q. Yellow?

A. Yes.

Q. Going back to the evening of December 7, 1941, when you related that this conversation took place about the cablegram that they were sending to the boys in Japan, do you recall anything further that was said about the possibility of receiving that cablegram?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that, any leading questions

298 of her.

Mr. FINN. May I lay a foundation for this first?

The COURT. Yes.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall anything else that was said on that occasion, December 7th, the evening of December 7th, 1941, about a cablegram?

A. Well, Mrs. Haupt, she was a little worried, maybe it would not reach him.

Q. What is that?

A. Mrs. Haupt was worried about the telegram, about the telegram.

Q. Did she say she was worried about the telegram?

A. Yes; she thought maybe he won't get it any more.

Q. Why?

A. Because the war started that day.

The Court. We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen, until two o'clock.

Do not discuss the case nor permit any one to discuss it with you, do not discuss it amongst yourselves.

Do not discuss this case, Madam, between now and two o'clock.

A. No.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to two o'clock P. M. of the same day Friday, May 26, 1944.)

299 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge, and a Jury

Friday, May 26, 1944, 2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northen District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard G. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America; Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * *

300 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would like the record to show at this time, by inquiring of the United States Attorney if he has any other purpose for this particular testimony given by this witness, if it is for the purpose of proving the overt act or for the purpose of proving the enemy status of Herbert Haupt.

Mr. FINN. No; it is for the purpose of showing the overt act.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Overt act; in that case, then I will ask that all testimony given by Mrs. Kluczyk, relating to June 22, 1942, when she saw Herbert standing on the sidewalk in front of the building where she lived, the testimony relating to Tuesday or Wednesday, June the 23rd or 24th, 1942, when she saw Herbert leave alone in a Yellow Taxicab in front of her building, and the testimony relating to Wednesday, June 24, 1942, when she saw Herbert Haupt and his mother walk south on Fremont Street, be stricken, because it is irrelevant to the issues; it is irrelevant and immaterial as far as Hans Haupt is concerned. It tends to confuse the jury, because the jury may think there were two 301 witnesses and also also because Hans Haupt was not present on any of these occasions. I will also ask that all testimony of Mrs. Kluczyk be stricken, which refers to her showing a cablegram, by Mrs. Haupt, of a cablegram to Mrs. Kluczyk, because it has been not shown that Hans Haupt was present, or that the cablegram was from Tokio.

Mr. FINN. We haven't introduced the cablegram.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Her testimony also should be stricken.

The COURT. Overruled. Bring in the jury.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a minute. Mr. Finn and Mr. Hurley, I will ask that Mr. Connelley be excluded from the courtroom. The witness, Mr. Connelley, knows what his presence and reason is here.

The COURT. I don't think Mr. Connelley will do any harm. Bring in the jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

302 BARBARA KLUCZYK, resumed the stand for further examination, after having been previously sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Mrs. Kluczyk, just before or shortly before Herbert Haupt left in June of 1941, or at about that time, did you have a conversation with Mr. Haupt relating to where Herbert Haupt was going, or where he wanted to go?

A. Well, they only told us he was going to Mexico.

Mr. BERTRAM. I move that the answer be stricken as not responsive.

The COURT. Motion denied.

Mr. FINN. After he had left, did you have any conversation with Hans Haupt, or shortly after he had left, on the subject where he was going, or where he would like to go?

Mr. BERTRAM. Object to that as leading.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. BERTRAM. At about the time when he left or before or after.

Mr. FINN. Did you have a conversation with Hans Haupt,
303 not with Mrs. Haupt, with Hans Haupt, or do you recall a conversation with Hans Haupt about where the boy wanted to go?

Mr. BERTRAM. Same objection, if the court please.

The COURT. The question is leading.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall a conversation with Hans Haupt on any subject about that time?

A. Well, he told us the boy was going to Germany.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mrs. Kluczyk, you stated that Hans Haupt and his wife, Erna Haupt, and their son, Herbert Haupt, moved into the apartment 2234 Fremont Street about May 1941, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know where they had lived before they came over there?

A. Well, they lived in Maywood at that time for a couple of weeks.

Q. Within a few weeks prior to that, they lived in Maywood?

A. Before they come to us.

Q. Before they moved over to your place?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know whether or not at any time they lived
304 on Western Avenue, 4444?

A. They were. I don't know which or where they lived now. I know they lived at that address at some time.

Q. Mrs. Kluczyk, but you do not know the time; is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And all these three boys were leaving in an automobile from the Haupt home, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. About June, the middle of June 1941?

A. Yes.

Q. And these three boys you knew, and Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew Wolfgang Wergin?

A. Yes.

Q. How well did you know Wolfgang?

A. I didn't know him very well. I only knew him through Haupt.

Q. Well, how far, or how often, rather, had you seen him?

A. Only a couple of times.

Q. Did you know his father and his mother?

A. No.

Q. The first boy you do not know at all?

A. No.

305 Q. When these three boys left, what time was it in the morning, if you remember?

A. It was before noon.

Q. Before noon?

A. I couldn't tell you the exact time.

Mr. FINN. Pardon me. Keep your voice up, please.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mrs. Kluczyk, did you at that time notice Mr. or Mrs. Haupt; were they out on the sidewalk saying good-bye to the boys, or something like that?

A. Only Mrs. Haupt.

Q. Only Mrs. Haupt?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you out on the sidewalk, too?

A. No; I was inside, in the hall.

Q. You were inside in the hall; could you hear or see what Mrs. Haupt said to these boys, if anything?

A. No.

Q. Did you notice her attitude, was she laughing or crying, or what?

A. She was crying.

Q. She was crying at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you. That is all.

Mr. FINN. That is all. Just a moment, please, Mrs. Kluczyk. Just sit up there again, please.

306 Your Honor, I would like to have leave to ask a direct question, and that is one that should have been done on direct examination, one I neglected to ask at that time.

The COURT. Very well.

Direct examination (resumed) by Mr. FINN:

Q. Mrs. Kluczyk, have you recalled all of the conversation that you remember between yourself and Hans Haupt at about the time when the boy left? Do you recall anything else that was said on that occasion?

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection, unless this is just a yes or no answer.

The WITNESS. I don't know what you mean.

Mr. FINN. Well, do you recall anything else that was said on that occasion at the conversation to which you testified just a moment ago between yourself and Hans Haupt about the boy?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What date, Mr. Finn, please?

Mr. FINN. Just at about the time he left.

Mr. BERTRAM. With Mrs. Haupt.

Mr. FINN. With Mr. Haupt.

Q. Do you recall anything else that was said by the witness?

A. I don't know.

The COURT. What?

307 The WITNESS. I don't know what Mr. Finn means.

The COURT. He doesn't know what you mean.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. You testified at the last trial of this case, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your memory——

Mr. BERTRAM. Just a moment, Mr. Finn. The witness said she didn't understand your question. She has not said she doesn't know the answer. If you put your question properly——

Mr. FINN. Do you recall anything else that was said by Hans Haupt on the occasion on which you spoke to him about where his boy was going, just before he left, when he told you he was going to Germany, or he wanted to go to Germany?

The COURT. Overruled.

A. No; he always told us he wanted to go to Mexico.

Mr. BERTRAM. I move that Mr. Finn's remark or statement in his question be stricken, because it is incorrect. The witness has just now told you so.

The COURT. Let it stand.

Mr. FINN. The question is this: Do you recall anything else that was said by Mr. Hans Haupt on the occasion of your conversation that you had with him which you related before, 308 when he said that his boy wanted to go back to Germany.

Mr. BERTRAM. I will object to the leading part of the question, the last few words.

The COURT. Overruled. Why do you object? Isn't that the testimony?

Mr. BERTRAM. No; the question should be put, I think: Does she recall any other conversation, at that time and place.

The COURT. Yes. But he has to fix the time and place for the testimony, or we won't be through here all afternoon.

Mr. FINN. Read the last question.

(Last preceding question read by the reporter.)

Mr. WAENHOLTZ. Objected to as an incorrect statement. This witness never stated that Hans Haupt said his boy wanted to go back to Germany.

Mr. FINN. That is what I understood the testimony to be.

The COURT. That is what I understood the testimony to be.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall anything else that was said on that occasion by Mr. Haupt?

A. Mr. Finn, we only know——

Q. The question is: Do you recall anything else that was said at that time on that occasion?

309 A. I don't remember, Mr. Finn.

Q. You testified at the last trial?

A. Maybe I did, but I don't remember, Mr. Finn.

Q. No; I mean you did testify as a witness at the last trial, did you not?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Do you recall this question, these questions and answers.

Mr. BERTRAM. May I have the page first?

Mr. FINN. Page 386.

"Question: Have you related, have you told all of the conversations with either of the Haupts, either Hans or Erna, on the subject of the boys being back to Germany, that you can remember at this time; have you told us everything about such a conversation?

"Answer: Well, I think so.

"Question: For the purpose of refreshing your memory, did Hans Haupt at any time tell you that his son liked Germany better than the United States and wanted to go back and fight for the Germans?

"Answer: I think he said that.

"Question: When did he say that, if you remember?

310 "Answer: Well, I think he had gone already; Herbert had gone, after Herbert had left."

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recollect those questions being asked you and those answers made at the last trial?

A. Yes; I remember.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to that conversation?

A. Well, I don't remember.

Q. What is it?

A. I don't remember, but I know I testified to that.

Q. Was that correct at the time?

A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mrs. Kluczyk, just a moment, kindly.

Re-cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. On or about the time when Herbert Haupt left about the middle of June 1941, he left Chicago, did Mr. Haupt, Hans Haupt, tell you his boy was going to Germany?

A. No; they only told us he was going to Mexico.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. FINN. Just a moment.

Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. What did he tell you where he wanted to go?

311 Mr. BERTRAM. Wait a minute. That has been gone over by Mr. Finn several times.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. When, where, who was present?

Mr. FINN. She said they only said they wanted to go to Germany.

Mr. BERTRAM. Still this question is improper.
The COURT. She may answer.
Mr. FINN. Read the question.
(Last preceding question read by the reporter.)
The WITNESS. Well, Mr. Haupt told us he wanted to go to Mexico, that is all we understood, but he told us later on when he told us the boy wanted to go to Germany.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. When was it he told you the boy wanted to go to Germany, as best you recall?
A. He was gone quite a while already.
Mr. BERTRAM. Objection.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. How long, approximately?
A. I couldn't say that.
Q. Well, was it one month or two months, your best judgment, Mr. Kluczyk?
A. I couldn't say when it was.
Mr. FINN. That is all.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment, please. Thank you. That is all.
312 Mr. FINN. That is all, Mr. Kluczyk.

STANLEY KLUCZYK, called as a witness by the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?
A. Stanley Kluczyk.
Q. That is nice and loud so that we can all hear you.
A. That is right.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Kluczyk?
A. 2234 Fremont Street.
Q. How long have you lived at that address?
A. Since 1941.
Q. You are the owner of that building, I take it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you describe the building to the Jury as to how many apartments there are, and how those apartments are located?
A. Six apartments in that building; there are three flats in the front and three flats in the rear.
Q. As the building was constituted in 1942, in June, was 313 there any way of getting through the building from the front to the rear without going outside and around?

A. It was partitioned off, the stairs were partitioned off, and you could only go one way up and one way down, on each, in the rear and in the front.

Q. In other words, if a person wanted to go to the third apartment, to the one above, to get out of the building, he would have to go out the front entrance, is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. Now, who lived in June 1942, who lived in the apartment immediately above you?

A. Mr. Probst.

Q. And his wife?

A. And his wife.

Q. And who lived in the apartment above the Probsts?

A. The family of Hans Haupt.

Q. Is that Hans Haupt?

A. Hans, Erna, and Herbert Haupt.

Q. How long had you known the Haupts before June 1942?

A. Twelve years.

Q. I take it, from what Mrs. Kluczyk said, that for some period of years you had known them, then your acquaintanceship dropped off, then they moved into your building, is that correct; to shorten it up?

A. Yes, sir.

314 Q. When did they move into your building?

A. In 1941.

Q. And in what month?

A. In May.

Q. Who moved in with them?

A. Mr. Haupt with the Haupt family?

Q. Yes.

A. Herbert Haupt.

Q. How long did Herbert Haupt remain with the Haupts before he left for Mexico?

A. Herbert remained until the middle of June.

Q. And were you present at the time he left?

A. I was present.

Q. Do you recall who went with him at that time?

A. Two boys went with Herbert Haupt.

Q. Do you know who those boys were?

A. I know one boy, which was Wolfgang Wergin.

Q. There was another boy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did they leave?

A. How?

Q. How did they leave?

A. They left in the car; by car.

Q. Sometime after that did you see a telegram which they had received from Herbert?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Showing you Government's Exhibit 51 for identification, can you tell us whether that is or is not the 315 telegram in question?

A. Yes, it is.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment, kindly. I move that that question be stricken as asked by Mr. Finn, a telegram which they received. I think it should be definitely shown who receives a telegram. There is a Mr. and Mrs., which constitutes them, and it might be confusing.

Mr. FINN. I think the telegram record in the office of the Telegraph Company shows it was directed to Haupt at that address, and it was delivered to that address to H. Haupt.

The COURT. When he saw the telegram.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recollect when it was you saw this telegram, Mr. Kluczyk?

A. I can't tell you exactly the dates; I don't remember very well when.

Q. Do you know who was present when you saw it there?

A. I think my wife was present.

Q. Well, who else?

A. Nobody else; and Mrs. Haupt.

Q. And Mrs. Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the way, could anyone coming from over the front of the building, get into any of the back apartments except by going around to the rear entrance?

A. Repeat that, please.

316 Q. Could anyone coming from the street or from the sidewalk in the front of this building get into any of the rear apartments except by going around to the rear entrance?

A. No.

Q. Now, calling your attention to the 22nd day of June 1942, in the evening, were you home?

A. I was home.

Q. Who was present in your home at that time?

A. My wife and Fred Wittrock.

Q. About what time was this?

A. Between six and seven.

Q. Where were you sitting?

A. I was sitting on a couch.

Q. In what room?

A. Front room.

Q. Will you describe to us just what happened on that occasion?

A. Mr. Haupt and Mrs. Haupt and Herbert Haupt came in to me and said, "Hello."

Q. Where did they come from and what was the first you knew they were there; was your door open or closed at that time before you saw them?

A. We had to open the door first.

Q. Well, was there a knock or a ring, or how did you know they were there?

317 A. I don't know. I didn't let them in. I think my wife did. I don't know.

Q. Where were they when you first saw them?

A. In the front room.

Q. And were they together, Hans and Erna and Herbert?

A. Together, standing.

Q. Will you tell us first what conversation took place there when Hans Haupt was present?

A. I said, "Hello." Then I asked Herbert Haupt where he was. He said to me, he went to Mexico and South America, and all over.

Q. What else took place, what else was said?

A. And then Mrs. Haupt said, "We don't have very much time; we want to see a friend." And it was a matter of minutes and they left.

Q. And I take it there was no further conversation there on that occasion?

A. No.

Q. Did you see where they went?

A. I saw them leaving by their own car.

Q. Now, in order to get out of your apartment to the car, is there a front entrance there?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, where was the car parked?

A. In front of the house.

318 Q. You say that was an old car?

A. No; I think it was a Plymouth car. It was a newer car then.

Q. Now, did you later on, on any other occasion, during that week, see Herbert Haupt?

A. I saw Herbert Haupt leaving by taxicab once or twice.

Q. Do you recall when it was?

Mr. BERTRAM. We want to object on the same ground as we objected before, if your Honor please.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall when it was that you saw Herbert Haupt leaving by taxicab?

A. I don't know exactly. I don't know whether it was Wednesday, Tuesday, or Thursday. I don't know.

Q. Do you recall what kind of a cab it was?

A. What kind?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. I take it, you knew Herbert Haupt before he left this country, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit No. 3 for identification, and ask you if you can tell us who that is?

A. That is Herbert Haupt.

319 Q. Will you point out Hans Haupt in the courtroom?

A. Over there [indicating].

Mr. FINN. Let the record show the witness has indicated the defendant by pointing him out.

Q. Your home at 2234 Fremont Street is in the city of Chicago, is it not?

A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. That is all. You may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Kluczyk, how old was Herbert Haupt when you first met him?

A. When I first met him?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, he was in the schooldays then.

Q. How old was he about when he left Chicago in 1941?

A. When he left Chicago?

Q. Yes.

A. Between twenty and twenty-two, that is all, I think. I don't know.

Q. Do you know if these three boys left in Herbert Haupt's car, or in whose automobile?

A. No; they left not in Haupt's car.

Q. Do you know whether or not Herbert Haupt owned a car at that time?

A. Herbert Haupt didn't own a car, I guess.

Q. At the time he left?

320 A. Whether he owned that car in which he left?

Mr. FINN. I think he answered the question, your Honor.

The COURT. I don't think their minds are meeting.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. At the time he left, did he then own a car, an automobile?
A. Yes, he still owned a car, as far as I know.
Q. I should ask whether he did or did not, state, if you know.
A. I don't know on paper, but he owned a car then.
Q. Do you know what type it was?
A. A Plymouth.
Q. A Plymouth car?
A. Yes.
Q. But that was not the car in which these three boys left, was it?
A. No.
Q. This particular telegram or cablegram which Mrs. Haupt showed you and Mrs. Kluczyk came from Tokio?
A. Right.
Q. And when she showed it to you was Hans Haupt present?
A. I can't remember. As far as I know, only Mrs. Haupt told me, she showed me this telegram.

321 Q. Do you have a better recollection as to that when you testified in this case about one year and a half or two years ago?

A. Say that again, please.
Q. Did you perhaps remember a little better when you testified about two years ago in this case; did you have a better recollection then?
A. Well, I don't know exactly.
Q. At that time Mr. Finn asked you a question, at the time when Mrs. Haupt showed you this telegram, cablegram, was Hans Haupt present also, and your answer was "No." Was that answer true at the time you made it, when you stated that here about two years ago?
A. I don't know.
Q. You don't know if it was true?
A. Because I am getting all mixed up. Mrs. Haupt always came to my apartment and talked to me.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, I don't quite see the purport of this cross-examination, in view of Mr. Warnholtz's statement, his opening statement, to the effect they did receive such a telegram.

The COURT. Well, I don't think I will limit it.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. At the time when you saw Herbert Haupt leave in a taxicab in front of or near your particular building, was Hans Haupt there, did you see him at the same time?

322 A. On Monday he left?

Q. No; at the time when Herbert Haupt left in a taxicab, Herbert Haupt had left, was his father there, too?

A. No; he left alone.
Q. And his father was nowhere around, was he?
A. No.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.
Mr. FINN. That is all, Mr. Kluczyk.

Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. By the way, do you recall of having had a conversation with Hans Haupt about this cablegram?
Mr. BERTRAM. That is not redirect examination; proper redirect examination.
Mr. FINN. Oh, I think it is in view of the cross-examination.
The COURT. Well, I will let him answer. If it isn't proper redirect examination, it may be now considered as part of the direct examination.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall ever having had a conversation with Hans Haupt about this cablegram at any time?
A. I am not sure, but I think we had.
Mr. FINN. All right. I think that is all.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Q. Now, getting back to this conversation at the Northwest Hall in August after they had left, will you tell us what was said by Hans Haupt on that occasion?

A. Well, we came to talk——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a minute. What was the date?

Mr. FINN. August 1941. I suggest that counsel make his objection to the court, so that the court may rule on them.

Mr. BERTRAM. I just ask for the number, please.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. All right.

Mr. BERTRAM. Withdraw the objection.

By Mr. FINN:

By Mr. FINN:

Q. What was said further with relation to what else was said in this conversation?

A. That he received a telegram.

A. Yes; outside.

Q. When did you see him on the next occasion?

335 A. Well, he came downstairs with his mother and I was sitting in the dining room drinking coffee.

Mr. BERTRAM. Just a moment. The witness in the apartment of the Kluczyk's?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BERTRAM. I will object to what the witness thinks he saw or surmises before he saw anyone come out of the building into his apartment, where he was sitting.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Well, how do you know who came through—came downstairs with his mother; how do you know that?

A. Well, we could hear it.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object.

The COURT. Overruled.

The WITNESS. Every footstep that was made on the stairs, the stairway, it went right through the board. We could hear as they came downstairs, the stairway, and you could look through the dining room into the front room portion and see who came in and who went out.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Did you hear anything first before you saw them; did you hear anything?

A. We heard someone coming down. We didn't know who it was, of course.

336 Q. Then what did you see?

A. I saw Herbert Haupt and his mother outside on the sidewalk.

Q. What did you see them do?

A. They walked down to Webster Avenue, going down to Webster on Fremont Street.

Q. What street did they walk on?

A. On Fremont Street. They walked and walked to Webster.

Q. Do you recall what day that was?

A. Well, I couldn't exactly say the date.

Q. No, I didn't say the date; do you recall you testified first you saw him Monday evening?

A. I did.

Q. When was it afterward you saw him first?

A. On Wednesday, I believe it was.

Q. At about what time?

A. That was around eleven or twelve o'clock noon, something like that.

Q. Now, did you at any time after that see Herbert Haupt around those premises?

A. No; I did not see him again after that.

Mr. FINN. I think that is all with this witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Wittrock, when you refer to the Schubert's
337 Liedertafel, you mean the Schubert's Singing Society, that is what that stands for, doesn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. How long were you connected with the Optical—the Simpson Optical Company?

A. Oh, about a year or so. I don't know exactly the dates.

Q. No; about from when to when, about?

Q. Now, did you have any previous experience in the matter of grinding lenses, or anything that had to do with manufacturing optical instruments?

A. I did not; no.

Q. While the particular type——

Mr. FINN. I will object to this cross-examination. I don't see how it is material.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ: Oh, yes, yes; you will find out.

The COURT. I don't see it. Overruled.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. The particular type of work you did there, in what department did you do that?

A. In the blocking department.

Q. Were Herbert Haupt and Wolfgang working with you in the same department?

A. They were not; no.

338 Q. What were they doing?

A. They were entirely in different departments.

Q. Do you know in which department?

A. They were in the polishing department and the grinding for particularly lenses, what you call them, you know, more particular lenses. They were working for a length of time in that department.

Q. They were there before you?

A. They were.

Q. They joined this Simpson Optical Company?

A. They were.

Q. Do you know how long they had worked there already?

A. That I don't know.

Q. Did you ever hear anybody say that Herbert Haupt induced the Simpson Optical Company to engage in the manufacture of the Norden Bomb sight?

Mr. FINN. I object to that.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. FINN. I will withdraw my objection.

The COURT. Let him answer.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. What connection did Herbert Haupt have with the Norden Bomb sight?

A. I really couldn't tell you, I don't know.

Q. Did you ever see the Norden Bomb sight while you were there?

339 A. Me; I never saw it; no.

Q. Do you know if Herbert Haupt had any connection with it at all?

A. I couldn't say, I don't know.

Q. You don't know?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Wittrock, on that day when you saw Herbert Haupt together with his mother outside, where did you first see him, outside, or just where?

A. On the sidewalk.

Q. You didn't see him walk down the steps to the sidewalk, did you?

A. No; I did not.

Q. You merely saw him on the sidewalk?

A. On the sidewalk; yes, sir.

Q. You would not say whose footsteps you heard?

Mr. FINN. I object to that.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Come out of the building.

Mr. FINN. I object to that, merely as a conclusion anyway, your Honor.

The COURT. Let him answer.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. When you testified about two years ago you didn't testify about hearing any footsteps, did you?

A. I do not remember. I couldn't say.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

340 Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you remember whether you were asked about any footsteps at that time?

A. What?

Q. Do you remember whether you were asked about any footsteps at that time?

A. I was not asked about any footsteps.

Recross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Do you remember you were asked today about footsteps, did you offer the information, do you remember that now?

A. That I offered that information myself?

Q. That is right. And you were not asked today either. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

ANDREAS CONRAD GRUNAU, called as a witness by the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HURLEY:

A. Andreas Conrad Grunau.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Grunau?

A. 6361 Leoti.

341 Q. What is your business or occupation?

Q. And how long have you been connected with that company?

A. Fourteen years.

Q. And where are they located?

A. 3200 Carroll Avenue.

A. We manufacture lenses for instruments.

Q. What kind of lenses?

Q. And how long has it been so engaged?

A. Since 1939.

Q. And since 1939 and the years following, what percentage of that production is for the Army and Navy?

A. Well, at that time, I couldn't exactly remember 342 any more. Today we manufacture one hundred percent.

Q. One hundred percent?

A. Today, yes.

Q. Now, did you know a person by the name of Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3, and ask you if know who that is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is it?

A. That is Herbert Haupt.

Q. Going back for a moment as to the things produced by your company, do they now sell what is known as a Norden Bomb sight, the Simpson Optical Company; does that company make parts for the bomb sight?

A. Yes, we make parts for it.

Q. And how long have you made such parts?

A. Since 1936.

Q. Continuously from 1936?

A. No; we just started to work on that production; started in 1939.

Q. The production started in 1939, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. HURLEY. You have to keep your voice up, because the folks here don't hear you.

The WITNESS. All right.

343 Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Now, when did you first see Herbert Haupt?

A. I met him, the boy, I think, I don't remember exactly.

Q. About when was it?

A. I think in 1937.

Q. 1937?

A. Yes, when I——

Q. That is all right. You met him in 1937?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, did you know his father Hans Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see him here in the courtroom?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point him out?

A. Right over there.

Q. Indicating the defendant Hans Haupt. And when did you first become acquainted with Hans Haupt?

A. It was the same year.

Q. 1937?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did Herbert Haupt ever work at the Simpson Optical Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did he begin to work for that company?

A. It was in the year 1939.

Q. About what time in the year, do you recall?

344 A. I think it was in the early spring.

Q. And how long did he work for the Simpson Optical Company?

A. About two years.

Q. And he terminated his employment, did he, in 1941?

A. Well, we had a training course in there, in our factory, which we started about in 1933, on the optical trade, which was quite new, and there wasn't any skilled labor, and we started in 1933 a training course in our factory to train skilled labor for the optical trade, and he was in that training department.

Q. He worked about two years, starting in 1939, to the spring of 1941; is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you see Herbert Haupt on the evening of June 22; Monday evening, June 22, 1942?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you see him at that time?

A. Well, I came home that night about 8 o'clock, and when I entered my home I saw Herbert Haupt, Mr. Haupt and Mrs. Haupt and my daughter and my wife.

Q. Herbert Haupt and Hans Haupt and Mrs. Erna Haupt, and your daughter and your wife?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were they in your house?

345. A. They were in the living room.

Q. And about what time did you get home that evening, if you know?

A. Shortly before 8 o'clock in the evening.

Q. And after you came in your home that evening and found those folks there, what, if anything, did you say, or what, if anything was said to you by any of them as you entered?

A. When I came in, I said, "Hello" to everybody, and I asked the boy——

Q. By the boy, whom do you mean?

A. Herbert Haupt. Asked him where he came from, because I knew he was out. He left at that time our company and he told me that he went to Mexico, and that he was back now. I said, "What have you been doing over there in Mexico," and he said, "He had a mule and he was hunting gold in the mountains, digging gold."

Q. Did he say anything else about where he had been, if you recall?

A. I asked him at that time, then, I asked him, or I told him that the police came to our factory and asked for him, because he hadn't been drafted—he was of draft age, and he didn't report to the Draft Board. Then he took a little wallet out of his 346 pocket and showed me the draft card and on the other side it said, "Wallet," and I further looked and I saw the draft card and he had reported by the FBI.

Q. Who said he had reported?

A. Herbert.

Q. He told you he had reported?

A. Yes, sir.

347 The WITNESS. Then after a while, a short time later he asked me for a job.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Who was there when he asked you for the job?

A. Myself, Mr. Haupt, Mrs. Haupt, my daughter—I think my daughter was there, I don't remember anymore.

Q. Do you remember whether she was there in the room?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What was said about a job?

A. He said he would like to get the job back.

Q. He would like to get a job back, with whom?

A. Simpson Optical Company.

Q. All right.

A. I told him it might be possible, only he should come down on a Thursday and fill out an application so as he left the company he would have to fill out an application. His application had to be checked first then he would get this job. So I ordered him down—told him to come down Thursday morning to the factory.

Q. Did he say anything else about the employment?

A. No, he did not. He asked me later on if he could get a 348 deferment when he worked in our company. I told him it is not my job that will be done from the front office.

Q. A deferment from what was he asking?

A. Not to be drafted in the army.

Q. You told him that that would have to go through the front office?

A. That is right.

Q. You had nothing to do with it?

A. Yes.

Q. After you first met the defendant, Hans Haupt, did you see him on occasions after that?

A. Yes, I did. I belonged to a German Singing Society, and whenever they had a concert I used to be in there, on the concert.

Q. And where would they meet?

A. The singing society met in the Northwestern Hall there, but the concert was in the Germania Clubhouse.

Q. How often would you say those——

A. They had a concert once a year.

Q. Did you ever see Herbert Haupt at any of the meetings?

A. No.

Q. Of any of those societies?

A. No, sir; I never seen him.

349 Q. Did he ever tell you of any societies that he belonged to?

A. No; he did not.
Q. Do you know of any German organizations he belonged to?
A. I heard rumors.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to.
Mr. HURLEY. No rumors. Do you know?
A. No; I do not know.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Grunau, about how long did this take, or about how long does it take to go through this training course that you had at your plant?
A. About four years.
Q. About four years?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The person that takes that training course, what does he do there during those four years? Does he just study or does he also work and get paid for it?
A. They work partly there, they get training for any ap-350 plication which we have, any job which is necessary; a skilled labor after while.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were talking with each other, were they?
A. Well, when I came in it was quiet. I said hello. They were not talking when I came in.
Q. Now, then you related or talked about certain conversations you had with Herbert. Were all of those in the same room downstairs in the living room?
A. No, I—not all. I have a study on my second floor. I have a residence. I looked for something to smoke, and I used to have some on the first floor. I looked in my containers. There was none in there. So I went to the second floor to get some smoking and when I went on the second floor he came after me.
Q. This matter of deferment that Herbert spoke to you about and the matter of applying for a job, was that downstairs or upstairs?
A. Applying for the job was on the first floor.
351 Q. And the matter of deferment was it upstairs?
A. When I went down the steps again, when I came down the steps, going down to the first floor, he asked me, going down the steps on deferment.

Q. At that time Hans Haupt was not so present that he could hear that, was he?

A. No.

Q. When you talked about this matter of Herbert getting a job back again, what was Hans doing? Was he talking with his wife or somebody else at the time, or was he listening closely, or do you not know?

A. He did not say anything.

Q. He did not say anything?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did you particularly observe whether someone else talked to him perhaps during that time?

A. I do not remember that. I cannot tell you that, I do not know.

Q. You would not know?

A. No.

Q. So there were six people in the room at that time?

A. That is right.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all, thank you.

352 Mr. HURLEY. That is all.

Q. Were you inside the house or outside the house on that occasion?
A. Outside.
Q. Do you recollect how they arrived at your house?
A. In a car.
Q. Do you know who was driving?
A. Mr. Haupt.
Q. Can I presume you greeted them out there, did you?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this in the living room of the house?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Tell us what if any conversation there was at that time?
A. Well, the only thing, I was sort of interested in, how she found out about her son. I mean I asked how he got here and he said he got here in a roundabout sort of way, a roundabout sort of way; then I asked her how did she find out how he was here.

Q. You asked her. Do you mean Erna Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Hans Haupt present during the conversation?

A. Yes; he was.

Q. Yes.

A. I asked—whether she just told me, I do not remember exactly, but she did say that her sister-in-law had called her.

Q. Just go slowly.

A. Her sister-in-law had called her; told her she had a surprise for her, to come right over; when she got there the sister-in-law greeted her, she had a surprise for her, not to get a shock,
365 but her boy was back and he was here; and I guess it must have been in the bedroom, they had him in there and she went in and she saw him then, and that was all she told us.

Q. Did she say who the sister-in-law was?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know who the sister-in-law was?

A. I think I know now from the papers.

Q. I see. All right. Now, did Mrs. Haupt say anything further after she described how she had seen her boy in the bedroom?

Q. Was your father there at that time?

A. No, sir; he was not.

Q. Did he subsequently come in?

A. Well, probably around 7:30 or twenty minutes to eight, or something like that.

A. Well, he had come in and said "Hello, where in the world have you come from?"

Q. Who was he talking to?

Q. What else did he say, if anything?

A. Well, then after awhile I guess I was not there when he was asked about the job or anything.

Q. All right.

A. But I do——

Q. Do not testify to anything you did not hear yourself.

A. Later on he did show us his draft board card and he said that he had reported to the FBI.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who said that?
A. Herbert Haupt said that he had reported to the draft board and to the FBI.
Q. Was Hans Haupt there at that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. FINN. I think that is all with this witness.

367 Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mrs. McGowan, when Herbert told your father that he had reported to the FBI was that in reply to your father's statement to him that the police called at the factory? Did you hear a conversation that they had been around?
A. Yes; my dad did mention that, that they had come to the factory, inquired about him, didn't he know, because it was the draft board and the FBI were looking for him and he said yes, he had reported to the draft board in answer to my dad.
Q. In the course of that conversation?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When Mrs. Haupt said she did not care how Herbert had come home, what conversation preceded that statement, do you remember?
A. Well, I guess after she got through telling about how she had seen her son for the first time, why, I guess—whether my mother asked or not how he got there—if she did not know how he got here, I guess she must have asked something. I do not remember exactly.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you. That is all, Mrs. McGowan.

378 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois Eastern Division, at Chicago

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge, and a Jury

Monday, May 29, 1944, 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard C. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America; Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertham, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * *

379 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the court, there are a few points which I believe if they are taken up before the Jury comes in, possibly in your Honor's chambers, they will help to expedite the hearing considerably.

The COURT. Step into my chambers, gentlemen.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court's chambers outside the hearing and presence of the Jury:)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the court: I do know from the first trial of this case that we are about to have offered the so-called background evidence.

Mr. FINN. We won't get to that today.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It is possible, but it will fit in with the rest of it. Now, this background evidence so-called relates to statements made by the defendants, or this defendant. Some of these statements were made as far as five or six years ago, and it is our contention that this testimony, or this type of testimony, should not be held admissible for the purpose of proving an intent. It is for that purpose the Government has introduced it heretofore and we presume will introduce it at this time.

380 Now, the reason for our contention that it should not be admissible and as support for that reason I may state from the Circuit Court of Appeals decision in this particular case, and that decision states:

"We refer to another line of statements admitted against individual defendants, but it must have been damaging to all those labeled in the Government's brief, which was the background of contention. This testimony was admitted, so it is asserted for the purpose of showing treasonable intent or the state of the defendant's mind. It covered an extremely wide field. In fact, as to some of the defendants, the testimony seemed as though they were on trial for the sins of a lifetime. We think much of it had no relevancy to the crime of treason. We are not, however, considering or deciding that relevancy, but its effect on defendants other than those against whom it was admitted."

I further would like to call your attention to another paragraph in the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in this case where the court stated:

"The inherent nature of the crime of treason, particularly 381 when a person charged therewith is tried during time of a national crisis is such as to greatly increase the obstacles to a fair determination of the issue presented. Such difficulties impose upon courts an increased responsibility commensurate with the increased difficulties."

I may further state that logically it does not seem to be consistent to introduce a statement made by the defendant, which was made before the United States was in war, because treason can only be committed during war time. None of these statements as made constitute a crime at the time they were made, and they were made at such a time that today even as crimes they would be barred by the statute of limitations. Somewhat in the line of argument, and I may state ordinarily when a man is on trial for the commission of a crime, it is not permissible to bring in his past record as to another crime which he has committed.

I also refer to the decisions on treason and there is not a single decision on treason—I am not now talking about sedition, but I am talking about treason—there is not a single decision on treason which states that, and where evidence is so remote, that it may be introduced for the purpose of showing the intent. It is true in the Aaron Burr case somewhere it was held that remote 382 actions may be shown for the purpose of showing the intent, but these remote acts refer to the levying of war and we know in levying war in those days, more than a hundred years ago, the levying of war or the preparation for it, consumed a great deal of time, on account of the great deal of time it took, one year or two years, which it took for a man perhaps to travel from place to place, where it takes hours today, and in those days it took months, and in referring to the acts committed a year prior thereto, the ultimate overt act, was admissible on the theory that it formed a part of the ultimate act, and in that way the Aaron Burr case admits those remote acts.

There is one more case where evidence was held admissible to show something that happened in the community as far as nine months prior to the same overt act. I know of no others. Then in sedition, of course, it is different in sedition. I am not talking about the United States Supreme Court now, but the courts have held and allowed the Government to go further back than a year or so in sedition cases.

That is one of the points I wanted to bring up. Then we will be confronted with another proposition, and that is the 383 testimony which the Government stated it would introduce for the purpose of showing that this certain money was hidden under the rug; that is the same money that is covered by the motion to suppress, and which was sustained.

Mr. WOLL. I don't know that it is the same money. I haven't the slightest idea.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, money covered under a rug in the home of Haupt. Now, the Government states it will prove this by statements made by the defendant, and by witnesses who are not Government agents. It is possible that the Government may bring as such witnesses the two men who are now in the State Penitentiary, Statesville Penitentiary, and if that testimony should be admitted, I will state it will be very damaging. I do not believe it will be giving the defendant a fair trial in that respect and it is utterly impossible for us to rebut that testimony due to the condition of the defendant. I do believe at least it is somewhat inconsistent with the order which was entered with reference to that particular money or any money under a rug, hidden under a rug in the Haupt home. I have a further point to cover. I believe the evidence should not be admitted relating to some actions of Herbert 334 Haupt done while the defendant Haupt was not present. Now, if such evidence does establish in any way, or at any rate, the status of Herbert Haupt as an enemy, then it may be admitted under that theory, but if all these particular actions of Herbert Haupt, having no bearing on this enemy status, be merely ordinary actions such as committed by any human being in the ordinary course of life, then I believe that should be barred.

The COURT. Well, you are referring now to what?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, now, I will take, for instance, actions of Herbert Haupt's as shown on the first trial. At one time he is supposed to have slept in the home of Froehling, Hans Haupt's——

The COURT. Of whom?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Of Froehling; Mrs. Froehling is his sister; Mrs. Haupt is a sister of Mr. Froehling.

Mr. FINN. Mr. Froehling is a brother of Mrs. Haupt.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mr. Froehling is a brother of Mrs. Haupt, yes; that is right. That is one of the instances. Hans Haupt was not present at the time, and I do not believe incidents of such a type should be admitted in evidence, because the mere fact somebody slept somewhere of itself does not prove the enemy status.

385 Then of course, we still have this matter as to testimony concerning the overt acts charged in the indictment, where the Government knows that there is but one witness, and intends to introduce testimony by such single witness for the purpose of proving intent only.

Now, it is our contention that such testimony from such evidence would only be corroborative and it should not be admitted until the overt act has been proven by two witnesses. Then, as corroborative evidence, it may be admitted. It seems then ultimately—and I have one more point, and that is this: The Government having quite a few exhibits asked that it be given a table exclusively and the defense moved further back, which was all right so far, but it has brought us entirely out of contact with the Jury. The defendant is not able to confront the witness. It is difficult for defendant's counsel to hear the witnesses testify. That has been remedied to some extent by Mr. Bertram and myself simply moving over to the Government's table and with that limited space that we could find, get a little closer to the witnesses and understand them better. Now, I believe that most of the exhibits have been introduced. There may be a couple of cablegrams and a few belongings which were taken from Herbert's body, such as 386 Social Security card and the rings he wore, et cetera, and I believe those are all exhibits that are left. We have now at the present time, in front of the witness there, and in front of the Jury, the Government's table where there are three agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and three Government attorneys, and I do believe that it would be fair if it can be arranged so that the defendant would again take one side of the first table together with his counsel.

Mr. FINN. I can't hear you.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Together with its counsel, if the Government should take the few exhibits which are left, I have suggested that the Government can find a side of the present Government's table, or cause them to be left on an adjoining table where the three agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation can set them, and the exhibits can be there without inconvenience or interference.

Mr. WOLL. Talking on the last point first, your Honor, of course, I realize the arrangements were made by the court, and whatever your Honor wants to do about it is satisfactory to us, but I do like to have the record clear, however. You mean to say the defendant cannot be seen by the witnesses sitting in court?

387 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I mean to say that. I mean to say the witnesses cannot see the defendant unless he bends around the Judge's desk.

Mr. WOLL. Well, of course, this is the first time you made this objection, is it not?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is the first time to the court; yes.

Mr. WOLL. The court made arrangements to which you acceeded, and this is the first time you have complained.

Mr. BERTRAM. It is not deliberate, but it is the inconvenience we have been put to.

Mr. WOLL. I say, this is the first time you have objected to the court about this arrangement?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is correct.

Mr. BERTRAM. We have called Mr. Finn's attention to it.

Mr. WOLL. I think something can be done, if it is so difficult.

The COURT. Well, I don't like the implication in the statement.

Mr. WOLL. I want to have the record clear, if your Honor please, if there is an appeal.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You see, the witnesses can't see the defendant.

388 The COURT. Go in there and sit in that chair and see what you can see. Don't make a record you are not sure of. You go in there, both of you, counsel, and one of you sit in that chair at a time, and see what you can see.

(Thereupon counsel for the defendant leaves the court's chambers for the courtroom.)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes; the witness can see the defendant, yes; judging from where I was sitting, there is the proximity of the Judge's desk which obscures the view.

The COURT. Now, what is the fact?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The witness is able to see the defendant.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. He can see the defendant.

The COURT. He can see all places on both tables. You go and sit in that chair again, and see what you can see, and put it in the record. You go in there and see also, counsel. Go and sit in the chair and come in here and put in the record what you see.

(Thereupon counsel for the defendant again retired to the courtroom from the court's chambers.)

The COURT. Now what did you see?

389 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I do see. When counsel sits down in the chair which I occupied heretofore, I see him fairly well, but not entirely. Not the entire part of the face, but that is not so important.

The COURT. You don't see whose face?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Of the witness. If I go to my place, which I had heretofore, to look at the witness, part of his face was obscure by the corner of the desk.

Mr. BERTRAM. And we couldn't hear.

The COURT. Mr. District Attorney, you have the Federal Bureau of Identification——

Mr. WOLL. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT (continuing). Take some photographs from where that witness is or from where the witness would naturally be, that is an ordinary size man or woman sitting in that chair; have some photographs taken this afternoon, or some time during the day and put them in this record, what can be seen from that witness chair, so that there won't be any doubt of what can be seen.

Now, then, I have been in this courtroom since December of 1933, and this is the first time I have had complaints of this kind from a defendant. It has been the practice for the Government to take the table on the court's right and the defend-390 ant take the table on the court's left. I told you, you might pull that table to the left in toward the court's right. I haven't any objection to your so doing. I have observed you going over to the Government's table from time to time. I haven't any objections to your so doing. I haven't any objection to your making the seating arrangements as convenient as possible, but I do object to your putting into the record something that doesn't happen. I do not think that you have been prejudiced or your defendant has been prejudiced by the seating arrangement in the courtroom, and in order to make that appear, I want those photographs made.

Mr. BERTRAM. May I add, we had a great deal of difficulty in hearing, your Honor?

The COURT. Everybody has a great deal of difficulty hearing in the courtroom, because the structure or building is in a block, only six stories above the street, and there are three streetcar intersections—there are two streetcar intersections on two of the corner. There are streetcars on three sides of this building and this block, and everybody has difficulty in hearing in every courtroom in this building.

Mr. WOLL. I would suggest, and especially when the windows are open.

391 The COURT. And this is the end of May, and the windows are open. There is no air-conditioning in the building. Now, you folk are being unreasonable. I want you to do everything you can for your client, but don't put into the record something that is not warranted.

Mr. BERTRAM. We can hear if we were at the first table here, your Honor.

The COURT. You have been over at the other table most of the time. I don't think you are being fair. The duty to your client doesn't require you to be unfair to a court, and that is just exactly what you are doing by putting this statement in that you are making.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I wish to assure the court that is not the purpose to put something in the record, and this doesn't need to appear in the record at all. I would much rather have it that way. The purpose is to get somewhat of a better arrangement if we could get closer to the witness and have a better understanding, and have a little closer contact with the jury there.

The COURT. Now, you see, there are three different attorneys who are engaged in the trial of the case.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right.

392 The COURT. There is one Government agent who is apparently directing the case for the investigating agency, and there are two young men in charge of the exhibits.

Now, your idea of the psychology of a juror is entirely different from that of some people.

I observe that the greatly experienced trial lawyers and the greatly experienced jury trial lawyers come in alone. They have nobody with them at the table. The reason for that is, they do not want to arouse the antagonism of some juryman, so your idea of jury psychology is altogether different from that of the very greatly experienced jury trial lawyers.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, I am not an experienced jury trial lawyer at all.

Mr. WOLL. I don't think we are either.

The COURT. The greatly experienced jury trial lawyer sits at the table alone and there is nobody within thirty feet of him, and they communicate very little. They don't communicate in the presence of the jury. He is just alone there at the table, so your idea of the psychology of a jury, I am telling you, is different from that of a greatly experienced jury trial lawyer.

393 Mr. FINN. Does your Honor wish to discuss the other legal objection?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. HUDLEY. Take up the question of this boy sleeping there; that he was in the home of Froehling.

Mr. FINN. And this defendant was there later on the same day. The proof will show the boy came there early in the morning.

The COURT. Well, I don't see why that isn't admissible. The defendant is charged with having given aid and comfort. Now, what he did during this period in question, I think is relevant and material. Of course, the mere fact it wouldn't do any harm, is no reason why it should be admitted. I think the movements of Herbert Haupt during this period in question are relevant and material evidence, and if it happens he slept some place, and the evidence shows it, I can't see any error in that.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Then that motion is overruled, your Honor?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. FINN. With reference to the question of the prior statement or statements of the defendant, your Honor will remember the cases in the briefs, which started on page 131, going through 394 to page 145, and it has been held to be the law in all cases involving political opinion as Wigmore links it together, including sedition and treason.

In a number of cases in which sedition is charged, the rule has been linked together with that in treason cases. It is held proper to put in evidence of this character to show the intent or state of mind of the defendant in committing the overt acts. In other words, the law is that there is a presumption of the continuation of such state of mind, and in a number of cases, numerous cases, for instance, the Pelly case, which was decided in this circuit, it was held permissible to show the German Bent, as they call it, and in the Pelley case they went back ten years.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is sedition, not treason.

Mr. FINN. I appreciate that. It is a sedition case, but the principle is the same, certainly, in sedition and treason——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Now, just a minute.

Mr. FINN. Just a moment. I didn't interrupt you at all. In the case of William Dadley Pelley, the defendant was charged in a twelfth count of the indictment with a violation of the Federal Sedition Law. The charges arose out of the publication of certain periodicals alleged to have been circulated by Pelley.
395 And in the Vireck case, which was not a sedition case, but which was a violation of the foreign agents registration act, the court permitted in evidence the introduction of a book written by the defendant in 1930, which was nine years before the statute, under which the defendant was prosecuted, was passed by Congress.

Now, in a number of sedition cases, the exact point which has been raised by the defendant here was decided.

Wigmore cites a number of cases in which it has been held error in cases of this character, such as treason, sedition, et cetera, to refuse to permit the defendant, as well, to put in evidence of his good character, and his Americanism, et cetera. He says it is just as admissible for the defendant to put in evidence of being a good American citizen, for example, as it is for us to put in evidence that he made these utterances. Now, the utterances, which we intend to prove, are of this character, your Honor. We contend that they project themselves beyond any question of a declaration of war. For example, we will prove, in 1939, before the war, this man said he would never permit his boy to join the American Army, and if he were drafted, he would send 396 him over to Germany and have him become a member of the German Army, and if there was a declaration of war, that he, Hans Haupt, would crawl over the enemy line and give information to the enemy, and things of that character which projected themselves beyond the declaration of war, and they showed up directly what his intent was after the declaration of war, and when this boy came back. That is the type of thing which we will prove. I think, the first statements were made in 1937, and they continued on after that, and they got worse up until, exactly until this boy left. We have statements that will link up with each other, which were continual, and which will show what this man's state of mind was at that time, and I believe that under all of these decisions, it is admissible. For example, and I want to show you, for instance, in the case of United States versus Schultze, 253 Fed. 377, which went up twice on different points, the identical contention was made by the defendant, namely, that evidence of pro-German utterances before the last war started, were inadmissible to prove the crime of sedition during the last war. In that case the court said the evidence was admissible.

The court held the same character of evidence was admissible with reference to sedition as to treason and held such evidence admissible.

397 Now, here is another case. In Equi versus United States (C. C. A. 9) 261 Fed. 53, at 56, in which the court said there:

"Counsel earnestly insisted that this ruling was erroneous for the reason an illegal intent can never be inferred from a legal act, etc."

Rest of quotation read.

Now, we have collected in our brief a number of those various cases, of various types. Now, the intent in treason is the same as the intent in sedition.

The COURT. What is the earliest incident you expect to call the court's attention to?

Mr. FINN. The earliest, I think, is a conversation in 1937. There were two, I believe, in 1939, and a series of them along from 1940 up until March 1941 testified to by Mrs. Fishman, who employed these people up until just before Herbert Haupt left for Germany.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I briefly reply to this?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. FINN. The boy left June 16, 1941. I think the last utterance of this character will be around in March of 1941. They are of this type. "In case of a war if the United States goes to war with Germany, there will be a revolution in this country.

398 We have men placed in all the electrical companies and utility companies, that this country will be destroyed from within by fifth column activities just as Norway and France were." Statements of that character, that is the general trend of the conversation up until the time the boy left.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I should like to reply to this, Mr. Finn. At the outset, you said there is a long line of cases. I still contend there is not a single case, at least, not on the books, and if Mr. Finn has one, if he will kindly give it to us, that citation, so that we can check it accurately, but there is not a single case that upholds their contention.

Mr. Finn did read some decision a moment ago regarding disloyal utterances made before we got into war, and those made after war. Now, disloyal utterances made before war and an overt act committed after we get into war, certainly is not a continuation of the same act, as we do see that. Beginning with about the time when the war broke out, on the other side, I believe, is—it was one year or two years before we got into it, there were controversies in the country as to whether or not we could join the war. If somebody gave vent to his anger, by taking one 399 position, and another one takes another position as to remarks, and later on, if we get into war, and they say he committed treason, I do not believe that would terminate in a fair trial, because people will say things when they are angry without meaning it.

The COURT. Well, there are very few treason cases.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right.

The COURT. Prior acts may be shown on the question of intent; I do not believe we are confined to treason cases in order to determine logically, what may be shown on the question of intent, but it is my desire to stay strictly within the limitations laid down by the Circuit Court of Appeals. But we have this situation: I assume we have this situation, the defendant did certain things with respect to Herbert Haupt and is charged to have done those things with a criminal intent, with the intent to assist the enemy of the United States, and give him aid and comfort. Now anything within a reasonable time that will throw light upon the intent with which he did those things, I think should be submitted to the jury in order that they can judge for themselves whether the acts, 400 which the evidence shows, were committed with a criminal intent. I do not see how they can judge otherwise, and I do not think where the charge is what it is here, going back to 1937, is too far back. There mere fact that the war as we say, did not begin until December 7, 1941, or December 8 or 9, 1941, make no difference. That is a phrase. As a matter of fact, Japan and Germany, as we now know, were levying war on us for quite a number of years before that planning what they were going to do to us. We know that today. The mere fact we didn't know it, or we didn't take cognizance of it until the declaration of war, does not mean they were not levying war quite a long time before December 1941. I want the Government to bear in mind the limitations laid down by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and do everything possible to stay within that.

Mr. FINN. I will say, in addition we will submit a very definitely limiting instructions on this subject. The identical instruction, which was given in the Cramer case.

The COURT. Now, is there some other matter to be discussed?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Do I understand the motion is overruled?

The COURT. I am not going to overrule anything until you present an objection at the time something is offered that 401 you think is improper.

Mr. WOLL. I understand from the rest of his question that was raised, that he was assuming that Hans Haupt made some statements to two men that were incarcerated in Joliet, and that evidence should not be admitted for the reason that it could not be controverted.

The COURT. Well, because some evidence cannot be controverted, that is no reason for not admitting it. There may be other reasons. There may be questions which go to its weight.

Mr. WOLL. That is correct.

The COURT. Which might even render it valueless. That is a question for the jury, not for the court. If it is admissible on the question of intent or by the way of admissions out of court, it may be shown.

Mr. FINN. That is right. Also as corroborative evidence of intent as to the overt acts and the intent as to other acts, that is true.

Mr. WOLL. It certainly contradicts the theory of the defendant of an innocent purpose on that basis it would be admissible 402 alone. It also brings home knowledge of the enemy status of this defendant at the time he did commit those acts which were performed, and shows he knew that Herbert Haupt was a German spy. It is admissible, I think, for four or five separate reasons, and that is what we have in mind. The other one, if your Honor please, was the same question which we discussed the other day in chambers, as I understand, Mr. Warnholtz wants proof of the overt acts by one witness, but we must first establish the overt acts by two witnesses; is that what you have in mind?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. As they are somewhat related——

Mr. WOLL. I think the matter of proof is up to your Honor.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think the Jury would be confused. If the Government has only one witness to support the act, and the Government comes and puts on evidence to support the act on which they have only one witness, I think that would be damaging and prejudicial to the defendant, because that overt act is in the indictment.

The COURT. Well, that answer Mr. Finn made the other day, they have a right to show that on the question of intent, and why haven't they? Why haven't they?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Because of the decision in the Aaron
403 Burr case, which states it can only be corroborative and first the overt act must be proven.

The COURT. Oh, that, of course, that is a question as to the order of proof. Now, in a conspiracy case, for instance, thereoretically, you have to prove conspiracy first. In proving the evidence in a conspiracy case, you start in and you are just overwhelmed with objections, "they haven't yet shown the conspiracy" and the court stops the District Attorney who undertakes to connect it up, and if he doesn't show conspiracy, it goes out, and after they come on for four or five days, then the objections cease, and the reason for that, there have been so many instances from which a jury or court might infer unlawful, and in conjunction with that, they no longer see any reason for making the objection, but in a conspiracy case, that is somewhat different. I have never yet seen anybody go on and say A, B, C, D, and E may have entered the room and conspired, naturally agreed together to do certain things. You never have evidence like that.

Now, here, what the order of proof could be, is hard to say. Doubtless the Government will put it on in a way which they think will best tell the story from their viewpoint. I haven't any quarrel with the method that they choose so far. What 404 they may do in the future, I don't know. If you think it is bad in form as to what is the fair method of presentation, make an objection at that time, and I will hear you.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I may not have correctly stated the opinion of the Aaron Burr case. The Government has a right to choose the order of its proof, no doubt, but——

The COURT. I don't think there is any limitation as to when they have to prove the intent. That is the first thing, bring on witnesses. Now, generally speaking, they exhaust the witness's recollection so as to not to have to recall him. Under the general rule, it is the purpose to get a witness to state everything, and if they are going to do that, it should be done particularly in war time, so as to conserve manpower, and with the result you may get some evidence a little out of the logical line.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That seems to be all the points we have.

The COURT. What else?

Mr. FINN. That is all, your Honor.

The COURT. I want you to have the FBI mount the camera so that its lens, so that the picture which it takes is where the eyes of the ordinary witness would be.

405 Mr. FINN. We will take a front view, right view, and left view.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And vice versa, from my chair to the witness.

Mr. WOLL. Understand, I will do what the court directs.

The COURT. Well, after he takes it, you take a seat in the chair.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I can see when I sit up there, my eyes are here.

The COURT. The instructions are to place the camera so that the photograph taken will be of the average man or woman of average height.

Mr. WOLL. It will be from the eyes; the picture will be taken of the entire face.

The COURT. Yes. From the eyes as you sit in the chair.

Mr. BERTRAM. We observed great difficulty actually, your Honor, in trying to hear the witness and see the witness.

The COURT. No, I have told you that in every courtroom in this building, that is the condition. This building was built in the '90s. This courtroom is noisy. There are noises in this building in every courtroom for this entire city block. There 406 are car lines on three sides of the block and two streetcar intersections on two corners of the block, and we are only six floors from the street, and it is very warm sometimes in May, and we have no air conditioning in this building. Now, we have had juries and courts and counsel which have labored under these conditions for over fifty years, and probably will labor under them for another fifty years, and people have had fair trials in spite of all these noises.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It was not brought up for the purpose of getting error in. That was not the situation, but it was for the purpose of remedying the situation.

The COURT. On the seating arrangements, I want you to arrange it, so that everybody will have the best place possible within the limitations of the courtroom.

Mr. WOLL. May I suggest for the morning session you join with us on our table. I don't want the tables moved at this time.

The COURT. All right.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

407 Mr. HURLEY. Shall we proceed now, your Honor?

The COURT. Yes.

ALFRED H. GRUNOW, a witness called on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. HURLEY:

Q. You are the same Alfred H. Grunow who was on the witness stand when court closed on Friday afternoon, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you had stated that on June 20, that you were visiting. It was on a Saturday, 1942, you were visiting at the home of Walter Froehling and his wife; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you identified a picture of Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And had pointed out the defendant, Hans Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you arrive at the Froehling home on that day, June 20, Mr. Grunow?

408 A. We arrived with my truck; painting truck.

Q. And you are a painter by trade; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And about what time was it when you arrived there on that Saturday?

A. About five o'clock, sir.

Q. And you entered the home at five o'clock in the afternoon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You entered the home at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was there when you went in?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Froehling, and then two children.

Q. Do you know the names of the children?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are their names?

A. Esther, and I forget the little boy's name.

Q. Esther Froehling?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the other child a girl or boy?

A. Boy.

Q. Now, did you remain at the Froehling home that evening?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did anyone else come into the house during that night or early morning on Sunday, June 21?

A. Yes, sir.

409 Q. Who was that?

A. Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment. That is leading, if your Honor please. We object to that form of questioning.

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you see anyone else in the home besides the persons you have named, the following day?

A. Is that in the evening, sir?

Q. Sometime the next morning, on the Sunday morning, did you see anyone else in the home besides the people you have named?

A. In the dining room, on the couch.

Q. Where did you sleep that night?

A. I slept with Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please, at this time I want to make the objection for the record, the basis being that it 410 has not been shown that Hans Haupt was present at the time of these occurrences. This is what went on with Herbert Haupt in the home of Froehling, being without the defendant, Hans Haupt, being present. It is immaterial and irrelevant to any of the overt acts charged in the indictment.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Incompetent.

Mr. HURLEY. At what time was it, on that morning——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May that objection obtain and consider to have been made with reference to like evidence which will be introduced later on, so as to make it unnecessary to interrupt?

Mr. HURLEY. If there is any objection you want to have made, you should make them, not general. That is too general.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. All right.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. What time was it when you saw Herbert Haupt, about what time, in the bed there in the Froehling home that morning?

A. Talking.

Q. After they had been seated for about an hour, did anything happen?

A. No, sir; nothing happened, then.

415 Q. Did any of them leave at any time?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. After they had been seated there how long?

A. They started going away.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to the leading question.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. BERTRAM. I move the answer be stricken.

The COURT. Let it stand.

A. Between the front room and the dining room, about right in the center.
Q. On the floor?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it open or closed?
A. Open.
Q. It was open?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anything said by any of those people there
417 with reference to that suitcase, in the Froehling home that night?

Mr. Bertram. Objection, unless the defendant was present.
Mr. Hurley. Just yes or no; whether there was or not.
The Witness. Yes.
Q. Was the defendant, Hans Haupt there at that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was said by any individual, and tell us who said it!

421 Mr. HURLEY. That is all.
(Witness excused.)

A. Not about the job.

Q. About the job, or about his job, do you recall anything further?

Q. To refresh your recollection, was there anything said on the subject of draft deferment?

A. Oh, yes; he said that he might—I told him, "Well, you are ready for draft, and you might have to go into the Army then right away."

And he said, "Well, maybe through my two years' experience as a polisher and lens grinder, I might get a deferment."

Q. Do you recollect anything further, any more of that conversation?

A. The only thing I can recall is that Mr. Haupt told—said that he wants to buy him a car so that he can go to work, because he used Herbert's car all the time, and she is in pretty bad shape, and he wants to buy him another car.

Q. How long did they remain at your house that evening?

tment?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is——

By Mr. FINN:

432 stories to it. There was a family upstairs and the Wergins had the first floor.

Q. Will you keep your voice up, please?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was your room located in the Wergin home?

A. It was located right off the dining room.

Q. By the way, when you first moved into the Wergin home, was Wolfgang there?

A. No; he was not.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment, please. I object to this question, because I do not see the relevancy of it. Haupts were not present, and they have not been connected with this.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, this is part of the circumstances of this thing.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Calling your attention to Sunday, June 21, 1942, at around 1 a. m., did you go to the Wergin home, or to your room there in the Wergins?

Yes; I did.

Q. What time did you leave the home the evening prior?

A. I must have left about 8:30.

Q. You were gone until what time?
A. Until about 1:15.
Q. When you came, did you come home alone, or accompanied by someone else?
433 A. No; I came home with a friend of mine.
Q. Did he come into the house or not?
A. No; he did not.
Q. Will you just tell us what happened when you came there to the door?
A. Well, we drove up to the house. Then I went up. I went to open the door and Mrs. Wergin opened the door for me. Do you want me to go on?
Q. Did you go in the door after she had opened the door?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Was Hans Haupt, the defendant, there?
A. Yes, he was.
Q. Who else was there besides Hans Haupt?
A. There was Mr. Haupt, Mrs. Haupt, and Herbert Haupt.
Q. Will you point out the defendant to us in the courtroom?
A. That is the gentleman sitting over there at the table, with the dark suit.

Mr. FINN. Let the record show the witness has identified the defendant.

Q. Had you ever met Herbert Haupt?
A. No; I had not.
Q. Did you know Hans Haupt before that?
A. Yes; I did.
434 Q. Had you met him prior to that time?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Was Erna Haupt there also that evening?
A. Yes; she was there also.
Q. As you came in the door, just where were these people sitting?
A. Well, as you came into the—really, into the parlor, you immediately see a club chair in the corner; that is where Herbert Haupt was sitting. Then, to my left, on the sofa, that was thrown across the windows, was Mr. and Mrs. Haupt.
Q. By the way, what were your relations with the Wergins? Were you friendly with them? How did they treat you, as a roomer, or how?
A. No, sir. They practically treated me as their own daughter.
Q. Will you describe, then, in detail, just what happened when you stepped into the room there, where the Haupts were located?
A. Well, when I walked into the room, Mrs. Wergin stated, "It is early."
I said, "Yes."

Then I walked into the parlor, and from there right to the dining room. I laid the newspapers down, and then Mrs.
435 Wergin was standing right alongside of me. She says, "Lorraine, I want you to meet a friend of ours."

And with that, Herbert Haupt stood up and he said, "How do you do".

I said, "How do you do."

Then he sat down.

Q. Did anyone say, "This is Herbert Haupt," or introduce him by name to you?

A. No; they did not.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please, that is leading, and I object to it continuing.

Mr. FINN. I do not believe it is a leading question, your Honor, and the answer may be in the alternative, one way or the other. It does not suggest an answer to the witness.

The COURT. Yes; that is true. In other words, a better way would be to ask her what was said or done at that time or place.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. I will ask you this: Was there any further introduction to you of this young man, except what you testified to?

A. Just previous to that——

Q. "This is a friend of ours"?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to on the same grounds,
436 your Honor. It is just as leading as the other questions.

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you just tell us what happened after that, Miss Demmler?

A. Well, after I paid the papers down on the table, I went into the room, freshened up, and when I came back into the parlor, Herbert Haupt was still there, remained in the club chair, and Mr. and Mrs. Haupt were on the sofa with Mrs. Wergin.

Q. What were they doing there, if you noticed?

A. Well, they were talki[illegible] as I came into the room.

Q. All right, just what happened then?

A. Then I walked in and I looked at Mrs. Haupt and I said to Mrs. Haupt: "From now on when you telephone do not talk in German, because I do not understand it," and with that Herbert Haupt butted in and he said, "Do you not understand German?" I said, "I do not understand."

Q. What else did he say, if anything?

A. That was all that he said to me. That was all that he said then.

Q. What then happened, Miss Demmler?

A. Well, there was just the usual conversation between us there. Then Mrs. Wergin got up to go into the kitchen to make 437 some more drinks. Then Herbert Haupt got up and went in there. That left me in the parlor with Mr. and Mrs. Haupt.

Q. Could you see from your position, where you were sitting in the parlor, into the kitchen?

A. Yes; by leaning forward, leaning over my right shoulder, I could look directly into the kitchen.

Q. You remained—all right. Did you remain in there with Hans Haupt?

A. Yes; and Mrs. Haupt.

Q. Will you tell us just what took place while you were there?

A. Well, the three of us sat then, and then Mrs. Haupt had been glancing through the newspaper. Then she said, "I have got—" she said, "I am rather tired." Then she got up. She excused herself and went into the washroom. That left Mr. Haupt and I alone.

Q. Just what was said or done then?

A. Mr. Haupt began to tell me what he was like in his youth when he came to America. Then he says to me—he started to look in his pocket, and he said, "I believe I left my cigarettes in my jacket."

Q. By the way, what position was he sitting in at that time?

A. Well, he was sitting on the sofa, and he could look 438 directly down the hallway into the kitchen, up to his right.

Q. Did he remain sitting on the sofa, the same position?

A. No, sir. He said to me, "I—" Well, he was looking rather forward, toward the kitchen, looking back and forward in there.

Q. Yes?

A. Then he said he was going to get up and get some cigarettes, and I said, "Mr. Haupt, your cigarettes are on the table." And we dickered back and forth because both—as a matter of fact, were the same brand, that they were his and not mine. I told him, "No, they are not mine. Mine are here."

Q. Herbert meanwhile was out in the kitchen?

A. In the meantime I hear Mrs. Haupt leave the washroom and go into the kitchen.

Q. All right. Now, did Herbert come back into the parlor eventually?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. Will you describe what took place there?

A. Then he came back in again, called Mr. Haupt a word in German that sounded like "Father" or it sounded more like "Father," or something similar to that.

Q. Yes?

A. Then he said, "I think we had better be getting home."

439 Mr. Haupt said, "No, let us wait for Otto."

Q. Was Mr. Wergin there at the house yet that evening?

A. No.

Q. Will you now tell us what took place then?

A. Well, then, Mrs. Haupt and Mrs. Wergin came into the parlor. Mrs. Wergin asked me to set the table. I got up and went in the kitchen, to get ready to set the dining room table, leaving them, and they sat in the parlor.

Q. Will you describe how they were sitting in the parlor? When you talk of them, who do you mean?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt, Herbert Haupt, Mrs. Wergin.

Q. Where were they sitting?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt sat on the sofa. Herbert Haupt was sitting on the arm of the sofa. Mrs. Haupt was sitting in the club chair, that pull chair, she was sitting on the edge of it. They were grouped together around the coffee table, talking rather softly.

Q. Talking loudly or softly?

A. Talking rather softly.

Q. Could you hear anything at all that was said?

A. Well, I could distinguish they were talking in German, but I could not have understood them anyway, outside of the fact they were talking in German.

440 Q. Eventually, did you sit down at the table?

A. Yes, sir; we did.

Q. Will you tell us what took place there at the table?

A. When we were seated at the table, Mr. Haupt was at the long end of the table, and Mrs. Wergin at the other, and to my left was Herbert and across from us was Mrs. Haupt. Do you want the detail of the conversation?

Q. Yes.

A. I commented to Erna that the Wergins had given me a gift for my birthday, and I also commented on Mr. Willumeit, because his story was in the paper shortly before that.

Q. This is part of the conversation?

Mr. BERTRAM. It was a matter of explanation, not responsive to the question.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Just tell us what was said, no explanation here, just tell us what was said, if you will, please.

A. Anyway, I said I was surprised, because he seemed to be such a nice man.

Q. Who?

A. Dr. Willumeit.

Q. Yes.

A. So then Herbert turned and he looked at me, and he said, "Do you not know he was a very dangerous character?"

441 Q. Yes. Did he say why he was dangerous?

Mr. BERTRAM. Objected to.

A. "Do you not know he will blow us up?"

By Mr. FISS:

Q. What is that?

A. "Do your not know He blow us all to pieces?"

Q. Yes.

A. That is all that was said about him. Mrs. Haupt started talking German. Then she looked at me and she started to laugh, and she said to me, "So sorry, Lorraine. I forgot you do not understand German. It was just talking about my operation, when I came out of the ether, the first thing I saw Herbert."

Immediately, Mrs. Wergin spoke up to Mrs. Haupt, "Won't you have another piece of cake?" Mrs. Haupt already had another piece. She said, "No."

Then after a little while after that, Mr. Wergin came in.

Q. Do you recall anything else that took place there at the table, any other conversation that took place at the table, there? To refresh your memory, was there any conversation about "Mutti"?

A. That was when they were talking about this operation business, and then they offered cake to Mrs. Haupt, and she

442 said, "If you will excuse me, I want to tell this little incident, so funny, it does sound funny in the German."

So Herbert called her "Mutti." Then Mrs. Haupt laughed. She said, "All the children call me 'Mutti' just like you call Mrs. Wergin 'Mutti'."

Q. What does "Mutti" mean in German?

A. Well, that is a name for mother, just like "Mom" or something similar to that.

Q. Now, some time later, did Mr. Wergin come in?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. Will you tell us, were you all there at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Hans Haupt still there?

A. Yes; he was.

Q. Herbert?

A. Yes.

Q. His mother?

A. Yes.

Q. When Mr. Wergin—did he come directly into the house or remain outside?

A. He remained outside.

Q. Will you just tell us what happened when he came?

A. Well, I heard him come in, and he had several of the instruments. He played the drums, and he has a lot of grips. He always laid one against the door, to keep it open. Mrs. Wergin and I went out to help him.

443 Q. Did you remain in front of the house with the car, or did you go back in?

A. Well, I kept coming back in with the different pieces of the drum sets, while Mrs. Wergin stood out there talking to Mr. Wergin.

Q. Did Mr. Wergin eventually come into the room?

A. Yes, sir, he did.

Q. Tell us what took place there.

A. Yes.

Q. Was Hans Haupt there?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us where they went.

A. Mr. Haupt, Mrs. Haupt and Herbert Haupt sat at the dining room table and Mr. Wergin walked into the parlor and stood there, took off his jacket, looked at Herbert, and Mr. Wergin said, "Well, I have not seen you for a long time."

Q. Did Mr. Wergin, or did not Mr. Wergin mention Herbert's name?

A. No; he did not.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to as leading, your Honor. I wish they would really stop continuing——

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The conversation should be related.

The COURT. Sustained. Do not lead her.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Just tell us what he said then, all that he said that you remember.

444 A. Well, he looked at Herbert and he said to him, "Well I have not seen you for a long time."

Q. Speak up so we can hear you. The streetcars go by and we cannot hear you.

A. He looked at Herbert and he said—took off his jacket and he said: "Well, I have not seen you for a long time."

Then I took his jacket, and I hung it up in the closet. When I came back Mr. Wergin had taken my seat at the table.

So Mr. Haupt had mentioned the fact that Mr. Wergin—it was my seat. I said that was all right, I was going to bed anyway.

Q. Did you thereafter go to bed?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. When you left there, where were these people?

A. In the living room, do you mean?
Q. Yes.
A. They were still seated at the table.
Q. Did you go to sleep right away or no?
A. No; I could not sleep.
Q. Do you know whether or not your door—did your door close entirely or not?
A. No; that door never did close. It just stayed just a fraction of an inch open.
445 Q. Do you know whether they remained at the dining room table, or where they went?
A. Well, eventually they left, because the lights went out. I could see that the light was not around my door.
Q. Meaning they left where?
A. The dining room.
Q. Do you know where they went?
A. Yes. I could distinguish their footsteps. They walked into the parlor.
Q. How long did they remain in the parlor, as far as you know.
A. As far as I know, it would be about an hour, or half an hour—an hour and a half or so.
Q. Could you hear any conversation or not?
A. No; I could not.
Q. How do you know they remained there for that period of time?
A. Because I could not sleep, and then all of a sudden I finally heard them bidding good night. You see, the hallway was right in back of my room. Then I could hear them talking, saying good night. Then I knew that they had left, and then I got up.
Q. You say you got up?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Approximately what time was it?
446 A. That was rather—I was rather curious because I could not sleep. I was curious about the time, to know what was wrong with me.
Mr. Bertram. I object to that.
Mr. Finn. Tell us what time it was.
The Witness. It is about four o'clock, or four-thirty.
Q. At any time—did you prepare the meal for them there?
A. Yes; I did.
Q. At any time while you were going to and from the kitchen, to the dining room, did you see what they were doing?
A. Yes; they were sitting in the parlor, grouped around this coffee table.

Q. Could you hear any of the conversation?

A. No; all I could hear was they were talking in soft tones, and from what I could hear here and there, it was all in German.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3 for identification, and ask you if you can tell us what that is.

A. That is Herbert Haupt.

Q. Is that the young man who was in the Wergin home that evening?

A. Yes, sir.

447 Mr. FINN. I think that is all with this witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Miss Demmler, did you observe whether or not Mr. Haupt, that is Hans Max Haupt, was quite sleepy that evening, or was he wide awake?

A. No, sir; he was not sleepy, sir.

Q. Do you remember at about what time Mr. Wergin, the Otto you referred to, or the man you referred to as Otto, actually came home that evening, or rather, morning. I would say this was from Sunday—from Saturday to Sunday morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time was it?

A. I would say about a quarter to three, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

The COURT. Anything further, Mr. Finn?

Mr. FINN. No, your Honor. Thank you, Miss Demmler.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. HURLEY. Will you mark this for identification "Government's Exhibits 52 and 53"?
(The documents produced by counsel were marked for identification "Government's Exhibits 52 and 53.")

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. I show you a document marked "Government's Exhibit 52" for identification, and ask you who made out that card?

Q. Speak up, so we can all hear you.

Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

No cross-examination.
(Witness excused.)

VINCENT CHRISTOPHER FARRELL, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Will you state your name?

A. Vincent Christopher Farrell.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Farrell?

A. Well, at the present time, 600 Diversey Parkway, the Rienzi Hotel.

Q. During the month of June 1942, were you employed
453 by the Warner Motor Sales?

A. I was.

Q. Where was that place of business located?

A. 958 Diversey Parkway, Chicago.

Q. What was the nature of your employment?

A. Well, I was salesman, automobile salesman, new and used cars.

Q. What car was that company the agent for?

A. Well, we were agents for the Pontiac, made by General Motors.

Q. The Pontiac car?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you on duty at the place of business of the Warner Motor Sales at 958 Diversey Parkway, on the evening of June 23, 1942?

A. I was.

Q. Did anyone come into your place of business that evening?

A. Well, I was alone, waiting for the manager to return from dinner.

Q. Did any prospective customer come in?

A. About six o'clock there were two gentlemen that came in. I approached them, and they said they wanted to buy a good late model used car.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 3 in evidence, a picture of Herbert Haupt, and ask you if you saw him on that evening.

454 A. He was with this other gentleman.

Q. Do you see that other gentleman here in the courtroom?

A. This is him, right here.

Mr. HURLEY. Indicating the defendant, Hans Haupt.

Q. What time did you say they came into the Warner Motor Sales?

A. Well, it was about six o'clock in the evening.

Q. About six o'clock in the evening?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the man, Hans Haupt, whom you have indicated here, Hans Haupt, say anything to you?

A. Well, I asked if I could be of help to him, and he said, yes, he wanted to buy a good used late model car. So I showed him a number of cars, three or four, and finally, I showed him a 1941 Pontiac 6, super coupe, a black car. That was one of the best cars that we have ever had in our place, as a used car, and I showed him the durability of the car, the roomy interior, the large rear trunk, the excellent tires.

He seemed to like this car very much. Said he wanted to know if he could buy it on a time-payment. I said, "Well, what have you got to trade in?"

455 He said, "Well, I have a car," but he says, "I do not intend to trade it in. It is for my son."

Q. What was for his son?

A. This car that he was buying. So I said, "You can buy it on time payments."

He wanted to know how much was required to pay down.

So I said, "If you will step over to my desk, we will set up the deal. I will show you just the required down payment, and the monthly payment, to the insurance, and so forth."

Q. What was the price of the car?

A. $1,045.

Q. $1,045?

A. $1,045. I was going to charge tax, but they objected to paying tax, and so, they were giving a good price for the car, so we have to pay that anyway. We have to pay the tax.

Q. Was there any decision made as to the purchase of the car that evening?

A. Well, I set up the deal——

Mr. HURLEY. May these be marked for identification?

(The documents produced by counsel marked for identification "Government's Exhibits 54 and 55.")

456 Mr. HURLEY. Q. Go ahead.

A. Well, I set the deal up to read $1,045 for the car, and they wanted to know if they could put $10 down, and I said they could. They said, "We will have the money, and we will have to bring in some cash."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to this, "they said" or "they did." I should like it brought out as to who said what.

A. Hans Haupt wanted to know how much he would have to put down for the car. I said, "That is approximately half the price of the car."

He wanted to know if he could put down $10 deposit and come in the next day, the following day, and put down the balance.

I said that would be perfectly satisfactory.

So I wrote up the financial statement, and asked his name, and he told me, "Hans Haupt."

He introduced me to his son as Herbert Haupt. I filled out the financial statement complete, to the Finance Company, and I wrote up the order, and he signed the order, and he put down, he put down a $10 deposit down on the car.

And finally, Herbert wanted to know if I could get his license for him, the driver's license. I said that I thought that I could.

457 He wanted to know if I could get the city license. At that time, I think we got it at half price, by reason of the time of the year, by reason of the fact that it was half a year, so he paid me $9.50 for the city license and the driver's license—the city license. Herbert Haupt put that down.

In the meantime, the manager came in.

Q. Who is the manager?

A. His name is Phil Vinson.

Q. Was he the manager of the Warner Motor Sales?

A. He was sales manager of the Warner Motor Sales. There was just he and I working there at the time by reason of the ravages of war. I even know whether the rest of the salesmen got business. We had no cars to sell, hardly.

Q. What time was it that Mr. Vinson came in?

A. He came in approximately 7 o'clock; left about 5 and came back about 7. I called him over and introduced him to Hans Haupt and to Herbert Haupt the son; and told them that they had bought this car, put $10 deposit and would drop in the following day and pay the balance.

He said it looked like a good order, looked ve good.

458 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 54 for identification, and ask you to look at that, Mr. Farrell.

A. Yes; that is the order.

Q. For whom was that prepared?

A. Well, I wrote this up. I prepared the order.

Q. Was the signature of Hans Haupt placed there?

A. That is right.

Q. In your presence?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that placed there by this defendant, whom you have pointed out in the courtroom?

A. That is right.

Q. And the address, 2234 Fremont, was that written?

A. I wrote that and I had him sign it. That is the custom. I usually do that.

Q. How long did the defendant, Hans Haupt and Herbert Haupt remain in your place of business that night?

A. I venture to say they were there about an hour and a half. I had quite a talk with both of them. The younger man, I called him up the following morning. I called the Haupt home the following morning to tell them that we required $50 additional down payment.

Q. Just a moment. In reference to this financial statement, did you state you took a financial statement from him?

A. Yes.

Q. That information was given to you by whom?

459 A. That was given to me by Hans Haupt.

Q. Were there any references given?

A. There were references given.

Q. I did not hear the answer.

A. There were references given.

Q. Who gave those references?

A. Hans Haupt.

Q. Whose references were they?

A. Well, business associates and friends.

Q. Of whom?

A. Of Hans Haupt.

Q. Did you see any one of these individuals, say, at a later time?

A. Well, I called them up the following morning, called up their home, and I advised them that it was necessary——

Q. Who did you talk to, if you recall?

A. Well, I recognized Herbert Haupt's voice by reason of his being the younger voice, a little higher pitched. I talked to him quite a bit the day before. It was not so hard to recognize his voice.

So I told him that it would be necessary to bring in an additional $50 down payment, and he said, "All right."

It struck me a little queer, because usually where a father buys a young man——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to.

460 The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. HURLEY. Never mind that.

Q. Did Hans Haupt and Herbert Haupt come into your place of business at a later time than the one you have described?

A. They came in the following afternoon and brought in $405 in fives, tens and twenties, and it was about three fifty dollar bills in there.

Q. Was that deposited on the following day, then?

A. Yes: that is right.

Q. They were in there about the purchase of the automobile, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. And was there any security or notes given with reference to the car?

A. Well, I understand that later——

Q. No. Do you know whether or not there were?

A. No, not at that particular time, not right then. Well, that day, of course, they answered the usual financial—they gave the usual finance notes, of course.

Q. Who signed them?

A. Hans Haupt.

Q. Those were finance notes, you say?

A. Finance notes; yes.

Q. What did they amount to, do you know, the total?

461 A. Well, as I recall, I had not——

Q. No.

A. It is close to $630, I believe, the balance due.

Q. Was there any contract executed?

A. Well, the usual finance contract. The notes, as you might call them, terms. We refer to it as a contract. That was for the Finance Company.

Q. When was that executed.

A. That was signed at the time.

Q. The first night or the following day?

A. The first night.

Q. Who signed it?

A. Well, Hans Haupt signed that.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 55 for identification——

The COURT. How much longer will this take?

Mr. HURLEY. It may take a little while.

The COURT. We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen, until 2 o'clock.

In the meantime, do not discuss this case with anyone, nor permit anyone to discuss it with you, and return at 2 o'clock.

You may go and return at 2 o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken to 2 o'clock p. m. of the same day, Monday, May 29, 1944.)

463 The COURT. Bring in the Jury.

VINCENT CHRISTOPHER FARRELL, resumes the stand for further examination, after having been previously sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination (resumed) by Mr. HURLEY:

Q. You are the same Vincent Christopher Farrell who was on the witness stand when we adjourned for lunch, is that correct?

A. I am.

Q. Now, going back to the first evening of June 23, 1942, when you stated that the manager of the Warner Motor Sales came in?

A. That is right.

Q. What was his first name?

A. Phillip Vinson.

Q. And spell that out, or you did spell that out at that time, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Who paid the money on this 1941 Pontiac coupe on the first night?

A. Hans Haupt.

Q. How much did he pay?

A. He paid, as near as I remember, $405.

464 Q. The first night?

A. No; $10 down on the first night.

Q. And was there money paid the following night?

A. The following evening they came in and he paid $405.

Q. By "he" you mean whom?

A. Hans Haupt.

Q. About what time did Hans Haupt come in on the night of the 24th of June?

A. Well, I am not absolutely certain about that. It seems to me it was about around 5 o'clock, but I am not positive about that. It might have been a little later.

Q. Was Mr. Vinson there at that time, too?

A. He was there, yes.

Q. Now, showing you again Government's Exhibit 54, which you testified is in your handwriting with the exception of the signature; Hans Haupt, I will ask you whether or not you prepared that document in the usual course of business as an employe of the Warner Motor Company?

A. I did.

Q. And it is true and correct; is that right?

A. It is; yes, sir.

Q. And reflects the transaction as it took place at this time?

465 A. Yes; there is a little correction made there by Mr. Vinson, but sometimes a little correction is made for some such reason or another.

Q. I will ask you why or what that correction refers to?

A. Well, I say, or I see that it goes, the balance here, of $325 and he showed he changed that to $405.

Q. And that $405 was the amount you stated Hans Haupt paid at that sales agency on June 24th, 1942, is that correct?

A. Yes; that is right.

Q. And that Warner Motor Sales is located in the City of Chicago, is it not?

A. 958 Diversey Parkway, Chicago.

Q. And was that car delivered?

A. That car was delivered the following day. He made the payment of what I have there, $405, it was made on the 24th.

Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Farrell, did Mr. Haupt, Hans Haupt, when he introduced himself, immediately give you the name of Hans Haupt?

A. No. I showed him a number of cars before he 466 decided on the one that he bought, and when he asked me whether he could buy it or not on payments, so much a month, I told him he could, I asked him to step over to the desk, and I got his name then when I filled out the financial statement. Prior to that, I didn't know his name.

Q. But he, himself, then gave you the name Hans Haupt, and no other name?

A. He gave me Hans Max Haupt, and I wrote that on the financial statement.

Q. But no other name?

A. No other name.

Q. And he introduced his boy as being Herbert Haupt?

A. Herbert.

Q. This matter of procuring a driver's license and State license upon request of Herbert Haupt, that is quite a customary matter, is it not, when someone purchases a car?

A. No; it was rather unusual, because it was most usual, most customary to have their driver's licenses.

Q. No, no; I am asking you, is that quite customary there when somebody purchases a car to request you to send for the driver's license and the State license?

A. No; it isn't customary, but it is done.

Q. Have you ever sold any cars?

A. Yes.

467 Q. The morning after the purchase of this car, did you call up the Haupt home?

A. That is right.

Q. And you had quite a long conversation on the telephone, did you not?

A. Not very long.

Q. Say yes or no.

A. No.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Farrell, that the party answering talked to you quite a while, yes or no?

A. No.

Q. Just what did you say and what did he say, just a word, right?

A. I recognized his voice.

Q. I am asking that question; will you please answer: Is that all he said?

A. Right.

Q. That is all he said?

A. That is all he said.

Q. That one word, and you recognized his voice?

A. I did recognize his voice, but——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You have answered.

Q. You have never talked to Herbert Haupt before except the evening preceding this telephone conversation; is that right?

A. Talked about one hour and a half——

468 Q. I ask you if you ever talked to him before preceding this morning.

A. No.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. HURLEY. That is all.

PHILLIP NEWELL VINSON, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name?

A. Phillip Newell Vinson.

Q. Spell your name for the reporter, please.

A. V-i-n-s-o-n.

Q. Phillip Newell Vinson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Vinson?

A. 3622 North Oriole.

Q. Oriole Avenue?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The acoustics here are poor, and if you will just speak up a little louder, if you will, please.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business or work or occupation, sir?

A. I am general manager of an automobile company,
469 the Warner Motor Sales.

Q. Where is the Warner Motor Sales Company located?

A. 958 Diversey.

Q. Is that in the City of Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been engaged in busines as the manager of the Warner Motor Sales Company of Chicago?

A. About three years and ten months.

Q. Were you engaged in that occupation in June of 1942?

A. I was.

Q. Calling your attention to the early evening of June 23, Tuesday, June 23rd, 1942, were you in your place of business on that evening?

A. Yes; I returned from supper about 7 or 7:30.

Q. Now, when you returned from supper, was there anyone else in the showroom besides yourself?

A. Yes; Mr. Vincent Farrell, salesman, was there, with two customers.

Q. Subsequently after your arrival there, did you transact some business with those two customers?

A. Yes; we did.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3 for identification, and ask you if you can recognize that photograph?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. Can you tell us who it is?

A. That was one of the customers that was in that evening, Mr. Herbert Haupt.

Q. Do you recognize anyone else in this courtroom who was there that evening?

A. I do.

Q. Whom do you recognize?

A. The gentleman over there, Mr. Hans Haupt.

Mr. FINN. Let the record show that the witness indicates the defendant.

Q. Now, will you tell us just what took place on that evening, the first evening?

A. Well, I returned at 7 or 7:30, and Mr. Farrell asked me if I can accept a deal on a 1941 Pontiac, 6-passenger coupe for 1045.

Q. By 1045, you mean $1,045?

A. That is right, yes.

Q. Was that the selling price?

A. That was the selling price.

Q. All right. Tell us what other conversation there was.

A. Well, there was a slight additional charge that should have been put on the car to make a complete deal on the figures, but the price was so close to the asking price, I would accept the deal at $1,045.

Q. What was the other additional expenses you refer to?

A. Figure about 2 percent, around $20 tax that should have been put on top of the $1,045.

Q. Now, will you tell us just what was said by various parties with reference to the car, Hans Haupt, Herbert Haupt, and Mr. Farrell?

A. Mr. Farrell asked whether he could accept the deal on those figures, and I said, "Yes, I would." He said, "I would like to have you meet the gentlemen." And he took me over and introduced MR. Herbert Haupt and Mr. Hans Haupt; they were the purchaser of the car, and they gave him a $10 deposit, and a credit statement.

Q. Just a minute. Do you know who purchased the car?

A. Yes; Hans Haupt.

Q. And was there any conversation as to whether it was a car for Hans, or for someone else?

A. No.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that as leading, your Honor.

Mr. FINN. He answered it "No."

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes; he said "No."

By Mr. FINN:

Q. You testified at the last trial in this case, did you not?

A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. May I have just a moment, please, your Honor.

Q. Now, what, if any, arrangements were made that evening with reference to this purchase?

A. Well, the only time I observed the Haupts is when I was introduced to them. There was no transaction made with me regarding the car. It was made with the salesman.

Q. Were there any documents signed there that evening?

A. Yes, a deed.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to unless it is done in the presence of this witness. It does not seem to be clear that this witness knows what was written on that. Did you see the document that evening?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you handle it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk to them about it?

A. Yes.

Q. Calling your attention to Government's Exhibit 54 for identification, will you tell us what that is.

473 A. That is a preliminary bill of sale that is given at the time the car is purchased, before the credit statement has been O.K.'d, it is written down. It is a preliminary bill of sale.

Q. Was that signed there that night?

A. Yes, that was.

Q. Was that in your presence?

A. Yes.

Q. And who signed it?

A. Mr. Hans Haupt.

Q. And do you know who put down the money; how much money was put down that evening?

A. Ten dollars.

Q. Who made the $10 deposit?

A. Mr. Hans Haupt made the deposit.

Mr. BERTRAM. The witness testified, he said he didn't know.

Mr. FINN. Is not that a matter for cross-examination?

Mr. BERTRAM. No, I think not.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Now, was there a credit statement or credit memorandum taken that night?

A. Yes, there was.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object, your Honor, unless the witness was present at the time.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. In whose presence was the credit statement taken that night?

A. It was.

474 Q. In your presence?

A. It was.

Q. Who signed that credit statement?

A. Hans Haupt.

Q. And whose references were given for that credit statement?

A. They were Hans Haupt's.

Q. Now, was there anything further done that evening toward the purchase of this automobile?

A. Oh, the mortgage was signed, and the financial statement was taken by the salesman and turned over to me.

Q. Do you recollect what the terms of this sale were?

A. Well, not exactly. I do know, next day the Finance Company asked $110 more for an additional down payment.

Q. Well, now, calling your attention to the next evening on the 24th day of June 1942, were you present in the salesroom on the occasion?

A. I was; yes.

Q. Will you tell us what happened on that evening?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to, unless it is shown it was in the presence of the defendant. This man has been questioned about the salesman.

Mr. FINN. I have got to find out first what happened,

475 and find out whether the defendant was there. I can't put it all in in one question.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What happened?

Mr. FINN. If I asked any other question, it would be leading.

Mr. BERTRAM. Who was there?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right.

Mr. FINN. I suggest if counsel has any objections to make, that he should address his objections to the court rather than argue with me about this matter. After all, your Honor has to rule on the objections.

Q. Calling your attention to the 24th day of June, the next evening, can you tell us whether you were present in the salesroom?

A. I was present in the salesroom; yes.

Q. Did anyone come in the salesroom that evening?

A. Mr. Farrell came to me when I returned.

Q. Were you present when anyone came in that evening?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever at any time see Hans Haupt or Herbert Haupt there the following evening, the 24th?

A. Not that evening; no.

Q. You say the 24th you did not see Hans Haupt and Herbert Haupt there?

A. No.

476 Q. Do you recall testifying at the last trial?

A. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object, your Honor; you cannot contradict your own witness.

Mr. FINN. I think I have a right to refresh his recollection.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. FINN. Do you recall these questions being asked you, and you making these answers:

"Question: Calling your attention to the next day, the 24th day of June 1942, did you see either Hans Haupt or Herbert Haupt there that evening?

"Answer: Yes, I did.

"Question: And where did you see them?

"Answer: I saw them in the office together.

"Question: They came in there together, did they?

"Answer: That is right.

"Question: What, if any, conversation did you have with them at that time?

"Answer: None whatsoever.

"Question: Did you see them come in?

"Answer: Yes, sir.

477 "Question: Did you receipt for money that they had put on a down payment?

"Answer: We did."

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall those questions and answers?

A. I do. I was mixed up in the story. I did not talk to them. I saw them. I saw them come in and I was mixed up when I said I didn't speak to them. I saw them come in. I was there at the time.

Q. About what time was it Hans Haupt and Herbert Haupt came on the evening of June the 24th, 1942?

A. I imagine about the same time as the night before, around 7 or 7:30.

Q. And you said on that occasion you didn't talk to them yourself?

A. No.

Q. Did you receive the money that had been put down?

A. I did.

Q. On that evening?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us how much it was; do you recall how much it was?

A. Well, I believe it was around $470 and a $50 note.

Q. And a $50 note?

A. That is right.

Q. Whose name was on that note?

A. It was Hans Haupt.

478 Q. Do you recall the denominations of the bills you received that evening?

A. They were all fives and tens and twenties, twenty dollar pieces, and there were three fifty dollars, I remember those.

Q. Now, in the regular course of your business, is a correct invoice made whenever there is a purchase made?

A. When a statement is made, an invoice is made at the time.

Q. Did you see the invoice that was made on that evening, June the 24th, with reference to the purchase of this car?

A. I did.

Q. Showing you Government's Exhibit 55 for identification, will you tell us what that is?

A. That is the copy of the bill of sale we keep in our records.

Q. And was that with reference to the purchase of this automobile, this Pontiac automobile, to which you previously referred?

A. That is right.

Q. Was that made in the regular course of your business?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that copy in the same condition there with 479 the exception of these exhibits marked on it on the night that you saw it?

A. It was; yes, sir.

Q. And was Mr. Farrell there that evening?

A. Yes, sir; he was there.

Q. That is the gentleman that just left the courtroom?

A. That is right.

Q. And was he the man who introduced you to Hans Max Haupt and Herbert Haupt the evening before?

A. He was; yes, sir.

Mr. FINN. I think that is all with this witness.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I see the invoices? Thank you.

Mr. FINN. Just so the record may be clear.

Q. Mr. Vinson, in the first statement on the stand, you said you did not see them come in, then you later corrected that.

A. That is correct, I misunderstood. I did not speak to them. I saw them both there. I saw them when they came in the second time.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Vinson, I notice on your invoice there was added something for insurance for the automobile, is that a rather unusual feature to have you furnish insurance, or is it customary?

480 A. That is incorporated; that insurance is included.

Q. And that is customary for you to do that?

A. That is right.

Q. And also the financing?

A. That is right.

Q. Then I notice here on a separate slip something about city and state licenses; do you frequently furnish that, too, and add that to the price?

A. Sometimes we do.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

Mrs. GERDA SAURE, called as a witness by the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Will you state your name?

A. Mrs. Gerda Saure.

Q. How do you spell your name?

A. S-a-u-r-e.

Q. Your first name, how do you spell that?

A. G-e-r-d-a.

Q. Do you have another name in addition to those two?

A. Formerly known as Mrs. Gerda Melinde.

481 Q. Mrs. Gerda Melinda?

A. That is right.

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Saure?

A. I live at 1631 Chase Avenue.

Q. In the City of Chicago?

A. That is right.

Q. Where did you live during the month of June 1942?

A. 1752 Albion Avenue.

Q. Did you know a person by the name of Herbert Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3, and ask you if that is a photograph of the person you knew as Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. When did you first meet Herbert Haupt?

A. Oh, that is approximately about 1939, I believe.

Q. And do you know Hans Haupt?

A. Yes; I met Herbert's folks about a year later.

Q. Do you see Hans Haupt here in the courtroom?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Will you point him out, please; you point him out where he is?

A. I will have to put my glasses on. Right over there [indicating].

Q. Sitting there at the second table, is that where you are indicating?

A. That is right.

482 Q. Indicating the defendant Hans Haupt. Where was it you first met Herbert Haupt?

A. I don't quite remember. It was at a dance, or at a German picnic; one of the two.

Mr. HURLEY. Speak up louder, please.

The WITNESS. All right.

Q. What is your best recollection as to where it was?

A. I believe it was a picnic at Harm's Park.

Q. Harm's Park?

A. I believe it was.

Q. And did you ever meet him at the Haus Vaterland?

A. Yes; we went there occasionally on Saturday evenings.

Q. Where was that located?

A. On Western and Byron Avenues.

Q. Western and Byron?

A. Yes.

Q. And what Club or persons met there, if you know?

A. Well, it was——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object, your Honor, to the leading question. It seems to me that is immaterial for the purposes of this inquiry, what club met there.

The COURT. What is the materiality of that?

Mr. HURLEY. Showing the contact with different individuals, following it right straight through. If it is leading, I can change the form of the question.

The COURT. Well, change the form of the question.

483 Mr. HURLEY:

Q. How often did you go to the Haus Vaterland?

A. Well, I can't say exactly.

Q. Well, approximately.

A. Well, we went there on Saturday evening to dances.

Q. Who gave the dances, if you know?

A. Different clubs gave those besides the Haus Vaterland itself.

Q. What were some of those clubs?

A. I can't say offhand. I have forgotten.

Q. Well, name a few of them, whatever ones you can think of.

A. One single club, I believe, was Con[redacted]dia.

Q. Any other?

A. That is all I can recall.

Q. Do you know aside from these dances, do you know any other organizations that had its headquarters in the Haus Vaterland?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to, your Honor, as being immaterial and it is leading besides.

The COURT. Well, do you expect to connect the defendant with those other organizations, and Herbert Haupt with those other organizations?

Mr. HURLEY. Herbert Haupt.

The COURT. Well, she may answer.

484 The WITNESS. Well, it was known as the Bund. I believe they had dances at the time I first went. I don't know. I just went there because I enjoyed the music and the dancing.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Now, calling your attention to the month of June 1941, did you see Herbert Haupt during that month?

A. 1941?

Q. Yes.

A. That was when he was back in this country.

Q. 1941?

A. Yes; I met him, I believe it was the 23rd of June.

Q. No; in the year 1941 now, before he left?

A. Oh, I see. Yes; I saw him on several occasions.

Q. Do you know where he went, rather, around June 1941?

A. Not outside of where we used to go together.

Q. No; did you see him after that time?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. Did you hear from him?

A. I received a postal card after he had left.

Q. Where was that card from?

A. That was from St. Louis.

Q. And was there anything on the card?

A. He wrote me he was going—he was on his way to California and would be back soon.

485 Q. Had you talked to him before this occasion when he went away, about his leaving the city?

A. He had mentioned on several occasions he wanted to go to Mexico. He mentioned it time and time again. He never mentioned it after that.

Q. Do you know who went with him when he left the city?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Now, after Herbert Haupt left the city of Chicago, in the month of June 1941, when was the next time you saw him?

A. Not until he was back in Chicago the following June.

Q. Now, calling your attention to Tuesday, the 23rd day of June 1942, did you see Mrs. Haupt that day?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know what her first name was?

A. Erna.

Q. Was she the mother of Herbert Haupt; is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Where did you see Mrs. Haupt on that day?

A. She came down to the place where I was working at the time.

Q. Where was that?

A. Bismarck Hotel, in the Beauty Salon.

486 Q. What, if anything, did you do after she came there to that hotel?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to, your Honor, on the grounds, not in the presence of Herbert Haupt at that time, and it has not been shown whether Hans Haupt—I mean the defendant.

The COURT. All right, proceed.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Now, what time did you meet Mrs. Erna Haupt on the 23rd day of June 1942?

A. Between one and two o'clock, I believe.

Q. In the afternoon?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, did you do after you met Mrs. Haupt?

A. We had lunch together.

Q. Where did you have lunch?

A. I believe the Triangle Restaurant right across the street from the Bismarck.

Q. Near your place of employment?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, later on that day, did you hear from anyone else?

A. I did.

Q. And as a result of that phone conversation, what happened later that same day?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to the form of the question: "As a result of a telephone conversation."

487 Mr. HURLEY. Withdraw that.

The COURT. Strike it out.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did anything happen after that phone conversation?

A. I went up to his house that evening.

Q. Whose house?

A. Herbert Haupt's home; the home of Mr. and Mrs. Haupt.

Q. Where was that located?

A. Fremont Street.

Q. Do you know the address?
A. No, I don't.
Q. 2234 North Fremont?
A. That is quite possible.
Q. About what time did you arrive there?
A. Oh, anywheres between—I believe it must have been around eight or eight-thirty in the evening.
Q. In the evening?
A. Something like that; yes.
Q. Who was there when you arrived at 2234 North Fremont?
A. On arriving there, Mr. and Mrs. Haupt were there.
Q. You have to speak up louder, please.
A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt were there.
Q. That is the defendant Hans Haupt?
A. That is right.
Q. And Erna Haupt; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Was there anyone else there?
488 A. A gentleman was there I met later on in the evening.
Q. What is his name?
A. I believe the first name is Gus, a fellow I recall at the time.
Q. Do you know whether or not it was Gus Zermer?
A. I believe that is right.
Q. What did you do when you went to the Haupt home that evening?
A. Well, I arrived there and Mr. Haupt told me that Herbert Haupt had gone out to meet me, so Mr. Haupt went out after I arrived, to see if he could catch up with him. Then they came back together.
Q. About what time, then, after you had arrived there did Herbert Haupt and the defendant Hans Haupt come in?
A. Not any more than fifteen or twenty minutes later.
Mr. Hurley. Keep your voice up, if you will, please.
The Witness. All right.
Q. Now, what, if anything, did you do in that interval of time when the defendant went out of the home?
A. Mrs. Haupt prepared something for me to eat.
Q. Something for you to eat?
A. That is right.
489 Q. Now, when the defendant Hans Haupt and Herbert Haupt came back, what, if anything, did you do then?
A. Well, I believe some of the sandwiches she made for me she brought in the living room, and Herbert and I sat in the living room, and I ate the sandwiches.
Q. The defendant Hans Haupt and Erna Haupt and this man Gus Zermer?

A. They were in the kitchen.
Q. They were in the kitchen?
A. That is right.
Q. And how long did you remain in there, in the living room with Herbert Haupt, in the Haupt home at 2234 North Fremont Street, Chicago, Illinois?
A. About two or two and a half hours.
Q. And that would bring it up to about what time?
A. I imagine it was around 10:30 in the evening.
Q. And did you engage in conversation while you were there in the living room?
A. Yes, we did.
Q. What, if anything, did Herbert Haupt say to you at that time?
A. Well, naturally, I asked him where he had been.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object, your Honor, not in the presence of Hans Haupt. It is not material to any of the overt acts charged in the indictment.
490 The COURT. Well, I think on the question before I ruled they were relevant, material, and proper to show the character of the person whom the defendant is alleged to have given aid and comfort, and that will be the ruling now.
Mr. HURLEY. Read the last question.
(Last preceding question read by the reporter.)
The WITNESS. He told me he had been to Mexico.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did he say anything else, Mrs. Saure?
A. Well, there were personal questions, naturally, why he hadn't written, and I asked him about it, and he said he was busy, he was out there in Mexico, he said, they were looking for gold.
Q. They were mining gold?
A. They were looking for gold, he told me.
Q. Did he mention any other subject other than Mexico?
A. Not that I can think of.
Q. Did he say anything about the Draft Board?
A. I believe I asked him about that, and he said it was already taken care of.
Q. Did he say when it was taken care of?
A. I beg your pardon?
Q. Did he say when it was taken care of?
A. No; I believe he just said it was taken care of—Well,
491 he had registered—I don't remember exactly what he said.
Q. Now, about what time did you leave home that evening; the Haupt home?

A. I believe it was around 10 or 10:30; something like that.
Q. Did anyone go with you?
A. No.
Q. No one at all?
A. No one at all; just Herbert took me home.
Q. That is Herbert Haupt; correct?
A. That is right.
Q. Then Zermer and Mr. and Mrs. Haupt were in the home when you left?
A. That is right.
Q. And how did you get from the Haupt home 2234 North Fremont Avenue to your place of residence?
A. He took me in his own car.
Q. By "he" you mean Herbert Haupt?
A. Yes.
Q. And did you stop anywhere on the way home?
A. Yes; we stopped in a tavern, the "Tenycks" on Ashland Avenue.
Q. That is the name of the tavern?
A. That is right.
Q. How long did you stay there?
A. Oh, about fifteen minutes, I think.
Q. Did you see Herbert Haupt after that evening?
492 A. No, I didn't.
Q. Did you talk to him at any time after that evening?
A. He called me up on the phone a few times, that is, I think about twice, I believe two or three times, and he wanted to make a future date.
Q. Did you make a future date?
A. For the following Saturday.
Q. That was the Saturday of the same week you had seen him on that Tuesday, the 23rd; is that right?
A. That is right.
Q. And what time were you to meet him on Saturday evening?
A. We had not specified any particular time. He was to call me again that Saturday.
Q. Did you see him on Saturday?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. What, if anything, did you do that Saturday evening with reference to that appointment you had?
A. Well, I waited for his call and I didn't hear from him, and I called his mother and his house.
Q. After that phone call, did you do anything?
A. I went out and had dinner downtown.
Q. After that you had your dinner; where, if any place, did you go?

A. I called her again. I don't know exactly where we 493 went. I went to some friends of mine at the time and we had a few drinks after dinner, and then I called Mrs. Haupt again.

Q. Then after you called Mrs. Haupt the second time, did you do anything?

A. Well, we went out some place. I believe I went over to Mrs. Haupt's home later on in the evening.

Q. About what time did you arrive out there?

A. Anywheres between eleven o'clock and twelve o'clock; somewheres around that time.

Q. And who did you see when you went out there on Saturday night?

A. When I went to the house?

Q. When you went to the Haupt house, 2234 Fremont Street?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt were there.

Q. That is the defendant you pointed out here?

A. Yes; and Mr. and Mrs. Wergin.

Q. Mr. and Mrs. Otto Wergin were there?

A. That is right.

Q. Was there anyone else there other than those you have named?

A. Not at the house; no.

Q. That you recall?

A. No.

494 Q. And how long did you remain in the Haupt home that Saturday evening?

A. I remained there all night.

Q. Did you leave together at any time?

A. In the morning we did.

Q. About what time?

A. Well, six or six-thirty; something like that.

Q. Where did you go then?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to this, your Honor. It seems that neither Herbert Haupt is involved nor Hans Haupt, and it seems to me there is no connection between the questions of counsel and those made in the indictment.

Mr HURLEY. I expect to follow this with a question which will clear it up.

The WITNESS. We went over to the house of Mr. and Mrs. Froehling.

Q. Did anyone go with you?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and myself went.

Q. What, if anything, did you or Mr. or Mrs. Haupt do then after you arrived there over at the Froehling home?

A. Mrs. Haupt went in the house and told us she would be only a few minutes, and we sat out in the car.

Q. By "we" you mean you and Hans Haupt waited out in the car?

495 A. That is right.

Q. How long did you wait there in front of the Froehling home?

A. Oh, about fifteen or twenty minutes, and the FBI man came out to the car and talked to us.

Q. After he had talked to you, what did you do?

A. He took us into the home.

Q. How long did you remain there?

A. Oh, not more than half an hour, I believe.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. I went back to the house with Mr. and Mrs. Haupt, then I left for my own home after that.

Q. You left for your own home?

A. Shortly after that.

Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time was it when she came in?

A. About ten minutes later or fifteen minutes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. How long?

Mr. FINN. Ten or fifteen minutes, he said

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I think the questions, which are all leading, should not be asked. Let the witness state and tell it.

The COURT. Well, generally speaking, that is so. It is difficult to understand this witness. I don't think it is leading. However, don't lead any more than you have to, Mr. District Attorney.

By Mr. FINN:

506 Q. Now, where did you go after Hans and Herbert Haupt had come into the apartment; where did you go?

A. I stayed there. I was in the front room.

Q. That would be the parlor, would it?

A. The parlor, yes, they call it.

Q. And where did they go?

A. They were in the kitchen eating supper. Mrs. Haupt had supper ready and she was waiting for them.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please, I should like to have counsel specify who "they" is.

Mr. FINN. Well, I meant Hans and Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, how about Erna.

The WITNESS. They had all three together.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And Gerda; where was she?

Mr. FINN. I understood he said all three were together.

Mr. BERTRAM. Wait just a minute.

Mr. FINN. All right.

Q. How long did you remain in the front room?

A. Well, I was in there.

Q. Yes.

A. Before that was already when the supper was already.

Q. How long did you stay in the front room?

A. About twenty minutes; twenty-five minutes.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. To the kitchen.

507 Q. They had supper ready, then you all went in the kitchen?

A. They ate first.

Q. When you say "They ate first," who do you mean?

A. The three.

Q. Who?

A. Mr. Haupt, Mrs. Haupt, and Herbert Haupt.

Q. All right. Then you waited out in the front room; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Gerda Melinda there at that time?

A. She come while they were eating at that time.

Q. She got there afterward or before that?

The COURT. He comes while they ate.

Mr. FINN. I didn't hear that; all right.

Q. Now, did they finish eating?

A. Yes; I guess so.

Q. Where did Herbert Haupt go?

A. Herbert Haupt go in the front room. I left the front room and stayed in the kitchen.

Q. You left the front room; you went into the kitchen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Herbert Haupt went into the front room; is that correct?

A. Yes.

508 Q. Who was in the front room with Herbert?

A. Yes, sir; Mrs. Melind.

Q. You were not listening to their conversation?

A. No; not so nosey.

Q. All right. Now, then, you went back into the kitchen; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was there at that time?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt.

Q. Now, did you have a conversation in the kitchen with them?

A. Oh, they were just washing the dishes and I was standing around there.

Q. Do you recall if anything else was said there on that occasion?

A. No; nothing what I remember; oh, they were talking over something there.

Q. Well; let me ask you this; to refresh your recollection, was anything said about an automobile?

A. That was in the front room where they were talking on that.

Q. What was said in the front room about an automobile?

A. Mr. Haupt bought an automobile, and that was all. She asked him the price and I didn't hear the price.

Q. Who said they bought an automobile?

569 A. Mr. Haupt.

Q. You are indicating the defendant?

A. Hans, who was there, he commenced talking, and he said to Mrs. Haupt he bought a machine.

Q. How long did you remain there in the kitchen?

A. Fifteen minutes, I guess.

Q. What is it?

A. Fifteen minutes.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. Home.

Q. Now, before you went home, did you have a conversation with Mr. Haupt?

A. Yes, sir; he asked me a question.

Q. What is it?

A. He asked me one question where I lived.

Q. He asked you for your address?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were you standing at that time; where were you at that time?

A. In the kitchen.

Q. And what did you say to him when he asked you for your address?

A. You know my address; I still live there.

Q. What is that?

A. You know, I still live there. You know my address, 851 Fullerton.

Q. Did you ask him why he wanted to know your address?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to the leading question.

510 Mr. FINN. I don't think that is leading, your Honor.

Mr. BERTRAM. Ask him to relate the conversation.

The COURT. Yes, but the observation which I made a while ago is applicable. Proceed. Don't lead any more than you have to.

Mr. FINN. I am trying not to, but it is very difficult.

Q. Did you ask him why he wanted your address?

A. No, not directly.

Q. Just what did you say; what did you say and what did he say at that conversation?

A. I said, "You know my address, 851 Fullerton, and I still live there."

Q. Yes. What else was said on that subject?

A. Then I asked him, not directly then, I found out that he wanted my address for the mail.

Q. For the mail?

A. The boy was travelling around, and to send the mail to me——

Mr. FINN. Just a moment. You are going so fast.

Q. What was said about the mail?

A. "That he should send the mail to my house and I should bring it over to his house."

Q. Who said that?

A. Mr. Haupt.

511 Q. Well, just tell us exactly what he said, tell us just what he said to you, and what you said to him on that subject.

The COURT. Go slowly; very slowly.

The WITNESS. Well, I said to him, "what he wanted my address for." He said, "Herbert is travelling around all the time, and he use my address for mail and I bring the mail to his house."

Mr. FINN. Will you read that answer, Mr. Reporter, please.

(Last preceding answer read by the reporter.)

The WITNESS. That is it exactly.

The COURT. Is that what you said?

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Was there anything else said about the subject of your address there at 851; why he wanted your address?

A. "Herbert was travelling around."

Mr. FINN. Yes.

A. "And he send the mail to my house, and I should bring it over."

Q. Now, in addition to that, about the mail, was there anything else said about why he wanted your address?

A. That is why he wanted it, "he was travelling around."

512 Q. Was there anything said on the subject of getting a room for Herbert?

A. That is a different question, I guess, that was before that was.

Q. Tell us what was said about that, either before or after, whenever it took place.

A. That was when I was sitting in the front room, before, I guess I was in the kitchen. Because I can't remember that any more. Mr. Haupt asked me if I got a room for Herbert in my house, and I said, "No, I got a room for me alone; then what do you want a room for?"

Mr. FINN. I can't hear you.

Q. He asked you to get a room for Herbert in your home?

A. If I got a room in my room, and I said, "No; what do you want a room for? Ask the landlady, maybe she got, but I got no room in my place."

Q. Did you ask him why he wanted a room for Herbert over at your place?

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I think counsel is going away beyond the order that is necessary. He is leading the witness all the time.

The COURT. I don't think so. Go ahead.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Did you ask why he wanted Herbert to get a room at your place?

513 A. They got just one bedroom, see, and they don't want to lay down in the front room.

Q. Was there anything else said on that subject about the room?

A. Getting a room, what for, a room; what do you mean?

Q. About getting a room for Herbert?

A. It was too small at his house. He said he had three rooms, all he had over there.

Q. And was there anything else said on that subject about getting a room for Herbert over there?

A. Well, his flat——

Q. What is it?

A. His flat was too small to sleep in there.

Q. Mr. Zermer, anything else besides the question of the size of the flat, did he say anything else about getting a room for Herbert, why he wanted a room for Herbert?

A. His flat was too small.

Q. Yes; anything else said?

A. No.

Q. You testified—your Honor, I would like permission to cross-examine this witness.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will object to that, your Honor.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That has been done the last time, too, and the matter was abandoned.

514 Mr. FINN. The matter was not abandoned, by any means.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes, it was abandoned on the subject.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. You testified on the last trial of this case, did you not, Mr. Zermer?

A. Yes, sir.

515 Mr. FINN. To recall, will you see if these questions and these answers refresh your memory:

"Question. Mr. Zermer, you testified before the Grand Jury, did you not?

"Answer. Yes.

"The COURT. Q. On the 31st of August 1942; is that correct?

"Answer. I guess so."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What is the page?

Mr. FINN. Page 771.

"Question. And you were sworn to tell the truth at that time, were you not?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"The COURT. Q. ——

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question. Under oath?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question. Is that correct?
"Answer. Yes, sir.
"Question. Were you asked this question at that time, and did you make this answer: 'That he was afraid for Herbert to remain in his apartment at 2234 North Fremont Street.' Did you tell that to the FBI?
516 "Answer. This story?
"Question. Yes.
"Answer. Not when he came.
"Question. Did you tell the FBI what I have just read to you?
"Answer. Yes.
"Question. Was it true?
"Answer. Yes.
"Question. That sentence was true?
"Answer. Yes.
"Question. That I have just read to you?
"Answer. Yes.
"Question. Were those questions asked you and did you make those answers at that time?
"Answer. Yes.
"Question. Those were true at that time, were they not?
"Answer. Yes; they are still true now.
"Question. They are true now, are they not?
"Answer. Yes.
"Question. So that Hans Haupt told you that night that he was afraid to have Herbert around the house, is not that true?
"Answer. Yes, sir."

Were those questions asked you at that time and did 517 you make those answers?
A. Yes.
Q. And they were true, were they not, at that time?
A. They were true.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I suggest the witness be allowed to finish his answer and not be interrupted by counsel.
The COURT. Just a moment.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. They were true at that time, were they not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. So that Hans Haupt on that night told you that he was afraid to have Herbert around the house, is not that true?
A. Yes.
Mr. FINN. That is all.
The WITNESS. Just what you asked me that question. You did not ask me that question.

Q. You did not recall that portion of the conversation; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. But it did take place that night; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

The COURT. Did you get to this last statement of his? Read it, Mr. Reporter.

(Record read.)

518 The COURT. And he said he had not been asked that question.

Mr. FINN. We were at cross purposes, evidently. I am sorry, Mr. Zermer. I would like to make sure that the court reporter has got the record clear.

The COURT. We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon the Jury retired.)

The COURT. You may step down, if you want to, but do not talk to anybody, and then come back when the recess is over.

(Whereupon a recess was taken.)

The COURT. Proceed.

Mr. FINN. When Mr. Haupt asked you if you would bring mail sent by Herbert to your home over to his house, what did you say to him?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that, your Honor. That is not the question that was asked.

Mr. FINN. What is the question that was asked?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There was no question whether he would bring it.

The COURT. Read the question.

(Question read.)

The COURT. That is not what he said. Put your question again.

Mr. FINN. I will lay a foundation for it first,

519 your Honor.

Q. What did Hans Haupt say about mail to you that evening?

Mr. BERTRAM. That has been answered; both asked and answered.

The COURT. I think it has.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. What did you tell Hans Haupt when he asked you about mail?

A. I asked him for what mail come to my house.

Q. What?

A. I asked him for what he sent the mail to my house.

The COURT. "I asked for what he was sending the mail to my house."

By Mr. FINN:

Q. What did he say?

A. He said Herbert would travel around and send the mail to my house, bring it over there, that was all.

Q. What did you say to him?

Mr. BERTRAM. That has been gone over two or three times.

Mr. FINN. No, sir.

The COURT. Let the witness answer.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. What did you say after that?

A. I asked that question. That is all. Then he told me Herbert travelled around, sent mail to my house, I should bring it over to his house.

520 Q. Did you say you would do it or would not do it?

A. I do not remember that no more. That is many years. I do not remember that no more.

Q. Mr. Zermer, if I read some questions on this subject from your testimony of the last trial, would these possibly refresh your memory about that subject?

A. I do not know.

Q. You said that you did not remember now. Would it refresh your memory if I read to you some questions from the record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recollect these questions being asked at the former trial and you making these answers:

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What page?

Mr. FINN. 785.

"Question. Did you say you would receive the mail for Herbert when he was travelling around and would send it to you?

"Answer. Yes.

"Question. You told that to Hans and Erna, is that right: you would receive the mail and bring that over there to their house?

"Answer. Yes."

Q. Do you recollect those questions being asked you, and 521 do you recollect making those answers at the former trial, and were they true and correct at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you did agree——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to the conclusion of counsel.

Mr. FINN. So you did state that you would bring such mail as Herbert would send to your house over to the Haupt home; is that correct?

The COURT. Did you get the answer?

A. Yes, sir.

The COURT. He does not hear you unless you speak.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Zermer, did you receive a subpoena to come to court today? Were you served some sort of paper you should be here?

A. Yes; I got a card.

Q. May I see it?

A. [Producing document.]

Q. Who delivered this card to you, Mr. Zermer?

A. Who delivered?

Q. Yes.

A. The Marshall.

522 Q. Is that card now in the same condition as it was when you received it?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will ask that this card be marked for indentification as "Defendant's Exhibit 1."

(The document produced by counsel was marked for identification "Defendant's Exhibit 1.")

Q. I now direct your attention to Defendant's Exhibit 1, and refer you to that part of it, where it reads as follows: "You are required under penalty to appear as a witness on behalf of the United States in the above-mentioned court, at room 450 United States Courthouse, Chicago, Illinois, on May 15—" dashed out—"May 18, 1944, at 10 o'clock A. M." Did you on either of those days appear at room 450 at this courthouse?

A. On the 18th?

Q. On the 15th?

A. 15th, no.

Q. 18th?

A. 18th.

Q. When you came to room 450, was that this courtroom?

A. No.

Q. What place did you find at room 450?

A. That was the office I walked into, Mr. Finn's office.

Q. Was it the office of the United States District
523 Attorney you were subpoenaed to?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Finn.

Q. That was on the 18th. Was there any court held on that day? Did you go to court and testify?

A. No.

Q. You merely saw Mr. Finn in the office of the United States District Attorney?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. Twenty-five minutes.

Q. When had you last been in the office of the United States District Attorney?

A. It was on the 18th.

Q. Before that?

A. Before? It was a week before.

Q. A week before?

A. Yes. I do not know that name any more.

Q. How did you happen to get there a week before?

A. It was by telephone—or was that telegram?

Q. Was it a telephone message?

A. Telephone message and telegram. I had a telegram, too. I do not know which date is on there.

Q. Telegram and telephone message?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you more than once, about a week before?

A. No, just week before that, before I got this one.

524 Q. You were there twice within the last four weeks?

A. Yes.

Q. That week before; how long did you talk to anyone in the United States District Attorney's office?

A. Just Mr. Finn.

Q. How long?

A. About twenty-five.

Q. The next time, forty-five minutes?

Mr. FINN. Pardon me. I think you misinterpret what he said.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. How long did you talk to him the last time; about a week ago?

A. Twenty-five minutes.

Q. Did you not say that, before, forty-five minutes?

A. Not forty-five minutes. Twenty-five or thirty minutes I had said.

Q. Slowly.

A. Twenty-five or thirty minutes; what I said before.

Q. How long did you talk to him when you went down there in response to a telegram?

A. And after, I guess, it was the telegram, I think I got this after the telegram. It was for the 15th. It was the 18th. I do not remember that no more now.

Q. Did you go once or twice, then?

A. Twice.

525 Q. How long did you talk to him each time?

A. It was about twenty-five minutes.

Q. Each time?

A. Yes; or half an hour.

Q. Do you mind, Mr. Zermer, if I keep this card for the time being, and deliver it to you at a later date?

A. You may, if you wish.

Mr. WOLL. The witness should have it punched, if your Honor please.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Will you return it to me after you have had it punched today?

A. It is punched.

Q. For today?

A. Just Mr. Finn have to sign it when I am through, that is all.

Q. During June of 1942, you were living in some sort of a rooming house at 851 Fullerton Avenue?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was it that Hans Haupt was living at that time?

A. 2234 Fremont.

Q. Did you remember the exact house number two years ago, or have you learned it during the trial?

A. I just heard it a little while ago, and I still remember it.

526 Q. You do not say at that time, two years ago, that you merely knew the location of the house?

A. I know the location. I was not there no more after that two years.

Q. A little slower. If you had wanted to write him a letter during June 1942, you would have known his house number at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went very frequently?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For a while you went there every evening, did you not?

A. Not every evening, once a week; two weeks twice.

Q. And you have testified he took you home two or three times in his automobile?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That he would leave you off in front of the house or possibly at the corner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell him the number of that particular house where you lived?

A. Yes, I told him the number of the house, too.

Q. When did you tell him that, when he let you off at the corner the first time?

A. The first time; yes.

527 Q. Did he ask you, "What is the number of this house where we are stopping?"

A. No; not at that time.

Q. At what time was it?

A. It was before. It was before May 1st; or the second time when he took me.

Q. Did he write it down?

A. No.

Q. So you once told him the number of the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Zermer, did you on June 28, 1942, work at Harm's Park as a bartender for the German Day Association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember that Hans Haupt was the Chairman of some Committee on this German Day Association?

A. Yes, he was committeeman; he was not there that day.

Q. He was not there?

A. No.

Q. You remember he was Chairman of some Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. The Sunday preceding, on June 21st, there were some festivities in the same park by the United Male Choruses; do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. I will object to that as improper cross-examination.

528 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will show—I will connect it up, your Honor.

Q. Did you see Hans Haupt there, too, at that time?

A. I do not remember that.

Q. Do you remember if Hans Haupt asked you for your address at that time, telling you, "I want to give it to the Chairman of the Bar Committee so that they can tell you you should come over to work on the German Day Association Sunday"?

A. It was about two months before that—which one? For the German Day, do you mean?

Q. The German Day Association had this festivity on June 28th?

A. On June 28th.

Q. The United Male Chorus had its festivity on June 21st?

A. We had nothing to do with that feast. He did not ask me nothing.

Q. You worked there, did you not?

A. I was there.

Q. And he went there, did he not?

A. No; I cannot remember any more if I see him.

Q. Do you remember that Hans Haupt told you, "Give me your address and I will tell the chairman of the Bar Committee to communicate with you so that you can work on the German Day Association"?

529 A. That was about two months before that.

Q. About two months before?

A. Yes.

Q. He asked you then for that address, for that purpose?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time did he write it down?

A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know?

A. No.

Q. Did he ask you for that address at that time so that he could arrange for you to work as bartender on June 28th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1942?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the German Day Association held the picnic at Harm's Park?

A. Yes.

Q. On Western Avenue?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Zermer, so that you may not become confused, let us slowly go over to June 23, 1942, on a Tuesday. Do you remember that evening you went to the home of Hans Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You remember that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you arrived there, who was in the home?

A. Just Mrs. Haup alone.

Q. And then she told you—what did she tell you

530 when you asked her where Hans was?

A. I asked her first if Hans was home, and she said no. Then as she stepped to the window, looked down. Then she said, "There he is, coming with Herbert."

Mr. Bixx. What?

A. "There he is, coming with Herbert."

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. She told you immediately, looking out the window, that the two were coming home?

A. Yes.

Q. Or to the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Hans and Herbert, and they did come up immediately, did they not?

A. Yes.

Q. So you had been in the house all told perhaps not more than five minutes when Hans and Herbert came in there?

A. It was two minutes.

Q. And after while some young lady came in, Gerda Melindi?

A. Yes.

Q. How much later was that?

A. I do not know whether it was ten or fifteen minutes or twenty minutes. I was sitting there, reading the story; had a paper. Then she came in while they were eating supper. It was 531 about fifteen minutes at the most; longest.

Q. At the time when Gerda Melindi came in were Hans and Herbert home?

A. Hans and Herbert; yes, they was in the kitchen.

Q. Are you sure that Hans and Herbert did not come in later, after Gerda Melindi came?

A. No; they was sitting, eating supper.

Q. Did you see them? Where were you sitting at the time when they were in the kitchen?

A. I was in the parlor.

Q. In what part?

A. In the parlor.

Q. Where were you sitting in the parlor? Can you draw a diagram of that home, Mr. Zermer; just show us about what it looked like, in a rough manner, if you please?

A. I am not artist.

Q. In a rough way.

A. Hall building—just a room.

Q. The front, and where the kitchen is, where they were sitting, and of the part you were sitting in.

A. That is the kitchen. There is the hallway. There is the front.

Q. Mark the front. This hall goes clear up into here and down this way, does it, runs into the bedroom, against the bedroom, or how?

532 A. It was just a bedroom. This is the parlor. There is the hall. That was all.

Mr. Finn. Your Honor, I cannot hear the witness talking with Mr. Warnholtz. I do not think the court reporter can hear it.

Mr. Warnholtz. We will turn that over, sir.

Q. You will draw a mark to show where the hall leading from the front room——.

A. Yes.

Q. To the entrance——

A. Yes.

Q. Does that extend clear out, so it runs against the bedroom? Does it go into this door, which is a door——

A. That is the door.

The Court. You are standing so close to the witness he talks to you.

Mr. Warnholtz. That is difficult, I realize; I am sorry, your Honor.

Q. Now, mark in the front room the chair, where you were sitting, the location?

A. There.

Q. That corner?

A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you, will you mark that corner with a capital "A," the place where you sat? I will ask you, sitting in that 533 chair, could you, from there, look into the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Could you see from there who was eating in the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Did you go to the kitchen to see who was eating there?

A. No.

Q. When Gerda Melindi came, at the time she came, where did she go?

A. She was still sitting in the living room.

Q. In the front room?

A. Yes.

Q. When Hans and Herbert came in, how long did they stay in the front room until they went into the kitchen?

A. It was not long; maybe two minutes.

Q. Then they spoke about having bought an automobile?

A. Yes.

Q. During that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Zermer, when you first, the first time you testified here, about a year and a half ago, in this case, as to what Hans Haupt told you about why he wanted a room in your building, you became rather confused, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you confused now?
A. No.
Q. How is that?
A. No.
534 Q. How many bedrooms are there in the Haupt home?
A. One.
Q. When did you hear about this case, the first time, from the authorities, about how long ago, Mr. Zermer?
A. The first time?
Q. That the authorities came to you about this matter; when?
A. In the first case do you mean, Mr. Warnholtz?
Q. Well, in this case, itself, the very first time that you were approached by the authorities; when was that, and where was it?
A. November; November 1942. It was October——
Q. Well, who talked to you first about this case, members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?
A. That was in August.
Q. August 1942?
A. 1942; the Federal Agent of the FBI.
Q. Where did you meet them?
A. They come, picked me up in the shop.
Q. They picked you up?
A. Yes.
Q. Where were you working at that time?
A. I was working there.
Q. Where?
A. 2231 Lincoln Avenue.
535 Q. Are you an American citizen?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you ever been arrested for the commission of any crime?
A. No.
Mr. FINN. I will object to the materiality of this.
The COURT. So state. The only question, if you are seeking to impeach him, is has he ever been convicted of a felony.
Mr. FINN. I do not think counsel has any such purpose.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Not for that purpose.
Q. Did these agents, when they picked you up, have a warrant for your arrest?
Mr. FINN. I will object to that; immaterial.
A. This attorney, I gave him that——
The COURT. Sustained.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What did they tell you when they came?
Mr. FINN. I will object to that as immaterial.
A. They asked me my name.
Mr. FINN. Just a minute.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Name?

Mr. FINN. I think it is immaterial.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I want to show, your Honor, that the FBI used third-degree methods on this man.

536 The COURT. What?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Used third-degree methods on this man.

The COURT. What?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That they used third-degree methods on this man to obtain the statement on which all future examinations were based.

Q. What did they say to you when they arrived?

Mr. FINN. Of course, the court has an objection before him. I do not think he has ruled on it.

The COURT. You may step into the jury room, ladies and gentlemen.

(And thereupon the Jury withdrew from the courtroom in charge of the Marshall, and thereafter the following proceedings were had in the Jury's absence:)

By the COURT:

Q. Your name is Gustav——

A. Gustav Zermer.

Q. Gustav Zermer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The things that you have told us here today, are they true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The whole truth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nothing but the truth?

A. That is right.

Q. Nothing but the truth?

A. Yes.

537 Q. You felt under no constraint or duress, that you have to tell what anybody forced you to tell—anything that was not true?

A. It was all true what I have told so far.

The COURT. That is the question, Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. WOLL. May I say this, your Honor: I think Mr. Warnholtz has in mind the same type of thing that he went into on the first trial. That, of course——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Maybe I would like——

Mr. WOLL. The question whether this witness also stated as to his being treated during that time better than he had ever been treated in his life, had a better bed to sleep on.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mr. Woll, you do not have to talk for me.

Mr. WOLL. Go ahead. Tell the court.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I want to show this man was held for three days without lawful authority; that he was held over in the Bankers Building in the private jail of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, not allowed to go home, his clothing taken away from him; that he signed three or four statements—four or five—three or four at least; he must have been utterly confused at the time he got through there; then he was asked questions at times
538 without food, because I believe that he stated once he was hungry.

Certainly it should not take very long to get these few facts which you mentioned.

The COURT. I am not going to correct all of the evil in this world in this case.

Let us say, the only question I am interested in at the moment is whether or not anything this witness told us this afternoon is untrue. That is the only question before me, whether or not by force, intimidation, duress, or anything of that sort, he has told anything that is untrue. He has assured us it was the whole truth.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We would like to show the Jury it is not the truth.

The COURT. I am not going to enter into those collateral matters. I am not going to confuse the issue to this Jury with that—

Mr. BERTRAM. They should have the benefit of that.

The COURT. No.

Mr. BERTRAM. Whether it is the testimony——

The COURT. What?

Mr. BERTRAM. The Jury should have the right—that is, we should have the right to have the Jury informed about these methods that Mr. Warnholtz mentioned to your Honor, which certainly showed—— 539 The COURT. Do you expect to show that this witness said anything else; anything different from what he now says, at any time?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I expect to show that this witness at this time does not know what he is talking—he is talking by influence or fear.

The COURT. You expect to show that this witness ever at any time made any different statement than any he has made this afternoon?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes; we shall anticipate it in this way: I will bring out that he signed three or four statements. I cannot conceive why the FBI should make him sign three or four statements—I have never seen them—unless they show inconsistency, and we expect to show it in this way, if the man is asked on three or four points, or facts—only, if he answered the questions for three days, for fully three days, and during that time was held illegally——

The COURT. You are just confusing my question. That brings up another question. I do not want to go into any interrogation or question not pertinent to the question before us. The only question, so far as this witness is concerned, has he told us anything now not true?

546 Mr. BERTRAM. One time, your Honor will recall that he testified nothing else was said, and then Mr. Finn got out the record heretofore, of the last trial, and before the Grand Jury, and put these questions to the witness, and asked him the question, "Are those things true or not?" Where the witness, having made confidential statements, would be in fear that he would be at one time or another punished for perjury, or something, on such method of interrogation. I think the method of interrogation was such as to—as it is here——.

The COURT. I have listened, and we listened to what was said to him. He said, "Yes, I said it. You did not ask me about that." Bear in mind that this witness does not use English with the facility of some of us. He was doing the best he could. He has done very well; but when he was asked, he said, "Yes, I said that. You did not ask me that." That is what the witness said.

Mr. BERTRAM: By third-degree methods, to go into the attitude of the witness here, because fear under those circumstances, I think the method that counsel used here, Mr. Finn, was very——

The COURT. It is a way of refreshing his recollection.

547 Mr. BERTRAM. It resulted in something beyond that, because it made the witness change his previous statement, that that was all that was said.

The COURT. It did not do anything of the kind. This witness with a limited understanding of English, had to be cross examined really. The questions have got to be leading with this witness, or we would never get anything out of him, talking to him in English. We have got to lead this witness, or we won't get anything out of him.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Maybe we will be able to show they said his citizenship papers would be taken away because of the investigation.

Mr. FINN. I do not think there was any such statement.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I know some of these witnesses were threatened. I do not know whether he was included in that.

Q. Did anybody talk to you about taking citizenship papers away from you, of the FBI?

A. Mr. Hirsch.

Q. Mr. Hirsch?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you you might be sent to a Concentration Camp?
A. No.
Q. Just said citizenship taken away?
542 A. Yes.
The COURT. Who is Mr. Hirsch?
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mr. Hirsch is an FBI agent, who will testify.

By the COURT:

Q. Have you told us anything that was untrue today, because of what Mr. Hirsch said? Have you told us anything today that was untrue?
A. No; no question.
Q. Have you said anything here today that was untrue, because anybody said anything to you in the past, or threatened you in the past, have you told me an untruth?
A. I told the truth, questions what I understand, I answered.
Q. Listen to this: Have you told anything here at all today that is untrue?
A. No. All of it true.
Q. What?
A. All true.
Q. All of it?
A. Yes.
The COURT. You are going to undertake to show that he told something that was untrue?
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I am going to attempt to show that he is confused; that these statements which he states today are not the statements he originally made; that I would attempt to show by inference. I believe we should have the right to do it.
The COURT. Go ahead. Do it right now.
543 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I want the Jury to get the benefit of it.
The COURT. Do it right here, and if you do it, I will let the Jury hear it. Go ahead with him right now. I do not want to confuse the mind of the jurors.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. When the FBI agents came into your place of employment at 2231 Lincoln Avenue, did they ask you if you would be willing to come, or did they tell you to go along?
A. They showed me the card, investigation cards, what they had with them. I came along over. I went for my clothes changed, went right over with him.
Q. Had they told you to go along with them?
A. Yes.
Q. Where did you go?
A. I go right with them. There were two fellows there.
Q. Down to the Bankers Building?

A. Yes; down to the 19th floor.

Q. About what time of day was it when they took you down?

A. About 10:30 it was, in the shop.

Q. 10:30, about?

A. Yes.

Q. When you arrived at the Bankers Building, that was what day of the week, Thursday, do you remember?

A. It was on a Thursday.

544 Q. When you arrived down there, what happened?

A. What is that?

Q. What happened when you got down there?

A. They asked me questions. I came in this room, sat down, and two fellows took my name, brought me in there, and they asked me questions.

Q. How long did they ask you questions?

A. It was about eleven o'clock until night eleven o'clock.

Q. About twelve hours?

A. Yes; twelve; yes.

Q. Then what happened to you?

A. Then I went to bed, after they told me to stay there, they gave me a room, had a bed, I was sleeping there.

Q. After you arrived, did they take your clothing away from you, your coat and vest?

A. Yes. I had some suit, they gave me one suit that was too big, and they had my pants along.

Q. They told you to take your clothes off and put on overalls, did they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Those overalls did not fit you?

A. No. Then I got my pants back.

Q. They allowed you to keep your pants on?

A. Yes.

545 Q. What did they do with the coat?

A. Had it in one room.

Q. Same room with you?

A. Not with me.

Q. They put it into another room?

A. Yes.

Q. In the evening when they got through questioning you, about eleven or twelve o'clock, you went to bed?

A. Well, they first brought me something to eat.

Q. They brought you something to eat?

A. Yes. That was the first time.

Q. Was that room where you slept in, locked, or could you have left it?

A. It was locked.

Q. From the outside?
A. Yes.
Q. And did they keep you there the next day?
A. The next day, questioned.
Q. That, you say, was Friday?
A. Yes.
Q. You stayed there all of that day, too?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they question you on Friday?
A. Yes.
Q. How long did they question you on Friday?
A. They came; they came in there. I do not know how many times a day it was.
Q. Then on Saturday, the same thing?
A. Saturday, the same.
Q. From Friday to Saturday, when you were there,
546 were you again sleeping in the same room you had slept?
A. The same room.
Q. And the room was again locked?
A. I left on Saturday.
Q. Did you ask Mr. Hirsch at any time whether or not you were arrested?
A. No.
Q. Is it not a fact that he said you were not arrested, but you could not leave?
A. Just we have—he just told me he had to hold me there. That was all.
Q. He had to hold you there?
A. Yes.
Q. Mr. Hirsch told you that while you were there in the Bankers Building?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you sign any statement while you were there?
A. I signed many.
Q. How many?
A. Three or four, I do not know.
Q. Three or four statements?
A. Yes.
Q. During all of that time, that is, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Mr. Zermer—what time did you leave on Saturday?
547 A. Ten minutes to four.
Q. And during that time until ten minutes to four you discussed the same subject matter you have discussed here?
A. It was not so much afternoon; afternoon it was only a little while, asked me some questions.

Q. During the time that you were there, talking about these questions that we discussed now?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, did you change your answers from time to time?

A. I guess when I got the different questions, one time this way and one time the other way, I guess I was mixed up on these.

Q. At times you gave different answers?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not understand the questions?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you made a new statement?

A. Yes. I misunderstood the words—right.

Q. They treated you—let me ask you: When was it Mr. Hirsch told you that you might lose your citizenship papers?

A. It was the first day time.

Q. Do you know why he told you that?

548 A. I told a lie or something.

Q. He said you lied?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you changed your answer after that?

Mr. FINN. Just a minute. Will you please; instead of interpreting the questions, will you please let him make the answer?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You should address the court.

Mr. FINN. I will object to the form of the question, putting words into the mouth of the witness.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Cross examination. This is not direct.

The COURT. Objection overruled.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Let the court reporter read my question.

(Record read.)

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. We will go back, Mr. Zermer; you may have forgotten. You stated that Mr. Hirsch said your citizenship papers might be taken away because you told a lie?

A. Yes.

Q. After he told you that, did you then change your answer?

A. No. I asked him then the question if he wanted the truth or a lie from me. That is what I asked him. If he want 549 the truth or a lie from me, that is what I asked him. He told me, "I want the truth." I then told him, "I want the truth," and that is what I told him.

Mr. FINN. Will you read that, please?

(Answer read.)

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. What question was that where he thought that you were lying, what question had he asked?

A. I cannot remember that no more.

Q. You cannot remember that any more?

A. It was all together; I cannot remember which question that was now.

Q. How many people were asking you?

A. Three.

Q. Questions?

A. Three.

Q. Three different agents?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they, sometimes the three of them?

A. Yes; sometimes; yes. Sometimes then two walked out, and just Mr. Hirsch asked me alone them questions.

The COURT. Well, I will have to ask you to come back again Wednesday morning, and we will hear you.

Mr. Zermer, I will have to ask you to come back on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Do not discuss this case with anybody. I am telling you, do not discuss it with anybody, nobody at all. Then you come back here on the stand on Wednesday morning.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

The COURT. Bring in the Jury.

Mr. BERTRAM. May we have the witness identify this drawing? This is the drawing you made before.

The WITNESS. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Let the court reporter identify it.

The COURT. Yes; that can be done.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. This should appear as the jury——

The COURT. No jury here.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Can it be marked for identification "Defendant's Exhibit 2?"

(The document produced by counsel marked for identification "Defendant's Exhibit 2.")

(The following proceedings were had in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen, until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. There will be no court tomorrow. In the meantime, do not discuss this case with anyone, or permit anyone to discuss it with you, and return here at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

(Whereupon the further hearing of the above entitled cause was continued to Wednesday, May 31, 1944.)

551 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

v.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge, and a Jury

Wednesday, May 31, 1944, 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard G. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America. Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the defendant.

* * * * * * *

552 The COURT. Do you want the jury present?

(The following proceedings were had in open court in the absence of the jury.)

The COURT. What is this man's name, Gustav Zermer?

Mr. WOLL. Zermer.

The COURT. Do you want him interrogated about the matters you were interrogating him about on Monday evening, or are you satisfied to have the reporter read your examination, read the cross-examination so far as it went, or do you want to interrogate him?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Read it to the jury, your Honor.

The COURT. What is your preference?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I believe that should answer for that purpose. I want to ask some questions.

I would like to ask one or two more questions, whether or not he was confused at the time, because——

The COURT. All right, let the reporter read what was said on cross-examination which was had in the absence of the jury. Then you can ask him such further questions as you may desire.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I want to supplement it with one statement, that the one exhibit be marked which was not done.

553 I have one more matter, if the Court please. We at one at the beginning—the court agreed to it and counsel—that it would not be necessary to take any exceptions to rulings by the court, so if we made objection which was either sustained or overruled it would preserve that objection.

The COURT. When you submit a matter to the Court for decision you may assign as error the Court's ruling, whatever it may be, without taking an exception, all I want to do is to make sure that I know what I am ruling on.

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, we feel that we are not certain ourselves that we are sound in the position that defense attorney is not entitled to go into this type of examination before the jury. We wish to withdraw our objection of the questioning.

The COURT. I have overruled you anyhow.

Mr. WOLL. I did not know that you had ruled on it.

The COURT. I said they might either ask the witness questions in the presence of the jury or have the transcript read. He has indicated a desire to have the transcript read and to ask some other questions. Bring in the jury.

(The following proceedings were had in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

554 The COURT. Ladies and gentlemen, there was some testimony or some examination of the witness, Gustav Zermer, during your absence from the courtroom on Monday evening. The court reporter will now read that examination, questions and answers and you will listen to it with the same effect as if you had heard the examination.

GUSTAVE ZERMER, a witness called on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

(Record read as follows:)

"By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

62 Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. To make this clear I will ask you this question, Mr. rmer: Did you stay at the quarters of the Federal Bureau of Investigation at the Bankers Building, Chicago, from Thursday at eleven o'clock until Saturday the same week, at about four o'clock in the afternoon, without having left, or without leaving those quarters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were there all during that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not permitted to leave during that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Hirsch told you you were not permitted to leave?

A. I do not know that. I know I was there until ten minutes to four.

Q. Did Mr. Hirsch at one time say that he had to hold you?

A. That was the first night.

Q. Mr. Zermer, do not shake your head as an answer. Just say yes or no, kindly, so the reporter will get your answer cor-
563 rectly. When you were down there at the headquarters of the FBI did you knowingly tell them a single lie?

A. No.

Q. Do you now remember what your statement was when Mr. Hirsch of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, agent, told you you were lying?

A. Oh, he told me all the Haupt case, asked me questions about Mr. Haupt here, Herbert and Mrs. Haupt.

Mr. FINN. I cannot hear you.

A. The question was over Mr. Haupt, Mrs. Haupt and the boy. It was question over them, what Mr. Hirsch asked me, and the two other guys.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. What was the particular question, if you remember?

A. He turned it several times around, the question when I was making the answer.

Q. When was it, when did the FBI agent, Mr. Hirsch, tell you that you would lose your citizenship papers, was that the first day they had you, or the second?

A. It was the first day.

Q. How?

A. The first day?

Q. Yes.

Q. Did you tell the truth as far as you understood the questions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time were you confused at times concerning the questions that were put to you?

Mr. FINN. I do not think that is material, your Honor.

A. The first day.

Mr. FINN. What took place at the first trial, and I move the answer be stricken, your Honor.

The COURT. Strike it.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. During this hearing were you at times confused when you were asked questions?

A. Yes, sir; the first day here—I had nothing to eat here. It was in the morning 7:30 I ate and when I was asked it was about eleven o'clock.

Mr. FINN. I ask the answer be stricken, not responsive.

565 The COURT. That objection may come from the examining counsel.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Were you at any time during this hearing confused concerning questions then being asked you?

A. Not when Mr. Finn——

Mr. FINN. Just a minute, I will object to that unless stated by counsel what hearing he is speaking of, so the witness will understand.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I said at this hearing.

The COURT. At this trial?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. At this trial?

Mr. FINN. Will you state the question again, please?

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Were you at any time confused during this trial when Mr. Finn asked you questions?

A. No; not by Mr. Finn.

Q. Mr. Zermer, I now hand you a paper marked for identification—marked "Defendant's Exhibit 2"—being a diagram which you drew the other day, and I will ask you to put the word "kitchen" into the place which is supposed to indicate the location of the kitchen.

A. [Marks document.]

Q. You have simply there the letter "K"?

A. Yes.
Q. Correct?
A. Yes.
566 Q. That indicates the kitchen?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Thank you.
Mr. BERTRAM. Answer "yes" or "no."
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Did the reporter get the answer?
(Last three questions and answers read.)
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you, that is all.

Redirect-examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Mr. Zerner, you understood, did you not, that you are testifying here under oath, under the full protection of the court?
A. [Witness nods head.]
Q. Do you understand also that no one is threatening you, or no one intends threatening you; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you tell me whether the statements that you made Monday in response to questions I asked you were true or untrue?
A. It was true.
Mr. BERTRAM. I object on the ground of being leading, your Honor.
567 The COURT. He may answer that. Overruled.
Mr. FINN. Q. I think you said that the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation came out to your place of business; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they introduced themselves as FBI agents and showed you their credentials; is that correct—a card, as you said?
A. Yes, sir.

A. No.
Q. By the way, how was the food when you were up there?
A. The food was all right.
Q. What?

A. The food was all right.

568 Q. It was good?

A. I could not eat enough, so much.

Q. Did they bring you whatever you ordered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q Did you say they brought you too much?

A. They brought me too much; yes. All they brought for four people.

Q. What do you mean?

A. Same, like home.

Q. Whenever you got hungry did they bring you what you wanted?

A. Yes, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He wanted the truth?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did tell the truth; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

569 Mr. FINN. May I see the diagram?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes.

By Mr. FINN.

Q. I would like to get straight in my own mind this business about the living room and the kitchen. When you first came there, Erna Haupt was alone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then Herbert and Hans came in; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know whether Erna had prepared supper, or was preparing supper at that time before they came?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that, a leading question.

A. I said supper was ready; it was waiting for it.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I move the answer be stricken.

The COURT. No need to strike it. Do not lead the witness any more than you have to.

Mr. FINN. Q. When you first got there what was Erna Haupt doing?

A. Opened the door for me. I asked if Hans was home. She said—she walked to the window. Then she said, "There he is coming."

Q. Then where did she go?

570 A. Then there was two coming up. Then I was sitting in my chair there in the front.

Q. Did you go to the kitchen before you went into the front or not?

A. No.

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not think that is proper redirect, counsel reviewing again matters that he did on original examination. It is not redirect of the cross-examination of the witness by Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. FINN. I think it is, your Honor. He went into that subject on cross-examination. I think I have a right to go back into it.

The COURT. Objection overruled.

Mr. FINN. Where did Hans and Herbert go?

A. (No answer.)

Q. Where did Hans and Herbert go when they first came?

A. It was in the—they was in the front a little while. Then they was right go to kitchen, had supper.

So, I do in open court return this card, being something in the nature of a subpoena card, marked "Defendant's Exhibit 1," for identification, return it to Mr. Zermer so that he may have it punched and get paid.

I will ask Mr. Zermer if you will kindly leave it at my office on the way home. I am at 111 West Washington Street, and give it back to me so that it may be used at a later time; a later exhibit.

Mr. FINN. I do not think the witness has to leave anything.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Are you willing to, Mr. Zermer?

576 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you.

Mr. FINN. That is all, Mr. Zermer.

(Witness excused.)

SIDNEY S. SHERMAN, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. Sidney S. Sherman.

Q. Where do you live?

A. 1125 South Sacramento, Chicago.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. I am employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Well, at the present time I am unassigned.

Q. What is your function with that company?

A. My regular position is that of a District Manager.

Q. You said "Postal Telegraph Company"?

A. The Western Union Telegraph Company.

Q. Calling your attention to the year 1941, in August, by whom were you employed at that time?

A. Postal Telegraph Company.

577 Q. In what capacity?

A. I was on the Clerk—on the staff of the City Superintendent as District Manager.

Q. As such did you have charge of the files of telegrams?

A. No.

Q. Were they kept under your supervision?

A. No; they were kept under the supervision of the city superintendent.

Q. Were you under him or over him?

A. Yes; I was under him as part of his staff.

Q. In the course of your duties when subpoenas were served upon your company, was it your duty to remove those cablegrams, and so forth, from the files?

A. When asked by the superintendent it was my duty to do that.

Mr. EINS. I will ask this be marked for identification.

(Document marked "Government's Exhibit 56" for identification.)

Q. First, I should like to ask you something about your system; when a cablegram comes in to your company from outside, just what operation takes place?

A. At that time we were operating under the semiauto-

578 matic system. When the cablegram is received in Chicago it comes in the form of a piece of perforated tape.

Then it is transmitted to the branch office, where we receive it in the form of a gummed tape. That is run on the regular telegram. This tape is pasted on the telegraph blank.

The ink is an indelible ink. Then we take—we took at that time a moist tissue paper and placed it over the original copy and it was run through a wringer so the tissue was an impression copy of the original message which was delivered to the addressee, and the tissue copy was to remain in our files as our copy of the telegram.

Q. That tissue copy is known as the wash copy, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. If that a duplicate original? That is a duplicate of the original, made in the manner described?

A. That is right.

Q. That is an impression copy.

A. That is an exact duplicate.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 56 for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. This is an impression copy of a wire that was 579 received over the lines of the Postal Telegraph Company and it was delivered by that company.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 51 for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. This is the original wire that was received over the lines of the Postal Telegraph Company and was delivered by that company.

Q. Is this wash copy a duplicate of the original wire that was received and delivered?

A. This wash copy is a duplicate of the copy that was delivered. However, it is not a duplicate of this particular wire. This wire was sent to one of our branch offices, then returned to the main office. Eventually it was delivered in the form that that wash copy indicates.

Q. Well, now, I will show you another document.

Mr. Finn. Will you mark this?

(Document marked for identification.)

Q. I will show you a document marked "Government's Exhibit 57" for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. Well, we have a series of events here. This is a message that was delivered to our branch office. Apparently it was de-580 livered to the wrong branch, or it was delivered to a branch which subsequently closed and relayed it back to the main office. This impression copy, the last one you gave me, another copy was sent to our branch office. And that copy is the original that was delivered and this is the wash copy or the copy that was delivered to the addressee.

Q. It is a little bit complicated?

A. Yes; it is.

Q. Are all these messages contained in the wash copy—and is the address the same on them?

A. Yes; these are all the same telegrams.

Q. They are all the same telegrams?

A. It is all one telegram.

Mr. Finn. Will you mark this for identification.

(Document was thereupon marked "Government's Exhibit 58" for identification.)

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 58 for identification and ask you if you can tell us what that is?

A. That is the delivery record of a message delivered by the Western Union Telegram Company. That is not ours.

Mr. Bertram. A different company?

Mr. Finn. Yes.

581 Q. Now, can you tell me this: In the first place, upon what date your company received that message and from where you received it?

A. This message was filed in Tokio with the controlling interest of the Telegraph Company in that country, which presumably is the government of that company.

It was then turned over to the Mackay Radio Company, whose radio—who handle the lines from that country to this country.

Now, the Mackay Radio Company at New York turned this telegram over to the Postal Telegraph Company for the purpose of delivering it.

From New York it was handled by the Postal Telegraph Company through Chicago where we eventually made delivery.

Q. To whom did you make delivery, according to your records?

A. This was delivered to H. Haupt, 2234 North Fremont Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Q. What is the date upon which that message was sent from Tokio?

A. August 24, 1941.

Q. Does your record show the date on which it was received?

A. It was received here in Chicago on August 24, 1941.

582 Mr. FINN. Any objection to it?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection.

Mr. FINN. I will offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 51, 56, and 57.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection, your Honor.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Whereupon the documents marked "Government's Exhibits 51, 56, and 57," were received in evidence and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

583 Mr. FINN. That is all, Mr. Sherman, thank you.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination.

(No cross-examination. Witness excused.)

(Document marked "Government's Exhibit 59" for identification.)

A. Yes; I do.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. BERTRAM. What was that?

Mr. FINN. December 7, 1941.

By Mr. HURLEY:

585 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 59 for identification and ask you whether or not it is the cablegram you referred to as having been sent on December 7, 1941?

A. Yes.

Q. In whose handwriting?

A. That is my handwriting.

A. No; that is not.

Q. I believe you said that this cablegram was sent at 2:45 in the afternoon?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this cablegram in the same condition now as it was at the time you said that you wrote it, with the exception of the red crayon in the left hand——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this blue pencilling—was that on there?

A. No.

Q. The figures 6.24, was that placed thereon by you?

586 A. Yes; I wrote that.

Q. And this person whom you say sent this wire, when was the next time you saw that individual?

A. In the courtroom.

Q. In whose courtroom was that?

A. Judge Campbell's.

Q. That was here in this building? Is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that individual is Mrs. Erna Haupt; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. At this time, your Honor, I move that all of these answers be stricken on the ground that this was not in the presence of Hans Haupt.

Mr. HURLEY. It has all been connected, your Honor. Your Honor will recall the testimony of Mrs. Kluczyk in which she said that it is the same wire that she had sent, or that she had sent this wire on that afternoon, and Mrs. Kluczyk had talked to her—she talked about sending that. The record will show the connection.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. She sent "a" wire. We do not know if this is the one. Mrs. Kluczyk has never has never identified it.

The COURT. Mrs. Kluczyk is the same lady who told 587 us in this case of the wire to Herbert, that she was sending this wire?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. "A telegram," she said.

Mr. HURLEY. That is right.

The COURT. Objection overruled and motion denied.

Mr. HURLEY. I will offer Government's Exhibit 59 in evidence.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I cross-examine first?

Mr. HURLEY. You may. I am making the offer.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mrs. Caudle, do you remember whether or not on December 7, 1941, at 2:45 in the afternoon, you had information regarding the Pearl Harbor incident?

A. No; I did not.

Q. Do you remember when the information first came to your knowledge?

A. Yes. It was around four o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. HURLEY. That is all. Has your Honor ruled on the offer?

The COURT. It may be received.

(Said document marked Government's Exhibit 59 was received in evidence and is in words and figures following, to wit:)

588 Mr. HURLEY. That is all.

Q. Could you tell us whether in your opinion that is the same card he showed you?

590 A. I could not say positively, but it has the same general information as the one which he showed to me.

Mr. FINN. That is all with this witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Gregg, did Herbert Haupt at that time tell you where he had come from?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. What did he say?

A. He told me that he came from Mexico—he told me that he had been in Mexico for the past year.

Q. Did you at that time, before you put it in the dresser examine it or not?

Q. Tell us what you did on Tuesday night?
A. Tuesday, I took it out so I was going to count it there. I want to see what was in it.
Q. Will you tell us what was in that envelope?
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment. That is objected to, violates the best evidence rule. It should be produced, if there was anything in it.
Mr. FINN. What?
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You should produce whatever was in it.
Mr. FINN. I do not see any necessity for producing the money that was in the envelope.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Money, he does not know whether it is——
Mr. FINN. He will testify.
605 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. When?
Mr. FINN. We will prove it was.
The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. Just a minute.

Mr. FINN. What did you do?

Mr. BERTRAM. Your Honor, I object to what took place when Hans Haupt was not present.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. What did you do when the agents of the FBI came there—what did you do with this envelope?

A. Why, I gave it to him.

607 By Mr. FINN:

Q. After Herbert Haupt had left, and any time up until the time when you say him on the 25th of June, did you have a talk or conversation with Hans Haupt about where the boy had gone?

A. No, I didn't.

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection. That has been three times it has been asked and the witness told, "No," and it is leading.

Mr. FINN. I would like to refresh the memory of the witness.

The COURT. Yes.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Mr. Eggert, you testified at the last trial, did you not?

A. That is right.

Q. I will ask you these questions and do they or do they not refresh your recollection on that subject:

"Question: Did you have a conversation or talk with Hans Haupt and he told you where his son was?

"Answer: No; not directly. I did not ask him.

"Question: Did he tell you?

"Answer: He told me his son was——

"The COURT. Fix the time now——"

608 Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I want to object to this method, counsel bringing in here testimony of the last trial. The witness has answered three times clearly that he did not.

The COURT. He has a right to refresh his memory. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. And these questions and answers:

"Question: Tell us about when this was that he talked to you about it.

"Answer: It must be, oh, that time when I was working for him. I mean when I took that work over from him in some meetings.

"Question: That would be in this year sometime?

"Answer: It was this year.

"Question: Did he tell you about his son at [illegible] time?

"Answer: Well, he told me his son was in Mexico.

"Question: After that occasion, did you later have a talk with him—did he talk to you about where he was?

"Answer: Did not talk to me; I heard about that.

"Mr. SHORT. Object to that, your Honor.

"The COURT. Sustained.

"Question: Did Hans Haupt talk to you later about where his son was any other place besides Mexico?

"Answer: He told me later his son was in Japan.

"Question: Did he tell you at that time where his son was going?

"Answer: He was going to Germany."

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do those questions and answers refresh your memory on that subject, Mr. Eggert?

A. That is right.

Q. I will ask you again, therefore, after the boy had left, did you have any conversations with Hans Haupt on the subject where his boy was going?

A. Not directly.

Q. Well, did you hear it at any time?

A. I hear about it; yes.

Q. Did you hear him——

Mr. BERTRAM. I move that this be stricken.

Mr. FINN. Just a moment, please, will you let me finish my question?

Mr. BERTRAM. I am sorry.

The COURT. Let him finish his question.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Did you hear at any time Hans Haupt tell either you or anyone else about that?

A. That is right; I heard about which he told us his son was in Mexico.

Mr. BERTRAM. It is plain the witness does not understand the question.

The COURT. Well, we will find out. Find out what particular one, who was present, and what was done.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Where were you when you heard this?

A. That must be at the meetings of the organizations.

Q. Who was there at that time?

A. Well, there was quite a couple of fellows more.

Q. Who were there; were you there?

A. Well, I couldn't say the names; there was a couple of fellows standing around.

Q. Who was doing the talking?

A. Hans was doing the talking.

Q. Who was he talking to?

A. To some fellows that asked him.

Q. What did he say?

A. They asked if his son was in Mexico.

Q. What did he say—tell us the words he said?

A. Well, he said that his son was in Mexico. He 611 wanted to go to Germany.

Mr. FINN. I think that is all with this witness.

The COURT. Take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon a recess was had and on the coming in of court after recess, the trial of this cause was resumed as follows, that is to say:)

Q. Then he drove you still to another job, and about what time did you arrive?
A. About 4:30.
Q. Whom did he drive there?
A. Emil Tobsing and me.
Q. What, if anything, happened, when you arrived there about 4:30?
A. He just told us what we had to do there.
Q. When did he tell you, when did he state to do that?
A. I guess Emil Tobsing was working there before.
Q. Well, were you supposed to work there the same day?
A. No; the same day getting them all right.
Q. Did he tell you what to do?
A. On Monday.
Q. Monday of the week following?
A. Yes; because he don't work on Saturday.
Q. And how long did you stay there?
A. All day.
Q. On Friday, this job was on Burling?
A. We were not there long, just about twenty minutes.
617 Q. Then what did the three of you do: Mr. Tobsing, Mr. Haupt, and yourself?
A. I think Mr. Hans Haupt drove up some place, and we took the streetcar to go home.
Q. Did you see him any more that day?
A. No.
Q. Did you see him on Saturday, the day following?
A. No.
Q. I now call your attention to that Sunday morning, June 28th, 1942, when you met Mr. Haupt in front of the Roscoe Tavern?

A. That is right.

Q. I have picked the place and time for you, have I?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you at that time know that Herbert Haupt had been arrested the day before?

A. No; no; I didn't.

Q. You did not read it in the Sunday newspapers?

A. Well, I read the Sunday newspapers, but I didn't know.

Q. You had not read the Sunday newspapers as yet on that day?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. Did you read it in the afternoon?

A. I think I did.

618 Q. Did you find out in the afternoon Herbert Haupt had been arrested?

A. No; I didn't read it.

Q. When did you first hear that?

A. What?

Q. When did you first hear Herbert Haupt had been arrested?

A. It was in the FBI the following week, on Thursday.

Q. You didn't hear about it at all before that?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. Don't you read the newspapers daily?

A. Yes; but I didn't read it.

Q. When Hans gave you this envelope at your home on Sunday, June 28, where was it in you home; in what room?

A. In the living room.

Q. At that time, where was your wife?

A. In the kitchen.

Q. Did she see Hans Haupt give you this envelope?

A. No; she didn't.

Q. Did she hear the conversation——

Mr. FINN. Just a minute. I will object to this and ask that it be stricken because this witness cannot testify whether his wife saw it or did not see it. He may testify as to her position.

The COURT. Well; I will let it stand. This is cross-examination.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

619 Q. As far as you know, could your wife hear any conversation you may have had with Hans at the time he gave you this envelope?

A. No, she couldn't

Mr. FINN. I object to that on the same ground.

The COURT. The answer may stand.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. What was your answer?

A. No, she couldn't.

Q. Referring to the conversation, which according to your testimony was had between Hans Haupt and a number of people, at which time Hans said that he was going to go to Germany—that Herbert Haupt was going to Germany, he was in Mexico and was going to Germany—would like to go to Germany——

Mr. FINN. Just a minute. I object to that further, he was going to Germany, not he would like to go to Germany.

Mr. BERTRAM. The record will show.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. He said "or."

Mr. BERTRAM. The record will show. I object. You stated it, I don't recall it the way you do.

The COURT. Of course, the record will show it now being put in.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will withdraw that question and ask it differently.

620 Q. I will refer to your testimony which you gave a short time ago here today wherein you spoke about Herbert Haupt, and in connection therewith mentioned Germany—let me ask you, when was that conversation had?

A. It was about in the summertime of 1941, I guess.

Q. 1941. It was before the United States entered into any war?

A. The United States entered into the war in December.

Q. 1941?

A. That is right.

Q. So it was before the United States entered into any war?

A. It was in the summertime.

Q. Did you hear Hans Haupt make that statement that Herbert was in Mexico and he was going to go to Germany; did you hear it at that time?

A. Well, I hear it.

Q. Did you hear Hans make that statement?

A. That is right. He said it, too.

Q. You have made statements to the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation concerning the subject matter that you testified about just now, have you not?

A. Yes, I did.

621 Q. Do you know about how many such statements you signed?

A. I don't know yet.

Q. Well, would you say three or four?

A. Well, maybe it was three or four.

Q. Where was that, where you signed those?

A. In this Bureau of Investigation in the Bankers Building.

Q. In the office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. That is right.

Q. You are an American citizen?

A. Yes; I am.

Q. The agents questioned you regarding the very same facts concerning which you testified today, did they not?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And you answered their questions?

A. I did.

Q. And you told them the truth?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Did they, while so questioning you, tell you that you would lose your citizenship papers because you were connected with this matter?

A. I think they did, once.

Mr. BERTRAM. What is the answer?

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Well, do you know whether or not they did; did they?

A. When was that?

622 Q. How is that?

A. I don't understand that.

Q. They did tell you you would lose your citizenship papers being connected with the matter?

A. Well, I thought so; it was on account of it.

Q. How is that?

A. They didn't say on account of this matter that I was in this case, you mean.

Q. What did they say?

A. They said just I could lose my citizenship papers.

Q. Did they tell you, you would be sent to a Concentration Camp?

A. No.

Q. Did they say anything about a Concentration Camp?

A. No; not to me.

Q. Mr. Egger, you testified concerning this matter about one year and a half ago, did you not, in the case of United States against Hans Max Haupt and several others?

A. That is right.

Q. Well, will this refresh your memory; I will now read to you some testimony which you gave at that time, referring to this matter of talking with Mr. Haupt regarding Herbert, you stated at one time you had discussed with him some time in 1942, 623 where Mr. Haupt told you Herbert was in Japan. That is right. Did you—— That is right. That is right. I will give you the answer you gave. "That is right" was your answer. Do you know where this discussion took place?

No; I don't, I can't say.

Had you heard it from somebody else before?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. And then you state that later on he told you Herbert was going to Japan. That is right. Did he say he thinks he may be going to Germany or did he in any way say he was going to Germany? He was going to Germany. Did he tell you he was? No. When was it about—was that? It must be then after the time. I can't say right then when it was. Well, was that the time? I don't remember that either. Maybe one meeting, and maybe at a meeting, or maybe in some saloon I met him, I can't remember that day where it was. But you do remember he said he is going to Germany. That is right. He told you that after Herbert, after he had told you Herbert is in Japan. That is right.

621 Q. When he was in Japan already before you had the discussion regarding Herbert being in Japan, did you talk with him about where Herbert was? I did not. You did not? No. Did you ever inquire of him? No. Had you heard from others that he had left, he was not in Chicago any more? I heard from other people, that they say he was in Mexico, and after a while I hear from other people he was in Japan. Did you hear from any other people he was going to Japan? What was the last question—— Did you hear from any other people he was going to Japan? I didn't, no; I just heard he was there already.

Did you ask Mr. Haupt what Herbert was going to do in Japan? No. Did he tell you? Did he tell you he just went to Japan? He didn't say what he wanted to do. Did this surprise you? No; I wasn't a sort of inquiring of Hans Haupt about his affairs, familiar affairs, you know. You talked very frankly—— You talked frequently to members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation during the last—since June 1942, did you? Very often. Yes; I did. Did they tell you at that time that you might lose your citizenship papers? They did. And would be interned in a Concentration Camp? They did.

625 Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Does that refresh your memory?

A. I can't recollect no more, and those items they would send me to a concentration camp.

Q. You remember that, you say?

A. No; I don't remember.

Q. You do not remember that now?

A. No.

Q. When you gave your answer at the time, did you tell the truth?

A. I tell the truth.

Q. How did you happen to get to this courtroom; did you get a telephone call to come down here?

A. No; I get a postal card.

Q. Have you got that post card with you?

A. Yes; I have.

Q. May I see it? I will ask that this be marked for the purpose of identification as "Defendant's Exhibit No. 3" for identification.

When did you first see this Defendant's Exhibit No. 3?

A. Well, I don't know when it was.

Q. Well, where did you first see it?

A. In my home.

Q. Did anybody bring it to you?

A. Yes.

Q. To you personally?

A. Yes; yes.

626 Q. And then you read it?

A. That is right.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I wish to read into the record from this card the following: "You are required under penalty to appear as a witness on behalf of the United States in the above mentioned court, in room 450, United States Courthouse, Chicago, Illinois, on May 13th—" 13th, then, is dashed out—and 18 is written behind it, "1944, at 10 o'clock, A. M."

Did you appear in this courthouse in this building on the 18th?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Did you go to room 450?

A. I did.

Q. Was that a courtroom?

A. It wasn't a courtroom; no.

Q. What was it?

A. It was an office where we have to go before we come up here in any courtroom.

Q. Was that the office, the office of the United States District Attorney?

A. Well, I think it was on the fourth floor.

Q. What is?

A. That is the office of the United States——

Q. District Attorney?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you on that day appear anywhere in court?

A. No; I didn't.

627 Q. Before any judge?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. Whom did you meet when you went there to Room 450?

A. I met Mr. Flynn.

Q. Mr. Flynn, you mean—one of these gentlemen here?

A. That is right.

Q. About how long did you stay there?

A. Oh, one hour.
Q. One hour?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you went somewhat over the subject matter of the testimony today, is that correct?
A. That is right.
Q. You stayed there about one hour?
A. Well, one hour; waiting time, too.
Q. About how long did you discuss the matter?
A. Oh, about ten minutes, fifteen minutes.
Q. Did they show you what you testified to at the last trial?
A. No; they didn't give me anything in hand; they read it to me.
Q. Was it what you testified to the last time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you told by anyone in that office on what day you were to go, to appear in court?
A. Yes; I think so.
628 Q. Well, would it refresh your recollection if I asked you if it was to be on the 22nd day of June?
A. The 22nd of June; that is right.
Q. Of May, 1944?
A. May; May; yes.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all, as far as the cross-examination is concerned.
Q. For the information, may I ask you, Mr. Eggert, after you have given your testimony, if you will kindly let me have the card personally, so that I may use it personally in this trial?
A. O. K.
Q. Either bring it to my office or some way see that I get it on your way home.
A. All right.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you.
Mr. FINN. Just a moment.

Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Did any of the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or did anyone with the office of the United States Attorney ever ask you to tell anything on the witness stand which was not the truth?
A. No.
Q. I believe when you were down here on the 14th, was it?
A. Yes.
629 Q. By the way, did you know that the matter was—were you informed by telegram that the case was set over on the 15th to the 22nd, did you receive a telegram?

A. I get the telegram, too, before this card.

Q. And when you were down here on the 18th and spoke to me, I believe I told you, did I not, that you wouldn't be needed Monday, we would try and let you know by telephone, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. We have called you several times, did we not, to tell you it wasn't necessary to come down?

A. That is true.

Mr. FINN. Thank you very much.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment, please.

Re-cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Does that little card show you were to appear on the 15th, or what is the first date shown there?

A. 13th.

Q. 13th; that is right; that is all.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

The WITNESS. O. K.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, just a moment please. I will renew my objection that the statement was not in the presence of Hans Haupt.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. I don't want you to give any conversations.

Q. Just tell us what was done there.

633 A. They came in the house. They were waiting for my husband. He wasn't home, then. When my husband came home, they asked for the money——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object, your Honor, to that conversation.

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Just what was done by your husband?

A. They asked for the money, and my husband——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object and ask that it be stricken out.

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Mrs. Eggert—may I instruct the witness, your Honor?

The COURT. Yes.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Mrs. Eggert, you are not permitted to testify what was asked or what was said or anything of that character. Just tell us what was done. What did your husband do?

A. He gave them the money.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to, your Honor. That is a conclusion, "He gave them the money."

Mr. FINN. All right. We will go into it.

You don't have to talk with him unless you want to. He wants to talk to you before he puts you on the stand. You don't have to talk to him. You don't have to do that.

Mr. WOLL. Do you want to talk to me?

The COURT. Have you any objection to talking to him before going on the stand?

637 (The witness shrugged her shoulders and shook her head up and down.)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I suggest the grandmother be allowed to be with her while they talk with her?

The COURT. No; just one of you.

Mr. FINN. So that the record will be clear, your Honor, on this subject: The last question asked by the Court was to the witness, and was, "Do you have any objection to talking to the United States Attorney," and she shrugged her shoulders and her head, rather, in a negative manner, as I would indicate she did not have any objection; is that correct, your Honor?

The COURT. That is right. I think I asked her a question and she indicated she had no objection.

Mr. WOLL. Thank you, your Honor.

The COURT. Bring in the Jury.

Mr. HURLEY. That is right. The same as the other evidence that has gone into heretofore.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. For the purpose of showing his enemy status, I take it?

The COURT. For the purpose of showing his intent, which goes to his character.

Mr. HURLEY. That is right.

Q. And did you on any occasion meet Herbert Haupt in this Haus Vaterland on the nights of the meetings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see the members in that particular building?

A. Well, in the hall where the meeting was being held.

Q. The Bund meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

646 Q. Now, calling your attention to the 24th of June 1942, did you see Herbert Haupt on that evening?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him on that occasion?

A. I saw him at the Wine Gardens, a night spot on North Avenue.

Q. How do you spell Wine Gardens?

A. W-i-n-e, I believe it is.

Q. Where was that located on North Avenue?

A. It is near Ogden Avenue on North Avenue.

Q. About what time on the 24th of June did you see him at that spot?

A. Ten o'clock P. M., approximately.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please, I object again on the ground Hans Haupt was not present at this particular meeting at the Wine Gardens in June 1942.

The COURT. Is this 1942?

Mr. HURLEY. That is right.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. And was there anyone with you when you first saw him at 10 o'clock P. M. June 24th at the Wine Gardens?

A. Yes; the girl I was going with at that time was with me.

647 Q. What did you do after you went into this night club?

A. Well, when I entered the night club——

Mr. BERTRAM. Again, I want to object.

The WITNESS. When I entered the night club, Herbert Haupt was standing at the bar. We exchanged waves. I proceeded to a table, and after we sat for a while there, one of the singers and Herbert Haupt joined us a few minutes later, rather, Herbert Haupt came over and joined us at our table.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you talk to him there at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say to you on that occasion?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to as hearsay, as Mr. Haupt was not present.

The COURT. Overruled.

The WITNESS. A. Well, he told me at that time that he had been in Mexico. He had gone to South America, from there on a freighter, and they ran into a British Blockade, and they went to Japan, and he mentioned one fellow he seen in Japan, and that was Hans Heickermeyer.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did he say anything else?

648 A. He showed me a ring he had gotten from General Franko's man. He also told me he had a message from a high German military source, for a fellow called Kauffmann; I didn't get the first name; I got it, but I can't say it; Gerhard Kauffmann.

Q. What else did he say about that same subject?

A. Well——

Mr. HURLEY. I will withdraw that question.

Q. Did you know who Gerhard Kauffmann was; did you know that individual?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to, if your Honor please. It is immaterial, certainly as far as Hans Haupt is concerned.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. What was your answer?

A. Yes. I know Gerhard Kauffmann.

Q. Now, was there anything else said further than what you have related about this message?

A. Well, he was engaged at that time, Gerhard Kauffmann, and his brother Heinrich Kauffmann was in jail and wanted for the Army, and he asked me if he could post the bail money while his trial was being held.

Q. Did he say anything further about getting in touch with Gerhard Kauffmann?

649 A. Yes, sir; he asked me if I could get him that telephone number.

Q. Telephone number of what?

A. Gerhard Kauffmann. I gave him my telephone number to call me back next day and I wasn't home and mother said, nobody called.

Q. When you gave him your phone number, what, if anything, did you do with reference to that?

A. He wrote it down in a little black book.

Q. How, you spoke of running into a British Blockade, where did he say, if he did say, he went?

A. From the way I understood it, he was going to Japan, and when that occurred, he was also claiming they were bombed by airplanes, and also they had been torpedoed on the way.

Q. Did he say anything else that had been done?

A. He mentioned they had been in Germany.

Q. Was there anything said about his travels that you recall now?

A. No, sir; I can't think of anything right now.

Q. Do you recall anything he said about how he got back here?

A. No; I asked him how he got back, and he didn't mention that.

Q. Did he say anything about where he arrived?

650 Mr. Bertram. I object to his leading the witness.

The Court. Sustained.

The Witness. He mentioned something about Florida at that time.

By Mr. Hurley:

Q. Now, do you know a person by the name of Walter Kappe?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not Kauffmann was related to Kappe?

A. At that time, I wouldn't know that.

Mr. Hurley. All right.

Q. Do you recall testifying in that trial before Judge Campbell in this building?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall that at that time you were asked this question:

"Question: Do you know what relation Gerhard Kaufmann is to Walter Kappe?

"Mr. SHORT. I object to that.

"The COURT. Overruled.

"The WITNESS. Brother-in-law."

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Do you remember saying that on that trial?

A. I don't recall. I know that later I returned to Walter Kappe's office and the brother-in-law came——

651 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to what this witness returned to later on, your Honor.

Mr. HURLEY. That may go out.

Q. I am asking you now whether or not you recall those questions asked you now and you answered.

A. That was asked me.

Q. Did you at that time state the relationship was that of brother-in-law?

A. Yes, sir, I stated that.

Q. That was true at that time; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a fact now, as far as you are concerned, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Haas, when you talked to Herbert Haupt in the Wine Gardens, had he just come into the place?

A. No; he was there already when I entered.

Q. Where was he when you first came in?

A. He was standing at the bar.

Q. At the time this conversation took place, when he told you that he has to deliver a very important message from a high German Military source, we were already in war, were we not?

652 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he drunk or sober at the time, as far as you could observe?

A. As far as I could observe, he was sober.

Q. Did he appear to act in a boisterous manner, giving himself the air of being somebody of importance?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old was Herbert Haupt at the time, if you know, about?

A. About twenty-two or twenty-three.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you. One more question, kindly.

Q. When he told you he had this message from this military source, did he talk in a whispering voice, or did he talk in an ordinary conversational manner?

A. Well, it was more or less of a whispering voice.

Q. The entire conversation only on that point?

A. Just one or two points he sort of talked lightly, because at that time, the girl I was going with was talking to this singer that was there at the time, and there were two conversations going on at the time, and at other times only one conversation, when he was telling us about the Franko ring.

Q. The talking, it was in a whispering voice, was 653 for the purpose of better conveying it to you, and not disturb the other conversation, as far as you could observe?

Mr. FINN. I object as a conclusion on his part.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It is cross-examination.

The COURT. Let him answer.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. As far as you could observe?

A. Yes; and then I guess he didn't want to disturb——

Q. Not what you guess.

Mr. FINN. Just a minute.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. As far as you could observe.

The COURT. Overruled. Let him finish.

The WITNESS. Well, more or less. He didn't want to disturb the other conversation.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. FINN. As I said, I would like to put on several witnesses out of order, one of them wants to get back to Florida, where he lives.

The COURT. Very well.

654 WILLIAM H. MCDONALD, called as a witness for the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. William H. McDonald.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. McDonald?

A. 10162 Longwood Drive.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. United States Marshal for the Northern District of Illinois.

Q. How long have you been United States Marshal for the Northern District of Illinois?

A. Pretty near ten years.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment, kindly. Is Mr. McDonald on the witness list as a witness?

Mr. FINN. Yes; I believe he is. Do you want to look at your list? You will find his name on there. Just make sure of it.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes. All right. All right.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. How long have you been the Marshal of this district, Mr. McDonald?

A. The end of June will be ten years.

655 Q. Now, calling your attention to on or about the 5th of August 1942, did you have a conversation with Hans Max Haupt, the defendant in this case?

A. I did.

Q. Will you pick out Hans Max Haupt in the courtroom here?

A. The gentleman in the dark suit at the other table.

Q. About what time was it that this conversation took place, do you know?

A. Oh, in the forenoon; a little while before noon.

Q. Will you tell us what was said; by the way, Hans Haupt, I think we can agree on this. Where did this conversation take place, Mr. McDonald?

A. In the cell room in the Marshall's office.

Q. Mr. Haupt was arraigned, I think we can agree, can we not, on the 21st of July 1942; is that correct?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is correct.

Mr. FINN. And there was a continuance of the case before the Commission to August 5th, in the afternoon?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Haupt had been brought 656 into the Marshall's office for that continued hearing?

A. The continued hearing in the Commissioner's office.

Q. Will you tell us what was said on that occasion between yourself and Hans Haupt?

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection to it, if the court please.

The COURT. What is the objection?

Mr. BERTRAM. I don't think conversations with the defendant outside of the courtroom are permissible.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Just tell us what was said.

A. Well, when the Deputy told me that Hans Haupt wanted to see me, I went back to the cell room. I asked him what he wanted, and he said he wanted to talk to an FBI agent.

Q. Now, after you had talked to Hans Haupt, what did you do after he had said that to you?

A. I called Mr. Johnson, the agent in charge, and told him what Mr. Haupt stated.

Q. You mean the agent from what?

A. Federal Bureau of Investigation. I called the United States Attorney's office, and told them of Mr. Haupt's request.

Q. Later, did several agents come over to interview, Mr. Haupt?

657 A. Later, two agents came, Mr. Hirsch and another agent, I assume he was an agent, I didn't know. I knew Mr. Hirsch.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. McDonald, do you know who this deputy of yours was that told you that Mr. Haupt wanted to speak to you?

A. It could either have been the lock-up keeper or the clerk at the desk, I don't recall which one it might have been.

Q. You talked to that party personally, that party that conveyed the message to you directly?

A. That is right.

Q. Can you state why you called the office of the United States attorney and not the Defense Counsel?

A. His Defense Counsel hadn't been engaged at the time, Mr. Warnholtz.

Q. On August 5, 1942?

A. This occurred a couple of hours before you came over to the office that day.

Q. Did you suggest, Mr. McDonald, he should have an attorney, before he talked to someone?

A. It is not my province to suggest——

658 Q. I am asking you, did you?

A. I don't think I did.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you kindly. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If the court please, I should like to have a recess for about five minutes, to see what I can find out about this matter. It is entirely a surprise to me. I never heard of this. I would like to talk to Mr. Haupt, and see what it is.

The COURT. Take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen. You can step in the jury room.

(Thereupon a short recess was had, and on the coming in of court after recess, the trial of this cause was resumed as follows, that is to say:)

The COURT. Proceed.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. At this time, if your Honor please, I move that the conversation which Mr. McDonald related had with the lock-up man or some other person be stricken because it was not in the presence of the defendant Hans Max Haupt.

The COURT. Strike it out. The conversation Mr. McDonald had with the lock-up keeper.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Or some other person.

The COURT. Or the secretary.

659 Mr. FINN. But not with the defendant, not the conversation with the defendant.

The COURT. That is the way I understand it. The conversation with the defendant stands.

EARL HIRSCH, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Earl Hirsh.

Q. You have been sworn, have you?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Hirsh?

A. At the present time?

Q. Yes.

A. I am in the manufacturing business of men's clothing, in Atlanta, Georgia.

Q. Where do you live at the present time?

A. Down in Atlanta, Georgia.

Q. Now, calling your attention to the year 1942, were you a member of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. How long had you been an agent for the FBI?

A. Since October 1933.

660 Q. When did you sever your connections with the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. January 10, 1944.

Q. Calling your attention to the morning of the 27th day of June 1942, at approximately 9 o'clock, can you tell us where you were?

A. Yes; I was parked on the corner of Fremont Street and Webster Street, here in Chicago.

Q. And with whom were you at that time?

A. At that time there were several agents in the car in which I was, and we also had several other cars in the close vicinity.

Q. Now, will you tell us what you observed on that occasion?

A. At a few minutes past nine o'clock on the morning of June 27th, we received radio information from another agent who was watching the Haupt home, that Herbert Haupt was leaving his home, and approximately eight minutes past nine we saw Haupt turn the corner on Fremont down to Webster. At that time, he was taken in custody by myself and other agents.

Q. Was he on foot or in an automobile?

A. No; he was in a car.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3 for identification, and ask you if you can tell us who that is?

661

A. That is a photograph of Herbert Haupt.

Q. Now, then, was he taken to the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Immediately.

Q. And did you remain with him during that day and for what period of time afterwards?

A. Yes; practically I was with him almost constantly from that time on until he arrived in Washington for the military trial.

Q. Did you bring him down to Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you remain there during the military trial?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when he was taken to the Federal Bureau of Investigation that morning, can you tell us whether anything was taken from him?

A. Yes; there were several things on his person that I took from him at that time.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 52 for identification, being a Selective Service Registration Card, Government's Exhibit 50 for identification, a gold watch; Government's Exhibit 21 for identification, being a Social Security Card, and Government's Exhibit 19 for identification, a ring, and ask you if you have ever seen these before?

662

A. This is a ring that I took from Herbie Haupt at the time of his arrest. This is a Social Security Card that I also took and my initials are there on the back.

Q. Whose initials are they?

A. Right in the office at the time I took it from him; this is his registration card.

Q. You say, "this." Will you refer to the exhibit; is that Government's Exhibit 52?

A. That is correct; Government's Exhibit 52; I took from Herbie Haupt in the office, and put my initials and the date on the back of it. This is the watch that I took from Herbie Haupt, except the crystal is now broken.

Q. You didn't break it, did you?

A. No.

Mr. FINN. All right.

Q. Now, Mr. Hirsh, when did you get back from Washington?

A. July 22, 1942.

Q. Now, calling your attention to the time thereafter were you engaged in the investigation of this Haupt trial here in Chicago?

A. I was.

Q. Calling your attentiton to the morning of August 5, 1942, were you in the office that morning?

663

A. Yes.

Q. Were you assigned, after a telephone call from the Marshall were you assigned to cover and interview Mr. Hans Max Haupt in the Marshall's office?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you go over there alone or with someone else?

A. I went over with Special Agent P. D. Robe.

Q. Will you tell us what time was it when you arrived at the Marshall's office?

A. It was approximately fifteen minutes to twelve.

Q. Now, when you got there, just what did you do, and whom did you see?

A. Well, I went to see the Marshall, because Al Johnson, the agent in charge of the Chicago office, told me——

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection. The explanation of the witness——

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Just tell us, whom did you see?

A. I went to see the Marshall; Marshall McDonald.

Q. Then after that, what happened?

A. He told me that Hans Haupt——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to.

Mr. FINN. Leave out the conversation.

664

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. What did you do?

A. Thereafter went into talk to Hans Haupt.

Q. Now, where did this conversation take place?

A. In the private room, in the Marshall's office.

Q. And who was present at the time the conversation took place?

A. Special Agent Robe.

Q. And yourself and who else?

A. Hans Haupt; the three of us.

Q. Now, will you tell us just what was said on that occasion?

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I will object to the conversation had with the defendant outside of court.

Mr. FINN. Outside of what?

Mr. BERTRAM. Outside of court while he was in custody.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you tell us just what was said on that occasion?

A. I introduced myself to Hans Haupt, showed him the credentials I had, and told him that I understood that he wanted to see an agent of the FBI. The three of us then seated ourselves
665 and Hans Haupt said, "That he told me Wergin and his wife were responsible for his son's condition, that is, being apprehended, but he said, he was very mad at them, and wanted to testify agaist them in court."

Mr. BERTRAM. I object.

Mr. FINN. Strike that out and start over again, if we may.

The COURT. I said and he said, if you will, please.

Mr. FINN. If you will, please, tell us what he said and what you said, the best you can remember.

The WITNESS. Do you want me to start?

Mr. FINN. If you will, please.

The WITNESS. When I walked into the room, I introduced myself to Hans Haupt. Showed him the credentials. The three of us, Special Agent Robe, Hans Haupt, and myself sat down in chairs in the private room. Hans Haupt said, "That he was very mad at Otto Wergin and his wife, because he blamed the predicament of his son on them, and he wanted to testify in court against them."

Mr. FINN. Yes.

The WITNESS (continuing). He then said that on Saturday night, June 20th, that his wife Erna Haupt, himself, and Herbert Haupt went over to the Wergin home on South Wood 666 Street, and at that time in the presence of all present, Herbie Haupt told a complete story of his trip to Mexico. How he contacted the German Consul there and how he obtained passage to Japan, and in Japan they were met by the German and Japanese Consul; thereafter, they ran through the British Blockade on a boat and landed in France. Hans Haupt then said Herbie Haupt related that he was in an Intelligence School. He didn't exactly specify just what it was. He said an Intelligence School, and that he had a huge sum of money to use in connection with that over here.

Hans Haupt then said Otto Wergin said "he wasn't a dummy, and that he knew the mission Herbie Haupt was on." He also said "he served in a similar capacity during the last World War."

Mr. FINN. He said this to you?

The WITNESS. That is, Wergin served in a similar capacity in the last World War in Egypt——

Q. Are you relating what Hans Haupt told you Wergin said on that occasion?

A. Exactly.

Mr. FINN. Go ahead.

The WITNESS. Hans Haupt then said that Wergin offered his services to Herbie Haupt in his activities in this country, 667 because he could use some of the money Herbie Haupt had.

Q. Now, was there any further conversation at that time?

A. Yes. Hans Haupt then related on Friday night, June 19th, he and his wife went over to the Froehling home and while at the Froehling home, Herbie Haupt related the story in the presence of the Froehlings and the Haupts about his trip to Mexico and Japan and the running of the British Blockade to France, and his being enlisted in some type of German Government, and the Intelligence School, and his return to the United States on a German submarine.

Q. Now, do you recall any further conversation?

A. Yes. Hans Haupt further said that on Sunday night, June 21, the Wergins and the Haupts went over to the Froehling home, again, they only stayed a short while, but during the stay in the Froehling home, Herbie Haupt again discussed his activities, that is, his trip to Japan and Germany, the Intelligence School, then back to the United States on a German submarine. However, they became a little afraid that the visitors, the people in the building, might overhear them, and that the Wergins and the Haupts left the Froehling home and went over to the Haupt home, and 668 again Herbie Haupt discussed his story and his Intelligence School attendance with them, and Hans Haupt said that it was for this reason, that is because the Wergins—Otto Wergin and his wife were so insistent on Herbie going forward with these plans, he wanted to testify against him in court.

Q. Was there anything further stated on that conversation, as you recall?

A. Yes. Hans Haupt related that on Saturday night, June 27th, in his home on Fremont Street, that the Froehlings and Wergins and themselves, that is, Erna and Hans Haupt, were in their residence, and because Herbie had not shown up all day, they became rather fearful something had happened to him, and at that time they all discussed on that date in the event something had happened, they decided if anything had happened to Herbie, or if they were questioned, they would all tell the same story, that they knew nothing about his activities, except the fact he had gone to Mexico.

Q. Now, have you related the substance of all of the conversations that took place that day?

A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. You may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. You say, Mr. Hirsh, that this conversation took 669 place at the beginning of the——

Mr. FINN. Excuse me just a minute.

Q. Do you see Hans Haupt in the courtroom here?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you point him out, please?

A. There he is over there.

Mr. FINN. Indicating the defendant Hans Max Haupt.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. You said this took place at about a quarter to twelve August 5, 1942?

A. Approximately a quarter of twelve, that is right.

Q. Do you know whether or not Hans Haupt had been already before the United States Commissioner Walker by that time?

A. It was my understanding he had been arraigned July 21st, 1942.

Q. And was he arraigned again on that day, do you know, on August 5th?

A. I understood he was to be arraigned at 2 o'clock on that afternoon.

Q. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know whether or not he had retained counsel by the time you talked to him?

A. That was not my business, Mr. Warnholtz.

670 Q. I am asking you, did you ask him if he retained counsel?

A. My recollection is that Hans Haupt said he did not want counsel, because he wanted to testify.

Q. Are you a lawyer, Mr. Hirsh; had you ever studied law?

A. Yes.

Q. The other gentleman who was present with you, what is his name?

A. Robe.

Q. Has he ever studied law?

A. You will have to ask him.

Q. You do not know?

A. No.

Q. When you spoke about Hans relating this, did he volunteer all of that, or did you ask him?

A. When we first started off, he volunteered.

Q. And later on, he didn't relate it, but answered your questions, right?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you ask him?
A. I asked him questions.
Q. Did you have any stenographer present?
A. Yes.
Q. You took down this conversation?
A. No. I took my own notes.
Q. Mr. Robe also took notes?
671 A. That I can't tell you. I took notes for myself.
Q. Who gave you the message at the Bankers Building, the headquarters, for you to go to the Marshal's Office?
A. A. H. Johnson.
Q. That was the Special Agent in charge, is that right?
A. At that time that is correct.
Q. You returned from Washington July 22, 1942?
A. That is right.
Q. By that time, had the military trial been had already in Washington?
A. It was in progress and almost over.
Q. When you talked to Hans Haupt, did you at that time believe you were talking to a sane or insane person?
A. You want my opinion?
Q. Yes.
A. I would say that Hans Haupt was upset.
Q. Had you at that time heard he tried to commit suicide prior to that date?
A. No; I had just returned from Washington.
Q. Mr. Hirsh, when you arrested Herbert Haupt on the morning of June 27th, was he alone in his car?
A. Yes; he was.
672 Q. You had also followed him the day preceding, had you not, on Friday, June 26th?
A. I, personally, didn't.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you, kindly.
Mr. FINN. Pardon me, one more question.

Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Did you make a memoranda immediately after the conversation, of the conversation that took place?
A. With Hans Haupt?
Q. Yes.
A. At the time I was talking to him I took notes.
Mr. BERTRAM. I object, if the court please. That serves no purpose.
Mr. FINN. All right. That is all.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.
Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I want to make a motion to exclude all of the testimony of the last witness regarding statements of the defendant Hans Max Haupt.

The COURT. On what theory?

Mr. BERTRAM. As being made, not in open court, as required by the constitution.

The COURT. What?

Mr. BERTRAM. As not being made in open court as 673 required by the constitution.

The COURT. Motion denied. When was the arraignment in this case.

Mr. FINN. The original arraignment was July 21st, he was charged at that time, and pleaded not guilty, and the case was continued over until August 5.

The COURT. And this conversation?

Mr. FINN. August 5th.

The COURT. Motion denied.

PENNEL V. ROBE, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

Q. How long have you been a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Who gave you orders to go with Mr. Hirsch?

A. The Special Agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. What was his name?

Q. Now, will you tell us where you went when you first got there?

A. We went immediately to the office of Mr. McDonald, the United States Marshal.

Q. And thereafter, did you interview, or were you present at an interview with Mr. Hans Haupt at the time in this case?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Can you point out Mr. Haupt in the courtroom?

675 A. Yes, sir. He is the gentleman there at the end, in the dark suit.

Mr. FINN. Indicating the defendant Hans Max Haupt.

Q. Now, where did this interview take place?

A. In the private room of the United States Marshal's office.

Q. And who was present at the time?

A. Former Special Agent, Earl Hirsh.

Q. And who else?

A. And myself and Mr. Haupt.

Q. All right. Will you tell us just what was said by the various parties on that occasion?

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I want to make the same objection on the same grounds as made to the previous testimony of the Witness Hirsh.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you tell us what was said on that occasion, Mr. Robe?

A. Mr. Haupt said he wished to talk about Mr. and Mrs. Wergin, that they were just as involved in this case as he was. He stated that on June 20, 1942, Mr. Haupt, Herbert Haupt and Erna Haupt, visited at the Wergin home on South Wood Street. At that time Herbert Haupt went over the entire story concerning his trip to Japan, then to Germany. He also told of his return

676 to this country by submarine. Mr. Haupt said that Herbert Haupt left the impression that he had attended an Intelligence School in Germany. Mr. Wergin then replied——

Q. Are you saying what Mr. Haupt told you?

A. Mr. Haupt told us. Mr. Haupt then said Wergin told Herbert that he had served in a similar capacity in the First World War, so that he was no dummy, and that if Herbert needed help, he should call on him. Mr. Haupt said that Herbert also mentioned having a large sum of money—the amount was not specified.

Herbert Haupt said that his duties in this country was that of a contact man. Mr. Haupt then said that he blamed Mr. and Mrs. Wergin for the predicament that he was in, and he blamed this on the fact of the influence that Mr. Wergin exerted over Herbert at that meeting on Saturday, June 20th.

He said that Herbert also related the same story in the Froehling home on June 19th.

Q. What did he say with reference to that meeting?

A. He said that Herbert told a complete story of his trip to Germany and return by submarine at the Froehling home at dinner time, and that Mr. and Mrs. Froehling also knew of Herbert's trip.

Q. Now, was there anything further said, anything else said on that occasion?

677 A. Mr. Haupt said that on June 27th Mr. and Mrs. Wergin were again in the Haupt home, at 2234 North Fremont Street and at that time Mr. and Mrs. Froehling, Mr. and Mrs. Haupt, Mr. and Mrs. Wergin, all decided if anybody made any inquiry as to why Herbert was in this country, that their answer, all their answers would be, that they did not know.

Q. Anything further that you recollect?

A. Not that I can recall.

Mr. FINN. You may cross-examine.

Mr. BERTRAM. I wish to make a motion to exclude all the testimony of this witness on the grounds heretofore stated, your Honor.

The COURT. Denied.

678 Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Robe, have you ever studied law?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you admitted to the bar in any state?

A. In this State?

Q. Any state?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you went over to the marshall's office, with whom did you talk in your office, in the FBI headquarters—who told you to go there?

A. I talked with Special Agent Hirsch.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. He told me that I was to accompany him to the United States Marshall's office.

Q. When you talked to Hans Haupt in the marshall's office, did you suggest to Mr. Haupt he should consult an attorney of his own before he talked?

A. No, sir. He asked us——

Q. I am asking you did you suggest that; yes or no?

A. No, sir.

Q. He did not have an attorney with him at the time, did he?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Hirsch ever

679 studied law?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not Hans Haupt had an attorney up to that time?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Mr. Robe, you stated that Hans told you at that time in the marshal's office that he wished to talk to you; then he started off talking. Is that right?

A. When we first went into the room we asked him what he wished to talk about.

Q. Then he started to tell you a story?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ask him from date to date? Did you suggest dates to him? Did he tell you the story?

A. He told us the story.

Q. He gave you dates as you gave them just now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was a story that he told and it was not a matter of him replying to your questions, was it? Was it one of the two?

A. He was asked questions; certainly.

Q. So you did ask him questions?

A. Mr. Hirsch asked him questions; yes.

Q. You did not?

A. No.

680 Q. Concerning that meeting at the Haupt home on Sunday—on Saturday night, June 27—did Mr. Haupt tell you that evening that the Wergins, Mr. and Mrs. Froehling and their two children were in his home, celebrating Mrs. Haupt's birthday?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you why the children were over there?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not testify concerning any of these facts at the trial that was had in this courthouse about a year and a half ago, did you, Mr. Robe?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, Mr. Hirsch did not, either?

A. No, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Were you asked anything about it at that time or not?

A. No, sir.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. FINN. May we have just a moment?

681 Your Honor, there is a matter we would like to take up with counsel in chambers with a view to the testimony—

The COURT. Right now?

Mr. FINN. If you please?

(And thereupon the following proceedings were had in chambers, outside of the presence and hearing of the jury:)

Mr. WOLL. If the Court please, Herbert Haupt was arrested on the morning of the 27th of June. That evening there was at the Haupt home Mr. and Mrs. Wergin, and I believe also their two children, Mr. and Mrs. Wergin, Mr. and Mrs. Froehling and their two children, and Hans and Erna Haupt.

That is the evening, later on, that is the evening when that particular search was made that we had on hearing before trial of the case.

We propose to prove no part—we propose to prove by a witness—and we will also have testimony to further things, that on the evening of June 27th that he went to the Haupt home, that at the Haupt home he saw Mr. and Mrs. Wergin, Mrs. Froehling, at least, and Hans Haupt and Erna Haupt.

682 That is the instance that we are going into. As to what transpired nothing will be said about the search.

The COURT. You are going to do what?

Mr. WOLL. Going to prove by this witness.

The COURT. Whom?

Mr. WOLL. This witness, Handley, who is now taking the stand.

The COURT. Yes?

Mr. WOLL. That he went to the Haupt home on the night of June 27th; that in that home were Mr. and Mrs. Wergin, Mrs. Froehling, Hans and Erna Haupt and I think the Froehling children.

Nothing is going to be testified as to what happened in the house, just the mere fact that they were in the house when he got there. We are not going into this search and won't ask any questions about what they did there at all, or any conversation that took place, just the bare fact that these people were in the house that night.

The COURT. How did Handley go there on the evening, what for?

Mr. WOLL. Herbert had been arrested that morning.

The COURT. Handley went there, why? For whom did Handley go there?

Mr. WOLL. Along with other FBI agents.

683 The COURT. With whom?

Mr. FINN. Shaeffer and Kriofsky, the three of them testified on Monday. They were mentioned on Monday. They were the ones that made the search.

Mr. BERTRAM. On the motion to suppress.

The COURT. This is one of the men who went there?

Mr. BERTRAM. Shaeffer, Handley and Kriofsky.

The COURT. Did you say Handley testified here?

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes, sir; he was the last one who testified.

The COURT. No.

Mr. WOLL. I might point out what they had in the petition which your Honor granted and the order which was entered on it was to exclude such evidence as the finding of money in the home, the finding of clothes——

The COURT. They went there, as far as the evidence shows, to make a search. Anything that they saw there—they were there illegally and they may not testify to it. Anything they saw. If there is an objection to it I will sustain it.

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes.

The COURT. Objection sustained.

Mr. WOLL. I believe we will have some other testimony from this witness, but not along that line, but not on that subject.

684 The COURT. Would it be better to let the jury——

Mr. WOLL. Have a recess?

The COURT. Recess now, or later?

Mr. WOLL. It makes no difference to me.

Mr. BERTRAM. We have no objection.

(And thereupon the following proceedings were had in open court in the presence of the jury.)

The COURT. You may take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(And thereupon a short recess was taken.)

Q. Who was with you on that occasion?

A. Special Agent John A. Lynch.

Q. Did you go out on foot or on automobile?

A. We went out in an automobile.

Q. When you got out there, then, did you take up a position where you could see 2234 North Fremont Street?

A. Yes, sir; we did.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 60, 61, and 62 for identification and ask you if those correctly portray that building, 2234 North Fremont Street?

A. Yes, sir; they do.

Q. Now calling your attention to about 7:30 P. M. on the date of June 22, 1942—that was on a Monday, was it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. At about 7:30, will you tell us what, if anything, you observed?

A. At about 7:30 that night I saw Hans Haupt and 706 Erna Haupt and Herbert Haupt go out of the front door of the Hans Haupt house at 2234 North Fremont.

I saw them walk out on the porch, down the steps, and they got into a Plymouth car sedan which was parked in front of the residence of 2234 North Fremont.

Q. Did you follow them?

A. Yes; I did?

Q. When they first got into the car who was driving?

A. Herbert Haupt got into the driver's position in the car and drove the car away from 2234.

Q. Did you follow them?

A. Yes.

Q. Just tell us where they went.

A. Well, they drove around the block and then the car stopped.

Q. What do you mean by "around the block"?

A. I mean they drove the car south on Fremont to Webster, then east on—or west on Webster, for another block; then they turned north to the next street for one block arriving at Belden Avenue and on that intersection the car stopped.

Q. Will you tell us what took place when the car stopped?

A. I saw Herbert Haupt get out from the driver's posi-
707 tion of the car and at the same time Hans Haupt got out of the right side of the car and the two of them changed positions with each—Hans Haupt then taking the driver's seat.

Q. Who was in the middle?

A. Erna Haupt was in the middle.

Q. Did you follow them?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Will you tell us where they went?

A. They proceeded on to Elston Avenue, and then they went in a northwesterly direction, and they came to 6361 North Leoti Avenue where the car stopped.

Q. Did you ascertain whose residence that was?

A. Well, that was the residence of Andreas Conrad Grunau.

Q. Will you tell us what, if anything, you observed when the car stopped there?

A. As the car pulled up, and as the car stopped the three persons—that is Hans Haupt, Erna Haupt, and Herbert Haupt—got out of the car and walked up the front sidewalk to the Grunau residence.

Shortly thereafter two women appeared from the side of the house and the five people, Hans Haupt, Erna Haupt, Herbert Haupt and these two women were standing in front of the house for about ten minutes. Then the five went into the Grunau residence.

Q. About what time was that approximately?

A. They arrived there about 8:00 P. M. This made it about eight or ten—about 8:15 when they went into the house.

Q. Did you remain there?

A. I did.

Q. All right. How long were they in the Grunau residence there?

A. Until approximately 9:30 P. M.

Q. And then what, if anything did you observe?

A. Then I observed Hans Haupt, Herbert Haupt, and Erna Haupt coming out of the Grunau residence and they again got into the Plymouth car that they had parked in front of that house.

Q. What did they do then?

A. With Hans Haupt who was then driving the car—then we followed the car as it drove off from that address, and we followed it and saw them stop in front of 7236 North Odell.

Q. Did you later ascertain whose residence that was?

A. Yes, I did. That is the resident of Hienrich Koch.

Q. What happened there?

A. As the car stopped the three individuals, that is Hans Haupt, Erna Haupt and Herbert Haupt got out of the car and went up to the front porch of the Koch residence. They rang the bell and shortly thereafter were admitted to the residence. I saw them go in.

Q. How long did they stay there?

A. They arrived there at about 10:00 P. M., and they stayed until about 10:30, approximately 10:30 that evening.

Q. Then what happened?

A. Well, at 10:30 the porch light went on, on the front porch of the house. I saw the three of them, that is Hans Haupt, Erna Haupt and Herbert Haupt came again, came out from the Koch residence, standing on the front porch a few minutes talking. Then they walked down the stairs, got into the Plymouth that was parked in the street.

Q. Where did they go?

A. They drove off. I followed them to 2234 North Fremont Street.

Q. Tell us what happened there.

A. The car pulled up in front of 2234 North Fremont Street and the door opened and Erna Haupt and Herbert Haupt got out of the car and walked up to the front of the residence, up the front steps, 2234 and into the front door.

Q. What happened to Hans? What did he do?

A. Well, Hans Haupt driving the Plymouth then proceeded on south on Fremont Street. I lost sight of him.

Q. Now, calling your attention to the 25th day of June——

Mr. FINN. Strike that, please.

Calling your attention to the 25th day of June, 1942, at approximately 12:00 P. M. were you in the vicinity of 2234 North Fremont Street on that occasion?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. Did you follow Herbert Haupt from some other place?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. What did you see him do at that time, about 12:00 P. M.?

A. I saw him drive his—drive the Pontiac car up in front of 2234 North Fremont. Then after he parked the car I saw him go into the residence of 2234 North Fremont.

Q. That was after midnight?

A. Just about midnight of the 25th.

711 Q. Did you observe the condition of the lights at that time in the third floor apartment?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Will you tell us what you saw?

A. Well, shortly after Herbert went into that building at 2234 North Fremont I saw the lights on the third floor go off—that is, they were extinguished.

Mr. FINN. I believe that is all with this witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. You did not testify as to these facts during the last trial, did you, Mr. Axtell?

A. No; I did not.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all, thank you.

Re-direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Were you asked about them during the last trial or not?

A. No.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. FINN. I think the next witness will be somewhat longer, your Honor, and if your Honor desires we could——

714 (The following proceedings were had in open Court, but in the absence of the jury from the courtroom:)

Mr. HURLEY. May these be marked for identification, "Government's Exhibits 65 and 66."

(Whereupon said documents were marked "Government's Exhibits 65 and 66," for identification.)

Mr. WOLL. Those are the pictures of the courtroom, if your Honor please.

The COURT. Have you a witness that can describe these?

Mr. WOLL. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. You can tell where they are taken, where they are supposed to be taken?

Mr. AXTELL. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. You have been sworn?

Mr. AXTELL. Yes, I have; yesterday.

The COURT. Take the stand. Have him tell what these are.

RICHARD W. AXTELL, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows in the absence of the jury:

715 Direct examination by Mr. WOLL:

Mr. WOLL. The record will show this is outside the presence of the jury, will it, your Honor?

The COURT. Yes.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. What is your name?

A. Richard W. Axtell.

Q. You have been previously sworn, have you not, as a witness in this case?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. You have?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. May these photographs be marked for identification as "Government's Exhibits A to H," inclusive?

The COURT. Yes.

(The documents produced by counsel were marked for identification "Government's Exhibits A to H.")

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Mr. Axtell——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present in the courtroom at the time the pictures were taken of the courtroom?

A. I was.

Q. When were those pictures taken?

A. The pictures were taken on May 29th and 30th.

716 By the COURT:

Q. Was Court in session at the time?

A. No; it was not.

Q. Was the jury present or not present?

A. The jury was out of the courtroom.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Will you describe in general just how the pictures were taken?

A. Yes, sir. We set the camera. We measured first from my eyes to the floor. I was sitting in what is a normal position in the witness chair, and that measurement was 45 inches.

We then set the camera and measured from the center of the lense to the floor and we set that at 44 inches from the floor.

We then took pictures from that position, directly straight from the witness chair, some to the jury, some to the table used by the defense counsel.

By the COURT:

Q. How tall are you?

A. Five feet nine inches.

Q. So far as you know, of normal build?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibits A to H, inclusive, which are photographs of various parts in the courtroom and ask you if you can explain them?

717 THE COURT. Let me ask you first: The camera lens you said was set at one inch below, or at about one inch below the place your eyes are as you sit in the normal position and you said that is about one inch lower than your eyes?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibits A to H, which are photographs of the courtroom, and ask you if you will describe these photographs for the court and for the record; and also tell at that time where the camera was at the time of the taking of the pictures?

A. May I refer to my notes that I made at the time?

THE COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

A. The first picture, that is Government's Exhibit A, is a picture taken with the camera in the position of the witness chair as I have previously described, the center of the lens measured 44 inches to the floor and the picture was taken directly west, focused on the rear chair at the table used by the Government. That is Government's Exhibit A.

Q. What is that a picture of?

A. That picture was taken on May 29.

718 Government's Exhibit B was a picture taken with the camera in the same position; that is, the center of the lens to the floor measured 44 inches, and the camera was placed facing west, so it focused on the chair in which Mr. Finn now sits, of the Government.

THE COURT. Which is——

A. The closest chair at the government table.

THE COURT. The chair closest to the Judge's bench or at the right-hand side of the government's table as one looks from the Judge's bench. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Government's Exhibit C was a photograph of the jury box taken with the camera in the same position, that is, the center of the lens to the floor measured 44 inches and was focused on the third chair in the rear row of the jury box.

Q. The third chair in the front?

A. Yes, sir. Number 3 chair in the rear row, starting from this end.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Starting from the end nearest the Judge?

A. Yes, sir.

719 Government's Exhibit D is another photograph of the jury box, the camera in the same position, focused on number 7 chair in the rear row.

Government's Exhibit E was a photograph of the table—the chair closest to the Judge's bench on the left-hand side of the table used by the defense counsel, and the camera position was the same in this picture as I have previously described.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Axtell, have you noticed in the trial of this case where defense counsel was, whether at the government table or not?

A. From time to time he used that table, the government's table.

Government's Exhibit F is a photograph taken in the same position as Government's Exhibit E, with Special Agent J. Brady Murphy seated in the chair closest to the bench from the left-hand side of the table used by defense counsel.

Government's Exhibit G is a photograph taken from the same position as I have previously described; that is, the lens of the camera 44 inches to the floor focused on the chair in which the defendant, Hans Haupt, has been sitting, at the rear of the defense table.

Mr. BERTRAM. That is what number?

720 By Mr. WOLL:

Q. At the time of the taking of the pictures, were there two chairs at the defense table in front of the defendant's chair?

A. Yes, sir; there were.

Q. At the present time there is only one chair in front of the chair he is seated?

A. That is correct.

The COURT. Will you mark, Mr. Axtell, or can you get at these photographs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you mark the top of the back of the chair in which the defendant has been seated throughout the trial with the letter of that exhibit, which is Exhibit G, just put a "G" in ink on the chair—on the photograph of the chair—on which the defendant has been seated throughout this trial?

(Witness marks photograph.)

The COURT. I said "G" but you put an "X" for the chair?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Well, that is all right.

A. I will also mark it with a "G".

The COURT. That is all right. The "X" is to indicate the chair in which the defendant was seated.

721 A. Exhibit H is a photograph taken from the same position as Government's Exhibit G, that is, with the camera in the same position. When these photographs were taken of the same chair occupied by the defendant in which chair he was seated—we show Special Agent J. Brady Murphy.

The COURT. Anything further?

Mr. WOLL. No.

The COURT. Any cross-examination?

Mr. BERTRAM. May we see these?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination, your Honor.

The Court. Do you offer these photographs?

Mr. WOLL. Yes, we offer the photographs.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Whereupon said documents marked Government's Exhibits A to H both inclusive, were received in evidence and are as follows, to wit:)

722 The COURT. Bring in the jury. Those are not to be exhibited to the jury, gentlemen.

Mr. WOLL. We understand.

(No cross-examination. Witness excused.)

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

(And thereupon the following additional proceedings were had in open court, in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

Mr. HURLEY. If the Court please, and counsel, we desire to offer in evidence as Government's Exhibit 65 the naturalization certificate of the defendant Hans Max Haupt. As I understand it, counsel agrees that the Hans Max Haupt whose citizenship is evidenced by Government's Exhibit 65 is the same defendant, Hans Hax Haupt, who is on trial here.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is correct.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Whereupon said document marked Government's Exhibit 65, was received in evidence and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

723 Mr. HURLEY. We also wish to offer in evidence as Government's Exhibit 66 a certified copy of the Declaration of War, dated December 11, 1941, being the Declaration of War between the United States and the government of Germany.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Whereupon said document, marked Government's Exhibt 66, was received in evidence and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

A. That is right.

Q. Showing you Government's Exhibit 3 for identification, can you tell us who that is?

A. Herbert Haupt.

Q. Is that the man that you describe in all these instances?

A. No, there is not; only one door.

Q. Now, calling your attention to approximately 7:00 o'clock in the morning of the 24th; I think you said just a moment ago you saw Herbert Haupt go in at 12:30 A. M.?

Q. Now, about what time did the lights go out?

A. I would say about 12:40 A. M.

825 Q. About how long did you remain and observe that house after that?

A. Until 6 A. M.

Q. Now calling your attention to June 25th, 1942, did you again that evening observe Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Approximately what time?

A. Approximately 12, midnight.

Q. Where did you observe him?

A. I observed him driving his automobile, a Pontiac automobile which he parked about two houses north on 2234 on the west side of the street. I saw him get out of the car at that time, and walk over to the same gate, and enter the building, 2234.

Q. And when you say entered the building, you mean by the front steps?

A. He went up the front steps through the front door.

Q. And did you again notice the condition of the lights before he went into the place, after he arrived?

A. Yes, I did. Before he went in the house, the lights on the third floor were out. A few minutes after he entered, the lights were on. After about ten minutes, the lights were out.

826 Q. Now, how long did you remain in the neighborhood of 2234 North Fremont Street that particular evening?

A. I remained there all night until about 9:30 A. M. of the morning of the 26th.

Q. Now, that morning of the 26th, while you were still observing the house, did you again see Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What time did you see him?

A. It was 9 o'clock A. M.

Q. Did you particulary notice the clothes he was wearing when he went there the evening before?

A. Yes; when he went the evening before—that is, on the 25th—at midnight he wore a green sweater, tan gabardine trousers and a pair of brown and white shoes, white and green colored Panama hat with the rim turned down.

Q. Do you recall how he was dressed when he came out from 2234 on the morning of June the 26th

A. Yes; I do. He was wearing a tan gabardine suit—that is; a coat and jacket—with a pair of brown and white shoes.

Q. Now, did you have an opportunity to observe the Pontiac automobile which you say he was driving?

A. Yes; I did.

827 Q. Can you describe the color of the wheels?

A. Yes; the wheels were red, the car itself was black.

Q. Now, you state that at about 9 o'clock in the morning June 26th, that you saw Herbert Haupt leave 2234 North Fremont?

A. I saw him leave that particular address; yes, sir.

Q. Was anyone with you at that time?

A. Yes; Agent George O'Connor and Jim Hynes were with me at the time.

Q. Now, at any time did he stop after he left?

A. I observed him walk over to where he had parked this Pontiac automobile the night before, about midnight, when I definitely ascertained he intended to use that car. I went up and made a telephone call to my other agents, advising them of that fact.

Q. Then did you go off duty?

A. No, sir; I stayed until Agents O'Connor and Hynes left the building at that time.

Q. You stayed at the building?

A. I stayed there until I was relieved; yes, sir.

Q. Now, did you later return to that particular building, 2231 North Fremont?

A. Yes, I did, at approximately 8 P. M. of June the 26th.

828 Q. That is the same day—the night of the same day?

A. The same day; yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Herbert Haupt at any time that evening or early morning hour of the next day?

A. Yes, I did. At 1:50 A. M., the same Pontiac automobile was parked directly in front of 2234, and I saw Herbert Haupt get out of that automobile, and enter the building at 2234.

Q. And how did he enter the building?

A. The same way he entered on the previous night. He entered directly through the front door—up the porch, into the front door.

Q. Did you again observe the condition of the lights on the third floor?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that?

A. The lights were out at the time he entered the building; they came on in a few minutes after he entered the building, and they remained on for approximately ten minutes, at which time they were put out.

Q. Did you have an opportunity to observe what clothes he was wearing on that occasion?

A. Yes. At the time he came in he was still wearing the suit, that is, the coat and pants of the same color, and gabardine.

829 Q. The same clothes he wore that morning when he left?

A. That is correct.

Q. This was approximately 1:50, you say?

A. 1:50 A. M.; yes, sir.

Q. Now, calling your attention to 9 o'clock of the morning of the same day, did you again see Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How was he dressed?

A. It was later than that that evening.
Q. At about 12:55?

A. In 1920; July.
Q. You served in the German army during the last war?
A. Yes; from 1914 to 1918, from the beginning to the end.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that and ask that it be stricken as immaterial.
The COURT. Overruled. It identifies him.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you belong to any World War Organizations in Chicago?
A. No; not now.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to.
The WITNESS. I did.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Your Honor, he is leading him.
The COURT. Overruled.
Mr. HURLEY. All right.
840 Q. Did you belong to any organization——
A. Yes; the World War Veterans.
Q. The World War Veterans?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that is the German World War Veterans?
A. The German World War Veterans, that is the German Army. I was with them at that time from 1914 to 1918.
Q. When did you join the World War Veterans organization?

A. About 1935.
Q. Do you know Hans Haupt?
A. Yaah.
Q. Do you see him in the court room?

Q. Will you point him out?
A. There.
Mr. HURLEY. Indicating the defendant Hans Haupt.
Q. When did you first meet Hans Haupt?
A. It was 1935 in the World War organization when I joined it.
Q. When you joined the German World War Veterans organization?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether or not Hans Haupt belonged 841 to that organization? Did he belong to the same organization?

A. To the same organization.
Q. How often did that organization have meetings?
Mr. BERTRAM. I object.
The WITNESS. Twice a month.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. I am asking generally how often they had meetings.
A. Every second Thursday and every fourth Sunday.
The COURT. Is that true throughout the period when you belonged to it?
A. Yes.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you see Hans Haupt at any of those meetings?
A. Yes; very often.
Q. Did you talk to him at those meetings?
Mr. BERTRAM. I ask that the time be fixed.
The COURT. He is asking the year, these general questions. Overruled.
Q. During what period did you see him at these meetings there?
A. Often at the meetings.
Q. During what years?
A. 1935 to 1939 and in 1940 I resigned, I resigned as a member there.

842 By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Do you know whether or not Hans Haupt ever worked at the Knickerbocker Hotel?
A. Oh, yes.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to.
The WITNESS. He worked for them for one year.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I ask that that be stricken out. It is leading.

The COURT. Overruled. Every leading question isn't improper. That isn't a good objection.

The WITNESS. He started about 1936 and worked until 1937 at the same place I work now.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. And what kind of work did Hans Haupt do at the Knickerbocker Hotel?

A. He was painting, painter.

Q. How often did you see him during 1936 and 1937 at the Knickerbocker Hotel?

A. About every day.

Q. Did you talk to Hans Haupt there when you were working at the Knickerbocker Hotel?

A. Oh, yes, we were talking there.

Q. Now, what if anything did Hans Haupt tell you there at that time?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objected to.

The COURT. Fix the time and place.

By Mr. HURLEY:

843 Q. During the year 1936 did you talk to him during 1936?

A. Oh, yes; we was talking.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object. My objection goes to this conversation as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial and unless the date is specified he is supposed to follow that out then I will ask to clarify my objection.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you talk to Hans Haupt in 1936 while you were both working at the Knickerbocker Hotel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall about when he came to work there at the Knickerbocker Hotel in 1936, what month?

A. In 1936.

Q. Can you recall what month it was in 1936?

A. April or May; maybe it was May.

Q. Now after he came there to work did you talk to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you talk about?

A. He was talking about——

Mr. BERTRAM. I object. The conversations are general. In 1936 it would be irrelevant here in this case.

844 The COURT. Well, it might be. Overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. We would like to be heard on that, your Honor.

The COURT. Well, we talked about that the other day, didn't we? Is there anything different than what we said the other day?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would like at this time to put in a formal objection, and I ask that it be put in the record.

We object on the ground it is incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant and it tends to deny a fair trial to the defendant in this case and to support this contention I understand all these acts occurred prior to any acts charged in the indictment in this particular question. That they occurred prior to our entry into any war. That at the time of the making of these utterances, whatever utterances they may have been, it was lawful for the defendant to express himself favorably or adversely with reference to Germany or any other country in the world. If it was a lawful act at that time, it cannot be made to stand as a criminal act at a later date, supplying one of the elements of treason charged in the indictment, namely, "intent."

845 To bring in such remarks made so long ago by a defendant, would in effect be in the nature of a violation of the ex post facto law provision.

I further state if it were permitted as to this particular crime, which this man had nothing to do with, on the theory of his reputation, it is not allowable; it is not allowable to bring in past misdeeds, even when such resulted into a conviction.

The COURT. If is on the question of intent?

Mr. HURLEY. That is right.

The COURT. And intent only?

Mr. HURLEY. Well, limited to that purpose.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I also object further. I think, in a criminal case, the general rule is whatever the defendant did in a former case, even if a crime was committed, that cannot be admitted on a subsequent trial.

The COURT. I think it is admissible on the question of intent. Overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. I also object on the ground of remoteness.

The COURT. Overruled. You are starting in with 1936?

Mr. HURLEY. Up until 1940.

The COURT. You expect to bring it down from 1936 to 1940?

Mr. HURLEY. By this witness.

846 The COURT. It might be remote if brought in before this instance from 1936 to 1940.

Mr. HURLEY. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. With this witness.

Mr. HURLEY. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And by this witness.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. We will have later other witnesses to carry it further.
The COURT. Go ahead.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. What did you talk about?
A. We also talked about the time we were fighting in the war in the trenches; then he brought up about Hitler.
Q. What did he say?
A. He was in back of Hitler. He was in favor of Hitler.
Q. He was always in favor of Hitler?
A. He liked Hitler very much.
Q. He did?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What else did he say about him?
A. He said——
Mr. BERTRAM. I move that the answer be stricken, "he liked Hitler".
847 The WITNESS. He said he would like to have a man like Hitler here to rule this country.
The COURT. Just a minute. Strike out what he liked about Hitler and tell us as near as you can what Mr. Haupt said about Hitler.
The WITNESS. He said we needed a man like Hitler here to rule the country like it was built up over there. A man like Hitler in charge would chase the Jews and like that.
The COURT. What about what?
The WITNESS. The Jews. He would chase them out of here like he did in Germany.
The COURT. I didn't get that. What did he say? I don't understand him.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. The Jews; what did he say about the Jews?
A. Haupt said we needed a man like Hitler here. We needed a rule like they did in Germany.
Q. Like who did in Germany?
A. Hitler.
Q. Who told you these things?
A. Hans Haupt.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You understand my objection stands to this entire conversation brought out.
The COURT. Yes.

By Mr. HURLEY:

848 Q. Now, how often did you have talks with Hans Haupt about that?
A. Very often.
Q. The first talks were where?

A. In the working place and in the meeting and before the meeting and after the meeting and at beer parties we were talking there so often I cannot remember, or repeat, everything what was we were talking about.

Q. Did you have talks of the same general nature over what period of time, over how long?

A. 1936 to 1940; then I resigned.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to this improper question, "did you have talks of the same general nature?" We would like to know what was said.

Mr. HURLEY. All right. You tell us what was said.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. In every case fix the time.

The COURT. All right; fix the time. Sustained.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you talk to him in 1936 after he came to work at the Knickerbocker?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that just a minute ago—that was about what month in 1936?

A. That was in 1936, in 1937; it was for then about each 849 week, once a month, a couple of times, the whole period.

Q. Did you talk to him once a week or twice a week after he came to work at the Knickerbocker?

A. Once a week, twice a week, like that.

Mr. BERTRAM. The witness doesn't know any particular conversation, any particular time and I move to strike it out.

The COURT. Ask him.

Mr. HURLEY. That is what I am trying to fix, if I can.

The WITNESS. I can't remember every day or date from that. it is long, too often was it.

Q. Now, after he came to work at the Knickerbocker, it was in the spring of 1936?

A. Uh huh.

Q. You remember that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You talked with him after that, how often did you talk to him about Germany?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objection.

The COURT. Overruled.

The WITNESS. A couple of times.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. About?

A. A couple of times, more than that.

Q. A dozen times or more?

830. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that started in the spring of 1936?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did you have those talks?
A. Down in the lunch room where we ate our lunch.
Q. Where was the lunch room?
A. In the basement.
Q. In the Knickerbocker Hotel?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you talk to him any more, and if so, where?
A. In the room where the painting was. I was in the rooms, too; sometimes we talked, too.
Q. Anywheres else besides in the Knickerbocker Hotel?
A. In the World War Organization.
Q. Was that at the meetings of this organization?
A. After the meetings and before the meetings.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I ask, your Honor, that the time be fixed.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. When was the first time you talked with him at organization meetings, if you can recall?
A. It was in 1935, summer.
Q. Did you talk to him at every meeting?
A. Not every meeting; no.
Q. How many meetings?
A. Very often, too.
Q. Well, how many meetings did you have a month?
A. In the month, two meetings.
Q. Two meetings?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That would be twenty-four meetings a year; is that right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. At how many of those meetings did you meet Hans Haupt?
A. Maybe about twelve or fourteen times like that.
Q. On how many of those occasions did you have your talks with Hans Haupt about Germany?
A. About that same number—twelve times like that; I can't remember.
Q. That was after the meetings and during the meetings?
A. And before the meetings.
Q. And you belonged to the German World War Veterans Organization for how long?
A. I resigned in 1940, about June or July.
Q. Did you attend meetings every month during those years in 1935 to 1940?
A. I was at each meeting.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment. I will object to that.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you attend?

A. Yes; I attended meetings.

MR. WARNHOLTZ. I object as this is immaterial to the issues in this case, where he attended or whether or not he attended.

The COURT. Overruled.

The WITNESS. Yes; I was at those meetings.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. During the year 1937 how many times did you see Hans Haupt at this organization's meetings? About how many times?

A. Well, at least once a month in our meeting.

Q. During 1938 about how many times would you see him at the organization meetings?

A. Often, too.

Q. What is that?

A. Only I did not miss not many meetings and Hans not either. He was often there, too.

Q. About how many times? Would your say half of the times?

A. More than that.

Q. More than that?

A. More than that.

Q. Twenty-four meetings?

853 A. About three-quarter of the time, maybe.

Q. During the year 1939 did you see him at the organization meetings?

A. I say about the same.

Q. About the same time?

A. Yes.

Q. About the same number of times?

A. About three-quarters.

Q. When in the year 1940 did you resign from that organization?

MR. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to, your Honor. He has not stated he resigned.

Mr. HURLEY. He originally said that he resigned.

Q. Tell us when or how long you belonged to this organization?

A. May 1935 to June or July 1940.

Q. Then what happened in June or July of 1940?

A. I resigned. I did not like it no more.

MR. BERTRAM. I move to strike that he did not like it.

The COURT. Let it stand.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you see Hans Haupt during 1940 up until the time you resigned from the World War Veterans organization?

854 A. I met him once on Fullerton and Halsted Streets when he went with his wife there. I lived in that neighborhood and he told me that Herbert went to Mexico.

Q. About when was that he told you that?

A. That was about in the fall, November or October, 1941.

Q. Did he tell you anything else at that time?

A. No.

Q. Did you ask why he had gone to Mexico?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to leading the witness.

The COURT. What?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to leading the witness.

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you say anything to Hans Haupt when he told you that Herbert had gone to Mexico?

A. I did not say anything, but I was thinking I did not believe it.

Q. In 1940, this German World War Veterans' organization—you say you resigned in June?

A. I resigned.

The COURT. In June or July is what he said.

The WITNESS. June or July. I do not remember any more.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you attend meetings of that organization between the first of January and the time you resigned in June or July, of that organization?

855 A. Yes; I attend meetings in that time.

Q. About how many did you attend?

A. In my belief then after 1939, when I got to pull out, drew out. I was against that money for Germany, for Hitler. I did not go along.

Mr. BERTRAM. That is not responsive and I ask that be stricken.

Mr. HURLEY. I do not object to that.

Q. How many meetings did you attend during 1940, about how many?

A. Maybe two or three.

Q. Did you see Hans Haupt at any of those meetings?

A. Yes; he was there then.

Q. Did you at one of those meetings in the latter part of 1939 or the early part of 1940 have a talk with anybody in the organization about relief?

A. About?

Q. About relief?

A. From the relief for Germany.

Q. Just say yes or no, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that meeting in 1940?
A. No; it was in 1939, in the fall, I guess.
Q. In the fall of 1939?
A. September or October, I am not sure of that.
856 Q. Did you talk to Hans Haupt about that?
A. Yes. After the meeting he comes to me, told me I should not talk against that, that they send money to Germany. I was talking in the meeting. I have been against it. I did not like to send money over there that Hitler might buy machine guns or ammunition for it. Everybody jumped on me, pull me——

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that.

A. Hans comes to me, told me I should shame myself, I am born in Germany——

Mr. BERTRAM. May we have our objection, your Honor?

The COURT. What is your objection?

Mr. BERTRAM. Our objection about the statement of what the witness said during the meetings be stricken.

The COURT. He said that he said something during the meetings; that after the meeting the defendant came to him and said he should not say that.

The WITNESS. That is right.

The COURT. That is what he testified. Objection overruled.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. What was it that you said during the meeting that you talked to Hans Haupt about afterwards?
857 A. Through the meeting I would say it was—I did not think the organization want to send $500 over there to Germary.
Q. The organization wanted to send $500 to Germany?
A. Yes; I was standing up, I was speaking against it.
Q. You were?
A. Where our money goes. It was for poor people, but I was thinking they do not go to the poor people, maybe Hitler get, you know, and buy machine guns and ammunition. I did not like that.
Q. Did you talk to Hans Haupt after the meeting about what you said in the meeting?
A. No. He comes alone of himself. He told me I should shame myself.
Q. What did Hans Haupt say about money, what is your recollection?
A. I shame myself, I am born in Germany.
Q. He said you should be ashamed?
A. I should shame myself, that I am born in Germany.
Q. Did he say anything else?
A. Not then—I am not a good German.

Q. Who said that?
A. Hans Haupt.
Q. Yes?
858 A. One day I told him—we were talking more than once. I told him: "It is right——" other time—"if you like Germany better why don't you got back there."
Q. Did he say anything when your told him that?
A. No.
Q. Was there anything said in this conversation you talked about after the meeting——
A. No.
Q. Did Hans Haupt say anything else?
A. Nothing else than that, what I just repeat here.
Q. Did you know Mrs. Erna Haupt?
A. Yes, sir. I know Mrs. Erna Haupt, too, his wife at parties.
Q. What?
A. We got Sunday parties, beer parties and by picnics I see her there.
Q. Did you ever talk to Hans Haupt about his wife taking a trip?
Mr. BERTRAM. I object to the leading question, leading the witness, your Honor.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object. Counsel is constantly leading the witness, your Honor, and it will not be necessary for us to object any more because the witness will already know what he 859 wants to ask when he asks a nonleading question. I wish counsel would stop. He knows the rules of evidence.
The COURT. Yes or no on this. Yes or no, what is the answer?
A. I saw Mrs. Haupt often.
Mr. HURLEY. Will you read the question?
(Question read:
"Q. Did you ever talk to Hans Haupt about his wife taking a trip?")
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you talk to him about that.
The COURT. Your objection is overruled.
A. It was before the trip started.

Mr. HURLEY:

Q. When was the trip, if you know, what year?
A. 1938.
Q. Where did—did you know where that trip was to?
Mr. BERTRAM. Objection.
A. Yes.
Mr. BERTRAM. We do not know what trip.
A. That trip, went to Germany.

The COURT. Well, you have better confine this conversations between them, this witness and Mr. Haupt.

860 Mr. HURLEY. I want to identify the object if I could.

The COURT. All right.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Did you talk to Hans Haupt about this trip?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About when was that, as best you can recall?

A. It was in the Knickerbocker Hotel, during working time, then in that time 1937 working, and our organization was getting a savings fund.

Q. Savings bank?

A. To pay $5.00 every meeting in the fund, get your carfare together then for that trip.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that. It is not proper or relevant, your Honor.

A. Any who wants to pay it, they may $5.00, $10.00.

The COURT. Let that stand.

A. In your bank book.

By Mr. HURLEY:

Q. What was that fund for?

A. That was to pay the trip.

Q. Trip to where?

A. To Germany, to the Tannenberg exhibition.

Q. What is that?

A. The Tannenberg.

Q. Tannenberg?

A. Yes, sir.

861 Q. Did Hans Haupt talk to you about that Tannenberg exposition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was the time he talked to you about it?

A. About 1937—1938.

Q. When was the exposition held, what year?

A. 1938.

Q. What did Hans Haupt tell you about it then when he talked to you about this Tannenberg exposition?

A. His wife goes over.

Q. He told you that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you she was going?

A. Yes, sir; I know that, members what went over there. It was a bunch went over there, about thirty or forty went over. Mrs. Haupt did too.

Q. Were they all members of this World War Veterans Organization or their wives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Hans Haupt talk to you about the trip after Mrs. Haupt had made the trip?

A. After she comes back?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did Hans Haupt tell you about that?

862 A. His wife told him it was very nice over there, and Hitler built Germany up, cannot build it better than it is now, we need a man here to build, make like Hitler built up Germany over there.

Q. Did he say anything else after Erna Haupt came back, about Germany that you can remember?

A. One thing I remember now. He was talking to me, "Before I send Herbert over to Germany to fight against Germany I kill him myself."

Q. What was that?

A. "Before I send Herbert over to Germany, leav Herbert fighting an American fight against Germany, I kill him myself."

Q. Before he would let him fight against Germany he would kill him himself?

A. Yes.

Q. Hans Haupt told you that?

A. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Ask the witness to fix the date.

The COURT. When was that, time and place.

A. It was during 1938 when the war was on over there, and Hitler jumped on Poland and France, and his wife was coming back from Germany, made the trip them.

Mr. BERTRAM. 1938?

By Mr. HUXLEY:

863 Q. Did he ever say anything to you about his son going back to Germany?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say about that?

Mr. BERTRAM. Wait a minute.

A. It was 19——

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that unless the time and place is fixed. Counsel gives the statement first and later on sometime fixes the date.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Sometimes he omits it. After that was——

Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Will you tell us?

A. That was 1936. Haupt was working in the Knickerbocker Hotel, too, for a couple of weeks.

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection on the ground, too remote.

The COURT. Overruled.

A. He had it out—when he was going and told me, "I would like to send him back. I think I will send him back to Germany, that he learn the trade over there, get raised up like the German kids over there."

Mr. HURLEY. Cross-examine.

Mr. BERTRAM. Just a moment, if the Court please.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We make a motion for a mistrial at this time on the ground that the testimony of this witness positively 864 denies the defendant a fair trial on the charges made against him in the indictment.

The COURT. Denied.

Mr. BERTRAM. We further want to ask the Court to exclude all of the testimony of this witness on all grounds heretofore stated to the Court.

The COURT. Motion denied.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination.

The COURT. How long will your cross-examination take?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No cross-examination, your Honor.

The COURT. No cross-examination?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right.

(No cross-examination. Witness excused.)

The COURT. Take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(Short recess here taken.)

The COURT. Proceed.

Q. During the summer of 1940, did Herbert Haupt live there?

A. He lived there continuously.

Q. Did he go away on week ends during the summer of 1940?

A. Yes, he used to go to Ludington, Michigan, to a bund camp.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to, your Honor. I ask that it be stricken. It is immaterial to the issues in this case, the charges in the indictment, what Herbert Haupt did in 1940.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Did you have any conversations during the summer
869 of 1940, the summer month of 1940, with Hans Haupt, Hans Max Haupt, the defendant in this case, with reference to where Herbert was going at that time?

A. Yes, we discussed that frequently.

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection.

Mr. FINN. Just a minute please. Just answer the question.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that question.

The COURT. Overruled.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Where would these conversations take place?

A. In the kitchen of my home.

Q. Will you tell us what Hans Max Haupt told you at that time with reference to what Herbert was doing on the week ends?

Mr. BERTRAM. The same objection.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. Made previously, on the same ground, if the Court please.

The COURT. Overruled.

A. Hans said that Herbert was going to Ludington, Michigan, to a German Youth Camp, also to Wernecke's farm. I asked what they would do up there and he said they would go up there and train, it was the proper thing for German people, who 870 were real Germans to send their children there and raise them like that.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3 for identification and ask you if you can tell us who that is?

A. That is Herbert Haupt.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 6 for identification and ask you to tell us who that is.

A. Herman Neubauer.

Q. Is that the way you pronounce it?

A. Yes; that is the way they pronounced it to me.

Q. Did you ever see this man represented by Government's Exhibit 6 for identification in your place at Glencoe, Illinois, with Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes; in the fall when Herbert was fixing his car he was out there helping him.

Q. The fall of what year?

Q. You said they kept these rifles where?

A. Up over the garage in Hans and Erna's home.

Q. During that period of time that you mentioned, from 872 March 1940 to March 1941 did you have any conversations with Hans Haupt or with Erna Haupt in Hans' presence?

A. Yes.

Q. At your place out there?

A. Yes, many times.

Q. How frequently would you have these conversations?

A. Three or four times a week when I was home.

Q. Will you tell us, starting with the first conversation, will you tell us what was said by Hans Haupt on those occasions?

A. It was during the time——

Mr. BERTRAM. I ask the time and place be fixed.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. When was the first time you recollect after March of 1940, when they moved up to your premises, when was the first time you had a conversation with Hans?

A. The first time I had a conversation with Hans pertaining to Germany and War it was when Germany invaded Russia, around that time.

Q. Do you recollect when that was?

A. In the summer—in the middle of—it was warm weather. I would say around the first part of June, the latter part of May.

Q. That would be in the year——

A. 1940.

873 Q. Who was present at that conversation?

A. Erna and Hans and sometimes Herbert in the kitchen.

Q. Will you tell us what was said on that occasion by Hans Haupt?

Mr. BERTRAM. Wait a minute, "sometimes Herbert." She is talking of several times. You are talking of one time.

The COURT. Well, the first time.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. I am speaking of the first conversation. Do you recollect whether Herbert was there or not?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Was Erna there?

A. Erna and Hans were both there.

Q. You yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us what was said by Hans on that occasion?

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please—just a moment, Mr. Finn. I would like to make an objection to this testimony; object to the question and the answer that the witness may give on the same grounds, all of the same grounds that were made to the testimony of the previous witness, Mr. Willie Schroeder.

The COURT. Yes.

874 Mr. BERTRAM. And the further ground——

The COURT. I understand the testimony of this witness and of Willie Schroeder is being offered on the ground only of intent?

Mr. FINN. That is correct, your Honor.

The COURT. I think I should instruct the jury to that effect, then.

Mr. FINN. All right, your Honor.

The COURT. Ladies and gentlemen: The testimony of this witness on the stand, Mrs. Fishman and that of the preceding witness, whose name is Schroeder, the witness who immediately preceded Mrs. Fishman on the stand is received on the question of intent and the question of intent only. You will consider it only on the question of intent.

Mr. FINN. I might also add, your Honor, that there is one more witness on the same subject, possibly. His name is Poppe. Do you want to instruct the jury at this time, your Honor? It is also received on that basis?

The COURT. I am informed that there is one other witness by the name of Poppe, whose testimony will be only on the question of intent and whatever he says will be received only on the question of intent, but not otherwise.

875 Mr. BERTRAM. Did your Honor make a ruling on my objection?

The COURT. They are overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. Overruled?

The COURT. I overruled them.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you tell us what was said by Hans Haupt on that occasion, Mrs. Fishman?

A. Well, Hans Haupt on that occasion said that Hitler was a God send to the German people, that the people over there had been crucified and suffering for so long; that he was really their salvation; that he was going to make conditions better for them; that he would see that they had what they should have had; that what had been lost in the last World War they had regained now.

Q. Will you tell us anything further that was said on that occasion?

A. Yes.

Q. By Hans Haupt?

A. Yes. Hans Haupt said that if we entered war against Germany we would have a revolution in this country like they had there after the last war; that we have German organizations back here that would take our armories over, our electrical companies, our telephone companies; that the same thing would 876 happen to us as happened in Norway and France, that we would be taken from within by Fifth Column activities.

Q. What did he say about that?

A. He said that France and Norway was taken from within by Fifth Column activities; they were asleep and we were, too.

Q. Do you recall anything further that was said with reference to the utilities that you spoke of just a moment ago?

Mr. BERTRAM. Mr. Finn is not asking as to any particular date or time. I object to the form of that question.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. At the same conversation?

A. At this same conversation, which happened, as I said, the latter part of May, the date I do not remember.

Mr. BERTRAM. What year. What was the year?

A. 1940.

Mr. BERTRAM. 1940?

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall anything further that was said in this conversation, Mrs. Fishman?

A. The conversation was just general about the conditions in the United States; that they thought we were of the mother country of England.

877 Mr. BERTRAM. Just a moment, I object to any general conversation. We certainly have to draw the line somewhere, if your Honor please.

The COURT. Well, just tell what you can remember what Mr. Haupt said at this one conversation. That is all that the District Attorney is asking you about now.

A. During this particular conversation he said the fifth column activities took Norway and France from within.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that, repetition. The question calls for repetition. The repetition of a previous answer.

The COURT. That is repetition. It may go out.

Mr. BERTRAM. I move it be stricken.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Did you have any later conversation with Hans Haupt on the subject?

A. Yes.

Q. How frequently did you have conversations with Hans Haupt on the subject of this character?

A. Three or four times a week.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is objected to, your Honor, "of this character", anything like that.

The COURT. Let it stand. They have a right to show something about it. It does less harm, questions and answers of that 878 kind than detailing each and every one of them.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Do you recall when you next remember—tell us when the next conversation of that character was.

A. Probably a few days later, that date I do not recall.

Q. Do you recall what was said by Hans Haupt on that occasion?

A. Yes. The radio would be on, as long as things would be going well, or anything, why, that is I should say about——

Q. That is your conclusion. I want you to tell us what Hans Haupt said.

Mr. BERTRAM. I move it go out.

Mr. FINN. It may go out by agreement.

Mr. BERTRAM. Strike it out.

By the WITNESS:

A. Hans Haupt said if we entered the war against Germany we were going to have a revolution in this country, that our utilities and the armories, the telephone companies, and the police department, that they had people in there, they would be taken from within.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that answer and move the answer be stricken as a repetition of a previous statement by the witness.

879 The COURT. Unless he said that again, overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. I understood it was the same conversation.

The COURT. No, I think not.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Did Mr. Haupt explain? You said they had people in there which—did Mr. Haupt explain what he meant by that?

Mr. BERTRAM. Object to the form of the question.

The COURT. Overruled.

A. The German organizations that he belonged to, and which he had been attending their meetings on Mondays and Fridays at the Atlantic Hotel.

Mr. FINN. I think that is all with this witness.

Mr. BERTRAM. I want to move the Court to strike out all the testimony of this witness, Mrs. Fishman, upon all of the grounds that have heretofore been stated to the court; and on the further ground of the remoteness of all the testimony to the time of the indictment and the subject matter of this date.

The COURT. Denied.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mrs. Fishman, these conversations took place during 880 the time when there was a great deal of newspaper publicity about various opinions of the United States, pro and con as to our entering into the war at a future time, is that right?

A. No; that took place before that, but they were never as heated an argument as they were after we entered the war, when Erna came back from Germany in 1939, the same conversations would take place.

Q. Then after we entered the war—I mean while the conversations took place there was a great deal of newspaper writing about meetings with Colonel Lindbergh and General Wood, so-called isolationists and others who were—others called the opposite, whatever it was, trying to keep us—trying to get us into the war?

A. Not a great deal. I was not a great deal interested. That was their topic of conversation.

Q. You talked to them about three or five times a week on that subject?

A. Three or four times, when I was home in the kitchen, assisting in the work with Erna. Erna and Hans were treated as one of the family, not treated as help.

Q. And then you would engage in conversation?

A. They would engage. Their conversation—the radio would be on. They would be interested.

881 Q. The radio would be on?

A. The radio in the kitchen would be on. That was their topic of conversation, had their interest.

Q. When it was on the radio constantly?

A. Not constantly, news broadcast.

Q. On the radio?

A. It was not on the radio. It was their topic of conversation. They would listen to the news broadcast over the radio, from the German hour. After it was over it would be their topic of conversation.

Q. You would sit there listening to it?

A. Stayed in the kitchen as long as I was occupied.

Q. You did not engage in any conversation with them about this subject matter, did you?

A. No, no.

Q. Did your husband tell you that they had a right to their own opinions?

A. Well, my husband defended them. He said they were German people, from the old country, they were harmless; said when we entered war they would think different.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Mr. FINN. That is all. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

882 Mr. WOLL. We may have a slight delay of two or three minutes, if your Honor please, with the next witness.

(The following statement was made by Mr. Woll to the Court, out of the hearing of the jury:

"While we are waiting for the witness, if your Honor please, I would like to tell your Honor this witness is one of the witnesses whom we referred to, who said Hans Haupt made certain statements in connection with his knowledge about Herbert Haupt's mission?

The COURT. Admissions?

Mr. WOLL. Admissions.

The COURT. Yes.")

(The following proceedings were had in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

JOHN MAJERCZAK, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. Will you state your name?

883 A. John Majerczak.

Q. What is your first name?

A. John.

Q. Keep your voice up, will you please?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you also known by any other name?

A. Stanley Norris.

Q. That is N-o-r-r-i-s?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the present time you are incarcerated in the State Penitentiary at Joliet, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are in the penitentiary as the result of a conviction of some crime, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the sentence you are now serving?

A. Life for robbery.

Q. Life for robbery?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before this conviction of life for robbery, had you had any prior conviction in Illinois?

A. I did. I had a year, or one to twenty in Pontiac before, in the reformatory.

Q. You were sentenced to one to twenty years in Pontiac Reformatory?

884 A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you convicted for and sentenced?

A. Robbery.

Q. Calling your attention to some time in July of 1942, were you in the Cook County jail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in the Cook County jail then on the charge for which you were later convicted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Hans Max Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see him in this courtroom?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point him out, please?

A. The gentleman sitting there.

Q. Was Hans Max Haupt in the county jail at any time when you were in the county jail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Calling your attention to July of 1942, in what tier or cell block were you in the county jail?

A. I was on H-4, cell 8.

Q. Do you know where Max Haupt was?

A. He was in H-4, cell 2.

885 A. Between 35 and 40 feet.

Q. At any time while you were in the county jail and while Hans Haupt was also in the county jail, did you have a conversation with Hans Haupt or were you present when Hans Haupt had a conversation with anyone else in the County Jail?

A. I talked——

Q. Yes or no?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall approximately the first time you spoke to Hans Haupt?

A. It was the first night that I came on H-4.

Q. I am sorry. The first night you came on H-4?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what night that was, approximately what it was?

A. July 21st.

Q. What year?

A. 1942.

Q. What did he say to you on that occasion?

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, I would like to object on the ground that calls for oral statements not made in court, but supposed to have been made by the defendant Hans Haupt.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Do you remember the question?

886 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you answer it, please?

A. Yes, sir. The answer is yes.

Q. What did Hans Haupt say to you the first time you had a conversation with him, on the night that you arrived on that particular tier?

A. He asked for a newspaper. He addressed his conversation to anyone in the cell tier. He asked for a newspaper—who had a newspaper. I answered I had one.

Q. Yes.

A. And he wanted—he asked was there anything in there about him. I did not know who he was. I asked him his name, so he told me his name was Hans Max Haupt.

I looked through the paper. There was nothing in there, there were a lot of things that were cut out. I told him that somebody cut out, "there is nothing in there with his name in it." That is all that was asked me then.

Q. Did he later say anything else there to you or to anyone else?

A. Yes, sir; later. Not that night. Just asked for a paper, and if it was his name in there.

Q. When was the next time?

887 Mr. BERTRAM. This is on the same objection, to any further conversation?

The COURT. Yes, overruled.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. When was the next conversation that you had with Hans Haupt that you recall, or the next conversation that Hans Haupt had with anyone else that you overheard?

A. He was talking with a fellow by the name of Carl Hamby, the next cell, 4. He was asking about advice on the attorney whom he was going to hire.

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The time is not fixed.

Mr. BERTRAM. In asking for advice, asking for——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Nor is the time fixed when this happened in this conversation.

The COURT. Overruled.

The WITNESS. The next night.

The COURT. That may go out.

Mr. WOLL. Are you objecting to the word "advice"?

The COURT. That he was asking for advice.

Mr. WOLL. I might say, if your Honor please, I can shorten it considerably in a lot of talk if I could ask a few leading questions, I could shorten it up somewhat.

Mr. BERTRAM. My objection was to all of the answer, Mr. Woll.

888 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I want the time placed; when was it, July 22nd?

Mr. FINN. July 21st on the first, and the second was on July 22nd.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. This is the conversation that you are recalling which was the night following the 21st of July 1942?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us exactly what Hans Haupt said? Do not characterize what he said, but state in the exact words as best you can.

A. He asked Carl Hamby what he thought of attorney Benjamin Short.

Q. Did Mr. Hamby reply? Did he reply?

A. Hamby said he did not know nothing of him.

Mr. BERTRAM. Benjamin Short, a lawyer; is that it?

The COURT. I do not think that has any materiality.

Mr. WOLL. I did not want to go into it. I did not want to lead.

The COURT. You are insisting that he not be lead.

Mr. WOLL. They want the whole conversation.

The COURT. Presenting in the light——

Mr. WOLL. I will have this man, Judge, tell the story.

889 Mr. BERTRAM. I am inquiring as to the name, as to the name. I did not hear.

The COURT. Direct his attention to a general subject, any conversation about that general subject.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

Q. Did Hans Haupt at any time in your presence talk with anyone or talk with you about the matter for which he was then in the County jail?

A. The third night I was in the County jail we were discussing—I asked him what his charge was and he told me he was in the County jail for having German money.

Q. Yes.

A. I asked him—I said: "Was it German marks?" He said: "No; it was United States money from Germany."

Q. Yes.

A. And he asked me what my charge was and I told him what my charge was. Each one at that time there told what his charge was, just compared our charges, what we were in the County jail for. It was a general conversation.

Q. Then did you have any further conversation, or did you take part or listen to any further conversation that Hans Haupt had in regard to the charge or the facts concerning his case?

890 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Fix the time.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Were you present at any further conversations along that line?

The COURT. Yes or no.

The WITNESS. Yes; I was present.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Do you recall about when that was?

A. Mr. Haupt was talking to Carl Hamby about the Battle of Stalingrad and that was taking place.

Mr. Haupt and Hamby were saying that the Germans would take Stalingrad, and a fellow by the name of Bruno Jackmiak, and an officer was saying they would not.

Mr. Haupt was there telling Hamby and other fellows that were listening, that it was a regiment there that he was in, in the last war, in that battle of Stalingrad, and that they were veterans and that they would take it; that was his reason for them taking Stalingrad.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Can you tell the time, please?

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. When was this conversation, the best you recall?

A. The fourth or fifth night.

Q. Was there anything further said about Germany or the war?

A. Yes. Mr. Haupt compared—that is the destruc-
891 tion going on during this war with the last war and he prophesied that Stalingrad would be taken, it would be revealed; and he also told Hamby and the men who were listening that this war is a destructive war and not like the last war.

Q. Well, did he at any time talk of or mention Herbert Haupt?

A. Not then; no, sir.

Q. Did he later?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know about when that was?
A. That was on a Sunday.
Q. On a Sunday?
A. Yes.
Q. Tell us what you recall about that particular conversation on the Sunday?
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What Sunday?
The WITNESS. That was the Sunday—I left the tier, I believe, three days after. It was the 8th or 9th, I will say, of August.
Mr. WOLL. I will ask this question:
Q. Do you think that is about the 8th or 9th of August?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Of what?
A. August, 1942.
Q. Will you give the conversation, please?
892 A. Mr. Haupt received word that his son——
Mr. BERTRAM. Your Honor, I move to strike the answer. He said he received word.
The COURT. Just tell us what he said.
Mr. WOLL. I might try to bring it out in a different way, if your Honor please.
Q. Were there any newspapers prior to this conversation; were any newspapers shown to Hans?
A. He ordered the American.
Q. Did he read it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. After he read it, did he say anything?
A. He complained that the censor tore everything out of the paper pertaining about his case.
Q. What happened then?
A. He asked Carl Hamby, the fellow in 4, if he could get him the newspaper, and Carl Hamby got him the Chicago Times, the Chicago Sunday Times, that Sunday about 4:30 p. m., and he gave him that paper.
Mr. Haupt had it in his cell for a few hours and Carl Hamby was asking for the paper; he wanted to see what was in there.
When Mr. Haupt got through with it he was upset—he was upset and he was repeating over and over that Herbie—
893 "They killed my son Herbie, they killed Herbie. It will hurt his mother when she gets this news."
Q. After that particular talk did you subsequently hear, later on, hear Hans Haupt talk about Herbert in relation to himself—that is, Hans and Herbert?
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Fix the time, please.
The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. About when was that, about when would that be?

A. That was the Sunday.

Q. What did he say about that?

A. He was saying that Herbie was a good boy; that he was too young to die. He repeated that over again, he was too young to die; and he says if it was not for a fellow he knew at work that this would not never happen; and he began talking about Herbie's life in Chicago, and telling how he left the country.

Q. What did he say about that?

A. He says that Herbie always wanted to go to Germany; it was his intention since he was a little boy; he always wanted to go; when this war broke out that he wanted to join the German army; and he asked him for money to go on a trip to Germany, 894 but Mr. Haupt did not have the money—could not give it to him.

So then he told them how he misses his son, and he did not hear from him for a month, until he received a letter from Mexico telling him that Herbie, his son Herbie, was on his way to Germany.

Q. All right; what else did he say?

A. Then he told how he next heard from Herbie from Tokyo—received word from Tokyo.

He said: "I did not see him—I did not see him for a long time."

He said: "One night I was notified to go to my relatives' home and when I went there" he said, "I was scared and surprised because Herbie was there."

Q. Did he mention the relatives' name?

A. Froehling.

Q. What did he say about after he got there?

A. He says when he seen Herbie he was scared; he was scared because the FBI agents and the Selective Service Board was looking for him for his failure for not reporting for his classification.

And he told me he advised him to go to the Selective Service Board and Herbie agreed to go with him—to go with him, and his dad was scared.

Q. Did he tell you this?

A. Yes, sir.

895 Q. Where?

A. He is talking. He is talking to Hamby, and I hear, listening, and he said that he was scared of Herbie coming home. Herbie he told me—that Herbie did not—could not stay home long, but he wanted to stay home until he got his car; after he got a car he would not stay home at all.

Q. Did he say anything else about what Herbert told him?

A. Yes. Mr. Haupt told us how Herbie came on a submarine to the United States from Germany; that he came with some fellows that landed in Florida; and when they landed in Florida that he went with another fellow to Chicago, and they was on the go every minute.

Q. Did he say that Herbert told him anything at all about what he did in Germany?

A. Yes, sir. He said Herbert visited his—some friends, some relatives, and he met one friend of his who was in the German army and who was enlisted in the chemical school and that Herbie joined this chemical school when he was in Germany.

Q. Did he say anything further about this chemical school?

896 A. Yes, sir. He said this school was a branch of the German Army, where they taught the use of explosives.

Q. Did he say anything at all about explosives? I say, "he" meaning Hans Haupt?

Mr. BERTRAM. I think the question is leading.

A. Not at that time.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Not at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he later say anything about explosives?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to the leading question.

The COURT. Overruled. He may answer the question.

A. I did not get your question.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Did he say anything later, did he say anything to you about Herbert telling him anything about explosives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When do you think that was?

A. It was about two o'clock in the morning, Monday morning.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said he was scared of Herbie because Herbie was here for no good reason.

I asked Mr. Haupt: "What do you mean?"

897 And he said: "He is here—he is here with these—with this other fellow—" he mentioned a name I cannot recall. And that they came to this country with explosives to do damage to this country, and he mentioned how.

Q. Is that what he said Herbert told him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What else did he say Herbert said or did about his arrival in Chicago?

The COURT. How much longer will your direct take?

Mr. WOLL. I do not think it will take more than five minutes.

The COURT. I think we had better recess at this time until ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to Friday, June 2, 1944, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

* * * * * *

899 The COURT. Bring in the jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom, in the presence and hearing of the jury.)

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

The JURY. Good morning.

The COURT. Proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. WOLL. You may sit down; sir.

JOHN MAJERCZAK, resumed the stand for further examination, after having been previously sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination (resumed) by Mr. WOLL:

Q. Mr. Majerczak, you are the same Mr. Majerczak who was testifying yesterday when we adjourned court, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, yesterday you stated, I believe, on a Sunday, which you figured at some time about August 6th or 8th, that Hans Haupt told you that Herbert Haupt had told him he came to this country in a submarine; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

900 Q. Did he say anything else about how he came here in a submarine?

A. Yes, sir. He said that he told how Herbie told him that he landed with a group of men in a rubber raft—in a rubber raft and they had a change of clothing and explosives and after they landed they hid, that they changed clothes and hid the explosives and other clothing they put in a hole they dug in the sand.

Q. Did he say whether or not Herbert Haupt had anything else besides explosives and change of clothing?

A. Yes, sir; during that conversation he told about money.

Q. What did Hans Haupt tell you that Herbert told him about money?

Mr. BERTRAM. Objection; leading the witness.

The COURT. He may answer.

Mr. WOLL. I don't think I have been leading him. He said he talked about money.

Mr. BERTRAM. He did not say that; you said that in your question. He made the statement that Herbert had told him about money which is a leading question and I object to that.

The COURT. Sustained.

901 By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Was anything said by Hans Haupt, about money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said?

A. I already told you yesterday he said he was accused of receiving money, German money.

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

The WITNESS. And later during his conversation he told how his son gave him money in this home, and later his son asked him to purchase an automobile for him——

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

The WITNESS (continuing). He gave him one thousand dollars out of a money belt to buy the car for him.

Q. You say he later gave him one thousand dollars; what did Hans Haupt say about that giving of the one thousand dollars?

A. He said he was called to Mr. Froehling's home one night to come over there. He met his son Herbert and he told Herbie about one of the agents looking for him and wanted him and he was scared on seeing his son in Chicago, knowing he came from Germany, so his son told that he did not intend to stay home long and all he wanted was a car from his dad and he gave 902 Mr. Haupt—told how he gave him money.

Q. Who gave who money?

A. Herbie gave his dad money.

Mr. WOLL. I see.

The WITNESS (continuing). And Mr. Haupt told how he hid this money underneath a rug so that Herbie gave him money out of a money belt to buy a car.

Mr. WOLL. What you are telling me now is what Hans Haupt told you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, to go back to my original question, did Hans Haupt say anything as to whether Herbert told him that he arrived in this country with anything else other than the explosives and a change of clothing?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to leading the witness, your Honor. The proper way for him would be to ask for conversations, not lead the witness. He is directing his attention.

The COURT. Yes, objection sustained, ask him what if anything else Herbert told him he brought with him.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. What if anything else did Hans tell you Herbert told him he brought with him from Germany?

963 A. Oh, Mr. Haupt told me that Herbert brought money, explosives, and change of clothing.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

Q. Was anything further said to you or you to him in your presence on that occasion about money?

Mr. BERTRAM. I will object to the double question, your Honor. Certainly the last part is improper, what was said to somebody else.

Mr. WOLL. In your presence.

The COURT. Overruled.

The WITNESS. Well, all Mr. Haupt said about money, he told that Herbie gave him a sum of money, which he mentioned, which I cannot recall now, and that he hid this money for his son.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. You don't recall the amount?

A. No, sir; it was thousands of dollars. I know that.

Mr. WOLL. I beg your pardon?

A. It was thousands of dollars.

Q. Is that what Hans told you?

A. Yes, sir; he gave me figures. It was in the thousands. I cannot remember exactly.

Q. Was there any further conversation that you recall in your presence with Hans Haupt about an automobile?

964 Mr. BERTRAM. I object to leading the witness again.

Mr. WOLL. May I make the observation, if your Honor

please, that this witness already testified about an automobile; I am merely directing his attention to that subject, rather than words, that is all.

The COURT. Let him answer.

The WITNESS. Well, Mr. Haupt told me that he purchased an automobile for his son.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Did he say anything else in that talk?

905 A. No, sir. He says Herbie wanted an automobile to get around in, and that he purchased an automobile for him from the money Herbie gave him to purchase this car. That is all I recall.

Q. To refresh your memory, was anything said about the manner he purchased it in; how it was purchased?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to refreshing his memory.

The COURT. Yes; he should be asked if there was anything else that was said. Well, he may answer that question.

The WITNESS. No, sir; he did not tell me how he purchased it. He just said Herbie gave him the money to purchase the car and he purchased it.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

Q. Do you recall any further conversations that you had with Hans Haupt in the County Jail at or about the time you mentioned, or any further conversation that Hans Haupt may have had with anyone else in your presence?

A. This conversation I was referring to the last few minutes had been done Sunday, which was the 8th or 9th of August, and I did hear of conversations Mr. Haupt had with Carl Hamby, not on that date.

Q. Will you place them, other conversations, the best you can?

906 A. Well, I should judge that week after Mr. Haupt was there he held a conversation with Carl Hamby and talked about explosives.

Q. Yes; what did he say?

A. Mr. Haupt was comparing the explosives that had been in the northeast part of the United States during the last war, and he was telling him that this war was more destructive and in using those explosives they had in the northeast corner of the United States, for example, he says that was nothing as compared with what would happen in the second war, and then Hamby and Mr. Haupt were talking about Germany and comparing Germany with the United States, and Mr. Haupt told how hard it was for him, when he came to this country, and during the depression, the only job he could get, he was able to get anything, was a WPA and he says in Germany there is no such thing as WPA, because every able-bodied man can get a job and work and earn an honest living, and he said, this country is run by Jews, and he gave Hitler, for example, that Germany is run by white people and not for Jews. And he says at that time that Hitler was the best man that Germany had since Bismarck, and that is all I can recall of that conversation.

907 Mr. WOLL. To refresh your recollection on that line, was anything said as to any future plans of Hans Haupt as to where he would live?

Mr. BERTRAM. Now, I think that is particularly vicious on the part of the District Attorney to lead the witness, as he has throughout this examination and he is doing it again and again.

The COURT. Objection sustained.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Was anything further said about Germany or America that you recall?

A. During that conversation, Mr. Haupt told Hamby he was talking about this country, how hard it was for him even to earn an honest living without applying for charity. He says that when this war would be over, that he intended to return back to Germany.

Q. Now, Hans Haupt, when he engaged in the conversations you have mentioned, in which he told you the things that Herbert said to him, did he place a time at all when Herbert told him these things?

A. He talked——

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to leading again, if the court please.

The COURT. I don't think he is leading.

The WITNESS (continuing). The only time he mentioned
908 a particular time was Sunday when he talked about—when he met his son the first time in Chicago when he came from Germany.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. So that we will all get this straight, this matter was all talked about on Sunday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He mentioned talking to Herbert when?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object; just a minute.

The WITNESS. He said the first day that Herbie came to Chicago and he did not say the date, he didn't know the date he came to Chicago, and he mentioned the first date.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Did he say where that conversation took place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did it take place?
A. It took place in Mr. Froehling's home.
Q. Did he say who else was there?
A. He mentioned Mr. Froehling, Mr. Wergin, their wives and other names I cannot recall.
Q. Did he mention Mr. Wergin in connection with being at the home, or did he mention his name during the conversation?
A. He mentioned his name during the conversation.

Mr. WOLL. Cross-examine.

909 Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I would like to move to exclude all of the testimony of this witness on the objections I previously made, statements not in open court by the defendant in this case, and also as to all statements made regarding overt acts.

The COURT. Denied.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Hold-up?
A. Huh?
Q. Was it a hold-up?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. With a gun?
A. No, sir; I didn't have no gun.
Q. Were you alone; did you commit the crime alone?
911 Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, he is talking about a conviction, not whether he actually committed a crime.
The COURT. The question is whether or not he had been convicted of a felony.
Mr. WOLL. And he wants to know now whether he committed the crime alone.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Were you alone when the crime was committed?
The COURT. Sustained. The only question is whether or not he was convicted of a felony, and he said he was.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If your Honor please, I would like further to find out the character of this man, just what the crime consisted of.
The COURT. Objection sustained. I didn't hear any objection, but it is sustained anyway.
Mr. WOLL. I did object as to the question.
The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. What was the sentence at that time?
A. One to twenty.
Q. How is that?
A. One year to twenty years.
Q. Also in Pontiac?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after that you again were sentenced for the 912 commission of some crime?

A. I was paroled and I was sentenced also.

Q. You were paroled on that one to twenty years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you paroled on that?

A. 1934; in September.

Q. And between 1934 and 1941, did you again have some trouble with the law?

A. I was sent back. I violated my parole by leaving the County to go to Grant Park, Illinois, and I was sent back to Joliet for a parole violation.

Q. And what year was that?

A. That was in 1940.

Q. 1940?

A. Yes, sir.

A. I was released from jail for robbery in 1942.

Q. You were released for robbery?

A. No; you see, it was my return——

Q. Was that robbery with a gun?

The WITNESS. What am I answering now?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I don't know. The last one is the one in 1942.

The WITNESS. You want me to answer about my being 913 released from Joliet?

Q. All right. Answer that.

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. When were you released from Joliet, then?

A. When was I released?

Q. Yes.

A. July 3, 1941.

Q. And you are now in the Statesville Penitentiary at the present time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a party by the name of Hamby?

914 A. I do.

Q. Was he involved in this same crime of which you were convicted in the summer around October 13th, 1942?

Mr. Woll. I object, if the court please, whether he was involved in the same crime.

The Court. Sustained.

By Mr. Warnholtz:

Q. Did you have a codefendant in that particular crime?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were tried?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One or more, or more than one?

A. With three fellows.

Q. Three fellows; one of them is named Hamby?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the man to whom you referred before when you were being asked that question by Mr. Woll?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that on or about July 22, 1942, if I remember the date correctly, you were removed in the County Jail to Tier H-4, was it?

A. That is right.

Q. Where had you been held prior to that time?

A. What?

Q. Where had you been held prior to that time?

915 A. B-1.

Q. B-1?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the same time was Hamby removed with you, too?

A. He was removed about a half hour from the time I was.

Q. Also from B-1?

A. No, sir.

Q. He was in a different part of the jail prior to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he was removed to Tier H-4?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At or about the same day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know why you were sent up there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Before you got up to Tier H–4, had you heard about this Haupt case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not read any newspapers in jail, did you?

A. I did.

Q. You did not read about this case, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any of the jail guards tell you that you were going to go to that tier, and there was a very dangerous man there?

A. Not while I was on B–1; no, sir.

916 Q. Well, did they tell you later on?

A. The night I went to H–4, Mr. O'Malley, night superintendent, told Hamby and I that we were among good people, a spy and saboteur of big character. He did not mention the name, just a spy and saboteur.

Q. Did he say one of them or a number of them?

A. No; he said one of them.

Q. One of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell him then?

A. I didn't tell him that; he told me that.

Q. Did you answer anything?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Hamby answer anything?

A. We were locked up as soon as we got there.

Q. You were locked up in a cell; what was the number of your cell?

A. Number 8.

Q. And that was about thirty-five feet away from the cell where Hans Haupt was locked up?

A. Approximately; yes, sir.

Q. In what cell was Hamby locked up?

A. He was in Cell 4.

Q. Cell 4?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far away was that from Hans Haupt's cell? Well, how many feet?

A. Ten or twelve feet.

917 Q. And how far was Hamby's cell from your cell?

A. Twenty-five to thirty feet.

Q. So Hamby's cell was between your cell and Haupt's cell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that Hans Max Haupt had a trial for the crime of treason in October or November 1942?

A. No, sir.
Q. You never heard about that?
A. Mr. Haupt never told me—used that word; no, sir.
Q. Mister who?
A. Mr. Haupt never used that word "treason."
Q. Well, did you know that Haupt was going to have a trial about that time?
A. No, sir.
Q. Or that he did then have a trial?
A. No, sir.

Mr. WOLL. I will have to object to that, if your Honor please, because this man testified to some conversations between July 21 and August sometime of 1942, and now this question asked is whether or not he knew he had a trial about that time.

The COURT. Well, he answered that; overruled.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. You had not heard about that?
A. No, sir; nothing about a trial.
918 Q. You didn't testify in that particular trial, did you, Mr. Majerczak, on that trial in October of 1942, of Hans Max Haupt?
A. Of October 1942?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, sir; I do not remember the date I testified once before, but I don't remember what date.

Q. Yes.
A. The fourth day after I went in H–4.
Q. About four days after you went to H–4?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Then you didn't see him again?
A. Yes; I saw him later on. I saw him this morning.
919 Q. I understand, but in 1942, before you were sent to the State penitentiary, when was the last time you saw him?
A. The fourth day I was on H–4.

Q. That was the last time, the fourth day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you get to H–4?
A. Around the 21st or 22nd of July.
Q. Four days later, that would be about the 26th or 27th of July?
A. Yes, sir; about that.
Q. Did you see him after that again at that time?
A. You mean on H–4?
Q. Yes.
A. No, sir.
Q. Where did you see him after that; the next time you saw him again, where was he?
A. I saw him this morning in the County Jail.
Q. You didn't see him after July 26th, 1942, in the County Jail, up until about two months ago?
A. I saw him in court.
Q. Yes, but up to two months ago, you didn't see him after July 26, 1942?
A. In July, in July—just a minute now. No sir.
Q. About August the 1st or 2nd, 1942, did you see

Q. Yes.
A. No, sir.
Q. August 5, 1942?
A. No, sir.
Q. August 8th or 9th, 1942?
A. No, sir.
Q. You saw Hamby give a newspaper, the Sunday Times, on August 8th or 9th, 1942, to Haupt, did you not?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you hear of Hamby giving such a paper to Haupt?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did he tell you that?
A. Sunday, August 8th or 9th.
Q. Where were you then?
A. H–4.
Q. Where was Haupt at that time?
A. H–4.
Q. Could you see him from your cell?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you talk with him after August 1, 1942; did you talk to Haupt after August 1st, 1942, before you saw him again here in court two months ago?

A. August 1—will you please ask that question again?

Q. Did you talk to Hans Max Haupt again after the 1st
921 day of August 1942, and prior to the day when you saw him in court here two months ago?

A. On August 1, 1942, to the day I saw him on the sanity trial; yes, sir, I saw him. No. Just a minute. No, sir.

Q. Did you talk to him between August 1, 1942, and August 10, 1942?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?

A. On H-4. I talked to him, either that was Sunday, August 8th or 9th, 1942.

Q. You did not see him; you just talked to him?

A. No, I did not see him.

Q. But you talked to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the day when you carried on this conversation with him concerning which you testified yesterday and today?

A. Part of it; yes, sir.

Q. Part of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Hamby participate in that conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see this newspaper, the Times, the Sunday Times, before Mr. Hamby gave it to Mr. Haupt?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Hamby tell you what was in there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Regarding Mr. Haupt?

A. No, sir.

922 Q. Did Mr. Haupt tell you what he saw in the paper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said, "They killed Herbie."

Q. He saw that in that particular newspaper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Hamby tell you what Mr. Haupt paid him for that newspaper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he pay him for that newspaper?

A. Hamby told me Mr. Haupt gave him $5.

Q. For that newspaper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Hamby tell you he knew what was in the paper before he gave it to Haupt?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did have a conversation with Hamby about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. Hamby received a paper for Haupt, it was Sunday the 8th or 9th, from a guard.

Q. Did you see him receive it?

A. No, sir. He told me that a few minutes later.

Q. Go ahead.

The WITNESS (continuing). And he immediately handed 923 it over to a fellow—a colored fellow, rather, came in—and Mr. Haupt—that is, Mr. Haupt was reading this paper—reading this paper—and all the fellows knew that the paper come up, and they wanted to see it next, for all papers that come to the Cook County Jail are censored and cut; any article about any inmate in there, it is cut out.

Q. How do you know Haupt was reading the paper; did you see it?

A. I heard Hamby ask him for it.

Q. You heard what?

A. Hamby asked for the paper.

Q. Was this a censored paper?

A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know that Haupt paid Hamby five dollars for that paper?

A. Hamby told me.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. He told me Mr. Haupt stated the Evening American he ordered by the week. He was always angry that the paper was tore up and articles clipped out, and he asked Hamby why they do that, and Hamby told him that they censored all articles concerning any inmate in the County Jail.

Q. You heard Hamby tell this to Haupt?

A. Yes, sir; I heard him ask questions. He asked
924 Hamby if Hamby could get him a complete paper that was not censored, and Hamby said it was hard, but he would try.

Q. You heard that conversation, too?

A. I heard that; yes, sir.

Q. And then what happened?

A. Well, it was Saturday; that conversation was Sunday, and I heard that Hamby got the paper.

Q. From whom did you hear it?

A. From Hamby himself.

Q. When did he tell you anything about the $5, when was that?

A. That Sunday when he received that paper, about one hour later.

Q. What did Hamby say?

A. He told me he had a sheet.

Q. He had a what?

A. A sheet, an uncensored sheet, and he said to him——

Q. Then what did he say about the $5?

A. He said it cost a fin.

Q. It cost who a fin?

A. It cost Hamby.

Q. What did he say about Haupt paying this $5?

A. One hour after he received the paper.

Q. He said he got the money from Haupt?

A. Mr. Haupt said he gave it to the guard.

925 Q. Do you know whether or not Haupt paid the money when he got the paper or after he got the paper?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Did Hamby tell you he got the $5 first?

A. I couldn't answer that. All I know is, Hamby received $5 from Mr. Haupt to get him a non-censored Sunday paper, and he got it for him.

Q. Did you talk with Haupt after he read this newspaper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the same day?

A. Yes, sir, about two hours or three hours later.

Q. How many more inmates were in that tier who could freely talk with Mr. Haupt the same as you could?

A. All of them.

Q. How many?

A. Eight.

Q. Eight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they all knew about Haupt getting this paper, did they?

A. Well, if they were listening, they couldn't help but hear it. If they were not listening—I don't know whether they were listening or not.

Q. Listening to what?

A. That conversation where Hamby was telling me about the paper.

926 Q. You didn't hear it, though?

A. What?

Q. You didn't hear that conversation, did you?

Mr. WOLL. I object. The conversation is going off to something else. We were talking originally about other people hearing some of the things this witness stated, if they were listening.

and this latter question to my mind has no relation to what has preceded it.

The COURT. What do you want to know?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I want to show this man is not telling the truth, what he stated here.

The COURT. Not your ultimate desires, but what do you want to know from him now.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Will you read the last question?

(The last preceding question read by the reporter.)

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. The conversation asked him for a paper.

A. I did hear that conversation.

Q. You heard it?

A. Sure.

Q. Then you got that knowledge, not from Mr. Hamby, but by hearing it?

A. I heard Mr. Haupt ask Hamby if he could get a not 927 censored paper and Hamby said it was hard, but he would try to get him one. That was Saturday. I already stated that previously, and after, when he received the paper about 4:30 Sunday, Hamby told me that he got the Sunday paper for Mr. Haupt, he gave it to him, and he told me that on Saturday I heard Mr. Haupt asking for it.

Q. Saturday you heard him ask for it?

A. Yes, sir; to make arrangements with Hamby to get this paper.

Q. Did you hear Hamby tell him it would cost him $5?

A. Sir?

Q. Did you hear Hamby tell him it would cost him $5?

A. No, sir; Saturday Mr. Haupt asked Hamby to get a paper, and he says to Hamby, "What was it going to cost me?" And Mr. Haupt asked him "How much," and Hamby said he did not know, and Sunday, when the officer came with the paper——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Go ahead.

The WITNESS (continuing). Mr. Hamby got $5 from Mr. Haupt and paid him.

Q. How do you know?

A. Because Hamby told me.

Q. Did you see Mr. Hamby take that newspaper from the guard?

A. No, sir.

928 Q. Do you how soon after he got it he turned it over to Mr. Haupt?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any of the other inmates read that paper before Mr. Haupt got it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Hamby tell you what was in that paper before he turned it over to Mr. Haupt?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you—did he tell that to any of the other inmates?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know now what that paper contained regarding the Haupt case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did it contain?

A. Mr. Haupt told me that Herbie was killed, Herbie, Herbie, Herbie got the chair, got killed, my son—I knew it was his son was electrocuted, and he knew it was in that paper about that.

Q. Did Hamby tell you he knew that news was in the paper before he gave it to Haupt?

A. No, sir.

Q. When you first got to that tier, that was about July 22, is that right, when you first got up there to tier H-4?

929 A. You said July 22?

Q. Yes, July 22.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Haupt then?

Mr. Johnson was telling Mr. Haupt to get ready for his bath and Mr. Haupt was reluctant and Mr. Johnson told him if he didn't take a bath, he would take a bath with his clothes on or off, and I said, "Haupt, you better take a bath." And then he said, "I am going to throw you in with your clothes on or without."

Q. What mental condition was Haupt in at that time, was he scared?

A. Well, he was scared; scared of what, I don't know what.

Q. Scared of what?

930 A. He acted like he was scared to take a shower, that is all.

Q. And that is the only time you saw him there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All this conversation you had with him was by talking very loudly, so that he could hear you thirty-five feet away?

A. No, not a bit louder, like I am talking now.

Q. Were you allowed to talk to the other prisoners in other cells?

A. We are allowed to talk all day and all night. The lights never went out. We always were talking.

Q. Had you been told that Mr. Haupt attempted to commit suicide shortly after you got to tier H-4?

A. The second day [July 22, 1942] I was there, a guard came walking down the corridor with a reddish necktie in his hand and said, "Look, that fool tried to hang himself with this."

I said, "Mr. Haupt?" "That fool, Mr. Haupt, tried to hang himself with this, and I pulled him off from the bars."

Q. He pulled him off the bars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you been told he tried to commit suicide before?

A. No, sir.

Q. That you were going to dismember his body and smuggle it out in newspapers?

A. Nobody told him that; no, sir.

Q. Did anybody appear to have hostile feelings toward him being a spy and saboteur or something?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all showed him sympathy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you talked to Mr. Haupt about his son returning from Germany in the submarine, et cetera, how long did that conversation take?

A. That conversation took about one hour.

Q. One hour?

A. Yes, sir.

932 Q. In the morning, at noon, or afternoon; when was it?

A. That was 9 o'clock that evening.

Q. In the evening?

A. Yes, sir. Sunday.

Q. And you were thirty-five feet away from him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the other inmates participate in that conversation?

A. They were listening; some were listening; yes, sir.

A. I asked him, and he told me Herbie was killed, they killed Herbie.

Q. What did you ask him about Herbie?

A. Who killed Herbie.

Q. You asked him, who killed Herbie; did you ask him

933 anything about that story coming from Germany to here?

A. No, sir; he was telling me.

Q. He was telling the whole story without your talking to him?

A. At the beginning, I asked him, who killed Herbie, and he said, "They killed Herbie;" he said, "Herbie, they killed Herbie in the chair."

A. Then he began talking; yes, sir.

Q. He began to talk?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anybody else ask him questions at the time?

A. Yes; Hamby.

Q. What did he ask him?

A. I can't recall just exactly.

Q. You do not remember; do you know the substance?

A. Yes, sir; oh, about how a man can leave his country; Mr. Haupt, how a man can leave the country during the time of war.

Q. Then it was upon answering that question that Hans said that he left by submarine?

A. No, sir.
Q. What did he answer?
A. I don't recall the answer to that question.
Q. What else did Hamby ask, anything?
A. You asked for the substance, and that was the substance of the conversation.

Q. Did they tell you what they wanted?

Mr. WOLL. I object, if your Honor please, and I move that the answer be stricken, because it assumes something he said, "Did they tell you how they called there, to ask you these questions?" This witness hasn't been asked any questions. I have been asking him questions in the courtroom, and this witness said nothing about any questions being asked him by any FBI men.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Did they tell you how they happened to contact you and why?

H-4. and conversations I had. The conversations I was in; then he asked me if I would make a statement what I heard and what I said.

Q. And then what did you say?

A. I told him I would.

Q. Then what did you do or what did they do?

A. No.

Q. No?

A. There was a statement of about two pages.

Q. Well, what was in it?

Q. Did they tell you they had seen him somewhere?

A. They didn't mention Hamby.

Q. While you were in the Cook County Jail, did you read any newspapers there?

A. Yes; I read newspapers.

Q. Every day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't read about the Haupt trial?

A. No, sir.

Q. While you were in the Statesville Penitentiary did you read newspapers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Every day?

A. Whenever I got a paper, yes; I would get it from another fellow.

Q. What is it?

A. Not every day; no, sir.

942 Q. Well, two or three times a week?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you read about the Haupt trial?

A. No, sir; no trial, while I was in Statesville.

Q. Where were you on October—between October 26, 1942, and November 16, 1942?

A. I was in the Cook County Jail.

Q. Now to refresh your memory, I believe you said before you were sent to Statesville, sometime in October 1942; is that right?

A. October 13, 1942.

Q. October 13, 1942?

A. 1942.

Q. Well, were you in the Statesville Penitentiary between October 26, 1942, and November 16, 1942?

A. I told you——

Q. Where were you between October 26, 1942, and November 16, 1942?

A. From October to November?

Q. Yes.

A. In the Diagnostic Depot in Joliet.

Q. During all that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, that is the Statesville Penitentiary, isn't it; the old part?

A. The old prison.

Q. What did you do there?

943 A. Well, that is the Diagnostic Depot; they send you through physically and they give you typhoid shots and you are examined by doctors. I stayed there from October 13, 1942, until around Christmas; then I went to Statesville.

Q. Did you read any newspapers there?

A. No, sir.

Q. No newspapers at all?

A. No, sir. That is the isolation. You stay in a cell locked up, and you don't do no work, and they feed you in your cell. You are supposed to relax.

Q. After you left the County Jail, when did you see Hamby again; the first time?

A. You mean from October 13, 1942?

Q. Yes; when did you see Hamby next?

A. I seen him at the Diagnostic, when he came to get his meals.

Q. You saw him over there, too?

A. He was locked down in a different cell; he used to get his meals, and I used to see him.

Q. Now, after those two agents got this first statement from you, did you see them again?

A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you remember if you did?

A. No; I didn't see them.

944 Q. What did they tell you when they left?

A. They didn't tell me anything.

Q. How is that?

A. They didn't tell me anything. I signed the statement and they told me good-bye, and they left.

Q. When did you talk about this case again and with whom?

A. After that?

Q. The next time.

A. Oh, I was taken in front of the United States Grand Jury.

Q. When was that?

Mr. Finn. Speak up. It is very difficult to hear you.

The Witness. I was before the United States Grand Jury.

By Mr. Warnholtz:

Q. When was that?

A. Well, that was about one month after these agents saw me.

Q. About March 1944; about?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Here in Chicago?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Between the time that these agents visited you and between the time you were taken before the Grand Jury, did you talk with Hamby about this case?
A. No, sir.
945 Q. And after you testified before the Grand Jury did you talk about this case again, when was the next time, and with whom?
A. I talked with Hamby.
Q. When was that?
A. That was when I heard the program on the radio.
Q. How is that?
A. That is when I heard the program on the radio.
Q. When?
A. About March. Just a minute now—about two weeks after I was in the Grand Jury.
Q. When did you hear that program on the radio; where was it?
A. I was in Statesville.
Q. In what part of the jail were you, in the cell, or what?
A. In a cell.
Q. Where was Hamby at the time?
A. He was with me.
Q. In the same cell?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is the first time you talked with Hamby about this case after you left the Cook County Jail?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was Hamby before the Grand Jury, too?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Before you appeared before the Grand Jury, you didn't discuss this case together, did you?
A. No, sir.
946 Q. In March 1944, the two of you, Hamby and you were cellmates?
A. March——
Q. That is about four or five months ago?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were cellmates; were you taken down to the Grand Jury on the same train?
A. No; same car.
Q. Same car?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You didn't talk at all what it was all about, did you?

A. No, sir; no, no.
Q. Did you know what you were supposed to do in Chicago?
A. No, sir.
Q. Were you told you should testify before the Grand Jury?
A. No, sir; not until we got here.
Q. What is that?
A. Not until we came into this building.
Q. Did Hamby and you have a discussion as to what you were taken down here for?
A. What do you mean by "taken down here for?"
Q. Well, you were both taken to Chicago, were you not;
947 Hamby and you were both taken to Chicago to testify before the Grand Jury?
A. Yes; that is right.
Q. Well, did the two of you discuss that matter at all as to why you should be taken down?
A. We didn't know where we were going.
Q. What did you say and what did he say about it?
A. All we knew is there was a writ to Statesville to take us to Chicago where we didn't know where we were going. We did not know until after we come in this building, and we were taken direct to the Marshal's office, and the Marshal took us to the Grand Jury, and we took an oath not to tell where we were at.
Q. Did you talk to Hamby after the two FBI agents visited you in February 1944; did you tell him about this visit by the two agents?
A. We were both visited the same day; yes, sir.
Q. You were both visited?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then you did discuss the case together, didn't you?
A. We talked about the visit; yes, sir.
Q. Yes; when was he visited, at what time?
A. Same day.
948 Q. After that you discussed the matter together, didn't you?
A. No, sir. Hamby was working on the coal gang, and I was working in a different place. I did not see Hamby.
Q. Didn't you see him at night?
A. No, sir; on a different tier and I was on a different tier.
Q. Was he your cellmate?
A. Not at that time.
Q. When did he become your cellmate?
A. When I was in the cellhouse, where I was working.
Q. You didn't talk about this Haupt case at all?
A. Well, after the Grand Jury?
Q. Before the Grand Jury now.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell him the two FBI agents had seen you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him what it was about, what they asked you?

A. Didn't ask me anything. I told Hamby that the two agents came down to visit me.

Q. Well, did you tell him what they did ask you?

A. They didn't ask me anything about that; all they asked me to tell what I saw, and what talk was, my talk, and where I was on a certain date.

Q. Did you tell Hamby that; did you tell Hamby what you told those agents?

949 A. No, sir; no, sir.

Q. Did he tell you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why the agents visited him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any special reason for keeping it a secret from him?

A. I did not see Hamby until about one month after.

Q. About a month?

A. Yes, sir.

950 By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. After you appeared before the grand jury and testified, did you talk with any one about this case again? When was the next time?

A. In court here.

Q. How is that?

A. In court.

Q. Is that the next time you discussed the case again?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk with Hamby about it before you arrived here in Court?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. In the cell. Hamby and I were talking about what the consequences, what result would happen if we testified in this case.

Q. Before the grand jury you mean?

A. No, after we talked to the grand jury, after. We knew it would be very unfavorable, on our being convicts to give testimony against another man.

Q. Just a moment. When did you have that——

Mr. WOLL. Have you finished your answer?

A. Yes, I did.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. When was your first discussion relating to the Haupt
951 case and with whom did you have it, after you testified before the grand jury?

A. I answered that question before.

Q. Let me have that again, clearly; when was that?

A. That was after we testified before the grand jury, were taken back to the Statesville, and Hamby was telling me that this would be hard against us because we are convicts, by giving testimony in court against another man; it was not right; it would be hard, it was going to be hard against us upon the other convicts.

Q. It would be hard against you where?

A. In Statesville.

Q. In Statesville?

A. Yes.

Q. The other prisoners would not like it, you mean?

A. That is right.

Q. That is what Hamby told you?

A. No, he was saying that it might be there.

Q. Did Hamby tell you it might be had?

A. Yes.

Q. That was on the way back, later?

A. No, that was in Statesville.

Q. How much later, after you arrived there, a week, a month or what?

A. I would say two weeks after we were in the grand 952 jury.

Q. And then further what did you do? When did you next discuss the case again and with whom?

A. Next we appeared in court.

Q. That was at the sanity hearing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how you happened to appear in court, who called you down there?

A. Hamby and I volunteered, we had information to the government, that we had—we had previous knowledge that Mr. Haupt was not insane, and that he told Hamby and I that he was going to use as a last resort, he would use it, and say that he was insane.

When we heard on the radio that Mr. Haupt's attorney was asking for a sanity hearing—I mean I wrote a letter stating that Mr. Haupt had told me that he would use this as his last resort; that he talked this over with me months before this happened.

Q. And you talked that over with Hamby, whether or not such a letter should be written? Right?

A. Yes.

Q. So you did discuss it before you came to Chicago, did you not, with Hamby?

953 A. It was after the grand jury.

Q. Yes.

A. Before the sanity hearing.

Q. And before, and in between that time——

A. Yes.

Q. In that time you did discuss——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said a moment ago you did not. Were you mistaken? Did you——

A. I said before the United States Grand Jury.

Mr. Woll. If your Honor please——

The Court. I am going to insist you be fair to the witness and to the man on trial. He said he did not discuss it, did not discuss it with anybody before the grand jury.

The Witness. That is right.

Mr. Warnholtz. Then that is an honest mistake.

Q. After you appeared before the grand jury and before the time you appeared here in court at the insanity hearing, did you ever discuss this matter with anyone?

A. After the United States grand jury?

Q. After you appeared before the grand jury and before the time that you appeared in this court at the insanity hearing, did you discuss this Haupt matter with anyone?

954 A. I just said about that letter, the only time.

Q. That is the time?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time you discussed this, about the letter, you were a cellmate of Hamby's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who wrote this letter; you or Hamby?

A. I did.

Q. Did Hamby tell you what to write?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was he present when you wrote it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you show it to him before you wrote it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom did you send it?

A. Attorney, the United States District Attorney, Mr. Woll.

Q. Did Hamby tell you it might do you some good?

A. No, sir.

Q. He had told you before it might do you some harm if you testified?

A. Among the convicts; yes, sir.

Q. Nevertheless, you thought it was your duty to write the letter; right?

A. Yes, sir.

955 Q. And Hamby agreed with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say it might do you some harm?

A. With the convicts, yes.

Q. Did Hamby state it might do you some good with the authorities?

A. No, sir; we were in the custody of the state, working on our cases, to appeal our cases. The government has nothing to do with our case, we were convicted for a state crime, and has to go to the state courts.

Q. Did anyone tell you to make that statement, the difference between a federal crime and a state crime?

A. No, sir; because I have been convicted. I have talked to many attorneys about appealing my case.

Q. Now, then, after you wrote this letter, to whom did you give it—to the warden down there or to the guard?

A. To the warden. Hamby gave it to the warden.

Q. Hamby did not sign it?

A. He signed it.

Q. Did you sign it, too?

A. Yes, sir.

956 Q. Did both of you two wri[illegible]—write a combined letter?

A. I wrote the letter, Hamby read it and he also signed it.

Q. Then what happened regarding this matter?

A. He told the officer in charge of our cell house he wanted to see the warden.

Q. Yes.

A. And he was called the next day to see Mr. Ragen.

Q. And then what happened?

A. Mr. Ragen and Mr. Butterworth came to the institution because he had something—this letter he handed to the government.

Q. After this letter was sent, Mr. Majerczak, what happened then? Did anybody see you or did anybody write you a letter about it? What happened?

A. Hamby was visited by Mr. Butterworth.

Q. After the letter was sent?

A. I do not know whether it was sent or mailed or what.

Q. After that time?

A. After the letter; yes.

Q. Mr. Hamby was visited. Were you present at that time?

A. No, sir.

957 Q. Did Mr. Hamby tell you what took place between him and Mr. Butterworth?

A. He told me that Mr. Butterworth was there on a certain day, and he got the letter that I wrote.

Q. What else did Mr. Hamby tell you?

A. He told me about that letter; Mr. Butterworth took the letter.

Q. Do I understand you correctly, that he took the letter?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Butterworth took the letter.

Q. Did you not say before the letter was mailed out?

A. I said the letter was mailed out?

The COURT. He said Mr. Regan, then he communicated with Mr. Regan to communicate with Mr. Butterworth, who finally got the letter.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I did not hear it.

Q. Then what happened after that with reference to this matter?

A. We were taken to the Federal Buildings and brought in court on the insanity trial.

Q. Then you testified in the insanity trial?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the insanity trial you did not point out this story that you told today, about Mr. Haupt and Herbert Haupt, did you?

958 A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know why you did not relate that story at that time?

A. It was—I was not asked.

Q. You were not asked that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you not asked to tell everything that Hans Haupt had told you at the jail?

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, I am going to object to this line of questioning. This proceeding took place in your Honor's court, and you Honor knows what the proceeding was at the time. He has just said he was not asked any questions about that. I think it a waste of time to ask that type of question.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I believe that it is an improper statement by counsel, about a waste of time.

Mr. WOLL. Asking if he knew everything until now, about this case——

The COURT. He said he was not asked.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I have the question? Is that question overruled?

The COURT. No.

Q. You were asked to tell everything that Mr. Haupt said out there at the jail which you overheard?

A. He was asking questions—I was asked questions
950 here by the attorney there and I answered every question that he asked, so I do not know. That is all about it.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Woll, as far as you remember, never asked about this conversation at the insanity hearing, did he?

A. About what conversation?

Q. About the conversation you had with Mr. Haupt when he talked about his boy coming from Germany and so forth, he never asked you that?

A. He never asked me anything; no, sir; but I was gone to Mr. Woll. I was in front of Mr. Finn and before four or five other gentlemen.

Q. When was that?

A. Oh, that was before this insanity trial.

Q. Here in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that at the time when you came down here to testify?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About the same day or a day before or a couple of days before, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time you told Mr. Woll also about the conversation you had about Herbert coming from Germany, giving money to his father?

960 A. No, sir. That was because of the letter I wrote.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. The letter I wrote.

Q. Did you not tell him about that story at all at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, when did you write him, when did you write the letter?

A. I told——

Mr. WOLL. Here is the letter.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I am asking the question.

A. I told him that Hamby and I had knowledge from what they said and what we heard on the radio that Mr. Haupt did tell us in July that as his last resort he would use what Hamby called, what we call the "bug act." He was cutting up there, he was going to use that.

When that came on the radio I thought I should notify the government we already knew about this, through Mr. Haupt. Mr. Haupt told us he was going to do this. There it was.

Q. Well, did Mr. Woll and the other gentlemen ask you whether or not you believed Haupt was sane at that time?

961 A. Yes.

Q. Did they not ask you what he sold you, how he acted and so forth?

A. No, sir.

Q. They did not?

A. No, sir. Mr. Woll did ask me why I wrote the letter.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him the reason for my writing that letter was I believed Mr. Haupt is sane, was sane then, and he was sane in 1942 and he is sane now. I will also insist that he was sane. I wrote that letter because I thought I had information that Mr. Woll should know as prosecutor for the people of this country, it was my duty to give it to him. I gave it to him.

Q. What do you base your opinion that he was sane now, as you told him? Did you see Haupt during the last few months?

A. I seen him this morning.

Q. When you were talking to Mr. Woll at the time?

A. I was referring to when I seen him in H-4.

Q. At that time he was sane?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him why you thought he was sane?

A. I talked with Mr. Haupt. I ordered his paper.

962 I ordered his cigarettes for him. I ordered his meals, whatever he wanted. I talked to the man for almost a month and he never gave me a foolish answer or asked a foolish question. He did do little things which I already knew was put on.

Q. How do you know it was put on?

A. Because he said——

Q. Did Hamby ask him whether or not he was faking insanity?

A. Did who?

Q. Did Hamby ask him in the county jail whether he was faking insanity?

A. No, that conversation. He had a conversation with me about a fellow that went to Menard, and he acted insane in Menard and he was two years in Menard and he came back to Chicago.

He was sentenced for robbery and Hamby and I met this fellow when we were going to court and he began telling us that he is being called there to the Judge, and he is sane now, but he is sure to be free.

We came back from court and that is what we were discussing, and Hamby and I were discussing and Mr. Haupt was interested in this conversation, and he asked questions about it. Then 963 Hamby and him talked about it.

Q. Mr. Haupt first indicated that he was interested in matters of insanity?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not Mr. Hamby, Mr. Hamby did not suggest it to Mr. Haupt?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long did you talk to Mr. Woll when you saw him the last time regarding the insanity matter?

A. I would say twenty minutes.

Q. Was Mr. Hamby present at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you talk—did you talk to any other gentleman in the same office, that is, in the District Attorney's office?

A. Well, I was asked if I had signed a paper they showed me and I said yes, I sent this letter. They asked if I signed this letter and I said yes. I was asked about my name, my record, what I am in Statesville for.

Q. When did you come to Chicago this time?

A. May 15th.

Q. When?

A. May 15th.

Q. How many days ago?

A. Oh, it was about two weeks ago.

964 Q. Two weeks ago?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have since been in the County Jail?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Hamby, too?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you occupy adjoining cells down there?

A. No, sir.

Q. How are you separated?

A. Hamby is in 18 and I am in 20.

Q. The same tier?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can talk together?

A. Through the bars; yes, sir.

Q. How far apart are those two cells?

A. Twelve to ten feet.

Q. Ten to twelve feet or so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Hamby this morning?

A. Oh, yes; I came over with him this morning.

Q. Did you see him yesterday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you discuss this case with him yesterday?

A. No, sir. I was playing pinochle all day yesterday.

965 Q. Then you came down here—before you came down here did Mr. Hamby tell you what to say?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you not tell him this story that you told us today—we will call it a statement you made, that you gave in court here today, about Herbert's return from Germany on the submarine, and the money, and the WPA and all of that?

A. No, sir; I never told Hamby anything about it.

Q. You never told him that?

A. No, sir.

Q. The last time you testified here in the insanity matter, did Mr. Hamby give you information as to where your cells had been located?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he tell you then?

A. That Mr. Haupt was in cell 1 for a day. He seen Mr. Haupt the first day that he went there. I did not.

Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Hamby knows this story about Herbert Haupt coming, having come from Germany, in the submarine and about the rubber boat, about having landed from the submarine, about the money being hidden under some rug and about the buying of an automobile, and all the 966 other matters? Does he know about this, too?

A. Well, Mr. Hamby did talk to Mr. Haupt; yes, sir.

Q. He did talk with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time did he talk with him?

A. He talked to him in the evenings.

Q. In the evenings?

A. Every night; yes, sir.

Q. Was that before or after Mr. Haupt told you the story, do you know?

A. I do not know what Mr. Haupt told Mr. Hamby, or what story, what part. I did hear some conversation that he had with Mr. Hamby; yes, sir.

Q. But today Mr. Hamby knows about all of this?

A. I do not know if Hamby knows all about anything.

Q. I do not know whether—you do not know whether he knows if Herbert came back in a submarine?

A. Yes, sir; he knows that.

Q. Does he know that he claims he brought money back here and gave some to his father?

A. I heard Mr. Haupt tell him that; yes, sir.

Q. When was that, sometime in the evening he told you that?

A. All conversations took place in the evenings.

967 Q. Was it before or after Hans Haupt talked to you about all of this?

A. Before.

Q. Before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he also know about the WPA and the conditions in Germany?

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Does he know about the $1,000 in the money belt?

A. I do not know that.

Q. Did you not say in the very beginning, Mr. Majerczak, that when Hans Haupt told this story to you you were in the cell thirty-five feet away and Hamby was in the cell about twelve feet away from Haupt's cell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he not hear all of it at that time?

A. I had no way of knowing if he ever was listening or what he was doing.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

The WITNESS. I do not have any way of knowing.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you.

Redirect examination by Mr. WOLL:

968 Mr. WOLL. May this be marked for identification, Government's Exhibit 67?

(Whereupon said document was marked "Government's Exhibit 67" for identification.)

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 67 for identification and ask you if you recognize that letter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that letter?

A. That is the letter that I wrote to the United States District Attorney, telling him that Mr. Haupt has told Hamby and I of his intention to use the insanity act as his last resort.

Q. Did you pay attention to every conversation that Hans Haupt had with Hamby?

A. No, sir.

Q. There was constant talking in the evening by all the inmates, was there not?

A. At times; yes, sir.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that as leading.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. WOLL. At this time, if your Honor please, I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 67.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Said document marked "Government's Exhibit 67" was received in evidence and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:).

969 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Are you through?

Mr. WOLL. That is all.

Re-cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Just one or two more questions: Whose handwriting is this letter in, Mr. Majerczak?

A. Mine.

Q. Mr. Hamby also signed personally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not sign for him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just one or two more questions: You stated that Mr. Haupt said he was going "to pull this big act" as a matter of last resort?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he use the term "last resort"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the exact term?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you remember that today, two years later?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. WOLL. That is all.

(Witness excused.)

970 Mr. WOLL. It will take a little time for the next witness.

The COURT. Take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(Whereupon the jury retired.)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I ask, if the Court please, that I should like to have this witness held, that he cannot communicate with Mr. Hamby in the meantime.

Mr. WOLL. I do not think it possible, but I will make sure.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I should like it very much.

Mr. WOLL. I will see what can be done.

The COURT. You may make the request, but I do not know whether that is possible or not. I do not know what the arrangements are.

CARL HAMBY, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WOLL:

A. No, sir; not at first. Well, spoke to the guard first.
Q. When you talked to him did he answer you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was the conversation that you had there the first night?
Mr. BERTRAM. Just a moment. May we enter an objection, your Honor, the same objection I made to the testimony of the previous witness, as to statements not made in court by the defendant 976 in this case, and as to statements made regarding overt acts?
The COURT. Yes; surely.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Will you tell us the conversation that particular night?
A. Mr. Haupt asked the guard if he would give him something to smoke and the guard told him he did not have any.
Q. Will you speak a little louder.
A. Mr. Haupt asked the guard if he had anything for smoking, if the guard had anything to smoke and the guard told him no, that he did not have anything to smoke.
The guard came to my cell, that was the next cell nearest and he asked if I had something to smoke, if I had anything, and the only thing I had was Durham, so I sent my pack of Durham to Mr. Haupt by the officer.
The officer told me Haupt was unable to roll a cigarette and wanted to know if he could have tailor-made cigarettes and I told him I was sorry, I did not have any. I did not have any tailor mades and I rolled some cigarettes and I sent them to Haupt.
Mr. Haupt thanked me for rolling the cigarettes.
977 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Can you speak a little slower? You are speaking too fast and too low.
The COURT. Speak a little louder.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And not so fast.

The WITNESS. I have a cold.

Mr. WOLL. Take your time.

The COURT. Speak slowly.

The WITNESS. Mr. Haupt asked me if he could get some cigarettes up there and I told him he could get some cigarettes, he would have to wait until the commissary the next day and he thanked me for rolling those cigarettes and sending them over to him.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. How long did you stay in cell 3?

A. I was in cell 3, to the best of my knowledge, three days.

Q. Then were you transferred?

A. Transferred out of the cell; transferred to number 4.

Q. The same tier?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Hans Haupt remain in cell 1?

A. No, sir; he was taken out of number 1 and put in number 2.

Q. How far was cell 2 from cell 1?

A. I would judge about eight feet. It is only one cell in between.

978 Q. How long did you remain in cell 4?

A. Until August, to the best of my knowledge; it was August 14, 1942.

Q. Do you recall about how long Hans Haupt remained in cell number 2?

A. He was there until August 1942; 14th.

Q. August 14th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the period of time from June 1942, June 21, 1942, to August 14, 1942, you had conversations with Hans, did you not?

A. That is right; yes, sir, I did.

Q. These conversations took place approximately every night?

A. Yes, sir; they did.

Q. And you had a conversation with other people in the cell block?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you at any time have a conversation with Hans Haupt concerning Herbert Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall approximately when the first conversation occurred in which Herbert Haupt was mentioned?

979 A. To the best of my knowledge it was five days after we were up there.

Q. About five days after? That would be approximately June 26th or 27th—July 26th or 27th?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall that conversation?

A. I do.

Q. Will you state the conversation, please, and tell us the best you can the words, the language of Hans Haupt, what he said and what you said?

A. Yes, sir, I will.

Mr. BERTRAM. May the objection stand without renewing it?

The COURT. Yes; overruled.

The WITNESS. During the period of the evening——

The COURT. Keep your voice up.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir. I have a cold, Mr. Woll. During the period we were confined on H-4, Stanley Norris, John Majerczk, Bruno Jaconski, and John Pontius, the four of us up there were discussing our cases and our convictions, what we were up there for.

The State already had convicted me and given me a life sentence, and they were trying to convict me on another sentence, give me another life sentence, consecutively, with the [illegible] sentence I had.

We were discussing, we codefendants, things about how I should beat that second indictment, and we were accusing the states attorney's office of using gestapo methods to gain convictions in similar cases.

Mr. Haupt listened to the conversations, and the same night we were up there, there was a guard—I was arguing with the Assistant Superintendent, Mr. O'Mally why I was confined in death row, in solitary and he would not tell me why I was confined there.

He said: "You should be tickled you are here; you are up here with a famous prisoner."

I asked: "Who the hell was the famous [illegible] in that jail?"

And he said: "There is a German saboteur next to you; a German spy."

I had never heard of the man. I asked who he was and he said, "Mr. Haupt."

Q. Mr. Hamby, the question I asked you was for conversation with Hans Haupt, that you heard.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you thereafter have a conversation with Hans Haupt?

A. Yes, sir. I am coming to that point.

Mr. Haupt began asking questions what would happen about the courts and one of the boys spoke up and told him, "The only thing for you is a firing squad."

He said: "Is that what I get?"

He asked me would they do that and I answered that he won't get no firing squad, "You will get a trial."

He said: "What will happen to me?"

I told him: "I do not know what you are in here for, Mr. Haupt."

He said: "I was in because of an accessory."

I said: "Accessory to what?"

Previously I had explained to him the organization of the courts and how the Federal Court and the State Court operate.

He said that his son had given him some money.

I asked him "what was wrong with the money, was it counterfeit, was it stolen?"

"No, it was not stolen."

982 He said it was German money.

I said: "What were you doing with German money?"

He said: "My son gave it to me. It was not real money, real German money, it was United States money, that his son had given him."

I understood it, the conditions and then he told me, gave the details of this case, what he was locked up there for.

Q. What did he say in that regard, Mr. Hamby?

A. He said about a month previous, before, his son went to Germany.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will ask that we have the approximate time fixed. The witness has once stated it was five days after he arrived. We would like to know when this conversation was held.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Is this the conversation that you fixed five or six days——

A. Yes, sir; five days; yes sir.

Q. All right. Go ahead.

A. He said his son came to him and asked him for money; he was going to Germany, to join the German army there; he was very glad his son joined the German Army; he informed 983 his son that he was unable to pay his transportation, or pay his expenses to Germany.

Q. Keep your voice up.

A. Yes, sir. About a month later a certain friend of his gave him the money to go to Germany. He went to Germany with a friend of his named Wolfgang.

Q. Did Hans Haupt say he went to Germany?

A. He told me Wolfgang and Herbert went to Germany.

Q. Did Hans say Herbert went to Germany?

A. Yes, sir; he did. He said his son left home, and the first time he heard from him was in Mexico, and he said the second time he heard from him he was in Tokyo, Japan; then he did not hear from him for some time then and then he received a lettter from his son where he was in Germany.

I suppose about a year elapsed. This country was already in war and he received a telephone call one afternoon from Mr. Froehling's home, told him to come over there, he had a surprise; that he saw his son there and he asked the son: "How did you come back to this country?"

And he said Herbert Haupt told him that he came back on a German submarine. He said he did not believe it at first but the son convinced him that he had come back on a German 984 submarine, and he explained to Mr. Haupt the purpose, his purpose of coming back to this country, that he came back here to sabotage, to blow up the ammunition dumps, and many factories; ammunition factories.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to him explaining the matter in relation to this. He is giving an explanation here and I object to that.

The COURT. Just tell us as near as you can what Mr. Haupt said.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Are you telling now what Hans Haupt told you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right.

A. He said that Herbert came back to blow up something you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, go on.

A. To blow up munition dumps, obstruct traffic, railroad trains, everything possible, and he named one specific place, the Pressed Steel Company.

Q. He named one particular place?

A. Mr. Haupt told me that his son Herbert Haupt told him of one specific place, was the Pressed Steel; he was going to blow up utilities, communications, and disrupt the war effort 985 as much as he possibly could; "and he asked me—" Mr. Haupt—"I have to come to you to help me. I will need help." Mr. Haupt told him he would assist him as much as he possibly could.

Q. Go ahead.

A. He gave Mr. Haupt some money, a large sum of money and Mr. Haupt took this money and hid it in his home under the rug and Herbert Haupt gave him some other money to hold for him, personal money, and he also gave him money to buy an automobile, and Mr. Haupt told me that his son told him that he did not think it advisable that he should buy an automobile and Mr.

Haupt agreed that it was not advisable to buy this automobile, so Mr. Haupt bought the car himself for Herbert Haupt.

Q. Was there anything said further about the purchase of that automobile at that conversation?

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that.

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Was anything further said about the automobile?

A. Herbert Haupt told his dad that he needed a car to get around, to do the work that he was supposed to do when he came back to this country.

986 Mr. Haupt at first did not want to buy a new car. He asked why he did not use the old car. Herbert Haupt told him he did not think the old car would stand up under the strain he was going to put the new car through; that he needed a new car to do the things that he was assigned to do in this country.

Q. Do you recall any further conversation that you had on that occasion with Hans Haupt concerning Germany itself, when the boy was there?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that. He should exhaust his recollection about conversations.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. I am trying to make it as general as I can.

Q. Was there any further conversation about the boy's travels?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Haupt told me that while his son was in Germany that Herbert Haupt told him that he went to Germany, intending to join the German army, but he joined a sabotage school; he went to—he went on to say that he went to this school while he was there in Germany; that they taught about about explosives and how to handle explosives and chemicals and place them

987 on railroad trains, told about doing it and using a railroad train, a small one, for experimental purposes, to teach the boys over there how to blow up troop trains and other things.

The way they do this was to make a—as small as they possibly could—a bomb and blow up the tracks, without the trackman paying attention.

He said while he was in Germany he visited his father and mother, where they were born, the graveyards, friends, and relatives over there; after he was completed, graduated from the sabotage school that the German government gave him money, to seven other boys—gave him money and seven other boys, put them on a submarine and sent them to this country.

That while they were coming back from Germany they had some excitement on the submarine. It was a ship they saw going to England, and coming back to this country and they intended to torpedo the ship. He did not say whether the ship was torpedoed or not.

The German submarine landed his son off the coast of Florida and he went from the submarine to the shore, or to the shore line, in a rubber boat and he changed clothes there and hid the clothes they had on, the German uniforms that they shipped over on the submarine, changed to civilian clothes.

988 Q. The conversation that you have related you say took place about five or six days after July——

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. Do you recall any further conversation on that occasion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With Hans Haupt?

A. Yes, sir. I asked Mr. Haupt why he did not turn his son in and he said that his son was his own flesh and blood and after all he was helping the fatherland.

And he said his son—that he was worried when he came back, that there was some member from the Draft Board or some government man down from the Draft Board making inquiries from him, and he told him he should go and report to the Draft Board and throw the government off his trail, to keep them from arousing any suspicion towards his son.

Q. Do you recall anything further that Hans Haupt told you on that occasion?

A. Yes. We talked about the German army. I asked him about Hitler and why the German army was so different than it was when he was in the World War.

989 He said one of the reasons, he said the Jews are not in Germany any more, Hitler had taken out the Jewish capitalists over there and they were not running the country.

He said Hitler has prepared himself to win this war; he has prepared his soldiers, he has trained them sufficiently to win this war.

There was an argument came up between Haupt, myself, and a guard over there, over the battle of Stalingrad. I agreed with Mr. Haupt the German Army would take Stalingrad and I agreed the German Army would take Russia.

He compared the German Army with the United States Army and he says to his estimation, he says the United States Army was nothing but a bunch of punks, and they are going to fall and they are going to whipped like France and all the rest of the countries. I disagreed.

I disagreed with him. During this conversation the United States had not engaged on the battlefield, in no time.

Q. About how long a period of time did this particular conversation last?

A. It was, to the best of my knowledge three or 990 four days.

Q. Over a period of three or four days?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall anything else that was said by Hans Haupt in regard to his boy and the activities of his boy?

A. Well, other than—no, sir; I cannot.

Q. To refresh your recollection was there anything at all said about this general nature of employment?

A. Oh, yes, sir. Mr. Haupt told me that his son wanted a job in the Optical Company; that he was trying to get a job there; that his son wanted some plans which this factory—out of this factory, regarding some kind of a sight. I do not remember now what sight, but he was supposed to turn those plans over to Germany; to the German government.

Q. By that do you mean that Hans Haupt told you this?

A. That is correct, Mr. Woll.

Q. Did he say that the boy told him this?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bertram. I object to the leading question.

The Court. Sustained.

Mr. Woll. I just want to clear it up.

991 Q. On the occasion of this particular conversation you have just narrated——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you give in your exact words, give the best you can the exact words that Hans Haupt used in that conversation?

A. Well, Mr. Woll, Mr. Haupt, he talks with a German accent and it would be pretty hard for me to express the words he used.

Q. I did not quite make myself clear. What I am trying to find out is whether Hans Haupt told you what his boy was to do, or whether he was telling you the conversation that he may have had?

Mr. Bertram. I think the District Attorney should ask for the conversation and let the witness relate, without suggesting to the witness what the conversation was about, what he wants him to tell him.

The Court. Sustained. You may ask if there was anything further said, about the same general subject. You may mention the general subject.

Mr. WOLL. If I may say, if your Honor please, I am not certain that defense counsel and I have the same thing in mind.

992 The witness has narrated the conversation. I do not want to go into that again. I was merely attempting to find out whether the witness was telling what the son said, or whether Hans Haupt told him that. I do not want to go into the conversation again or ask him anything further about it. That was not my purpose.

Mr. BERTRAM. My objection was that he should ask the witness if anything else was said, and the witness has testified here. He should ask the witness if anything else was said. That is a simple question and the witness can answer it.

Mr. WOLL. I do not want to go into any new subject matter.

Mr. BERTRAM. He can ask if he has not already testified. That will be simple and the witness will understand it.

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Do you recall any further conversations with Hans Haupt?

A. Other than the money that his son gave him?

I asked Mr. Haupt if the government had this money and he told me that it was his personal knowledge the government did have the money and he had knowledge that this was Ger-

993 man money that his son had given him.

And all the conversations that Mr. Haupt related to me there, over a period up there, he was telling me what Herbert Haupt told him.

Q. Was anything said as to when Herbert Haupt told him this?

A. Sir?

Q. Was anything said as to when Herbert Haupt told him this?

A. He said that Herbert Haupt talked to him, told him most of these things at their first meeting at Mr. Froehling's home; and he asked if those people, his friends and relatives and his father to help him.

Later on, other conversations, I had conversations regarding the Draft Board and the money, that came later.

The COURT. I think we will recess at this time until two o'clock. In the meantime do not discuss this case, ladies and gentlemen, nor permit anyone to discuss it with you. Return at two o'clock.

995 The COURT. Bring in the Jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence of the Jury:)

The COURT. Proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. WOLL. We will turn the witness over for cross-examination.

CARL HAMBY, resumed the stand for further examination, after having been previously sworn, testified as follows:

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Hamby, what is the nature of the crime you were convicted of the last time on which you are now serving time?

A. Armed robbery.

Q. You saw Hans Max Haupt in the County Jail when you were transferred to Tier H-4?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. And then within the first four days after you were transferred, which brings us up to about June 25th or 26th, 1942, Mr. Haupt told you most of these things that you testified to, is that right?

A. Yes, sir; and a later date, too.

996 Q. That was June 1942?

A. July.

Q. Well, he told you about that time his son having returned by a submarine?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. And that his son had buried in the sand of the Florida Coast, some kind of explosives?

A. No, sir; he didn't say anything about that.

Q. Did you say anything about explosives?

A. I didn't say anything about it, Mr. Haupt, Herbert Haupt buried those explosives in the sand. He said he changed clothes and hid them on the coast.

Q. But he knew they were damaging to our country, did he not?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. That is what Hans Haupt told you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in connection with doing that damage, he was going to use—how was he going to use that, how he was going to damage things and didn't you say he said he was going to blow up troop trains?

A. Yes, sir; with explosives.

Q. With explosives, and he asked Hans Haupt and also Froehling and Wergin would they help him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they said they would, according to Hans Haupt, 997 is that correct?

A. He didn't tell me they said so; he said he would cooperate.

Q. He would cooperate and that this story, oh, let us say, came out within four or five or six days, after you were up in Tier H–4?

A. That and a later date.

Q. Well, most of this?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. While you were there on Tier H–4, and while Hans Haupt was up there, too; did you try to do him any harm?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Well, do do you feel toward him, sympathetic?

A. I was in sympathy with Mr. Haupt; I didn't have anything against the man.

Q. You read in the newspapers about the Haupt case?

A. Sir?

Q. Had you read in the newspapers anything about the Haupt case before Mr. Haupt talked to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. On or about June 29th, 1942, where were you at that time?

A. I was in the County Jail—wait. You say the 29th?

Q. June the 29th, 1942?

998 A. I was in the County Jail.

Q. Did you read the newspapers then?

A. Yes, sir; I read the newspapers, comics.

Q. Just the comics?

A. That was practically all, and followed up the cases which were being tried in court, different courts.

Q. You did know we were engaged in war at that time, did you?

A. Oh, yes, sir; I had troubles of my own. The State had me under a charge for life sentence and was trying to get another conviction against me.

Q. Did you know whether or not we were engaged in war at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You procured a newspaper for Mr. Haupt, one which was not censored?

A. Yes, sir; I did get a newspaper for Mr. Haupt that wasn't censored.

Q. That was a Chicago Sunday Times?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. Dated August 8th or 9th, 1942?

A. I can't remember the date of it.

Q. Well, how long was it after——

A: Right after his son was executed.

999 Q. Right after his son was executed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was a Sunday paper?

A. To the best of my knowledge it was a Sunday paper, the Sunday Times.

Q. Did you see Mr. Froehling in the County Jail?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Wergin?

A. No, sir.

Q. But you remember the names well, even today?

A. Mr. Haupt mentioned those names himself, up on H-4.

Q. At that time he mentioned them?

A. He mentioned those names before that first day he mentioned those names.

Q. He mentioned the names, Froehling and Wergin?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. You remember the names now from that time, do you?

A. I remember the names; yes, sir.

Q. Did Hans Haupt tell you that he read stories about the entire matter in the newspapers?

A. Oh, I don't understand your question.

Q. Did he tell you he had read newspaper stories about the entire matter?

A. No, sir; he didn't tell me that.

Q. He gave you all of your information that you testified 1000 to today just from his own knowledge, as far as you know?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often had you rehearsed that story in your own mind before you testified here today?

A. I haven't rehearsed it.

Q. How do you know that the Chicago Sunday Times on August 8th or 9th, 1942, carried the story of the execution of his son?

A. I didn't know that, I asked that the guard bring a newspaper in that had the story in it about the news, about Mr. Haupt's son being executed.

Q. How did you know he was executed?

A. The guard told me.

Q. Who?

A. A guard told me his son was sentenced to be executed in Washington.

Q. The guard told you prior to that?

A. Just before he was executed.

Q. Before you got him the paper?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did you tell Mr. Haupt about it?

A. I did. The guard asked me not to inform Mr. Haupt; the Government didn't want Mr. Haupt to know anything about the case, or anything. I said to Mr. Haupt when that question came up in the tier, I didn't want to have any trouble up there, or anything, when he read his son was going to be executed, 4001 after the guard left, I informed Mr. Haupt his son was to be executed.

Q. Just what words did you tell him; what did you say to him?

A. I told him the Military Court had found his son guilty and he was sentenced to death, and that the case was in President Roosevelt's hands at that time for commutation of sentence.

Q. And that was in accordance with what the guards told you just before you gave him the paper?

A. That wasn't.

Q. What did the guard tell you?

A. He told me not to inform Mr. Haupt about it.

Q. Yes. But I mean the guard told you that the boy's fate was still in the hands of the President?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you look at the paper when you got it?

A. I looked at the pictures.

Q. You looked at the pictures?

A. There is a picture of the electric chair. Mr. Haupt had the paper for about three hours around his cell.

Q. And he read that to you?

A. Yes, sir; he read that, and I passed it around, and I told him to get rid of the newspaper, because it was hot, and we didn't want to be caught reading it, because there would be trouble, a 1002 newspaper shouldn't be up there with that news in it or anything else.

Q. That was the Chicago Times or Sunday Times of August 8th, 1942?

A. I don't remember the date of it, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will ask that this be marked for the purpose of identification as "Defendant's Exhibit 4."

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested "Defendant's Exhibit 4" for identification.)

Q. State kindly, Mr. Witness, if you saw this in the particular paper which you gave to Mr. Haupt?

A. No, sir; I didn't see it; not that. I didn't pay no attention to the newspaper.

Q. You paid no attention to what?

A. I didn't pay any attention to the newspaper. Mr. Haupt had that newspaper about three hours in the cell and a lot of the fellows was wanting it, the Chicago newspaper, and Mr. Haupt after he gave me the paper, he wanted to read it to me, I didn't get a chance to look at the paper to read only the picture of the chair.

Q. Do you see a picture of the chair here in this paper?

1003 A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. This is marked the Sunday Times of August 9th, 1942.

A. No, sir; I don't see no picture of the chair.

MR. WOLL. Mr. Warnholtz, for the record, will you state whether it is a page out of the paper or the whole paper?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Page number 3 of that particular number of the Chicago newspaper, which says at the top, "Six Saboteurs Die in Chair; One Gets 30 Years." You did not see that?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. You are certain it was the Sunday Times; you have seen that same Sunday Times carrying the story of his son's execution?

A. To the best of my knoweldge, sir.

Q. What did you charge him for the paper?

A. I didn't charge Mr. Haupt nothing for the paper. The guard charged $5.

Q. To whom did the guard charge that?

A. He told me to get $5 off of Mr. Haupt; then I paid the money to the guard, the $5, gave him the $5.

Q. Did you get the $5 from Mr. Haupt and give it to the guard?

A. I did.

1004 Q. Do you remember, Mr. Hamby, that you testified here about two months ago in the insanity proceedings of Mr. Haupt?

A. Yes, sir; I testified in this court.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I now state to you at that time you specified that you paid the guard the $5 and subsequently collected from Mr. Haupt?

A. No, sir. Mr. Haupt, Mr. Warnholtz, I testified Mr. Haupt gave me $5, and I gave it to the guard, and the guard brought the newspaper later and gave it to me, and I gave the newspaper later to Mr. Haupt.

Q. Do you remember at that time, I asked you the question, how much money did you have when you were taken up to Tier H-4?

A. $2.40, some cents, I believe, I testified.

Q. Before you did testify at the insanity hearing of Mr. Haupt, heard in this courtroom about two months ago,—you did testify to that?

A. That is right, I did.

Q. Did you then tell the story which you told us here today?

A. No, sir; I didn't tell the story.

Q. Why not? Why not?

A. In the courtroom?

1905 Q. Yes.

A. That was an insanity hearing.

Q. Well, you concluded it didn't belong in an insanity hearing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is why you didn't tell it?

A. That is correct.

Q. You remember, Mr. Hamby, I asked you at the time of the insanity hearing, why you volunteered to appear as a witness to show that Mr. Haupt was sane?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your answer?

A. It was my duty. I have a mother. I have a father. I have sisters. I have a brother in the Army and another one going in the Army. I feel it is my duty to come here and testify as a citizen—not a citizen, but as an American.

Q. You felt that was your duty, and that is what caused you to appear at the sanity hearing?

A. It is my duty. I feel it is my duty.

Q. As a good American?

A. As an American.

Q. What type of an American were you when four days after you appeared in cell H-4 Hans Haupt told you, he volunteered and told you that they would blow up an American troop train, you felt sympathetic, did you; what kind of an American were you then?

1906 A. I have troubles of my own.

By Mr. Woll:

Q. Have you answered the question yet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you finished the answer?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. Mr. Hamby, you had numerous conversations with Hans Haupt before he told you about Herbert Haupt, didn't you?
A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. You talked about a variety of things, didn't you?
A. That is correct.
Q. He told you about this case?
A. He did.
Q. You hadn't advised him about legal matters?
A. I did not.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object, if your Honor please; not proper redirect examination; those matters were not touched on in cross-examination.

The COURT. Well, I think they were. You asked him if he didn't tell this and that. Overruled.

By Mr. WOLL:

1007 Q. You are giving the conversation that led up to Hans Haupt telling you about the things he did?

A. Mr. Haupt was very ignorant in court procedure, and he didn't know at that time whether he was going to a State court or a Federal court, or where he was going. He asked me—we were talking about being railroaded to the penitentiary, and so on—and he spoke up and wanted to know what would happen to him, and one of those fellows told him he would be given the firing squad, and he asked me to assist him in the system of courts, and after I explained to him, after I learned he was a Federal prisoner, he was going to a Federal Court, and he would have a chance to tell his side of the story. I questioned him, however, of his case, and I advised him also about the evidence that could be presented, legal evidence and illegal evidence, whether the Government knew they could prove certain things. I told him he would be tried by a Jury, or have a chance for a bench trial, and he could either plead guilty, or have a jury trial, and the conversation got up to the point he wanted to know what would happen to him. He told me that his son told him if he ever was arrested, his son, Mr. Haupt was arrested, that is Herbert Haupt, would be given 1008 life, and the most he would get would be a year, as an accessory, or whatever he was supposed to be in there for. I told him that the Government could give him, as an accessory, just what his son got.

Q. Now, did you further advise him along these lines?
A. Yes, sir; I did. I asked him if he made a statement to the Government. Of course, I asked him if it was a confession, and he didn't understand the word, "confession," and wanted to know what it meant. I asked him whether they were Government agents or the police that pinched him; and they asked him about the case, and he said, "yes, he had told them some things." He didn't remember just what he had told them. I asked him if he had signed a statement, and he said, he signed some papers. I also asked him if he was beaten up for this information, if he was beat by the Federal agents, and Mr. Haupt told me the Federal agents didn't lay a hand on him, but that they did question him.

I asked him if there was any witness to the statement, other than Government employes, and he said, he didn't know whether they were or not.

Q. Now, did all of those present hear him tell you the story?

A. What is that?

Q. Did all of those present hear him tell you the story?

1009 A. Yes, sir. And before that, he asked about his wife. He wanted to know where she was at. I believe John Pantanno spoke up and said, "Your wife is in the County Jail and they are using her for immoral purposes." Mr. Haupt became angry about this. He said, "Carl, is that true?" I said, "No, it is not true. If your wife is in the County Jail—I don't know if she is or not—she is taken care of by the women—she is on the women's care, and there is no man around, or allowed around where she is at." So he wanted to know if there was any way how he could find out. I told him he could see the Warden, Warden Sain of the County Jail, and he wanted to know about getting a message to his wife.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to this, your Honor. I still maintain it is not proper redirect examination. It is immaterial to what was brought out on cross-examination.

The COURT. I think you have pursued the subject far enough.

The WITNESS. He wanted to know about——

Mr. WOLL. Pardon me. Oh, I think that is all, your Honor. Just a minute.

1010 Q. On cross-examination, you stated Hans Haupt mentioned the name of Froehling and Wergin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what connection did he use their names?

A. Stanley Norris, the other defendant, came up the same night. He brought a newspaper with him. He was reading an article in the newspaper about some fellow that went out of the jail. He had committed a crime and got arrested, and we were talking about it. Mr. Haupt spoke up and wanted to know if his name was in the paper. Norris asked him who he was, and he says, "My name is Haupt." He looked through the paper and he told him, "No, there is nothing in the paper about it." He wanted to know if there was anything about his friends. He asked who his friends' names was and he said, "Froehling and Wergin."

Norris looked at the paper and informed Mr. Haupt the paper was chopped up and censored, and there wasn't anything in the paper concerning him or any of his friends.

Q. At the sanity hearing, Mr. Warnholtz referred to, I examined you; did I not?

A. Yes, sir; you did.

Q. Did I ask you any questions about conversations asked 1011 you today; did I ask you to tell any of those conversations?

A. I don't understand you.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object as not proper redirect examination.

The COURT. I think it is.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. At the sanity hearing when you were a witness, did I ask you any questions concerning the statement that you today have attributed to Mr. Hans Haupt about his son?

A. No, sir.

Q. I didn't ask you anything about those questions?

A. No, sir; that is correct; you didn't.

Mr. WOLL. That is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I don't want anything more to do with him.

Mr. WOLL. That is all.

Mr. FINN. I should like to offer in evidence at this time on behalf of the Government, Government's Exhibit 19, which has been identified as a ring belonging to Herbert Haupt, and was identified by both Mr. Berger and Mr. Hirsh.

Also Government's Exhibit 21 for identification, being a Social Security Card of Herbert Haupt, identified by both Mr. Berger and Mr. Hirsh.

1012 As Government's Exhibits 44, 45, and 46, being the records of the Hotel Seminole, identified by Mr. Andrews.

Also Government's Exhibits 47, 48, and 49, the records of the Bey Jewelry Company, Jacksonville, Florida, identified by Mr. Allen.

Also Government's Exhibit 50 for identification, being a wrist watch identified by both Mr. Allen and Mr. Hirsh.

I also offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 52, being a draft registration card of Herbert Haupt, identified by Mildred Gordon, Ralph Gregg, and Mr. Hirsh.

I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 53, being the original registration card of Herbert Haupt, identified by Mildred Gordon of the Draft Board.

Also Government's Exhibits 54 and 55, being the Warner Motor Sales order for the sale of the car, signed, Hans Max Haupt, identified by both Mr. Farrell and Mr. Vinson.

As to Government's Exhibit 54, the original slip or order blank.

As to Government's Exhibit 55, a copy of the bill of sale.

I would also like to offer in evidence at this time Govern-
1013 ment's Exhibits 60, 61, and 62, being photographs of the Haupt residence, and 2234 North Fremont Street, identified by numerous agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including Messrs. Handly, Dixon, Lynch, and a number of others.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to the introduction of those instruments as far as Hans Haupt is concerned, unless they are offered merely for the purpose of establishing the enemy status of Herbert Haupt and that he was sent through to the United States for the purpose of acting as an agent for the German Government. I will not have any objection as to that.

Mr. FINN. Well, you have your objection en masse.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You offered them in en masse.

The COURT. Well, take up the first one first.

Mr. FINN. All right. The first one is the ring of Herbert Haupt.

The COURT. Any objection?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. With reference to the ring, if it is received for establishing the status of Herbert Haupt as an enemy at the time he arrived here, there is no objection to it.

Mr. FINN. That is the purpose of this; also to identify him as the same man.

The COURT. For the purpose of identification, it may be received and marked "Government's Exhibit 19."

1014 (Thereupon the document so offered in evidence, was marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibit 19," and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1015 Mr. FINN. The next one is Government's Exhibit 21, being a Social Security Card of Herbert Haupt, and that is offered for the purpose of showing his enemy status.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Thereupon the document so offered in evidence, was marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibit No. 21," and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1016 Mr. FINN. I also wish to have marked as "Government's Exhibits Nos. 44, 45, and 46," being records of the Hotel Seminole, and they are offered for the same purpose.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Thereupon the documents so offered in evidence, were marked and received in evidence, as "Government's Exhibits 44, 45 and 46," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1017 Mr. FINN. I offer as Government's Exhibits 47, 48, and 49, a record of the Bey Jewelry Company, which are offered for the same purpose, showing the enemy status of Herbert Haupt.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Thereupon the documents so offered in evidence, were marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibits Nos. 47, 48, and 49," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1018 Mr. FINN. As Government's Exhibit 50, a wristwatch, which is offered for the same purpose.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Thereupon the document so offered in evidence, was marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibit No. 50," and is attached hereto as an exhibit:)

1019 Mr. FINN. As Government's Exhibit 52, a draft registration card of Herbert Haupt, identified by Mildred Gordon, Ralph Gregg and Hirsh.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. For the same purpose?

Mr. FINN. No. I think this and other purposes, that is to show when Herbert Haupt was here, he was not only an enemy agent, but he was told to go down to the Draft Board and register, and that is where the FBI, for the purpose it is offered as indicated, that the Government was off the trail, and that has been identified by——

The COURT. It may be received.

(Thereupon the document so offered in evidence, was marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibit No. 52," and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1020 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that particular one, if your Honor please, for the purpose of showing the Government just——

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. As Government's Exhibit 53, the original registration card of Herbert Haupt.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Thereupon the document so offered in evidence, was marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibit No. 53," and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1021 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Are you offering that for the same purpose?

Mr. FINN. For all purposes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The objection is the same.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. As Government's Exhibits 54 and 55, the Warner Motor Sales records, which are also offered for all purposes.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Thereupon the documents so offered in evidence, were marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibits 54 and 55," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1022 Mr. FINN. As Government's Exhibits 60, 61, and 62, being photographs of the Haupt's residence, and they are offered for all purposes.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Thereupon the documents so offered in evidence, were marked and received in evidence as "Government's Exhibits 60, 61, and 62," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1023 Mr. FINN. Swear this witness, if you please.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, may we renew all objections we made to the witness, I think it was Willie Schroeder, and subsequent thereto.

The COURT. Yes; that may be overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. I mean our objections the same as to his testimony without renewing them.

1028 A. Yes; he told me.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to his leading the witness.
Mr. FINN. Your Honor, I think that is very general.
The COURT. Yes; that is all right. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you tell us what, if anything, Hans Haupt said on that occasion?
A. Yes; he told me Herbert was going to leave for the Bund

Camp in Michigan for a week or ten days, and that Mr. Froehling was going to take him up there.

Mr. FINN. I can't hear you.

A. He told me that if war would break out with the United States and Germany, he would never permit his boy to join the American Army. He would send him to Mexico, and from there he could go to Germany and join the Air Force.

Q. Now, do you recall any further conversation with Hans Max Haupt?

A. Yes; he told me at the same time that if war broke out, that if the country would take him in the Army, he would crawl over the enemy lines and tell them our position.

A. In the apartment.

Q. Will you tell us what was said at that time?

A. Well, we were talking about war and different things, and he told me he had no feeling for the United States at all. His feelings were only for Germany, and he wished Hitler would come over here and drive all the Jews out, because the Jews are running this country.

Mr. FINN. That is all with this witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Poppe, are you a citizen of the United States?

A. I am not, sir.

Q. When did you come to the United States?

A. In 1924.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, at this time, I should like to see if we could stipulate that within the time specified by the statute, a complete list of the witnesses was served upon the defendant, and also upon his counsel, within the time specified by the 1031 statute. There was also served both on counsel for the defendant and the defendant himself a copy of the list of the jurors. I think that there were forty-seven in one list and sixty in another, is that correct?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Those lists were properly served on the defendant, and the defendant's counsel.

Mr. FINN. May we have about five minutes, your Honor, at this time?

The COURT. Yes; take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon, a short recess was had.)

1032 (The following proceedings were had in open court, but in the absence of the jury.)

The COURT. Are you ready to proceed, gentlemen?

Mr. WOLL. Yes; if your Honor please. I was waiting for the jury. I think we should do that in the presence of the jury.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I have some motions.

The COURT. The government rests.

Whereupon the Government rested.

Mr. BERTRAM. We have some motions that we would like to present to the Court.

The first motion is a motion on behalf of the defendant at the conclusion of the government's evidence, to direct the jury to find the defendant not guilty of the charges contained in the indictment. It is in written form, if your Honor please. Shall I offer it to you, or would you like to have me read it?

The COURT. Let me see it.

Mr. FINN. May we have a copy, please?

Mr. BERTRAM. I will give a copy to counsel for the government.

1033 (And thereupon a motion in writing, in the following form was submitted on behalf of the defendant:

"In the District Court of the United States of America for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

No. 44 Cr. 129

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

MOTIONS ON BEHALF OF HANS MAX HAUPT, DEFENDANT

And now at the conclusion of the Government's evidence in the case, comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the court to direct the jury to find this defendant not guilty of the charges contained in the indictment in the above-entitled case;

And the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, makes the following separate and additional motions with respect to the specific overt acts charged in the said indictment:

The defendant, Hans Max Haupt, moves the Court to direct the jury to find this defendant not guilty upon each of the overt 1034 acts designated and separately numbered in said indictment as follows: "1", "2", "3", "4", "5", "6", "7", "8", "9", "10", "11", "12", "13", "14", "15", "16", "17", "18", "19", "20", "21", "22", "23", "24", "25", "26", "27", "28", "29".

And in support of all and each of the foregoing motions, and with respect to all and each of the said numbered overt acts in said indictment, this defendant shows unto the Court as follows:

1. There is no evidence in the case proving or tending to prove that this defendant has committed treason against the United States.

2. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant adhered to, or was guilty of adhering to, the enemies of the United States.

3. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant gave, or was guilty of giving, to the enemies of the United States aid and comfort.

4. There was not testimony of the two witnesses to the same overt act of this defendant.

5. There was no confession in open Court by this defendant as to any overt act or charge contained in said indictment.

1035 6. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States and gave said enemies aid and comfort.

7. There is no evidence in the case showing any intent on the part of this defendant to commit treason against the United States.

8. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant committed any of the acts alleged in the indictment as "overt acts" with intent to adhere to the enemies of the United States and to give said enemies aid and comfort, or with any intent to commit treason against the United States.

9. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant gave aid and comfort, if any aid and comfort was given, to more than one person, or to any person other than Herbert Haupt.

10. There is no evidence in the case that this defendant intended to or did give aid and comfort to Herbert Haupt, or in any other manner assisted the said Herbert Haupt, with the intention of thereby furthering the interests of any nation with which the United States was at war, or with the intention of committing any act detrimental to the interests of the United States.

PAUL A. F. WARNHOLTZ,
Attorney for Hans Max Haupt, defendant.

1036 The COURT. Do you wish to argue this?

Mr. BERTRAM. No; not particularly, your Honor.

The COURT. Have you seen this?

Mr. FINN. Yes, your Honor. We have just received a copy.

The COURT. What have you to say?

Mr. FINN. With reference to this motion to direct, it is a general motion. Of course, we believe that the evidence is unquestionably overwhelmingly sufficient to go to the jury:

With reference to the separate motions to acquit upon each of the overt acts, my understanding of the procedure is this: There is no such thing as a motion to direct the jury to enter a not guilty verdict on an overt act; that it is the proper procedure for the Court, at the end of the case, to submit to the jury those overt acts which the Court believes have been proven by the required number of witnesses under the Constitution, and to instruct on those acts; then to exclude those overt acts which have not been submitted for the purpose of showing treason, except for the purpose of intent. I think that is the procedure, if the Court 1037 please; there is no such thing in law as a finding on a motion to direct as to overt acts.

Mr. BERTRAM. Do you withdraw any particular overt act?

Mr. WOLL. On that question, I think that we follow the holding of our own Court of Appeals in this particular case, where it passed upon the question of whether each overt act was a separate offense and the Court held it was not a separate offense; they held that it is the same as in a conspiracy case.

The COURT. The motion will be overruled and denied.

Mr. BERTRAM. Our next motion, if the Court please, is a more restricted motion.

(And thereupon Mr. Bertram read a motion in the following form:

"And now comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of all witnesses relating to conversations with Herbert Haupt and alleged statements made by Herbert Haupt outside of the presence of the defendant, upon the following grounds:

1038 (a) All such testimony constitutes hearsay evidence which is inadmissible.

(b) Said Herbert Haupt died before the commencement of this trial and his alleged statements are inadmissible as evidence against this defendant who was not present when such alleged statements were made.

(c) All such testimony was incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant to the issues in the case.

And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider any such testimony relating to such conversations and alleged statements of Herbert Haupt.")

The COURT. Do you care to argue that particular motion?

Mr. BERTRAM. No.

Mr. HURLEY. The Court has already ruled on the same objection, or motion to strike. It is the same.

The COURT. The motion will be denied.

Mr. BERTRAM. Our next motion, if the Court please, is:

1039 (And thereupon Mr. Bertram read a motion in the following form:

"And now comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant herein prior to June 17, 1942, upon the grounds that all such testimony is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial and relates to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, and tends greatly to the prejudice of the rights and interests of the defendant and deprives him of the rights to a fair and impartial trial herein;

"And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider such irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial testimony herein.")

The COURT. The motion will be denied.

(Mr. Bertram read the motion a second time.)

The COURT. What is your theory on that?

1040 Mr. BERTRAM. June 17th is the date that was alleged in the indictment referring to the charges against the defendant herein; that is the date that Herbert landed in this country, according to the government's testimony, and it is our theory all the testimony of the witnesses relating to statements supposed to have been made by Hans Haupt before then are not competent to be used as evidence against him on this trial.

The COURT. It will be denied.

(And thereupon Mr. Bertram read a motion in the following form:

"And now comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnhoftz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to matters involving activities of Herbert Haupt, which occurred prior to the middle of June, 1941, upon the grounds that the same is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial, and relates to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, tending to the great prejudice of the rights and interests of the defendant and deprives him of the right to a fair and impartial 1041 trial herein;

"And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider such testimony relating to activities of said Herbert Haupt which occurred prior to the middle of June, 1941.")

Relating to activities of the said Herbert Haupt which occurred prior to the middle of June 1941. That is the date that he is supposed to have left Chicago and gone to Mexico.

The COURT. The motion will be denied.

Mr. BERTRAM. Did your Honor receive from me a motion directed as to December 7th, 1941, the commencement of the war?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. You have that also?

The COURT. Yes.

(And thereupon a motion in the following form was submitted in writing on behalf of the defendant:

"And now comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul F. Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of wit-
1042 nesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant herein prior to December 7th, 1941, upon the grounds that the United States was not then engaged in any war, and that all such testimony is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial and relates to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, and tends greatly to the prejudice of the rights and interests of the defendant and deprives him of the right to a fair and impartial trial herein;

And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider such irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial testimony herein.")

Mr. BERTRAM. That was also denied?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Exceptions follow as a matter of course, your Honor?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the Court, I have a number of witnesses here, some of whom will take a considerable time, but there are one or two, and especially one who should leave town today. He is a farmer and he came in from Hartford,
1043 Michigan. I would like to put him on today. The remaining witnesses are not quite in rotation. We did not know until now how long it would take today. If possible, I should like to put on the remaining witnesses on Monday morning, with the exception of the farmer and a gentleman connected with a bank.

The COURT. How much time do you think it will take?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The case in its entirety, we should be able to finish Monday before 4:30.

The COURT. What do you say?

Mr. WOLL. We have no objection to that.

The COURT. You would like to put on two witnesses?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes. There will be two witnesses.

The COURT. Gentlemen, I asked you the other day to let me have your suggestions.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes.

The COURT. Instructions of the government?

Mr. FINN. We have them, if your Honor please.

Mr. BERTRAM. We have had some, but we have not had time to organize them. We have not all of them complete. I have quite a number of them; if it would help the Court to give them to you now, I will immediately sort them out. It will take me 1044 about five minutes. May I have that time?

The COURT. You may do that before you go.

Mr. BERTRAM. I will leave them before I go.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There may be five or six additional suggestions later on.

The COURT. Very well. How long do you gentlemen think you will desire to argue the case?

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, Mr. Finn closed in about an hour and a half at the last trial, and we will stand on that.

The COURT. How much time do you think you would want?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. About two and a half hours, your Honor.

The COURT. Well, we will let it go then, not to exceed two and a half hours on a side. Will that be satisfactory?

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

The COURT. Counsel will divide the time amongst themselves. The burden will be upon you to keep within that time.

Mr. WOLL. We should like, if your Honor please, to have permission to divide the closing argument between two attorneys for the government, but it will all be within the time.

1045 The COURT. Whatever way you wish to arrange it. When you open your case, make it a complete opening.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We will do that.

Mr. WOLL. Our present plan is that we anticipate it will take about three-quarters of the time on the opening.

The COURT. So long as it does not exceed two hours and a half on a side. Bring in the jury, please.

(The following proceedings were had in the presence of the jury:)

The COURT. Ladies and gentlemen, the government has rested its case, and the defendant has now called his first witness to the stand.

(And thereupon the defendant offered the following evidence:)

FRANK TITZLER, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Will you please state your full name?

1046 A. Frank Titzler.

Q. Will you speak a little louder, Mr. Titzler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Titzler?

A. Hartford, Michigan.

Q. What is your business?

A. Farmer?

A. Farmer, now.

Q. A farmer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will refer you to June 20, of 1942, to a Sunday—and I will ask you——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Strike that.

Q. Mr. Titzler, do you know the defendant, Hans Max Haupt?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. Do you see him sitting here in the courtroom?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point him out, please?

A. Over there.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Let the record show that the witness pointed out the defendant in the courtroom.

Q. I now refer you to Sunday, June 21, 1942, and ask you if you saw the defendant Hans Max Haupt on that day?

A. He did work on that day.

1047 Q. Did you see him on that day?

A. I saw him.

Q. At about what time of day did you see him on that day?

A. At about ten o'clock in the morning until one o'clock noon.

Q. You first saw him at about ten o'clock in the morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. At 2547 North Clark.

Q. Were you living at that time at 2547 North Clark?

A. Yes; I was employed as a janitor there.

Q. You were employed there as a janitor in that building?

A. In that building; yes, sir.

Q. That is an apartment building?

A. An apartment building.

Q. How many apartments?

A. Twelve.

Q. Did you have a conversation with anyone when you first saw Mr. Haupt on that Sunday morning at about ten o'clock?

A. I used to take the tools when he comes to work, I had 1048 to open up the tool shed and I was the one to supply him with material. He was only getting paid for the work that he does there. That is all. He comes there and I open up the shed and he takes the tools. When he was through why, he brought the tools back in and I locked them up.

Mr. FINN. I will ask that the witness speak slower and distinctly.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Titzler, will you kindly speak a little slower, take your time, and speak as loud as you possibly can?

A. Yes.

Q. Do I understand you correctly that he applied that morning to you for his tools which were locked up in the basement?

A. That is right.

Q. What type of tools were they?

A. He had to take paints, and I think on that morning, only took paint.

Q. Did you tell me, or did he tell you what he wanted to do with it?

A. He was finishing up a flat on 4125—2547 North Clark Street, on the third floor, that day, he finished it, that apartment.

Q. He finished up what? He was a painter and decorator, is that correct?

1049 A. Yes; that is right.

Q. Was he alone at the time when he called?

A. He was alone, alone that day.

Q. Then you gave him this paint, tools and equipment?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he went up there, as far as you know?

A. That is right.

Mr. FINN. I will object to that.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. All right, I will ask it the long way.

A. When he was through we went over for a couple of beers. That was around one o'clock.

Q. At about one o'clock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you see him again after ten o'clock?

A. I did not see him—just about when he was through, you know, just before one.

Q. He came down and what did he do then?

A. Bring up his tools.

Q. Brought them up or down?

A. Bring the tools down and I lock them up.

Q. What did you do?

A. Well, I opened up the storeroom and put the tools back in the shed again.

Q. After that did you have a conversation with him, 1050 what happened?

A. Well, he treated me for a beer, so we went to Kelley's place, at the tavern, had a couple of beers together.

Q. That was about what time?

A. One o'clock.

Q. In the afternoon?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. Did you have a further conversation with him at that time?

A. Well, Mr. Haupt said he was going over to the owner to collect—

Mr. FINN. Wait a minute.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Are you objecting?

Mr. FINN. Yes, sir; I am objecting.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What are you objecting to?

Mr. FINN. It is the answer to which I object. The question was whether he did or did not have a conversation, not what the conversation was. I would like to have it stricken.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, what are you objecting to now, my question?

Mr. FINN. No; to the answer.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I am not asking that the answer be stricken.

1051 Q. Did you have further conversation with him?

A. We did.

The COURT. He said that he did.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. And what was it?

A. Going over and having a beer together.

Q. After that, what did he say?

A. He is going over to the owner, to get his money, pay for the work he was doing.

Q. The work at the building, if you know, what building?

A. At 2547 North Clark Street.

Q. And all this took place on Sunday, June 21, 1944 between ten o'clock in the morning and one o'clock in the afternoon?

A. That is right.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. WOLL. No cross-examination.

(No cross-examination. Witness excused.)

The COURT. You may step down.

JOSEPH N. WALLENBORN, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

1052 Direct examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Will you kindly state your full name?

A. Joseph N. Wallenborn.

Q. Where do you live?

A. 1825 Cornelia Avenue.

Q. What is your business, Mr. Wallenborn?

A. Bank clerk.

Q. You are connected at the present time with the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Located at 3201 North Ashland Avenue in the city of Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Wallenborn, you came down here in response to a subpoena duces tecum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were asked to produce certain records? Have you got those records with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you hand them to me?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will ask that this sheet be marked "Defendant's Exhibit 5" for the purpose of identification. Do you want to see it first.

(Whereupon document was marked "Defendant's Exhibit 5" for identification.)

1053 Q. I will hand you now what has been marked "Defendant's Exhibit 5," so marked for the purpose of identification, and I will ask you if you have ever seen this sheet before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did it come into your possession before I handed it to you now?

A. Yesterday.

Q. Who gave it to you?

A. Mr. Perilod.

Q. Is he connected with the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity?

A. He is in the trust department.

Q. Do you know where this record was taken from by him?

A. From the Trust register.

Q. Is that one of the records kept by the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank in the regular course of conducting its business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge if this sheet forms one of its records?

A. Yes, sir.

1054 Q. Of the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank?

A. Yes.

Q. I will refer you to line number 59——

A. That is A-74159. That is line 59.

Q. I refer you now to this particular entry shown here on the sheet marked at the top, "Draft Register" and a number of drawn lines, and "Lake View Trust and Savings Bank" and to a document called here number A-74159; and further reading in favor of Hans Haupt and shown bought by John Schoenfeld, in the amount of $101.50, dated June 27, 1942.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you know that this entry was made in the regular course of business of the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank through its employees?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May this be marked "Defendant's Exhibit 6" for indentification?

(Document was marked "Defendant's Exhibit 6" for identification.)

Q. I now show you Defendant's Exhibit 6 for identification and ask you what that is?

A. A cashier's check.

Q. Drawn upon what bank?

A. Lake View Trust and Savings Bank.

1055 Q. And in whose favor?

A. Hans Haupt.

Q. In what amount?

A. $101.50.

Q. What is the number of that check?

A. A–74159.

Q. Is that number identical with the number I pointed out before on the record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That check, according to your records, was bought by whom?

A. John Schoenfeld.

Q. I will now ask you to look at the check and tell me if by the perforation thereon if you can show or tell when that check was paid?

A. That was paid on June 27, according to the records here.

Q. I will show you—according to the book records here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I refer you to the reverse side of this check and I will ask you to state the endorsement there shown.

A. Hans Haupt.

Q. What else is there on here?

A. 2234 Fremont Street.

1056 Q. Do you find any other endorsements on here?

A. No, sir.

Q. Will you state the rule of the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank with reference to checks cashed at the bank when they bear but one endorsement?

A. Payable to the man that has endorsed it.

Q. By whom it is endorsed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That it is evidence that it was paid directly to that party?

Mr. FINN. I object to the form of the question, that it is evidence of something. Let him ask what it shows or what it evidences, if anything.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Can you state or describe to me if the check was paid under the rules of the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank?

Mr. HURLEY. If the Court please, I object to that, unless it is shown this witness knows.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Do you know the rules of the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank with reference to endorsements on checks, checks presented at your cash windows for payment? Are you familiar with those rules?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are those rules with references to someone 1057 coming over and cashing a check?

A. It is paid to the endorser.

Q. It is paid to the endorser?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if only one endorsement appears upon it, what is the rule with reference to that?

A. It shows it is just paid to the one party.

Q. Would that party be the one whose endorsement appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You will find on this check an endorsement stamp—I presume there is no objection if I read that, instead of going the long way—showing that this check was cleared through the Harris Trust and Savings Bank, June 29, 1942. Was this presented there on that day? State how that happened to get on there. State if you can.

A. What are you referring to? The date?

Q. The endorsement stamp on it; what is that stamp?

A. That is stamped on the date of the payment.

Q. It was paid according to the perforation on the 27th day of June, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the date your bank paid that check?

A. Yes, sir.

1058 The COURT. Let me see it just a minute. Go ahead.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I now offer Defendant's Exhibits 5 and 6, so marked for identification in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits of the same number.

Mr. WOLL. I would like to ask a few questions.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Cross-examine, please.

Cross-examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. You do not know the signature of Hans Haupt, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never saw the man——

Mr. FINN. Answer, do not shake your head.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Will you answer, please; you never saw this signature of Hans Haupt in your life?

A. No.

Q. You do not know whether this is his signature or not, do you?

A. No; I cannot tell.

Q. All you came here to testify was as to the records of the bank; is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To show there was a transaction on that day?

A. Yes, sir.

1059 Q. You did not pay out any money yourself on that transaction?

A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know anything about it, as to how it was paid out?

A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know whether some man came into the bank and stated he was Hans Haupt and presented that check; or put it this way: If a man had gone to the bank and stated he was Hans Haupt and presented that check endorsed that way, would the bank, under its rules, have paid it?

A. With proper identification.

Q. What kind of identification?

A. It would depend on what he would have.

Q. Do you know in this particular instance?

A. No.

Q. Nothing about it?

A. No.

Mr. WOLL. I think that is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Will you please look at the endorsement side of the check and can you tell us if there is anything that refers to the 1060 identification of Max Haupt on the check, and I particularly call your attention to the number 265127, and the name of Mills; and can you tell me, of your knowledge of the way the bank conducted its business, what that might indicate?

A. That indicates that one of the officials—one of the officers of the desk—says it was O. K.

Q. Well, he O.K'd the identity of the particular person?

A. He probably did.

Q. The number "265127," or whatever that number is—what was that, if you know?

A. Well, that is pretty hard to say. That might have been a savings bank number, or it might be some other number; I cannot tell you.

Q. But Mr. Mills, who identified the identity of that person—

A. Well, he signed his name there.

Q. And would that be an acceptance when he signs his name?

A. Well, there should be an O.K. stamp on there if he signed it.

Q. Was Mr. Mills at the time one of your officers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he now?

A. No, sir.

1061 Q. Do you know what his physical condition is at the present time?

A. He is sick; heart trouble.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Mr. WOLL. No more cross-examination.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Any objection to the instruments?

Mr. WOLL. If I could find out what the purpose of it is, I may be able to answer.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The purpose was merely to show that Hans Haupt on that particular morning went there and cashed this check, to show what he did every day during the time that Herbert Haupt was here, and in order to show that he went to the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank that particular morning and got this money. We will bring the purchaser of the check.

Mr. WOLL. I will object, then, because it does not show that he cashed the check.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The thing is you object to it?

The COURT. The check has not been proven yet.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Under the rules of the bank could that check have been paid to any other than Hans Haupt?

Mr. WOLL. I object to that.

1062 The COURT. I cannot go into that now. This is simply the signature. Is there any objection to the other? What is the other offer? What is the other paper?

Mr. WOLL. I have no objection to the record.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We will show that it was bought by a man by the name of Schoenfeld.

The COURT. You have not as yet connected it up.

Mr. WOLL. I have no objection to number 6 at all, showing there was a withdrawal of money.

The COURT. You will have to connect it up.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. This is a cashier's check and the record showing a check issued and paid that same day.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Whereupon the document marked "Defendant's Exhibit 5" was received in evidence and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1063 The COURT. Any objection to the other offer?

Mr. WOLL. I object to the check.

The COURT. I will reserve the ruling.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. You may go.

(Witness excused.)

The COURT. We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen; until ten o'clock Monday morning.

In the meantime do not discuss this case with anyone nor permit anyone to discuss it with you. If anyone should attempt to communicate with you or talk with you, communicate that at once to the Court. Do not discuss it among yourselves until it is finally submitted to you for decision, which I estimate will be Tuesday or Wednesday.

Monday morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to Monday, June 5, A. D. 1944, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

1064 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois Eastern Division, at Chicago

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge and a Jury

Monday, June 5, 1944, 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard C. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America;

Messrs. Paul A. J. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * *

1065 (And thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, at this time, we would like to advise the court, we would like to enter an objection to the Government's attorneys dividing the time so that two of the Government's attorneys should be permitted to respond after the defendants have made their arguments, defendant's counsel have made their arguments.

The COURT. Well, what difference would it make to you whether one man or two men make the argument, if in each case they are proper rebuttal arguments.

Mr. BERTRAM. Well, we think, that by having two Government attorneys arguing after we are all through with our arguments would be a disadvantage to the defendant, and it should be limited to a reply by one Government attorney.

Mr. WOLL. It may be we wouldn't——

The COURT. I don't know of any rule of procedure that limits any party litigant to one lawyer. I can see some difficulty to counsel in attempting to divide the reply. I can't see how that hurts the other side. Overruled. Bring in the Jury.

1066 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

Mr. WOLL. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

The JURY. Good morning.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Good morning.

The JURY. Good morning.

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

The JURY. Good morning.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mr. Peter Wolf, please.

Thereupon the defendant introduced the following evidence and proceedings in his behalf:

Direct examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ.

Q. Will you kindly state your name?

A. Peter Wolf.

The COURT. Peter what?

The WITNESS. Wolf.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Kindly talk louder and slowly, Mr. Wolf, so that the Jury can hear you, too.

1067 Q. Where do you live, Mr. Wolf?

A. At 2140 Lincoln Avenue.

Q. In the City of Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A little louder, kindly.

A. All right.

Q. And what business are you engaged in?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you see him in the courtroom now?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you point him out kindly?
A. Right there [indicating].
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The record will indicate that the witness pointed out the defendant Hans Max Haupt.
Q. I now refer you to Saturday, June 20, 1942, and will ask you what, if any, relationship you had with Hans Max Haupt on that day?
A. I just got a call to help him out on a job.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. A little louder kindly, if you can.
A. I got a call to help him out on a job, a painting and decorating job;
1068 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes.
The WITNESS. So I happened to be off that day and I gave him a hand-out, I worked with him.
Q. You worked with him on that day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did you work with him on that day?
A. I believe it was 2545 North Clark Street.
Q. In Chicago?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you state the time of day when you worked with him at 2545 North Clark Street, Chicago, June 20, 1942?
A. On or about 8 o'clock in the morning, to about 10:30 or 11 at night.
Q. During the entire day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what were you and he doing at that address?
A. I was painting and decorating, and he was papering.
Q. You interrupted your work by having luncheon, I take it?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. And at about 10:30 at night, when you quit, what did you and he do at that time?
A. He took me home.

A. I do not recall. It has been a couple of years now. I don't know. Between nine and ten o'clock, and I think I saw him early in the morning that same morning, I think he came over about 7 o'clock to pick up some material. I think I saw him twice that day. I think I saw him early in the morning and again about nine o'clock later in the day.

1073 Q. I refer you to Tuesday, June 23, 1942, and ask if you saw Hans Max Haupt on that day?

A. I stopped over for some reason, about something that had to be done on the job, or something. I asked him what had to be done, then I left.

Q. Where was that?

A. In the same place.

Q. Was he on East 43rd Street, in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was Hans Max Haupt doing when you arrived at that place?

A. They were building up a wall.

Mr. Hurley. I object to this line of examination.

The Court. Yes.

Mr. Warnholtz. Q. How was he dressed?

A. He was dressed in his working clothes. He was working.

Q. How long did you see him there?

A. I was only there a few minutes at the time. I had 1074 some place to go. I couldn't stay around. I showed him what had to be done, something about some part of the wall, he didn't think he ought to do, he had time or ought to do it, so I went in. I wasn't there very long, then I left.

Q. Was he there alone working on this brick wall job?

A. No; he was with the same party that he was there the day before with.

A. I saw him again that day—I believe just a few minutes later

I talked with him, as I did before; I stayed about a half an hour; in fact, I think I had to go with him that day.

Q. Where?

A. 43rd Street.

Q. Same job?

A. Yes, sir.

1075 Q. What was Hans Max Haupt doing there?

A. They were finishing up that day.

Q. Finishing laying the brick?

A. That is right.

Q. That is, to complete this wall that you just spoke about?

A. That is right.

Q. Who was with him, if anyone?

A. I believe there was another party there that day. I am not sure. I don't know whether Topsing was there. I thought there was a third party there; I don't remember.

Q. Do you know the relationship between Topsing and Haupt, as far as that job was concerned?

A. I don't know exactly, no; the relationship; they worked together, as far as I know.

Q. On that particular job?

A. That particular job. I knew Emil for a long time before. Emil worked for me four or five years prior. How they got connected together, I don't know. I used to give Haupt some work as a helper, and whether he was a partnership or not, I don't know.

Q. When you say "Emil", you mean Emil Topsing, the party now dead?

A. That is right.

1076 Q. I now refer you to June 25th, 1942, and ask you whether or not you saw Hans Max Haupt on that day?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. Did you have any conversation prior to that day with Hans Max Haupt regarding some job on Oakley Boulevard?

A. A chimney stack.

Q. On Adams Street, what type of a job was that?

A. That was a repair job on a chimney.

Q. A repair job on what?

A. A repair job on a chimney. It had to be repaired.

Q. On a chimney?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the succeeding day, Friday, June 26, 1942, and ask you if you saw Hans Haupt on that day?

A. When I came over to that job around noontime, they were just finishing up.

Q. Where was that?

A. On Oakley Boulevard.

Q. When you say "they were finishing up," who?

1077 A. There were two or three people there. I don't know who they were; only Emil and Haupt I knew; the other parties I didn't know.

Q. Emil Topsing and Hans Haupt were there?

A. That is all.

Q. They were there all in their working clothes?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. HURLEY. I object to his leading the witness.

The COURT. Yes.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. How were they dressed?

A. They were all dressed in working clothes. They were just finishing the job. I says to Haupt, well, I says, "I will go and you collect the money for this." And he said, "The party already paid me the money." I gave him the job of the time and I said if the party paid them, and then I went and saw the party, and said to them, "If they were satisfied?" and they said, "Yes; they were." I asked Haupt if he finished the job on Adams Street, and he said he didn't. Of course, I said, "Why didn't you finish?" He said, "He was afraid when he got the job." He said, "He was afraid of falling off the end." I said, "No need to be afraid." I told him how it should be done, and he said, "I guess you are right," and he drove over there.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment now.

1078 Q. On this job on Oakley Boulevard, where Hans was working on Thursday and Friday, you stated there was also, in addition to Topsing, a third person working. Who they were you do not remember?

A. Two or three.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I asked you if this third person was Carl Eggert?

A. I did not know him. I wouldn't know him even if I saw him.

Q. After that job was completed, you had a conversation with Hans Haupt and what happened then?

A. I asked him if he finished the job on Adams, and he said he hadn't completed it. He said the stones on top were loose, and he said he was afraid they might fall; and he said that job of fixing the chimney, he said he couldn't do; and I told him I thought it was a simple thing, and I told him how to do it.

Q. What did you do?

A. We went over together and finished it.

Q. How did you proceed over to the job, by automobile or how?

A. I drove over in my car and he drove over in his.

Q. Who drove with him; anyone?

Q. Do you remember what type car it was?

A. Well, I don't know. I knew it was a black automobile. I don't know whether it was a Chevrolet or Pontiac. I believe it was a Chevrolet.

Q. Did you notice whether or not there was any material on that automobile?

A. Yes; there was.

Q. What was on it?

A. Ladders and stuff he had finished up on Oakley Boulevard.

Q. Then when you got to the Adams Street job; what was done, if anything, by Hans Max Haupt and by you or any of the other two?

A. The other fellow stayed; I showed him how to get the stones on top. We were only there for a short while, and then left.

Q. You and Hans Max Haupt completed the job; is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And after that, what happened?

A. Nothing. I went about my business, and he went about his business.

1080 Q. You drove off?

A. I drove off, that is right.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. You may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. HURLEY:

Q. Mr. Nolan, referring to Wednesday, June 24th, where was it you said you saw Haupt on that day?

A. On 43rd Street.

Q. What time of day was it you saw him?

A. I believe around noontime.

Q. Is that the day you say you ate with him?

A. That is right.

Q. You ate around noontime?

A. That is right.

Q. What time was it you left him that day?

A. I was only there about half an hour, and left.
Q. Would you say you left at 12:30?

Q. Do you see the defendant now in this courtroom?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. Will you point him out, please?

A. There he is, right there [indicating].

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The record will indicate the witness points to the defendant Hans Max Haupt in the courtroom.

Q. Mr. Graf, I refer you to late in the evening, about 10:30 or so, of Friday, June 26, 1942, and ask you if you saw Hans Max Haupt on that day?

1085 A. Yes, I did.

Q. And where did you see him?

The COURT. It may be stricken.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Do you know what happens to the proceeds of such festivals?

Mr. HURLEY. I object to that, if the court please. I don't see the materiality.

The COURT. As far as I can see, you are just going off on the by-roads. I don't see any connection.

1087 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, it happens, if the court please, that the District Attorney brought this up and referred to associations that Hans Haupt was connected with, if I am not mistaken; that they were here in Chicago, for the purpose of taking over utilities and the like, and blowing them up, and I want to show concerning the organizations he belonged to, they were not engaged in blowing up anything. It is in the nature of impeaching the evidence of the assertions made.

Mr. HURLEY. No mention was made of this or any organization or that he made those statements; that organizations of Germans would go into these utilities in this country to do that. There was no mention of any organization in connection with that whatever.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If I remember correctly, Mrs. Fishman stated the associations Mr. Haupt was connected with had people in these various utilities, et cetera, places, to blow them up in time of war.

Mr. HURLEY. She didn't say organizations, as I recall it.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. She didn't point out the particular ones.

A. Yes; he came up to me and talked to me.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. You may cross-examine.

Q. What is the correct name?

A. I don't know what you mean. You are telling me a name, and I will say yes or no.

Q. What is it? Well, do you know of any organization?

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Well, was there an organization which was organized for the collection of a fund to send back to Germany to relieve suffering, et cetera.

Q. Now, what time was it on Friday that you saw Mr. Hans Max Haupt?
A. Well, it was, oh, probably nine or ten o'clock, eight-thirty to ten.
Q. Where was it you saw him?

The COURT. Oh, it may stand.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a minute. That is all.
Mr. HURLEY. No cross-examination.
(Witness excused.)
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mrs. Saure.

GERDA MELIND SAURE, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Your name is Mrs. Gerda Melind Saure?
1697 A. Yes, sir.
Q. You have testified in this trial before today—a day or two ago?
A. Yes, I have.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Kindly speak louder, Mrs. Saure, so that the Jury can hear you.
Q. A day or two ago, you testified, Mrs. Saure, that you called at the residence of Hans Max Haupt on Tuesday evening, June 23rd, 1942; do you recollect that?

A. I do.

Q. When you arrived at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Haupt, who was present at that time?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Louder, please.

A. A friend was sitting in the living room.

Q. The friend sitting in the living room, was the party you later on identified as Mr. Zermer?

A. That is right.

Q. Was Herbert Haupt present at the time when you came?

A. No; he wasn't.

Q. What did you do immediately upon arriving?

A. I went in the kitchen with Mrs. Haupt.

Q. You went in the kitchen with Mrs. Haupt?

1098 A. Yes.

Q. Well, did you say something?

A. I asked her where Herbert was, and she said he had gone out to meet me at the streetcar.

Q. And then what took place?

A. Well, Mr. Haupt went out and said he would see if he could locate him, and tell him I was there, which he did; then they both came back together.

Q. After Herbert came together with his father, did he leave the house again until about 10:30 when he left to go with you?

A. No; he didn't leave until that time with me.

Q. While you were there, did Herbert Haupt eat anything?

A. No; he didn't.

Q. Had Herbert Haupt met you prior to that date at some streetcar corner?

A. No; he hadn't; he just called me on the telephone.

Q. And what was your conversation?

A. Well, he told me he would like to see me, if I could come over to the house that evening.

Q. Did he know where you were working at the time?

A. Yes; he did.

1099 Q. What means of transportation did you take, and where were you working?

A. At the Bismarck Hotel Beauty Salon.

Q. Clark Street car?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get off?

A. At Webster Avenue.

Q. In going from the Clark Street car at Webster Avenue on Clark Street, to Fremont and Webster, must you necessarily pass Lincoln Avenue and Webster?

A. Yes.

Q. You must pass that corner?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you walk?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. In walking over, you did not see Herbert Haupt?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. Do you know the birthday of Herbert Haupt?

A. I believe it was December 21.

Q. December 21; did you know Herbert Haupt on December 21, 1941?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Do you recall what happened on or about that date?

A. No; I can't recall that.

Q. Did you at any time go out with Herbert Haupt in an automobile?

1100 A. Yes; I did.

Q. When did you first go out with him in an automobile?

A. Oh, I believe he received a car—he got a new car for his birthday.

Q. For his birthday?

A. For his 21st birthday, I believe it was.

Q. In what year was that?

A. 1941.

Q. What type of car was that?

A. I believe that car was a Plymouth car.

Q. And prior to that, had you been out with him in an automobile?

A. Yes, I had—in his father's car.

Q. What type of car was that?

A. That was an Oldsmobile.

Q. When did Herbert leave Chicago?

A. He left in 1941, I believe.

Q. What year?

A. 1941, I believe.

Q. 1941, about when?

A. June.

Q. June?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you wish to correct your statement as to when it was?

A. It must have been 1940, then.

Q. 1940, instead of 1941?

A. Yes.

Q. I now refer you to the fall of 1939, and will ask you if 1101 you at that time had a conversation with Erna Haupt, the wife of Hans Haupt, together?

A. Well, in the fall—

Mr. HURLEY. I object to that.

The COURT. What is that period? Read that question.

(Last preceding question read by the reporter.)

The COURT. What relevancy has that?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will show the sentiments appearing at that time, that were expressed at that time, about the United States.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Who was present at that time?

A. I was with Herbert and Mr. and Mrs. Haupt. It wasn't exactly the fall—somewhat later.

Q. Somewhat later during the year?

A. Yes.

Q. What was said, if anything was said at the time by Hans Haupt or by Mrs. Erna Haupt?

Mr. HURLEY. Wait a minute. I will object unless the place is fixed.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Where was that?

A. That, I believe, was at a dance or club Mr. Haupt belonged to gave; I don't know where it was.

Q. Well, was it in Chicago?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. What was the occasion of your being together?

1102 A. Well, Herbert and I had a date that evening to go to a dance and the folks were there.

Q. At some dance in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did Erna say?

Mr. HURLEY. I object; who was present?

By the COURT:

Q. Who was holding the dance; who gave the dance?

A. Well, some club; I don't know exactly what it was.

Q. Can't you tell us where it was?

A. I believe in the Germania Clubhouse; I am not certain.

Q. Who all were there; Mr. and Mrs. Haupt, Herbert Haupt and yourself?

A. Well, there were a lot of people there.

Q. Name some of them?

A. I can't name any.

Q. In your immediate company?

A. That was all; Herbert and I and his parents.

Mr. HURLEY. If the court please, at this time I would like to make a request outside the presence of the Jury, to find out what this line of testimony is.

The COURT. Step into the jury room, ladies and gentlemen.

1103 Mr. HURLEY. I also suggest at this time that the witness step outside of the courtroom.

The COURT. Step into the hallway, madam, outside the door.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the Jury and the witness:)

The COURT. What is the ground for your objection?

Mr. HURLEY. No relevancy showing the purpose of this line of proof at this time and I am certainly going to object to any testimony here in which Erna Haupt is in effect testifying for this defendant. That is one of the things I am going to object very strenuously, to testimony of that type.

The COURT. What do you intend to prove?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I intend to prove this, if the court please. It has been brought out heretofore that Erna Haupt went to Germany immediately prior to the outbreak of the war between Germany and Poland. It was brought out heretofore that Erna Haupt went to Germany as a member of a group of people who belonged to the German War Veterans organization. That point 1104 was brought out, for the purpose, as far as I can see, to show that the Haupts were un-American, and I want to show here, when she got back, after taking one of those tramp steamers in order to get back after the war had broken out, just about that time, she made the remark, "She was glad she was back in America," and that Hans Haupt was present, and there was nothing derogatory stated against the United States at the time. That is the purpose of my examining this witness along the line I have done just now.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, that is entirely irrelevant to the issues, giving his mental status and the condition of Haupt, his intention, not Haupt's wife. Assuming Haupt's wife is a perfect American, that wouldn't show Haupt himself was an American or un-American.

Mr. BERTRAM. That is quite to the contrary, to Mr. Woll's statement a while ago when you were trying to get in derogatory statements. Mr. Woll made the statements——

Mr. FINN. That is right, by the defendant himself, not by his wife.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. He was present at the time.

Mr. FINN. That wouldn't make any difference. The mere facts that she made those statements, and he was present.

1105 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It certainly shows he did not disagree with her.

Mr. FINN. I don't think so at all.

The COURT. How much of this do you have.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

The COURT. Have you any other witness, or only this one on that? I am inclined to let you show it, but I have a very grave doubt about its competency. I will let you show it.

Bring in the Jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court-room, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. Proceed.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mrs. Saure, at the time of this meeting with Hans Haupt and his wife, Erna Haupt, and Herbert Haupt and yourself were present at some dance, what was the conversation between yourself and Mrs. Haupt in the presence of Hans Haupt?

A. Well, I had known Erna Haupt had taken a trip to Germany. I asked her how she liked it out there, and how she enjoyed her trip, and she said she enjoyed her trip very much, inasmuch as she had a chance to see her folks, but she was very happy to be back in the United States.

Q. Did Hans Haupt say anything then?

1106 A. Well, he said, he made some remark, he said, "Well, there is no place like home, and we are certainly glad to have you back."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. You may cross-examine.

Mr. HURLEY. No. cross-examination.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, at this time, we would like to offer for the purpose of impeachment, the testimony of John Majerczak.

Mr. HURLEY. Wait just a minute. This is something that should be outside the presence of the Jury.

The COURT. Step in the jury room, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court-room outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

Mr. BERTRAM. I wish to offer the testimony of the witness who testified for the Government, at the present trial, John Majerczak. I wish to offer his testimony at the former trial before your Honor in the insanity hearing for the purpose of impeachment of his testimony at the present trial, given at the present trial. The testimony is about ten pages long, and it shows he did not testify concerning anything of the alleged conversation, which he 1107 gave in the present trial from the witness stand. It also shows that he stated that he did not hear any other conversations and he was asked general questions which would have permitted him to have testified to the conversations that he has now testified to at the present trial.

Mr. FINN. We will object to that, your Honor.

Mr. BERTRAM. And also shows he stated that he did not pay any attention to any of the other conversations other than those that he testified to at the insanity hearing.

The COURT. Let me see the testimony.

Mr. BERTRAM. It begins at page 226 and runs for ten pages.

The COURT. The question at the top of page 229 is:

"Question: At that time, did you have any conversation with Hans Haupt yourself, concerning sanity or insanity?

"Answer: Directly; no, sir.

"Question: Did you hear anyone have any conversation with Haupt?

"Answer: Yes, sir."

The COURT. I suppose I would infer——

Mr. BERTRAM. I want to offer the entire testimony of those ten pages.

1108 The COURT. If you will please listen to what I say.

Mr. BERTRAM. I am sorry.

The COURT. At the top of page 229 is this question or these questions:

"Question: At that time, did you have any conversation with Hans Haupt yourself concerning sanity or insanity?

"Answer: Directly; no, sir.

"Question: Did you hear anyone have any conversation about it?

"Answer: Yes, sir."

The COURT. Now, the natural inference would be that conversation was limited to sanity or insanity.

Are you offering the cross examination, too?

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes, your Honor; the entire ten pages.

Mr. FINN. There is nothing in the cross-examination I can find.

The COURT. The only thing it tends to impeach at all is this question and answer on redirect examination by Mr. Warnholtz:

"There were a number of conversations between Hamby
1109 and Hans Haupt; you paid no attention to that, is that right?

"Answer: Yes, sir."

Mr. WOLL. May I say this, if your Honor please, we must keep in mind we are talking there about sanity of the man, what he did, and what he heard, conversations with Hans Haupt and Hamby.

Of course, we asked questions and there were a number of other conversations.

The COURT. Where is the transcript; where have you laid a basis for this in the transcript?

Mr. BERTRAM. For impeachment, he was asked distinctly this, whether or not he had testified at the sanity trial and he said, "Yes, he had." Then he was asked——

The COURT. Let me see the transcript. Where is the place you find it? Where have you laid the foundation for that?

Mr. BERTRAM. I will find it, your Honor. This examination was quite extensive on the present trial.

The COURT. I want the place where you said to Mr. Majerczak, o whatever his name was, did you on the sanity hearing in this courtroom on or about a certain day, naming it, and in the presence of so and so and so and so, say this: that is the foundation for impeachment. Find that. We will take a short recess.

1110 Mr. BERTRAM. All right. Thank you.

The COURT. And the answer is, "Yes," "No," or "I don't remember."

(Thereupon a recess was had, and on the coming in of court after recess, the following proceedings were had in the courtroom, outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. I don't see your foundation. As a matter of fact, I wouldn't have allowed him to tell that in the sanity hearing.

Mr. BERTRAM. I ask, if the Court please, the court reporter mark these pages.

Mr. WOLL. I might say, if the court please, I avoided that particular thing. I didn't want that. I stayed away from asking anything about that.

The COURT. You didn't lay the proper foundation. Objection sustained. Aside from that, there isn't anything impeaching except possibly this one question mentioned.

Mr. BERTRAM. I beg to differ, if the court please, and I offer these pages in evidence, and I ask the reporter to mark them.

1111 The COURT. Which pages?

Mr. BERTRAM. I feel I would have to offer all the testimony.

The COURT. Of what? This paper he had?

Mr. BERTRAM. Of the insanity hearing; yes. May I have them marked, commencing with the beginning of the testimony of John Majerczak.

The COURT. Any objection?

Mr. FINN. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT Objection sustained.

Mr. BERTRAM. Beginning on page 226 to the end of his testimony on to the end of the page 236, will you mark those eleven pages, Mr. Reporter, or may I read them in the record right now. I am willing to do it either way, whichever is proper.

The COURT. Well, I suppose you will be taking that up, won't you?

Mr. BERTRAM. Probably.

The COURT. Then you will have to take the insanity matter up, won't you?

Mr. BERTRAM. I don't know, your Honor. I merely want to get the present record of this trial.

The COURT. You offer part of so and so of that transcript. You don't need to copy it over again. You both have a copy of it.

1112 Mr. BERTRAM. We don't need to read it in the record then.

Then mark the pages beginning with 226 and ending at page 236.

The COURT. That isn't the way. You couldn't put it in that way except by agreement.

Mr. BERTRAM. I will be very glad to read it into the record now.

Mr. FINN. We won't agree to that.

The COURT. You are not going to get into this record those pages.

Mr. BERTRAM. Just mark the pages, please.

The COURT. There is an objection, and I sustain the objection.

Mr. BERTRAM. Well, mark the pages.

The COURT. Those are not marked as exhibits in this case.

Mr. BERTRAM. I understand that.

The COURT. You offered certain pages of the record and I sustained the objection. You are not going to have them marked again. If you take it up, then is the time to put it in your record.

Mr. BERTRAM. It is understood I can put them into the record later.

1113 The COURT. If you don't take up the other record.

Mr. BERTRAM. I don't want to make a mistake, your Honor.

The COURT. Bring in the Jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court-room in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. Proceed.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, at this time, I would like to offer in evidence certain official documents under seal of the Secretary of the State of Illinois, the first one is marked Certificate No. 41249, which I will ask the court reporter to mark as "Defendant's Exhibit 8" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested "Defendant's Exhibit 8" for identification.)

Mr. BERTRAM. Another document, which bears certificate No. 41250, which I will ask be marked "Defendant's Exhibit 9" for identification.)

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested "Defendant's Exhibit 9" for identification.)

Mr. BERTRAM. Another document, which bears Certifi-
1114 cate No. 41231, which I will ask you to mark "Defendant's Exhibit 10" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Defendant's Exhibit 10," for identification.)

Mr. BERTRAM. I may state to the court that these are official records of the Secretary of State, under the great seal of the Secretary of the State of Illinois, concerning two automobiles that had been referred to by various witnesses in the present case, and I offer them in evidence under Title 20-A, Judicial Code, Section 688.

Mr. HURLEY. The only objection we make, they are offered as certified copies of the record in the office of the Secretary of State; however, we don't want to admit the statements contained various applications filed with the Secretary of State are the truth.

The COURT. What is the purpose of your offer?

Mr. BERTRAM. To show the type of the various—of the two automobiles concerned therein. They show the names and addresses of the owners, and they show the transfers of them. I think it is very material in this case on the evidence the prosecution offered with respect to the automobiles.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The automobile, which the Government claims he bought for the purpose of allowing Herbert to 1115 transport dynamite and TNT was, in fact, bought by his father to replace the automobile Herbert had left behind which was somewhat new when Herbert left Chicago, which thereafter was taken by the father and used by him.

The COURT. They may be received.

(Thereupon the documents so offered in evidence were marked and received in evidence as "Defendant's Exhibits 8, 9, and 10," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1116 Mr. BERTRAM. At this time, if your Honor please, I would like to read papers, perhaps certain parts and portions, not every word in the exhibit.

Defendant's Exhibit 8, received in evidence, is a certificate No. 41249, concerning the title and transfers of an Oldsmobile automobile.

The second is a photostat page of part of that exhibit and shows the name of Hans Haupt; Post Office address, 4444 North Western Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; name of car, Oldsmobile.

On April 7, 1939, application was made to the Secretary of State for a certificate of title upon the question—I acquired the above car and it says new, and then blank—then it says, I think it is crossed out—in other words, a cross is opposite the words "used car."

On April 7, 1939, from Norman C. Town, Incorporated, 5137 Broadway, Chicago, Illinois. Style of body, two-door TR. Year built—1936.

The next photostatic document which has a heading, "Certificate of Title of a Motor Vehicle," shows the name of Hans Haupt; Post Office address, 4444 North Western Avenue, Chicago. Name of car, Oldsmobile. Factory No. 138934. Style of body, 1117 two-door, TR. Year built, 1936. Signature of owner, Hans Haupt. It bears the date of issuance on April 24, 1939. And that is the certificate of title here, a photostatic copy thereof from the Secretary of State.

The next photostatic copy, part of that exhibit, from which I will read on the reverse side thereof, is that of July 28th, 1941: For value received, I hereby sell and assign to H. J. Heide, 300 Scottswood Road, Riverside, Illinois. Kind of car as shown on the front of that certificate, Oldsmobile sedan, No. 138934, two-door, built in 1934. Signature of owner, Hans Haupt. And the date, July 28, 1941.

Now, on the next exhibit—that last exhibit was 9, or Defendant's Exhibit 8, and the next exhibit, rather, is Defendant's Exhibit 9, bearing certificate No. 4150, and shows the name H. J. Heide, 300 Scottswood Road, Riverside, Illinois; name of car—this is an application for a certificate of title.

1118 Name of car, Oldsmobile. Style of body, two door. Year built, 1936. Factory number, 138934. Signature of owner, H. J. Heidi. Date of application of certificate of title, July 28, 1941. Requesting the issuance of a new certificate of title to H. J. Heidi.

The application shows, "I acquired the above car, used car, on July 28, 1941, from Hans Haupt, whose address is 2234 North Fremont, Chicago, Illinois," and subscribed and sworn to on July 28, 1941.

The next document attached to that exhibit is the certificate of title issued by the Secretary of State of Illinois to H. J. Heidi of 3 Scottswood Road, Riverside, Illinois, for the same automobile, Oldsmobile; and year built, 1936; and factory number, 138934; bears signature of H. J. Heidi, and it was issued by the Secretary of State on August 1, 1941.

The next document which is in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 10, regarding the Plymouth Sedan automobile, shows that application for certificate of title was made in the name of Herbert Haupt. It shows the name of Herbert Haupt and the address 1240 Hohlfelder Road, Glencoe, Illinois; name of car, Plymouth; style of body, sedan; year built, 1941; year acquired the above 1119 car new shows a cross mark opposite new on November 8, 1940, from Deware Motors, Inc.; address, 6959 N. Western Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; and subscribed and sworn to November 8, 1940.

Then, the next document is certificate of title. That is the last photostat in the exhibit. The certificate of title to motor vehicle, name, Herbert Haupt, and 1240, address 1240 Hohlfelder Road, Glencoe, Illinois; name of car, Plymouth sedan. Year built, 1941. Signature, Herbert Haupt. Issued——

Mr. FINN. What was the date of it?

MR. BERTRAM. November 20, 1940, by the Secretary of the State of Illinois, which is a certificate of title.

The next document attached to this exhibit is application for corrected certificates and shows that on January 5, 1942, Hans Haupt made application to the Secretary of State for certificate of title on this same Plymouth automobile.

And then the last document shows the certificate of title under date of February 21, 1942 to Hans Haupt by the Secretary of State of Illinois, address 2234 Fremont Street, to the same Plymouth automobile.

Mr. FINN. May I see those, please?

1120 The COURT. Gentlemen, the judges of this District Court have called a meeting for this hour and I will accordingly have to ask you to return at 2:00 o'clock.

How much time do you think you want?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would judge, Judge, not to exceed two and a half hours, and possibly two hours only. That depends upon the cross-examination, your Honor.

The COURT. All right, I am going to ask you to come back at 2:30. I shall have to make a grand jury call, which will take about half an hour. Do not come back until 2:30.

We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen until 2:30. Return here at 2:30 this afternoon.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to the afternoon of the same day, Monday, June 5, A. D. 1944, at the hour of 2:30 o'clock P. M.)

1121 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago

1122 The COURT: Bring in the Jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. Proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Commissioner Walker.

EDWIN K. WALKER, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Will you kindly state your name, sir?

A. Edwin K. Walker.

Q. You are the United States Commissioner for this District, Commissioner?

A. I am.

Q. You appear here today pursuant to a subpoena duces tecum served upon you?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you brought with you the papers mentioned in the subpoena duces tecum?

A. I have.

1123 Q. May I see that, please? These papers are the official records of your office?

A. They are.

Q. And were prepared under your supervision and jurisdiction?

A. Yes.

Q. I call your attention to this paper, which I will ask to have marked "Defendant's Exhibit 11" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Defendant's Exhibit 11," for identification.)

Q. (Continuing.) And will ask if the signature appearing at the bottom of this is your signature?

A. It is.

Q. And this is a warrant which was issued by you, Commissioner?

A. Yes; it is.

Q. Against Hans Max Haupt?

A. Yes.

Q. And this warrant was issued pursuant to a complaint which I now hand you, which I ask that it be marked "Defendant's Exhibit 12" for identification.

(Thereupon the document was marked as requested, "Defendant's Exhibit 12," for identification.)

1124 Q. (Continuing.) Is this the complaint pursuant to which that warrant for the arrest of Hans Max Haupt was issued, Commissioner?

A. It is; yes.

Q. I now hand back to you, Commissioner, your docket in this case, and will ask you whether or not it shows when this warrant was returned?

A. The warrant was returned on the 28th day of July 1942 It had been issued on July 17, 1942.

Q. The arrest was made on July 17th?

Mr. FINN. We can't hear you back here at all.

The WITNESS. Well, let me see that. Well, the defendant was brought before me on July 21, the warrant having been issued on the complaint filed July 17th.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. In the year 1942, is that correct?

A. In the year 1942.

Q. And it was returned, the warrant was returned on what date?

A. The 28th day of July 1942.

Q. 1942?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do your records indicate when the first arrest of this prisoner was had before you?

A. It does.

Q. And when was that date?

A. July 21.

Q. What happened at that proceeding?

A. At that proceeding, the defendant, Hans Haupt was brought before me, and was arraigned by the reading of the warrant to him, and he entered a plea of Not Guilty, and the Government was not ready to proceed and the hearing was set for August 5, 1942, at 2 P. M.

Q. Does your record, Mr. Commissioner, show whether or not on that first arraignment, the defendant was represented by counsel?

A. Yes; it showed he was not represented by counsel. My entry on that, in my handwriting is, just the defendant in person. He had no attorney at the hearing.

Q. On the date, August 5, the date to which the first arraignment was continued, does it show whether or not the defendant at that time was represented by counsel?

A. It does, yes. It shows that he was represented at that hearing by one Ben Short.

Q. And then does your record indicate when this matter was finally disposed of as far as your office was concerned, Mr. Commissioner?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that date; what was the disposition thereof?

A. September 7, 1942.

Q. Does your record indicate as to the charge that was brought against the defendant in the original complaint?

A. Yes; it is incorporated in the complaint here and in the warrant. Do you want that?

Q. Have you got the statute and title of the section and the code?

A. There is referred here, and it is mentioned by reference of the phraseology in the complaint where there is a violation of Section 551, Title 18, United States Code.

The Court. What is the materiality of this?

Mr. Warnholtz. I beg your pardon?

The Court. What is the materiality of this?

Mr. Warnholtz. To show arraignment was not had until July [illegible]. That the defendant at that time was not represented by counsel. That, however, on the continuance to August 5, the defendant was represented by counsel, and that he at that time was brought in——

Mr. Bergeram. July 21 instead of the 17th, Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. Warnholtz. July 21.

The Court. It is immaterial to the issues now before this court and jury.

1127 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, we wish to show that he wasn't arraigned until a certain date.

The COURT. I say, what is the materiality?

Mr. BERTRAM. There was considerable testimony about the date, August 5, your Honor will remember.

The COURT. What was the testimony about August 5th?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There were two agents from the Federal Bureau of Investigation who testified as to a conversation on that date, and the defendant was represented by counsel when these statements were obtained from the defendant.

The COURT. Oh, I see what you are talking about now.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I believe we can dispose of reading the defendant's Exhibit Nos. 11 and 12 into the record.

The COURT. They are offered in evidence and received and the reading is waived by either side, but you may have leave to refer to them.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. The arraignment on which you say took place on what day, Commissioner?

A. July 21.

Q. July 21, 1942?

A. 1942; yes.

1128 By the COURT:

Q. In whose custody was the defendant at that time?

A. He was in the custody of the Marshal pursuant to a warrant that had been issued on July 17.

Q. And he continued in the custody of the Marshal?

A. Yes, continued in the custody of the Marshal until final disposition of the case before me on September 8th.

The COURT. Anything further?

Mr. WOLL. Just one question, if your Honor please.

Q. You said the arraignment was continued until some time in August, did you?

A. No. The arraignment——

Q. The arraignment was had when?

A. The arraignment—the reading of the charge to him, and calling upon him to plead——

Q. That was continued for a hearing after arraignment?

A. That was continued for a hearing.

Q. What time did you set that hearing for?

A. Well, on July 1st, when he was first brought before me, it was postponed to August 5th, and on August 5, the Government was not ready to proceed, then it was continued to August 26th.

Q. What time was it continued to on August 5th?

A. 2 P. M., and from that date continued to September 8th.

Mr. Woll. Commissioner, I think you referred to July 1st or August 1st, did you make a mistake when you mentioned August 1st or something.

The Witness. No date of August 1st is involved. He was brought before me on complaint filed and warrant issued on July 17, brought before me July 21st, at which time a motion by the Government, it was postponed to August 5th, and on August 5th, again it was postponed to August 26th, and on August the 26th, it was continued to September 8.

The Court. When was the arraignment, what date?

A. The arraignment was July 21, 1942.

Mr. Woll. That is all.

Mr. Warnholtz. No redirect examination. Mr. Short.

Benedict J. Short, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Warnholtz:

Q. Will you kindly state your name?

A. Benedict J. Short.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Short?

A. 2552 North Kedzie Boulevard.

Q. In the City of Chicago?

A. In the City of Chicago.

Q. How long have you lived in the City of Chicago?

A. Over sixty odd years; I don't recollect.

Q. Will you talk a little louder, please. It is rather hard to hear.

The Witness. I beg your pardon.

Q. What is your business or profession?

A. I am an attorney-at-law.

Q. You are engaged in the practice of law?

A. I am.

Q. Here in the City of Chicago?

A. In Chicago.

Q. How long have you been so engaged in the practice of law?

A. Fifty-four years.

Q. How many years?

A. Fifty-four.

Q. Fifty-four years in Chicago?

A. In Chicago.

Q. Mr. Short, do you know the defendant Hans Max Haupt?

A. I know him; yes; to speak to him. Know who he is, and talk to him.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom now?

A. I don't think I could identify him.

1131 Q. You couldn't indentify him, you say?

A. I don't think I could out of all these gentlemen here I don't know whether I could or not.

Q. When and where did you see or meet Hans Max Haupt first?

A. In July 1929, I think, or 1939, with you.

Q. I call your attention to July the 29th, in the year 1942, and will ask you if on that day you had a conversation with Hans Max Haupt?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. And where was that, Mr. Short?

A. County Jail.

Q. Cook County Jail?

A. Cook County Jail; yes, sir.

Q. And where within the County Jail did you see Hans Max Haupt at that time?

A. Well, at that time he was in the hospital. At that time he was ill and he wouldn't come out of his cell, and I had to go to his cell to meet the defendant, to get him out of there, and he refused to come out.

Q. Who was present at the time?

A. You were.

Q. I was with you at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember a conversation which you had with 1132 the Desk Clerk when we first arrived at the County Jail?

A. Some of it I do.

Mr. WOLL. I object to a conversation with a Desk Clerk, if your Honor please.

The COURT. He answered your question, he said, part of it.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. What was that conversation?

Mr. WOLL. Was it a conversation, if your Honor please?

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Did you have a conversation with Hans Max Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. And who was present at that time?

A. You were.

Q. On that particular day, on the 29th day of July 1942?

A. That is the day; yes.

Q. What do you remember that occurred during that conversation and what was said?

Mr. WOLL. I object.

The WITNESS. I beg your pardon. I don't understand you.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would like to know the grounds of your objection.

1133 The COURT. Step in the jury room, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. Maybe, counsel, we better step in the court's chambers.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court's chambers, outside the presence and hearing of the Jury and the witness.)

The COURT. What do you propose to show by Mr. Short?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I propose to show that Hans Max Haupt on the 29th day of July 1942, according to a layman's opinion of Mr. Short, was insane. And I would testify to the same effect if I were not the attorney of record.

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, this man, this defendant had been arraigned by that time. He was charged with a criminal offense. He had an attorney, Mr. Warnholtz, who was present at the time. The conversation there was entirely under a situation which we could naturally state would be one of a self-serving nature, because of the fact that conversation had with his 1134 attorney, while the man is charged with a crime, and he was in the County Jail, and he talked about his case and other things he told his attorney.

The COURT. What date is this now?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. July 29th, 1942, which was within three or four days of the time when Mr. Majerczak claimed he related to them the entire story of Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WOLL. Now, I might say this also, if the court please: Mr. Short was associated with Mr. Warnholtz in the trial of the first case. The date necessarily, of course, brings out the fact he was associated with the trial of the case, and he makes no intimation to the court on the first trial that, in his opinion, this man was insane.

The COURT. I don't care about that.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is not true.

Mr. WOLL. Well, I will ask him questions anyhow.

The COURT. When were these conversations with Majerczak, or what do you call him; Hamby?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I believe they stated, your Honor, they were held four days after they came to Tier H-4—they came to H-4 on July 21 or on July 22—there was a slight conflict between

1135 the testimony of the two witnesses, as I recall it; that would fix the date of this conversation, which they claim they had, Hamby had with Mr. Haupt, either July 25th, or July 26th, 1942.

The COURT. Well, I guess it is admissible. How much of this did you expect to have?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Very little. Just this one witness.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, the question as they put to this witness, to state the conversations you had; they may be of a very self-serving nature. The witness might possibly state he did have conversations and he formed an opinion as to the mental status, and certainly he has no right——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The objection can be made and the grounds stated when the objection is made.

The COURT. I think he may say he had a conversation, how long it lasted, and as to whether generally he talked about them. Then you should prove what he did do and lay a foundation as to his observation, on which——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And his opinion.

Mr. WOLL. I don't want to have the situation come in testimony that he is innocent of this charge, and all this stuff going through a great rigamarol'——

1136 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mr. Short will not say that. He is a lawyer.

Mr. WOLL. I don't know what Mr. Short is going to say. I think from Mr.——

The COURT. I think your question is too broad.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. As to the conversation, I believe, your Honor, it is too broad, and I will restrict it more as to what he observed, and how long the conversation lasted, and if during that time he formed an opinion as to whether or not this man was sane or insane.

The COURT. I think I will let you do that. Bring in the Jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court-room in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Short, will you kindly state about how long the conversation lasted between yourself and Mr. Haupt and Mr Haupt and myself, on the 29th day of July 1942, in the Cook County Jail—approximately how long?

A. I would say it was about one session of the jail, maybe a couple of hours.

Q. Did you during that time form an opinion based on 1137 your observation at that time, as to whether or not Hans Haupt was sane or insane?

A. At that time I was positive he was insane, the way he acted and talked.

Q. That was your opinion?

A. At that time.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

The WITNESS. Thank you.

Cross-examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. Mr. Short, you are associated in the defense of Hans Haupt, or were at the first trial, were you not?

A. At the first trial, I was associated with Mr. Warnholtz.

Q. Were you an attorney of record on that first trial?

A. I am not certain that I was. I usually do file an appearance.

Q. But you did participate in the trial?

A. Yes; I participated in it; sure.

Q. And you examined witnesses also?

A. And examined witnesses and made an argument to the Jury.

Q. Mr. Short, did you file any petition in court asking that Hans Haupt's sanity be adjudicated?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object, if your Honor please.

The COURT. Overruled.

1138 Mr. SHORT. I don't think I did.

By Mr. WOLL:

Q. Did you at the time of the trial file any motion before the presiding judge, asking that an inquiry be made as to the sanity of Hans Haupt?

A. Mr. Warnholtz took care of all that. I don't think I did.

Q. Do you know whether any such petition was filed?

A. No; I don't. It was one case I bowed to him.

Q. Your best recollection is no petition was filed?

A. My best recollection.

Q. But you assisted Mr. Warnholtz in the trial of the case?

A. That is all.

Q. Mr. Short, without going through the conversation—I don't want you to do that—can you remember whether or not the conversation you had at that time was mostly in German?

A. No; I don't speak German. Mr. Warnholtz and Mr. Haupt talked in German, sure; yes.

Q. And what portion of that conversation, the time of that conversation, was devoted to talking in German?

A. Well, it is a long time, Brother, I don't recollect exactly. It was quite a bit, because Mr. Warnholtz talked in German 1139 and Mr. Haupt talked in German. All I could do was sit there most of the time.

Q. Of course, all the talking in German, you didn't understand that, did you?

A. No; I didn't know what they were saying.

Q. You don't recognize this man now, do you?

A. No, I imagine, of course, from my experience, he is over there on that side of the table.

Q. You imagine that?

A. If I met him out in the hall, I wouldn't know him.

Mr. WOLL. I thing that is all, Mr. Short.

The WITNESS. Thank you.

Redirect examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Short, you saw Mr. Haupt for three weeks every day in court, did you not?

A. Yes. If it was three weeks the trial lasted, I did.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes. That is all. Thank you.

The WITNESS. Thank you.

1140 HUGO EMIL TROESKEN, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. Hugo Emil Troesken.

The COURT. What is it?

The WITNESS. Hugo Emil Troesken.

Q. How do you spell it?

A. T-r-o-e-s-k-e-n.

Q How do you spell your first name?

A. H-u-g-o.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Troesken, will you kindly speak up loudly so that the Jury can hear you?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are you living at the present time?

A. Bismarck, North Dakota.

Q. Well, in Bismarck, North Dakota, in what particular place are you living in?

A. Fort Lincoln.

Q. Well, is that your home, or what?

A. That is in the Internment Camp.

Q. An Internment Camp; an Alien Internment Camp?

1141 A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are an alien, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Troesken, do you know the defendant Hans Max Haupt?

A. I do.

Q. Can you point him out?

A. The gentleman sitting over there [indicating].

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If the record will indicate that the witness has pointed out the defendant in the courtroom.

Q. Were you also acquainted with his son, Herbert Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first see Herbert Haupt?

A. I believe it was sometime in 1940.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Speak a little louder, please.

The WITNESS. I believe it was in 1940.

Q. Where was that?

A. In the Germania Clubhouse.

Q. Do you remember the occasion in the Germania Clubhouse?

A. I am not positive, I believe a dance by some singing organization. The name of the organization I do not know.

Q. When did you first see Hans Max Haupt, as far as you remember?

A. I believe it was in June 1941.

Q. Do you know the exact date?

A. I believe that was the last—it was in June 1942.

Q. In June 1942?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. At his home.

Q. What was the occasion of your meeting at his home?

A. It was the day before Herbert left for Mexico.

Q. The day what?

A. Before Herbert left for Mexico.

Q. Do you now wish to correct the statement as to the year it was, in 1941 or 1942?

A. Must have been 1941; my mistake.

Q. Did you at that time also meet Herbert's mother, Erna Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. What happened at that time at that meeting?

A. Why, we just discussed a few things.

Q. Who is "we"?

A. Herbert, myself, and his father and mother. I believe there was someone else present; who he was, I don't know.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Speak distinctly, please.

The WITNESS. There was Mr. Haupt, myself, Herbert Haupt, Mrs. Haupt and one other person whom I do not remember. We discussed certain things about South America; things we would have to watch out for in Mexico and South America pertaining to disease, and food and water we would probably eat and drink, and things we should see down there, and the type of work we may be able to find, and, well, it is hard to say.

Q. When you say, "we", whom do you refer to?

A. To all of us. Herbert, Wolfgang Wergin and I.

Q. Herbert, Wolfgang Wergin and you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Relative to what were you supposed to see these things or watch them?

A. Well, it was a planned trip for a vacation, and we were to work our way. That was the idea there, we would work our way down there probably and find jobs down there.

Q. Where, down there?

A. Well, Mexico, South America, or Central America.

Q. And you had such a conversation that evening in June 1941, in the home of Hans Haupt?

A. That is right.

Q. In the presence of Herbert Haupt, Hans Haupt and Erna Haupt, and a person now not known to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After that, what happened, where did you stay 1174 that night?

A. I stayed in the house that night.

Q. Is that the first time you had ever been in their house?

A. Yes.

Q. What happened next morning?

A. Well, we got up, ate breakfast, and after breakfast Mr. Haupt said, "Good-bye" to his son and went to work.

Q. By Mr. Haupt, you mean the defendant here?

A. Mr. Max Haupt; yes. Shortly after that Wolfgang Wergin came with his automobile and we took our luggage downstairs and he said, "Good bye" to his mother.

Q. Who is "he"; who is "we"? "We went down"; who is "we"?

A. Herbert and I.

Q. Herbert and you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Went downstairs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was downstairs?

A. I believe his mother was downstairs, that is, she went down with us.

Q. What caused you to go down?

A. To go to the car to leave.

Q. Whose car?

A. Wolfgang Wergin.

Q. And how did you know he was here?

A. He blew his horn, and we looked out the window and saw his automobile running.

1145 Q. And then Herbert and you and Herbert's mother went downstairs?

A. That is right.

Q. What did you take with you, if anything?

A. Now, let me see. We had, I believe, one suitcase. I believe we took some provisions along, bread and some canned fruit and vegetables that we intended to cook on the way down. We were camping out.

Q. You stowed that away in the car?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you take anything else for camping with you along?

A. Oh, yes; blankets.

Q. What?

A. Blankets.

Q. Blankets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present at the time when you left; that was in front of the house located where?

A. The location I do not know. I know it was Mr. Hans Haupt's home.

Q. And who was present when the car left?

A. Just Mrs. Haupt.

Q. And who was in the car when the car left?

A. Herbert, Wolfgang and I.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. Well, we drove a few blocks further, and we had 1146 a little tire trouble.

Q. Whose car was it, if you know?

A. Wolfgang Wergin.

Q. What kind of a car was it?

A. I believe a 1934 Chevrolet.

Q. All right. You had tire trouble; then what?

A. Well, I had taken some tools along in case I should find a job.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am an automobile body and fender man.

Q. An automobile what?

A. Body and fender man.

Q. All right. Then what did you do?

A. Well, I found the sparkplugs foul and I had them taken out and cleaned.

Q. Then what?

A. We drove, I believe, to Highway 66, and started on our way.

Q. Now, before you left, the evening before, when you had this conversation, the conversation was had between yourself and Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and Herbert Haupt, was there anything stated by Mr. and Mrs. Haupt regarding money and hospitals, and coming back, et cetera.

Mr. HURLEY. I object to the leading form of the question.

The COURT. Sustained.

1147 By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Do you remember what else was stated in addition to that, what you already told us in that conversation the evening before you left?

A. Well, we were told if we got into any difficulties to write home and send for additional money to be used for any difficulties that came up in regard to hospitalization or sickness, and also to watch out for tropical diseases. I can remember distinctly Mr. Haupt telling us about that.

Q. Is that all?

A. I believe that is just about all. That covers it.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I asked you whether or not there was a conversation regarding the sending of money by the parents of Herbert, so that Herbert may come back in case of accident or injury or ill-health?

A. Yes; there was.

Q. What was that?

A. Well, all of us had a certain amount of money on our person, see, each one of us left a certain amount home to be sent to us——

Mr. FINN. Just a moment. I think he is reciting a conversation. I think his answer is not responsive to the question.

The COURT. Well, it is preliminary. What was said?

1148 The WITNESS. As I said, we had a certain amount of money with us. We left a certain amount of money at home, with each one of our parents, to be sent us in case of any accident or sickness, et cetera, in case of this, so that we could return.

Mr. FINN. I object to that and ask that the answer be stricken on the same ground.

The COURT. Well, let it stand.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Now, when you come to Highway—what number was it?

The COURT. 66.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. 66; what did you do then?

A. We drove, I think, I believe we stopped just on this side of St. Louis.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes.

The WITNESS. We camped for the night and slept in the automobile, and cooked our own meals.

Q. And the next day?

A. We ate breakfast in the restaurant and drove as far as—some place, just this side of Miami, Oklahoma.

Q. Yes; from that?

A. From there on, I believe, we went to Dallas, Texas, and from Dallas, Texas, we went to San Antonio, and from San Antonio to Lorado, Texas.

Q. And then what did you do?

1149 A. Well, we tried to enjoy ourselves as much as we could.

Q. What did you do?

A. We discussed the friends we were leaving behind—mainly, our girl friends. I would say our folks, too. We also discussed things we would likely see on the way down to the different places that we may visit, and the trouble, of course, we may be able to find, and, oh, it is hard to recall everything.

Q. What, if any, conversation did you have concerning what would be your destination?

Mr. FINN. I object to that, if your Honor please.

A. We had no destination in mind.

1150 By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Now, when you got to Laredo, Texas——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Strike that out, will you please?

Q. What happened there?

A. Well, we stopped at a restaurant and had dinner and went—went over to a bridge which is a stopping place for the border patrol. In other words you have to stop there to prove—show credentials to cross—we were questioned there.

Q. A bridge over what river?

A. The name of the bridge I am not acquainted with.

Q. What river?

A. Rio Grande.

Q. That was the border, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Between Mexico and United States?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what happened at that bridge?

A. We were questioned whether or not we were American citizens, and if so, to prove credentials, to show it was, and Herbert and Wolfgang were able to do it. Being an alien, not able to cross, I was not able to show credentials. They were citizens and I was not a citizen. They took me to the station. I filled 1151 out some kind of a paper. I do not know what it was, and they told me I could not go across.

I said, "Good-bye" to the boys and they said, "We will take you to the hotel"; so they took me over to the hotel and from the hotel went down to the river with them again—the Rio Grande—and I watched them cross.

Q. Did they drive across the bridge with their automobile?

A. Yes, sir; they did.

Q. Did you see any of them swim the Rio Grande to get over there?

A. No, sir; there was no one done any swimming.

Q. No automobile was dumped into the Rio Grande, either?

A. No, sir.

Q. As far as Herbert Haupt and Wolfgang Wergin were concerned, they were permitted to cross the bridge by the authorities?

A. They were.

Q. Was any discussion had, or had any discussion been had as to what you were to do upon arriving in Mexico?

Mr. HURLEY. I object to that, if the Court please. He answered it once or twice before.

1152 The COURT. Well, let him answer it again.

A. Will you repeat that question?

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Was there any discussion had between you and the other two boys as to what you would do when you arrived in Mexico?

A. Well, we had some intention of visiting Mexico City where I had occasion to get in touch with the German consul, to see if I would need any papers to work as a seaman either on a fruit boat or an oil boat, so I could continue my trip into South America. Whether this was my idea or somebody else's idea I am not sure, but I believe it was mine.

Q. And when Wolfgang Wergin and Herbert Haupt drove across the Rio Grande that was the last time you have ever seen them, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Mr. Troestkin, you said you believed it was your idea to contact the German Consul——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't that also Herbert Haupt's idea to contact the German Consul?

1153 A. I really would not know. After all I was an alien and Herbert was a citizen. I had no idea why he should see the consul.

Q. Do you recollect testifying before the grand jury?

A. I do.

Q. In the year 1942?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe it was a Thursday, August 27th, that day, do you recollect whether these questions were asked you and whether you made these answers, in speaking of Herbert Haupt:

"Q. How much money did you want to raise?

"A: He said I would have to have at least $100."

Do you recollect Herbert Haupt——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment. I object to reading from the grand jury proceedings at this time. The point is one that is not material in evidence.

The COURT. I do not know. He is laying the ground for impeachment. I guess he has a right to. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. It is a series of questions, your Honor, and I want to identify them.

1154 Q. "Q. Was he sort of organizing this expedition?

"A. I would not say he was organizing, because he had not invited anybody.

"Q. Did he tell you he was going away at that time?

"A. Yes. He told me Wolfgang was going along.

"Q. What did he tell you as to their plans—where they were going?

"A. Where?

"Q. Where they were going?

"A. He had planned to go down to Mexico, across the border, and maybe he was going to contact the German consul.

"Q. He was going to contact the German consul?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Where?

"A. In Mexico City, to see if he needed any papers to go further."

Do you recollect this questions being asked you?

A. I did, sir.

Q. And making those answers at that time?

A. Yes, sir; but I believe I said I was doubtful as to that.

1155 Q. In doubt?

A. Yes, in doubt.

Q. Did you not say at that time that Herbert Haupt planned on contacting the German consul to see if he could get papers to go any further?

A. I might have made a statement to that effect; yes.

Mr. FINN. All right. That is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No further examination.

The COURT. Step down.

(Witness excused.)

ERNA HAUPT, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Will you kindly state your name, Mrs. Haupt?

A. Erna Haupt.

Q. You are married to Hans Max Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. The defendant?
A. Yes, sir; I am.
Q. Do you see him now in the courtroom?
A. Yes.
Q. Speak a little louder if you will, kindly. Are you familiar with the signature of your husband?
1156 A. Yes, I am.
Q. You have often seen him sign his name?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. I will show you now Defendant's Exhibit 6, so marked for identification, and showing you the reverse side and the signature of "Hans Haupt," I will ask you if that is your husband's signature?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Mrs. Haupt, in what month of the year were you born?
A. The 29th of June 1899.
Q. In June, on the 29th day?
A. Yes.
Q. State if you remember on what day of the week the 29th of June fell in the year 1942?
A. On a Monday.
Q. Were there any children born as the result of your marriage with Hans Haupt?
A. Yes; one son.
Q. What is that?
A. Yes; one son.
Q. What is his name?
A. Herbert.
Q. If he were now living what would be his age?
A. 24.
Q. When and where did you last see him?
A. Washington, D. C., at the trial.
1157 Q. When was that, about?
A. The 23rd of July.
Q. Of what year?
A. 1943.
Q. Did you say 1943? It was 1942, was it not?
A. Yes; I want to correct it—1942.
Q. You saw him there at the military trial?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you testify?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Where have you been living since that time?
A. At the County Jail.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether your son, Herbert Haupt, is now living or dead?

A. I believe he is not living any more.

Q. State what, if any, official knowledge you have that he is not living any more?

A. My husband gave me once a letter which was addressed to him at the County Jail, and it was written by the chaplain that he saw my son to the last.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Will you mark this "Defendant's Exhibit 13" for identification.

(Said document was thereupon marked "Defendant's Exhibit 13" for identification.)

Q. Is this the letter you now spoke about?

A. Yes, it is.

1158 Q. Did your husband tell you where he got the letter from?

A. He told me it was mailed to him.

Q. Had you at any other time tried to obtain any information as to official information, as to whether or not your son is dead or alive?

Mr. FINN. I will object to that, your Honor.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I offer this letter in evidence, if the Court please.

Mr. FINN. We will object to the letter, your Honor.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. On what ground? I have to prove the death of Herbert Haupt. That is the purpose.

Mr. FINN. We will agree to the death of Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I do not have to take your admission or agreement any more than you have to take my admission.

Mr. FINN. But it goes into other matters besides the question of the death of the son.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It has a bearing on the matter of hearsay evidence, and so forth.

The COURT. You are offering this to what?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. For the purpose of proving the death of Herbert Haupt.

Mr. FINN. Well, it is obvious——

1159 The COURT. What materiality would it be?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The materiality is this: That it makes much evidence inadmissible that has been introduced heretofore, whether or not he is living or dead.

The COURT. It is not the best evidence. Objection sustained. If the question is material that is not the best evidence. Objection sustained.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I state to the Court that I have three separate times tried to obtain death certificates, but the military authorities refused them and they will allow no information as to the death of Herbert Haupt.

Mr. FINN. I will object to the remarks of counsel in the presence of the jury.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. FINN. And I ask the jury be instructed to disregard it. We are willing to stipulate to the entire fact, that Herbert Haupt died on such and such a day—whichever date he says, Herbert Haupt died, and that is all that is necessary. This is entirely prejudicial.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You may cross-examine.

Mr. FINN. No cross-examination.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There was one more question, if the 1160 Court please.

Q. What, if any steps have you taken, Mrs. Haupt, to ascertain officially the facts regarding the life or death of your son?

Mr. FINN. Objection, your Honor.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all, your Honor.

The COURT. You may step down.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. At this time, if the Court please, I wish to offer in evidence a subpoena card served on Mr. Eggert, heretofore marked "Defendant's Exhibit 3" for identification.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Whereupon said document, marked Defendant's Exhibit 3," was received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 3 and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1161 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. A like card served on Gustav Zermer, heretofore marked "Defendant's Exhibit 1" for identification.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Whereupon said document marked "Defendant's Exhibit 1." was received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 4 and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1162 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I ask that these identification marks be stricken and they stand as to the same exhibit numbers.

I offer a sketch made by Gustav Zermer as to the diagram of the home or residence of Haupt, heretofore identified as Exhibit 2 of the defendant, showing where Zermer marked with a "K" by Zermer, and showing where he was seated at the time.

The COURT. It may be received.

(Whereupon said document, marked "Defendant's Exhibit 2."

was received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 2 and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1163 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I ask that the identification marks be stricken out and then I offer in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 6 for identification, being the check——

The COURT. It may be received.

(Whereupon said document, marked "Defendant's Exhibit 6," was received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 6 and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1164 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I ask that the identification numbers on Exhibits 8, 9, and 10 be taken off and that they be received as——

The COURT. They may be received.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Of like numbers.

(Whereupon said documents marked "Defendant's Exhibits 8, 9, and 10," were received in evidence as "Defendant's Exhibits 8, 9, and 10," and are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1165 Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, I would like to offer in evidence the Illinois statutes State Bar Association Edition, 1943 Edition, Section 4, and Division 2, Chapter 38 of the Criminal Code being paragraph 584 in the statutes. I have the bound volume here of the statute.

Mr. FINN. If there is going to be a discussion, your Honor, on the statute, I think it ought to be out of the presence of the jury.

The COURT. Step into chambers, gentlemen.

(And thereupon court and counsel retired to chambers whereupon the following proceedings were had in the jury's absence.)

The COURT. Is that the statute which you embodied in the instruction?

Mr. BERTRAM. That is correct, your Honor.

The COURT. I have cudgeled my brain about it, the relevancy of that. What is the relevancy?

Mr. BERTRAM. The relevancy is that it is the law of the State of Illinois that the father of a son who has committed a crime, any crime, even murder shall not be held as an accessory after the fact upon any crime for concealing, harboring, maintaining or 1166 assisting such son. That is the law of the State of Illinois.

The COURT. Any objection?

Mr. FINN. Yes; your Honor.

The COURT. I cannot see any relevancy of it at all. Objection sustained.

Have you got any other questions we want to discuss in here?

Mr. BERTRAM. Of course, we will have our motions at the conclusion of all the evidence.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will get my files, and we can dispose of that. It will only take a few minutes.

Mr. Woll. Are you finished? Have you closed your case?

The Court. I was only suggesting. I did not want to walk out and then walk in again. If we have any other questions that we might take up here?

Mr. Bertram. We want to renew the written motions which we made at the close of the government's cases: motion for a directed verdict and four separate motions to exclude evidence. We have not written those over. We have not re-written the motions to exclude the evidence, but I wanted to have those so the record will show.

The Court. We will take care of that.

1167 Mr. Warnholtz. On the second day of June, if it please the Court, the defendant offered four motions.

The Court. Wait a minute now. Have you all of your evidence in? Is all of your evidence in?

Mr. Warnholtz. Yes; unless we have got something more documentary or anything of that kind. I do not believe so.

Mr. Bertram. Have you the document file?

Mr. Warnholtz. No; I have not got that here.

The Court. I will ask you gentlemen, assuming that the Defendant rests; he has not rested, but just assume that he did rest, will you gentlemen have any further evidence?

Mr. Woll. I would like to talk to Mr. Hurley and Mr. Finn about it. If we have it would only be, at the most only five minutes.

The Court. Let us step out.

Mr. Woll. I think I would have to look at the record. If we did have it would be only five or ten minutes.

The Court. You are right up there now. We will go back and finish this case. Let the defendant rest.

(And thereupon the following proceedings were had in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

1168 Mr. Warnholtz. The defense rests, if the Court please.

Here the defendant rested his case.

Mr. Woll. Your Honor, may we have just a few minutes to look at the record, not more than five minutes.

The Court. Take a five minute recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(A recess was here taken.)

The Court. Are you ready for the jury, gentlemen?

Mr. Woll. Yes, sir.

(The following proceedings were had in the presence and hearing of the jury.)

The Court. The defense has rested. Does the government have anything further?

Mr. Woll. No rebuttal. Nothing further. The Government rests.

The COURT. Both sides rest?

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes, your Honor.

(Which was all of the evidence offered or received in the trial of said case as hereinbefore set forth.)

1169 The COURT. You may be excused, ladies and gentlemen until ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Do not discuss the case with anyone or permit anyone to discuss it with you, and do not discuss it amongst yourselves, until it is finally submitted to you for decision. Report here at ten o'clock tomorrow.

(And thereupon the jury withdrew and the following proceedings were had in the absence of the jury.)

Mr. WOLL. If the Court please, I would like to call something to the Court's attention which I had observed in the courtroom. I know the gentleman involved did not mean anything by it, but a letter was attempted to be introduced, but it was not introduced, and Mr. Swett, I noticed is looking at the letter. I do not like to have that letter published.

The COURT. I do sincerely request that you do not publish that letter until after the jury has concluded with this case. Mr. Counsel, you should not have given that letter out.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It was published two years ago.

The COURT. What?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It was published two years ago. They have the letter.

The COURT. It should not have been done now.

1170 Mr. WOLL. It has been denied admission here.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I am sorry I gave it out. It appears, however, they have, I know, a copy in their files.

Mr. Woll, at this time, and if the Court please I should like to renew four motions which were made by the defense on June 2nd and which at that time were overruled. They dealt with the motion to strike or to exclude certain evidence, namely, testimony of witnesses relating to statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to December 7, 1941; and also relating to such statements which have been made by the defendant prior to June 17, 1942.

The COURT. It was five motions. There were five motions.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Five.

Mr. BERTRAM. One was on behalf of the defendant to direct a verdict, and four were to exclude evidence, making five altogether.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. As to those four motions I believe they can be identified for the record, and I wish to renew them at this time; and I want to state that I have not re-written them, but I believe the reference to those motions will be sufficient.

1171 The COURT. Very well, they may be regarded as having been presented again at the close of all the evidence and each one of them will be overruled and denied and you may have an exception to each order overruling each motion.

(The motions so offered on behalf of the Defendant at the close of the evidence offered on behalf of the Government, and by permission of Court shown of record as being renewed at the close of all the evidence, and denied, are in the following form, to wit:)

1172 (Motions on behalf of Hans Max Haupt, defendant, omitted. Printed side page. 55 ante.

1175 (Motions to strike and exclude testimony, omitted. Printed side page. 59, 61, 63, 65 ante.)

1182 Mr. BERTRAM. At this time, if the Court please, I would like to present a motion to your Honor at the close of all the evidence in the case to direct the jury to find the defendant not guilty of the charges contained in the above entitled case.

And the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, makes the following separate and additional motions with respect to the specific overt acts charged in the said indictment, and then without reading the entire motion, we ask that each of the several overt acts, numbers 1 to 29, both inclusive, that upon each of those the Court instruct the jury to find the defendant not guilty, upon each of those numbered overt acts, and in support of all of said motions the defendant shows ten grounds, in support of those motions. I shall read them at this time, your Honor——

The COURT. You may file that motion and it will be regarded as having been read.

(The motion so made by counsel on behalf of the defendant, made a part of the record as hereinbefore set forth is in the following form, to wit:)

1183 (Motions on behalf of Hans Max Haupt, defendant, omitted. Printed side page. 68 ante.)

1186 Mr. BERTRAM. We also present to the Court, and we have a form of directed verdict, made at the close of all of the evidence in the case, which recites that the Court instructs the jury to find the defendant not guilty, and we ask the Court to mark his ruling upon the same.

(The motion so made in writing on behalf of the Defendant is in the following form: "The Court instructs the jury to find the Defendant not guilty.")

We would like to argue this motion for a directed verdict, and also upon the overt acts.

The COURT. We will hear you. Suppose you come into chambers and do that?

(Thereupon the following additional proceedings were had in chambers.)

Mr. BERTRAM. Do you want us to proceed, your Honor?

The COURT. Is it your wish that we wait for Mr. Finn? We better wait for Mr. Finn.

Mr. WOLL. You may proceed. It will not be necessary to wait. He will be right in.

The COURT. Shall we proceed?

Mr. WOLL. Yes; if the Court please.

1187 The COURT. Proceed.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, upon the motion to find the defendant not guilty under the indictment, I would like to offer the decision in the case of United States vs. Helmuth Leinert, who was a defendant in a somewhat similar position, with charges that were brought against him upon alleged overt acts resulting from contact with some members of the same eight saboteurs and at the close of all the evidence in the case the court rendered this decision:

"The motion to direct a verdict must be granted. All of the law of treason is well settled and is cited in United States vs. Robinson, 250 Fed. 685. That decision adopts as the definition of an overt act, required by the Constitution, such an act as 'manifests a criminal intention and tends towards the accomplishment of the criminal object, one by which the purpose is manifested and the main object thus intended to be fulfilled'."

The COURT. I do not think that is the law. Who is that Judge?

Mr. WOLL. It was a District Court Judge in New York.

1188 The COURT. Clancy?

Mr. WOLL. I do not recall the name of the judge.

Mr. FINN. It was disposed of in the Kramer case in the 2nd Court of Appeals, in New York.

The COURT. I do not think that is the law.

Mr. BERTRAM. It enables me to state the theory upon the——

The COURT. Judge Clancy in that case directed a verdict for the defendant. I believe in error. That is not the law.

Mr. BERTRAM. May I proceed further on that point, your Honor?

The COURT. Well, I just see no use in discussing that. I do not think that is the law.

Mr. BERTRAM. Well, we contend the overt act itself must manifest——

The COURT. I understand.

Mr. BERTRAM. You understand my point?

The COURT. In regard to overt acts, if it be required that, if I were to see it, or if anybody else were to see it, we must be able to state "that is treason", that is not the law. That idea of what an overt act may be is just silly.

1189 Suppose the three of us around this table or four of us, enter into a conspiracy to overthrow the government of the United States, and as a part of that conspiracy we say we will assassinate the head of government, and that one of us is designated as leader, and we all agree to it; that we all attend a certain meeting where the head of the government will be and that the signal for assassination or shooting, shall be the taking of my handkerchief out of my pocket and blowing my nose.

Suppose we assemble there, suppose I did that thing, and suppose just as I did that everyone is arrested; have I committed or has there been an overt act?

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not think that we have any signal point involved here. It is the law.

The COURT. But the taking of a handkerchief out of my pocket is an innocent act and nobody would know the thing itself—that is, innocent enough, unless some person knew of our illegal conspiracy.

Mr. BERTRAM. It is the law, well settled, your Honor, that conspiracy, no matter how outrageous, is not treason.

The COURT. I know that.

1190 Mr. BERTRAM. But we are talking about treason. Now I think on the fact charging treason, if the overt act was the taking of my handkerchief out of my pocket——

The COURT. An innocent act in itself.

Mr. BERTRAM. You would have to allege in the indictment the taking of the handkerchief was an act of signalling and so forth, that it was the act that would have set the thing in motion.

The COURT. I do not think so.

Mr. BERTRAM. No? You would have no analogy here of that at all.

The COURT. I do not believe so. I just think that Judge Clancy went off the deep end. I do not think that is the law.

Mr. BERTRAM. There is also the case of United States vs. Robinson.

The COURT. I believe in the statement of Judge Learned Hand, in the case was obiter dicta. Judge Clark in the same court so declared where the point was directly made.

Mr. BERTRAM. You will also find some English decisions, your Honor, where the same ruling was made as to an overt act.

1191 The COURT. I was reading the cases over Sunday. I read them over the Sunday before. I read them over the Sunday before we started the case and I read them some months before and I have read them again, yesterday. I am just against you on that point.

Mr. BERTRAM. All right, if your Honor has made up his mind on that point I will proceed with the further motions which I have directed to the particular overt act, the individual overt act, and I may say——

The COURT. Does the government contend that all these overt acts should go to the jury?

Mr. FINN. No. It is our position, your Honor, that we should submit certain of them.

The COURT. Which ones do you say should be submitted?

Mr. WOLL. We have them marked, if your Honor please.

The COURT. No use talking about the ones which you say should not be submitted. That is the point I am making.

Mr. WOLL. We do not, of course, mean the jury should not consider them.

The COURT. They are not submitted as overt acts. That is what I am talking about now.

Mr. FINN. This is the method that was followed in the Kramer case. That is the method the Court followed in the Krainer case.

1192 The COURT. The submission of all?

Mr. FINN. They submitted, I believe, three out of ten overt acts, leaving the rest of them in on the question of intent.

Mr. BERTRAM. In submitting to the jury, you mean evidence is not excluded with relation to those acts. As to the overt acts, the jury will be informed only as to those which the Court will direct to go to the jury. We have those.

The COURT. One to nine are withdrawn.

Mr. BERTRAM. One?

The COURT. One to nine, inclusive?

Mr. BERTRAM. One to nine, inclusive?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Withdrawn?

The COURT. I am telling you the suggestion of the government.

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes; we understand it.

Mr. FINN. The overt acts upon the basis of submission can be made.

The COURT. Ten up to seventeen, inclusive, the government contends should be submitted. Eighteen and nineteen should be withdrawn. Twenty to twenty-three——

Mr. BERTRAM. Twenty to twenty-four?

1193 The COURT. Twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty to twenty-three; they should be submitted. Twenty-four to twenty-nine. They should be withdrawn.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Twenty-four to twenty-nine.

The COURT. Those they say—and twelve should be submitted, and I think seventeen should be withdrawn.

Mr. HURLEY. Twenty-nine altogether.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Seventeen should be withdrawn?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Twenty to twenty-three, ten to seventeen, twenty to twenty-three, both inclusive?

The COURT. One to nine withdrawn; eighteen, nineteen, twenty, twenty-four to twenty-nine, inclusive, are withdrawn; ten to seventeen, inclusive, and twenty to twenty-three, both inclusive, submitted.

As a matter of fact, we get around to the proposition that the overt act does not and is not required to be an act which in itself can be said to be treasonable—I do not see much use in—maybe there is some, maybe there is some. Because they have a right to the submission, there is no error in submitting them.

Mr. WOLL. They should all be submitted to the jury as overt acts.

1194 The COURT. I am speaking of submitting them in the sense that they are overt acts.

Mr. FINN. The overt act to sustain the treason has to have two witnesses.

The COURT. Well, what do you say?

Mr. BERTRAM. Number 10 is one to be submitted. Number 10, if the Court please, says that Han Max Haupt on June 22 accompanied Herbert Haupt.

The COURT. Clearly they have got two witnesses there.

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not think the act of accompanying, your Honor, is such an act that could be treason.

The COURT. Well, I am against you on that.

Mr. BERTRAM. And number 11?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is the same.

Mr. BERTRAM. Seems to be the same.

The COURT. The same. I think that is proper.

Mr. BERTRAM. You say 12 has been withdrawn; is that correct?

The COURT. No.

Mr. BERTRAM. 12? I do not believe there are any eyewitnesses to number 12, your Honor.

The COURT. What do you say about 12? They say there are no eyewitnesses?

Mr. FINN. That is on the 22nd day, your Honor?

The COURT. Yes.

1195 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is Monday, is it not?

Mr. FINN. Yes; the evidence shows that they observed Herbert Haupt entering the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street at 12:25 P. M. Handley and Dixon testified to that. Handley and Dixon also testified that at 1:45 P. M. Herbert Haupt left the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street and pro-reeded south on Webster Avenue, got in a taxicab. It shows that at 5:00 P. M. Handley and Dixon saw Herbert enter the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street. At 7:30 P. M. Herbert, Hans—that is Herbert and Hans Haupt left the premises of 2234 North Fremont Street and entered the Plymouth sedan. They were then followed around to the Grunaus.

The COURT. I think that is proper to be submitted.

Mr. BERTRAM. It is our contention that circumstantial evidence, no matter how strong it may be, even though it may be beyond a reasonable doubt, cannot satisfy the constitutional requirement of two witnesses to an overt act. The testimony of the two agents was to the effect they saw him entering the entrance door on the first floor; and there is some testimony—I do not know if it is on that particular event—as to the lights going on and lights going off. The two agents, I think, contradicted themselves about 1396 whether the lights were on before Herbert entered or not, purely circumstantial evidence.

The COURT. Well the word is "sheltered."

Mr. BERTRAM. The evidence only goes so far as to the fact that he entered the entrance door and then the lights went off.

Mr. HURLEY. Also evidence that he did not go into any other apartment in the building, in that particular building; that he went in the front entrance and it was the only one there.

The COURT. I think that is sufficient. What about twenty-three?

Mr. BERTRAM. I have made the same contention that is made.

The COURT. Twenty-three. That is number 13. June 23rd.

Mr. FINN. In that regard, your Honor, the evidence shows that Lynch, Fletcher, Robe, and Dixon saw Herbert Haupt leave the premises of 2234 North Fremont Street with Erna Haupt and go to the "L" station, and so forth, and that at 5:15 Agents Lynch, Meech, and Dixon saw Herbert enter 2234 North Fremont Street.

The COURT. That is all.

Mr. BERTRAM. That is 13?

1397 Mr. FINN. 13: We have two people who were in the Warner Motor Sales Company and the agents followed them to the Warner Motor Sales Company. Vinson and Farrell testified Hans and Herbert were there.

The COURT. 14. Signed a financial statement and so on.

Mr. BERTRAM. 14 is signing a financial statement. I do not see how that could be an overt act, your Honor.

The COURT. Yes, yes; I think so: 15, again accompanied Herbert Haupt and made arrangements; these employees of the agency saw them there.

Mr. FINN. Vinson and Farrell.

The COURT. 16.

Mr. BERTRAM. Did they both see them on that second trip?

The COURT. Yes, sir. How about 16, made a further payment in cash.

Mr. FINN. Both testified.

Mr. WOLL. Both Mr. Farrell and Mr. Vinson testified.

Mr. BERTRAM. The manager was not there and did not know whether or not——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. At one time the manager was not present and did not see any of the transaction at all. He had no knowl-
1198 edge as to the fact, he did not see what took place.

Mr. HURLEY. He got the money.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I remember distinctly, from the testimony, generally it is I should say—which one it is, I do not know.

The COURT. The second time he said he did not talk to them. That is what he said.

Mr. HURLEY. But he did get the money.

The COURT. But he did get the money.

Mr. HURLEY. $405.00.

The COURT. He said that.

Mr. BERTRAM. He testified from records, you will recall.

Mr. HURLEY. No; he did not testify from records.

The COURT. How about 17?

Mr. BERTRAM. Withdrawn, 17?

Mr. HURLEY. It is not withdrawn.

Mr WARNHOLTZ. It is not withdrawn. It is one of those submitted.

The COURT. "Harbored and sheltered" Herbert Haupt.

Mr. BERTRAM. No eyewitness, if the Court please.

Mr. HURLEY. That is on the 23rd.

Mr. FINN. Zermer and Melind in the house. In addition,
1199 at 12:20 p. m., Herbert Haupt and Erna Haupt left 2234 North Fremont Street, as shown by Lynch, Fletcher, and Meech, as well as Dixon, and at 5:05 Lynch, Meech, and Dixon saw Heroert Haupt reenter the house. 6:00 p. m., Herbert Haupt and Erna and Hans Haupt left 2234 North Fremont Street, as witnessed by Snyder and Meech in the car; and they entered the restaurant and so forth. They followed them around in the car and Herbert and Hans went in the car to the Warner Motor Sales.

At 7:55 p. m. Hans entered the house and after that they left the tavern and entered the house at 2234 North Fremont Street. There were Lynch, Dixon, Snyder, and Meech. Herbert came out and in ten minutes—ten fifteen with Gerda Melind, as witnessed by Meech, Snyder, Dixon, Lynch, and Louis, and also Zermer and Melind who were in the house.

The COURT. I think 17 may be submitted.

Mr. BERTRAM. 18 is marked withdrawn.

The COURT. It is withdrawn. 20 is the next.

Mr. BERTRAM. I have that marked no eyewitness on June 24.

The COURT. What do you say about 20?

Mr. FINN. At 12:30 a. m. Herbert entered 2234 North Fremont Street as witnessed by Meech, Snyder, Dixon, Lynch, and 1200 Louis. At 7:05 a. m. Herbert came out of the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street as witnessed by Meech and Lynch. At 1:00 p. m. Herbert came from the premises at 2234 again and got in a green Checker cab and left. At 5:30 p. m. Mr. Berg saw him reenter the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street. At 6:00 p. m. Hans and Herbert came out of 2234 North Fremont Street and got in the Plymouth and drove to the Warner Motor Sales as witnessed by Robe and Berg. At 6:30 p. m. came out of there and Herbert Haupt entered 2234 North Fremont Street as testified by Robe and Berg, and some time later, at 6:45 p. m., Herbert Haupt came out of 2234 Fremont Street, crossed to go to a grocery, and so forth and then at the Vine Gardens and the Blue Danube and so forth, the same two witnesses, Robe and Berg. 9:15 p. m. he came out, came back but did not reenter. Then went around, drove that night in the Pontiac coupe, and then at 12:45 the same two witnesses saw him enter the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street at 12:55 a. m.

The COURT. June 25, which is number 21.

Mr. BERTRAM. We contend that that evidence is all circumstantial and is not eyewitness to the overt act. It is all the same, 1201 where they go through the 25th, the day of the 25th which is number 21, no eyewitness to the overt act alleged.

The COURT. Well, I am against you on that.

Mr. FINN. At 12:15, or at 12:25 a. m., Herbert entered the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street as witnessed by Robe and Berg. At 7:10 a. m. Hans Haupt came out of the premises witnessed by Carl Eggert—came out of the premises, and also at 7:15 a. m., a few minutes afterwards, Herbert came out of the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street. Witnessed by Connerty, who was planted across the street. Also witnessed by Mr. Eggert, who was standing in front of the house at the time.

Then Herbert—at about 4:20, Herbert arrived and entered the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street, as witnessed by Robe, Lynch, Meech, and Fletcher and Connerty in the plant across the street. They saw Herbert Haupt come out of the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street. That is Connerty in that flat across the street, and it was also testified that 11:30 p. m. Herbert entered the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street, by Connerty and Axtell and Louis in the plant across the street, that is the 25th.

The COURT. Well, I think that may be submitted.

1202 Mr. BERTRAM. June 26th we say there were no eyewitnesses—that the only evidence that they have was circumstantial evidence.

Mr. FINN. 9:00 o'clock in the morning Herbert came out of 2234 North Fermont, entered the Pontiac, Meech and Connerty in the plant, also Louis in the plant. At 4:55 P. M. Hans returned to 2234 North Fremont Street. At 6:00 P. M. Herbert returned and entered the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street. Connerty in the plant described it as well as Meech.

At 7:15 P. M. Hans Haupt left 2234 North Fremont Street, witnessed by Connerty.

8:07 P. M. Herbert and Erna came out of 2234 North Fremont Street, witnessed by Connerty in the plant across the street, and returned home at 1:50 A. M. the following morning. That would be the 27th. Witnessed by Louis, Meech, and Robe.

On that same evening he returned to the house at 11:00 P. M; and at 1:50 P. M. (on the 27th, which was the morning following, he was seen to enter the premises at 2234 North Fremont Street. Witnessed by Robe, Meech, Fletcher, and Louis. Those were the same ones that had seen him on the same night at an earlier time.

1203 Mr. BERTRAM. 23 is the last one.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. FINN. 9:05 that morning——

Mr. BERTRAM. I make the same contention with respect to 23.

The COURT. I think it may be submitted. 10 to 17, both inclusive; 20 to 23, both inclusive—those will be considered as overt acts which may or can be proven by the testimony of two witnesses if there is evidence——

Mr. BERTRAM. May I have those?

The COURT. 10 to 17, both inclusive; 20 to 23, both inclusive. Now, I will deny this motion.

Mr. BERTRAM. Exceptions follow, as the Court indicated?

The COURT. I will deny this motion as made, but I will withdraw from the jury as overt acts numbers 1 to 9, both inclusive, and those numbered 18 and 19, and those numbered 24 to 29, both inclusive—I will do that in my instructions.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, I have submitted our instructions—additional instructions. This first group was based upon the grounds that we made at the conclusion of the government's case and again at the close of all the evidence, to exclude the evidence requested in those motions and the other 1204 instructions.

The COURT. These will be denied.

Mr. BERTRAM. Do you wish to hear from us on any of those four motions?

The COURT. I think not.

Mr. BERTRAM. I can state our reasons.

The COURT. You have stated them sufficiently. I understand your point.

Mr. BERTRAM. Now, our additional instructions I would like to give your Honor.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. The first one is based on the Illinois statute. The others are on the other propositions.

The COURT. This first one, that is based on the statute, I will have to deny:

"Under the law of the United States, even if a person in general discussion expresses verbal or adverse opinion as to the members of any race, color or creed, or regarding any nationality——"

Now, I have been working on these instructions with the assistance of my Secretary, and I think I have a set of instructions in course of preparation.

1295 I am going to give each of you this set of instructions in its present state and I shall continue to work upon them, but I would like to have you look at them. I have prepared these instructions, not with the idea of aiding one side or the other, but with the idea of instructing the jury fairly and impartially, and with the idea of helping them. Whether I shall succeed or not I do not know, but I want to do the best I can.

I would like to receive your criticisms, if there are any errors in the instructions I would be glad to have you call my attention to them, and I will give you an opportunity to do that before the instructions are finally put in shape.

I wish you would look these over tonight, look them over tonight and be prepared to tell me about them before tomorrow is over.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, I have an index to the instructions which may facilitate the use of them. Also another instruction which I will substitute for the instruction that is submitted, the instruction on page 10, and I have given a copy of it to the defendant.

Mr. BERTRAM. I have not had any yet; any copy of them as yet.

1296 The COURT. How does this differ from the other? I will look it over.

Mr. WOLL. It attempts to make that one more embracive.

The COURT. Tomorrow. I take it the arguments will start just as soon as we can get to them after ten o'clock. The government has indicated that he wants to divide its final argument. Is there any objection to that? From a legal standpoint I cannot see that the defendant can be prejudiced by that.

I am going to advise you I want you to be sure that you make a fair opening and that your final argument be strictly a final argument, but it is up to you to carry the burden if you split your final argument. That is the problem.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It seems to be somewhat difficult to make an argument until we know something about what the instructions will be, but we will follow along with your Honor's suggestions.

The COURT. I have done the best I could, yesterday; Saturday and yesterday, and I am going to work again tonight. You have better work tonight and I will talk with you briefly in the morning.

1207 Mr. WOLL. I would like to have the record show, if your Honor please, that we have submitted both sets of instructions, and we consider going along with your proposed instructions up to a certain point so that we have something to look at so far.

The COURT. I have submitted them to both sides. I know I asked you to give me your suggestions the other day and you did give them to me, and I went over them. I had some ideas of my own, and I have combined the three sets of ideas, to the best of my ability, so as to accomplish the purpose which I think instructions should serve.

I shall continue to work on those instructions and to improve them the best I can. I will discuss them with you tomorrow morning.

Mr. FINN. I wanted to give you the additional instruction.

The COURT. I have all of those here.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to Tuesday, June 6, 1944, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

Presented in open Court this 19th day of September A. D. 1944.

[SEAL] JOHN P. BARNES,
United States District Judge.

1208 Bill of Exceptions—Volume Three

In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago

No. 44 Cr. 129

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge and a Jury

Tuesday, June 6, 1944, 10:00 o'clock a. m.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley and Mr. Richard G. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America; Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

1209 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the Court's chambers, outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. I don't want you to forego any rights of your clients, but I am anxious to, and I would like to instruct this Jury fairly and clearly. I am anxious to do that, more than I am to make a record for either side.

I don't object to your making a record, but I do want you to help me to instruct the Jury fairly and clearly.

Has either side any suggestion with respect to the first page?

Mr. BERTRAM. I think not on the first page, your Honor.

Mr. FINN. We made some notes as to suggestions.

The COURT. Have you any suggestions with respect to the first page, either side?

Mr. BERTRAM. None for the defendant.

Mr. FINN. None for the Government, your Honor.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. None for the first page.

The COURT. And the second page?

Mr. FINN. None for the second page. I wonder if there is any way that the record may show that?

1210 The COURT. What is the first page? As soon as we come to a point, somebody has an objection, I will indicate it and make it some way. I intend to number the paragraphs.

Mr. BERTRAM. Perhaps we can number the paragraphs as we go along.

The COURT. Yes; we can number the paragraphs. Then we will know what we are talking about. There are but four paragraphs on the first page. The first paragraph starts with, "It is the duty——

There will be five paragraphs on the second page. The first will be five, will it not?

Mr. FINN. That is correct.

The COURT. They will be numbered 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9.

The first paragraph beginning on 3 is numbered 10, 11, and 12. 13 is the first paragraph on No. 4, then 14, 15, and 16.

The first paragraph beginning on 5 is 17.

The first paragraph on 6 is 18. And paragraph 19 begins with "Definition of Treason." Take out that first quote.

Mr. HURLEY: The definition of "Treason" constitutes the fourth line.

The COURT. Yes; that is 19 and 20 is the definition of Treason in the statute: that is 20.

1211 The indictment in this case is in 21, 22, and 23.

Page 7 is paragraphs 24, 25 and 26.

Page 8 are paragraphs 27 and 28.

Now the next paragraph is moved down. I will skip that—"Every citizen—" pass it for just a moment.

Mr. BERTRAM. Is there a line showing it is moved down two lines; that is not in my copy.

The COURT. It was to have been, and 29 paragraph, "It has been proved" and 30, "It has also been proved," and then "Every citizen of the United States"—is in 31, and then 32.

The next paragraph on page number 8 is 33, 34, 35, 36, and 37.

Now, number 10 is 38, 39, and 40, and it begins with, "The act has been defined."

41. "An overt act is of itself one that may be a perfectly innocent act." That is 41. The Constitution of the United States is 42, and "It is therefore" is 43.

Page 11 is 44, and the third line begins with 45, and then 46 and 47. There will be inserted there on 47, "Overt acts, which are to be submitted for consideration of the Jury as overt acts."

Number 12 is 48, 49, 50, and 51.

1212 Number 13 is 52, 53, and 54.

Number 14 are paragraphs 55, 56, and 57.

Number 15 are paragraphs 58, 59, and 60.

Number 16 are 61 and 62.

Number 17 are 63, 64, and 65.

What is the first paragraph in respect of which you have a suggestion on behalf of the Government?

Mr. Finn. Page 5, number 17.

The Court. What is the first paragraph in which you gentlemen have a suggestion?

Mr. Bertram. Paragraph 6 on page 2.

The Court. Yes.

Mr. Bertram. We have this suggestion and comment to make: That the paragraph generally refers to the Jury believing beyond a reasonable doubt and the two witness rule is not included and the paragraph winds up with the statement that the defendant is guilty as charged in the indictment.

The Court. Well, but that isn't pretended to do anything, except tell the presumption of innocence; that is all paragraph 6 is intended to refer to. That is all it purports to do is refer to the presumption of innocence, and I think it states that rule correctly.

Mr. Bertram. And the same comment on paragraph 8.

Mr. Hurley. Those are both good instructions.

1213 Mr. Finn. If I remember, it has a paragraph——

Mr. Hurley. The two witness element is contained in it.

The Court. You cannot put everything in one sentence. You know if you did we would never get through. You have got to make your instructions intelligent.

Mr. Woll. The subject matter there is "reasonable doubt." I think the defendant is entitled to have stated he pleaded Not Guilty, and the burden of proof as charged in the indictment, you cannot find the defendant Not Guilty unless—I think he is entitled to have that change. I would dislike very much in an effort to be fair—I dislike very much to leave it out.

Mr. Bertram. I wouldn't leave it out, "But beyond a reasonable doubt, also by requiring two witnesses as required by the Constitution——"

The Court. No; I think this is sufficient, what is being said here.

Mr. Bertram. As to paragraph 9, if the Court please, beginning with "Reasonable doubt": that's what the term implies.

1214 "The general effect of this instruction was to compromise and modify the strictness of the rule of law in criminal cases that the jury must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that proof has been made of all facts necessary to convict the defendant or defendants. They are cautioned in this instruction against entertaining any doubt which may be considered imaginary, fanciful, captious, or speculative. Doubt is a state of mine, a fluctuation of mind, or an unsettled state of opinion. Speculation is defined as meaning, of or pertaining to vision. We maintain that all doubt is speculative, and that to inform the Jury that reasonable doubt does not mean every conceivable kind of doubt and does not mean a speculative doubt is to destroy the benefit of the rule of proof as far as the Accused is concerned. We maintain all doubt is speculative——

The COURT. It doesn't say speculative; it says merely speculative. I am content with that instruction. What is your next one?

Mr. BERTRAM. On page 4. Paragraph 13, the paragraph beginning with the words, "Said witnesses who have testified"—Our objection to this is that the instruction regarding witnesses convicted of felonies supports the credibility of that witness instead of stating it is to be received with caution. Instead of being helpful to the defendant or at least instead of stating the rule that testimony of convicted felons should be received with caution. It does not do that. I think it really gives the testimony build-up, instead of giving us the benefit of an instruction, that is such testimony shall be received with caution.

The COURT. Well, I will consider changing 13.

Mr. BERTRAM. Our next one is as to paragraph 14.

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, I won't have another opportunity to say anything about this instruction. I do say I think the instruction is a very accurate statement of the law. If you feel inclined to include in that instruction anything about "Caution," all right, but I do think the instruction as it is, should remain. Perhaps the additional suggestion made by counsel, I think we are entitled to an instruction merely because he has been convicted does not mean he cannot tell the truth. I think we are entitled to the instruction if you do change it, I think there should be an addition rather than taking anything out.

The COURT. I will try and review the law a little bit on that.

Mr. BERTRAM. As to paragraph 14, I don't have any objection, but comment that later on, the Court repeats the charges of the indictment and this statement is limited to the indictment. The fact the Court repeats the charges of the indictment and does not repeat this statement, I think the Jury may lose sight of the fact that the indictment is not evidence.

The COURT. They were told this. I thought they were told that when you examined them.

Mr. WOLL. I don't understand the objection. What is the the objection?

The COURT. He wants repeated again, when we tell them what the charge is.

Mr. BERTRAM. I have nothing further until number 6. Paragraph 19——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I think the Government had something on page 5.

Mr. FINN. What is it?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You have something on page 5.

Mr. WOLL. Calling your attention again to the last sentence in paragraph 17, "The answers you then made to such questions in regard to your competency, qualification, fairness, and lack 1217 of prejudice—Now, we think after those words, "lack of prejudice" there should be words relative to sympathy; also, I think, under the instructions, "lack of prejudice" could very well go out.

The COURT. I don't think a Jury should be required to be without sympathy. I am a juror in this case and I have sympathy for every defendant that comes into court. No; I won't get into the position of telling a juror he or she should be without sympathy. I think a human being without sympathy is a monster. I am content with that.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

The COURT. Certainly. I don't want to see a lack of sympathy.

Mr. WOLL. I don't insist on that.

The COURT. I may put in something later with that.

Mr. WOLL. Our next is page 7.

Mr. BERTRAM. We have one on 6.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Paragraph 19 on page 6. We have a very serious objection to omitting the part as to the definition of treason. I think the entire definition stated in the Constitution on Treason should be given to the Jury. Give every word, the 1218 entire sentence should be before the Jury and every word has its place in that particular sentence, and the ommission of the words "levying war, et cetera," which are stated in the Constitution, I think is harmful and prevents the Jury from getting the whole sentence as a whole as is stated in the Constitution. I think it is very serious.

The COURT. Does both counsel for the defendant feel that way?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I do feel that way, your Honor.

The COURT. You do?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I do feel strongly that we can—otherwise the jurors may be of the opinion that treason consists only of giving aid and comfort and it may work to the prejudice of the defendant.

Mr. WOLL. May I ask a question of Mr. Warnholtz, Judge?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Do you intend to argue, Mr. Warnholtz, before the Jury that your client is charged with giving aid and comfort by the levying of war; do you intend to argue that way to the Jury?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No.

Mr. WOLL. I was going to say an instruction of that kind,
1219 given if an argument was made that way, I have no objection to the definition of treason since the declaration of war is not involved in this case.

The COURT. I think so, too. I think at least to put it in. I think it has a tendency, might have a tendency to confuse the Jury.

Mr. WOLL. I think it will, undoubtedly.

The COURT. But the people who have primarily the responsibility for having these instructions should fairly consider it with respect to the matter, but both counsel insist it should go in, and I don't think I want to stand against them. I think it is better out. You gentlemen should seriously consider that now.

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. I don't want this Jury because of something you see an opportunity which makes you have a very great responsibility there.

Mr. BERTRAM. It isn't captious, your Honor, at all.

The COURT. You both have considered it, and you want it in?

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. You both have thoroughly considered that and you want it in?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right, your Honor.

1220 Mr. BERTRAM. I believe so; yes.

The COURT. All right.

Mr. BERTRAM. Paragraph 20 would also have to be made to conform, I would say, because the same omission has been made in paragraph 20.

The COURT. Then there will have to be before paragraph 21, 20–A, drawn to this effect. You see, what you do, you have it in, and you have just got to take it out, and certainly it is a bad way to instruct the Jury.

Mr. WOLL. I might say the indictment in this case does not charge "levying of war," that issue is not before us.

The Court. That is certainly a bad way to instruct the Jury. I think maybe I ought to stand against you, gentlemen, I don't know.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Here is the Constitution, your Honor.

The COURT. I will strike out the words, so far as the definition is material here, I will strike that out, and then insert in the definition of treason, which are omitted, and in 20 strike out the words, "so far as the definition is material here" and insert there in the asterisk the words which are omitted.

1221 Then make a paragraph, paragraph 20-A, "The indictment in this case does not charge a levying of war against the United States. It does charge an adhering to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort." I do not like to do things like that.

Mr. BERTRAM. Now, the next paragraph, if the court please, is paragraph 21. I will make this objection or comment to the instruction which later on states, "That the indictment is to be given to the Jury, so that they may take it into the jury room." We believe it is unnecessary, and also it is unfavorable to the defendant, and prejudicial to him for the court to repeat the charges of the indictment as part of the charge to the Jury.

The COURT. Oh, my dear man! How are you going to tell the Jury what the charge against the man is? How in the world can you tell these fourteen people what this man is being tried for?

Mr. BERTRAM. Then I wish to make the comment I made a moment ago, that that paragraph which your Honor is giving that the indictment is not to be considered as evidence, etc., and there should be inserted following the words, the statement——

1222 The COURT. No, no; I don't know how to instruct the Jury what the charges against him are, otherwise, than substantially in the words of the indictment, and I have already told them clearly the story as I can, that the indictment is not evidence or the fact he was indicted is not to be considered as evidence.

Mr. BERTRAM. Now, if the court please, as to paragraph 23, I make the further objection or comment that the statement here, "The indictment further charges, et cetera," that Herbert Haupt during a short period of time mentioned, served the German Reich, and I believe it is not clear what period of time is referred to in that.

The COURT. I thought that would make it more clearly, and would be better. Now, if you want that changed——

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please——

The COURT. Listen to me. Are you gentlemen just looking for changes to be made?

Mr. BERTRAM. No, your Honor.

The COURT. All right.

Mr. BERTRAM. I mentioned dates, June 17, 1942, to July 17, 1942, namely, the dates and the period.

The COURT. That is exactly the way it is in the indictment, and throughout the period of time mentioned in this indictment.

1223 You want that changed from June 17——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Namely, during the period of time above mentioned, namely, June 17, 1942, to July 17, 1942. Then if your Honor please—well, never mind.

Mr. BERTRAM. If your Honor please, there is another comment as to the word "included" at the end of the fifth line in the 23rd paragraph, whereas, the indictment used the word "involved." I think there is a little different meaning to the word "included."

The COURT. You want it "involved."

Mr. BERTRAM. "Involved," yes. Now, paragraph 24 on page 7.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There are some words in here which are not in the indictment, words like "National Defense of the United States."

The COURT. Where is that?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. In the third line of paragraph 24.

Mr. WOLL. The last paragraph on page 2 of the indictment——

The COURT. I don't see how it changes it. It only shortens it a bit.

Mr. BERTRAM. You will find on another page in the indictment——

1224 Paragraph 26, if the court please, reference is made to receiving, holding possession, safeguarding and concealing the property and funds of said Herbert Haupt.

And this evidence was suppressed. The overt acts were also withdrawn, or were to be withdrawn from the Jury, and I think that might well be omitted.

The COURT. I don't think so.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The prejudicial part, if the court please, is this: That after the Jury entered upon its service, the newspapers stated, with the comment on the testimony of Hamby, I believe, that the money which he mentioned was the money that was found in the Haupt home, and the evidence was suppressed. That statement was made in the newspapers.

The COURT. They had other evidence.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. They had other evidence regarding that?

The COURT. Why, sure; the inference was there after the arraignment.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That I do not believe they mentioned specifically any money. It may have done so, but——

Mr. WOLL. Hamby and Norris both testified to it.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Hamby and Norris?

1225 Mr. WOLL. Yes; testified that Hans Haupt took the money and hid it under a rug——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Oh, no. Mr. Robe or Mr. Hirsh.

Mr. WOLL. Correct. Correct. That is right.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Those are the two, I believe. It was only one, that is, one of the two witnesses.

Mr. FINN. I might say on that subject, Robe did testify on that subject.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What did he say?

Mr. FINN. He said he had a large sum of money——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That Herbert or Hans had?

Mr. FINN. Well, it doesn't make any difference. It was controlled by him.

Mr. WOLL. The fifth line in paragraph 26——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No agent testified to that.

Mr. WOLL. I think perhaps it might be more accurate if we did use the language in the indictment. The indictment says, receiving, harboring Herbert Haupt, it says, "receiving, harboring, relieving, and assisting Herbert Haupt by automobile, and in his furnishing hospitality to Herbert Haupt."

Do I make myself clear? I think that is on the third page of the indictment.

The COURT. Yes: in his receiving, harboring, relieving, and assisting Herbert Haupt.

1226 Mr. WOLL. And then after Herbert Haupt, in transporting him by automobile.

The COURT. Transporting him by automobile.

Mr. WOLL. That is the only insert I have in mind.

The COURT. And in his furnishing hospitality to Herbert Haupt.

Mr. WOLL. Yes; that reads on, the way the indictment covers it.

The COURT. Have you got anything further?

Mr. BERTRAM. And that said giving——

The COURT. Where is that?

Mr. BERTRAM. Third line in paragraph 26, so as to make it clear the indictment charges, and that said giving of aid and comfort, etc.—inserting the word "that" after the word "and" in the third line.

The COURT. And charges that the adherence of the defendant Hans Max Haupt to the Government of the German Reich, its counsellors, armies, navies, agents, representatives, and subjects, and said giving of aid and comfort by him consisted in his receiving, harboring, relieving, and assisting Herbert Haupt by automobile—"And said giving," you don't want that in there?

Mr. BERTRAM. No.

Mr. WOLL. I take it, your Honor is not interested in the spelling, are you?

1227 The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. You are. I think on page 7, the "recruiting" is spelled incorrectly, and on page 7 also the word "employment."

The COURT. Where is that?

Mr. WOLL. The fifth line from the bottom.

Mr. HURLEY. On the left hand side.

Mr. WOLL. There is an "o" instead. Now, the next page, page

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. One minute, kindly, Mr. Woll. Have we disposed of the matter regarding the money, that counsel believed was furnished by Herbert Haupt?

The COURT. I think there is evidence on it.

Mr. WOLL. On page 8, the word "comfort" is misspelled.

The COURT. Where is that?

Mr. WOLL. In the 28th paragraph.

The COURT. "C-o-m" not "O".

Mr. WOLL. That is as far as we have reached right now. The defense may have some suggestions.

Mr. BERTRAM. There is comment as to paragraph 28, so that repetition of the charges of the indictment and the frequent reference to said treason of the defendant by the court in this charge.

The COURT. Where is that?

1228 Mr. BERTRAM. Well, in paragraph 28, the execution of said treason in the second line of paragraph 28.

The COURT. Well, it is further alleged, it is telling them what the allegation is on.

Mr. BERTRAM. Of said alleged treason.

The COURT. It is further alleged, that is a further allegation.

Mr. BERTRAM. Now, in paragraph 30, if the court please, the objection is that the instruction is too broad that former agents or spies, who were not pursuing that mission are included in the terminology there. There is no statement by the court that required that at the time of the charges in the indictment, namely, June 17, 1942, to July 17, 1942, they should be then engaged in work as spies or saboteurs.

Mr. WOLL. You used the tense of persons.

The COURT. Well, it is mentioned in the indictment, namely, from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, on the second line of 30.

Mr. BERTRAM. And on page 9, which is still paragraph 33, this, I believe, is objectionable, because it implies that the doctrine of constructive treason is applicable in the United States.

The COURT. How is that?

1229 Mr. BERTRAM. When a state of war exists, any act done deliberately and intentionally and with treasonable intent as defined by one owing allegiance to the United States, is by a fair construction——

The objection is to the words "fair construction," and the objection is made to those words, which would permit the theory of a constructive treason to be enforced in this case, which is not the law in the United States, as I understand it.

The COURT. What is constructive treason?

Mr. BERTRAM. Well, the Old English Law imagining the death of the King by reflection or construction of certain acts, were construed to be treason by construction, where the acts themselves were innocent of themselves, but were of themselves of the nature that manifested a treasonable intent.

The COURT. Well, manifested a treasonable intent, those words are used in two different tenses. One school of thought, which I understand was refuted in this country, holds that manifesting a treasonable act requires an act not of itself separated from everything else, but shows a man who does it, has committed treason; and the other school of thought, as I understand it, which is accepted in this country, is that the overt act need not of 1230 itself show to the world that is a treasonable act, need not of itself show to the world that the treasonable act, if it be done by one who is adhering to the enemy of the United States, or is levying war on the United States. So just talking about manifesting something, we don't get anywhere.

Mr. BERTRAM. My point is this: Maybe I can clear it up. Under this particular paragraph, a defendant might be guilty of treason by the mere construction of an act which he did not do with the intent of committing treason.

The COURT. Wait right there, in 32 I say, "Although not explicity set forth in either the constitutional or statutory provision, an intent to give aid and comfort to the enemy is an essential element of the crime of treason. Without an intent to give aid and comfort to the enemy, there is no treason.

When a state of war exists, any act, done deliberately and intentionally, and by one owing allegiance to the United States, with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined, which, by fair construction, is directed toward the furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemies of the United States, and which gives them aid and comfort (or if that is the natural effect of 1231 the act) is treasonable in its character.

The words in the United States statute, "adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort," and words of similar import in the constitution mean in general any intentional act done with treasonable intent as heretofore defined by one owing allegiance to the United States which clearly indicates want of loyalty to the United States and a sympathy with its enemies, and which, by their construction, is directly and intentionally done in furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemy; or to strengthen the enemy, or weaken the power of the United States to resist or attack the enemy.

Mr. BERTRAM. My point is, it nullifies the effect of the requirement of the treasonable intent.

The COURT. No, it requires treasonable intent.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I am much concerned about this, about the fair construction as to the words, if that is the natural effect of the act, that is one thing, but it seems to be objectionable.

Mr. WOLL. That takes in the allegiance hereby defined by one owing allegiance to the United States by the treasonable intent as heretofore defined.

The COURT. The word "by" is here.

Mr. WOLL. Treasonable intent heretofore defined.

1232 The COURT. Yes; there is a "by" in the line above in pencil.

Mr. WOLL. Well, mine hasn't got that.

The COURT. What do you want me to do? Do you want me to take out something?

Mr. BERTRAM. Or, if; that is the natural effect of the act. That is the only thing, I think, that might be objectionable.

The COURT. What do you say?

Mr. WOLL. What do you want, Mr. Warnholtz?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I wish to have taken out, "or, if, that is the natural effect of the act."

Mr. FINN. That is the exact instruction that was given in the Cramer case.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I am not much concerned with the Cramer case. I have read that case, and we have an opinion as to what is good law, and what is bad law. I have read some law that would almost make you shudder, and the Cramer case is one of them, also the Steffan case.

Mr. FINN. It seems to me, the way the defense counsel is being confused here about treasonable intent, it seems to me the difference between treasonable intent and a just interpretation of an act that is performed. Now, then, you say definitely 1233 that act has been done with treasonable intent. Now, then, you get away from treasonable intent, you say that particular act has to be the kind of an act which a Jury by a fair construction believes is directed in furtherance of the design.

The COURT. I think 33 is all right.

Mr. BERTRAM. We would like to have stricken out, "or, if, that is the natural effect of the act."

Mr. FINN. It is good law.

The COURT. Anything wrong with 34?

Mr. BERTRAM. My objection to that is it would confuse the Jury. The precise definition referred to by the court is not clear. It is so far removed from the constitutional definition of treason.

The COURT. My dear sir, in adhering to the enemy, giving them aid and comfort, those are one of the very things, very thing with which this defendant is charged. What are you referring to now, 34?

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes, 34.

The COURT. "Adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort," and words of similar import in the constitution
1234 mean in general any intentional act done with treasonable intent as heretofore defined by one owing allegiance to the United States, which clearly indicates want of loyalty to the United States and a sympathy with its enemies, and which by fair construction, is directly and intentionally done in furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemy, or to strengthen the enemy, or weaken the power of the United States to resist or attack the enemy.

Now, that isn't hedged. Just about how you may limit your question and still leave anything, I don't know.

Mr. WOLL. I don't think I understand the objection to it. Would you mind telling me what your objection is?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It is withdrawn.

Mr. WOLL. Judge, may we go back now to 32? I feel that is rather strange, and may I make this suggestion to you, to put in 32, it might be better if we put it in there, "although not explicitly set forth in either the constitutional or statutory provisions, an intent to adhere to the enemy and give them aid and comfort—" It might be better to put that in that way.

The COURT. Well, I think it would.

1235 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No objection to that.

The COURT. Where is that?

Mr. WOLL. Unless you have no objection, we desire——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We have no objection to inserting that, Judge.

The COURT. I am inserting "to adhere and to give aid and comfort to the enemy."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all right.

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

The COURT. And then to adhere and to give aid and comfort, there is no treason. Now, 35 is next.

Mr. BERTRAM. 35. We believe that that destroys the entire theory of the defense of relationship of father and son in this case. The court starts out the instruction by saying, "Regardless of any blood relationship which may have existed between Herbert Haupt and Hans Max Haupt—" etc.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There, you have considered, your Honor, the relationship between father and son. Apparently, according to some of the instructions as the law is generally to some extent, it limits the law.

The COURT. Well, in 37 I say, "If you believe the defendant's intention in doing what he did during the period from June 1236 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, was not in any way to injure the United States, but merely to assist his son,

Herbert Haupt, as an individual, as distinguished from assisting him in his purpose, if such existed, of aiding the German Reich, or of injuring the United States, the defendant must be found Not Guilty.

Now, in this instruction, number 35, we do say that if he committed the act and the father knew the act was intentionally with knowledge of the fact that the boy was an enemy. Well, if he had no knowledge of the fact——

Mr. WOLL. That is why we get it in here. With knowledge of the fact.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right. It would mean, we didn't need the other one at all. We wouldn't need the other one at all, because it there was no knowledge of the facts, we don't need the father and son theory. This instruction would apply to every person. This is an instruction where I think we ought to separate the thing. We should have possibly such change.

The COURT. Do you think 35 is all right?

Mr. WOLL. Yes, we do.

The COURT. I don't see anything wrong with it in the light of what we said.

Mr. BERTRAM. It says even if a father was intending only to aid his son, if he had knowledge of the fact re-1237 garding the enemy status, it doesn't make any difference what the purpose of his actions.

Mr. WOLL. We have the treasonable intent heretofore defined.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If the father committed it and it was done for the purpose of aiding treason, then we would say it was performed intentionally and with knowledge of the fact he was an enemy agent, and done with treasonable intent as heretofore defined.

Mr. FINN. I think we are avoiding all possible danger there.

Mr. BERTRAM. You are telling them of the relationship, your Honor.

The COURT. I have no right to help my son commit treason, particularly if I do it with treasonable intent.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. If that could be brought out.

The COURT. I am content with it. What about 36?

Mr. BERTRAM. Our objection for that is that the paragraph doesn't speak of the necessity of proving the enemy status at the time charged in the indictment, namely, June 17, 1942, to July 17, 1942, is not mentioned in the paragraph at all, and is 1238 not even limited to the overt acts as to them.

The COURT. Well, we will insert a second line that by the general principles, for instance, you will find if beyond a reasonable doubt that during the period between June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, Herbert Haupt was an agent, and so on. Now 37.

Mr. WOLL. Your Honor, I would like to go back to 35, if I may.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. To the particular instruction, the only thing I have wondered is about the words, "of any act or acts performed by Hans Max Haupt."

That is the third line, if we have to prove an act performed by him, which has been alleged in the indictment.

Mr. BERTRAM. What is that paragraph?

Mr. WOLL. 35. It is a specific instruction.

The COURT. How do you want to change it?

Mr. WOLL. Would it do to say this, "or in consequence of any act or acts performed by Hans Max Haupt as alleged in the indictment"?

The COURT. As alleged in the indictment and submitted for your consideration in these instructions?

Mr. WOLL. Something like that.

1239 Mr. BERTRAM. Where is that?

The COURT. After Haupt, in the third line.

Mr. BERTRAM. As alleged in the indictment. Don't you think that we should also say, "if you believe that any acts were performed"?

Mr. FINN. That could be put in there also.

The COURT. "Regardless of any blood relationship which may have existed between Herbert Haupt and Hans Max Haupt, if you find that the natural effect or consequences of any act or acts, as alleged in the indictment submitted to you for your consideration, if any were performed."

Mr. BERTRAM. That goes to the entire indictment.

The COURT. Regardless of blood relationship, blood relationship which may have existed between Herbert Haupt and Hans Max Haupt, if you find that the natural effect or consequence of any act or acts performed by Hans Max Haupt was to give aid and comfort to Herbert Haupt in his capacity as an enemy agent, and that such act or acts were performed intentionally with knowledge of the fact that he was an enemy agent, and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined, then such act or acts were treasonable in character.

Mr. WOLL. What instruction are we now on?

1240 Mr. BERTRAM. 39 will be next.

Mr. FINN. Do you have any further objections to that one?

Mr. BERTRAM. I have no further objections.

Mr. FINN. And this particular one is 35.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Not in addition to those stated.

Mr. BERTRAM. Now, 39 gives the definition of the overt act in criminal law as used, etc. The objection is that in treason the overt act is different from an overt act in ordinary criminal offences, and the objection is that in treason the act itself must manifest——

The COURT. I am against you on that. I will strike out the words, "in criminal law", if you want.

Mr. BERTRAM. I don't know that that makes any difference one way or the other, the words "in criminal law."

The same comment I will make as to paragraph 40. Paragraph 41, I think it is confusing. The court says it may be a perfectly innocent act standing by itself. It is not—I don't think it is a complete statement. I don't know if perhaps a word can be inserted following there, "but it must be in some manner in furtherance——"

Mr. WOLL. I will make this suggestion also, if your 1241 Honor please. It might be better to say the overt act in itself may be perfectly an innocent appearing act, because the act can be an innocent act, as you see, of itself, right when it is done, in furtherance of treason, then it loses itself as an innocent act when done in furtherance of treason.

The COURT. I think that is a little more accurate.

Mr. WOLL. Yes, if your Honor please.

The COURT. What is the 259 Fed.?

Mr. FINN. 259 Fed?

The COURT. 677.

Mr. FINN. That is the Fricke versus United States case, during the last war, but that never went up.

The COURT. Judge Mayer, he was a good lawyer. He was a very good lawyer, and Judge Gaffey was the United States attorney.

Mr. WOLL. Maybe I am too cautious, Judge; I don't know.

Mr. FINN. We would rather be cautious than be required to do this over again.

The COURT. Which one are you speaking of—41?

Mr. FINN. "Perfectly innocent appearing act" perhaps would be safer. I think perhaps that if "but" is put in there, that will clear that up, and it makes it perfectly clear and proper.

The COURT. Standing by itself?

Mr. FINN. When you connect it up with——

1242 Mr. BERTRAM. I believe words "innocent appearing," it helps somewhat.

Mr. FINN. I think that will clear it up, Mr. Bertram.

Mr. BERTRAM. You put a "but" in there, but it must be in furtherance——

The COURT. I think I am content with that.

Mr. BERTRAM. Are you going to make any change there?

The COURT. Put in a "but".

Mr. BERTRAM. But not putting in the word "appearing"?

The COURT. No.

Mr. BERTRAM. Now, in paragraph 43, the objection is mostly to the form of the instruction. Ordinarily the court instructs the Jury that it is necessary to prove so and so, and unless it is proven, the defendant should be found Not Guilty. Here it anticipates that the Jury is going to find him Guilty, because it says it is necessary before the defendant can be found Guilty, that so and so shall be established. We believe it should be stated in just the reverse, then, unless those things are established, the defendant should be found Not Guilty.

Then there was one further suggestion, using the word "alleged".

1243 The COURT. How do you want that?

Mr. BERTRAM. That unless the crime charged against the defendant is established beyond a reasonable doubt, and so forth, the defendant should be found Not Guilty. Winding up the instruction that way.

The COURT. I haven't any objection to inserting the word and putting it in the other way, right following 43.

Mr. BERTRAM. You mean in the paragraph following, you say you have no objection?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Before we pass 43, just before the words, "the giving"—one, two, three, four, five, six—the sixth line of the paragraph—he said, "alleged adherence, and the giving, the alleged giving," you can insert the words, "alleged giving."

The COURT. How do you want that phrased now? I want to hitch it onto this. I don't want to take their minds away from this subject.

Mr. BERTRAM. A good sentence would be——

The COURT. Put it this way: "As established beyond a reasonable doubt, not only that the defendant intentionally treacherously and treasonably adhered to give aid and comfort to the 1244 enemy alleged in the indictment, but also that the said defendant, in furtherance of said alleged adherence in the alleged giving of aid and comfort, intentionally and treasonably performed at least one of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions.

Mr. BERTRAM. Could we say: "The Jury must find the defendant Not Guilty"?

The COURT. You left out the important thing.

1245 The COURT. "Has also established said alleged overt act."

I am going to insert "has also established said alleged overt act beyond a reasonable doubt by the testimony of two direct witnesses to the same act, you will find the defendant not guilty."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That will be 43-A?

The COURT. I have inserted that in the third line from the bottom.

Mr. BERTRAM. You are going to insert that in both paragraphs?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. FINN. The record will show, I take it, that it was given at the suggestion of the defendant?

The COURT. Yes; do you see anything wrong with it?

Mr. WOLL. We do not like the term as I read it, but if your Honor wants to give it that way——

Mr. BERTRAM. On paragraph 44, I note on page 12 the Court again makes the same statement. I do not think the Court wants to say that in two places.

The COURT. Where?

Mr. BERTRAM. On page 12.

Mr. FINN. What paragraph?

1246 Mr. BERTRAM. Paragraph 50, I think it is: "More than one of the submitted overt acts." Both are on the same subject matter and also begins in the same way, "It is not necessary."

The COURT. Well, suppose we take out 44?

Mr. BERTRAM. All right.

The COURT. Then that paragraph I have inserted will bear the number 44.

Mr. BERTRAM. As to 45, I was wondering as to whether or not "foregoing provision of the Constitution" will be clear to the jury when it is so far away from the original definition?

The COURT. I think you have got to assume that the jury has some intelligence.

Mr. BERTRAM. Then in the last sentence, "By the term 'witnesses' is meant persons who testify to the commission of any of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration."

We think it should say, "by the term 'witnesses' is meant persons who themselves actually witnessed the commission of the alleged overt act."

The COURT. The trouble with that is you say a witness is a witness.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think that is my opinion; your Honor is trying to clear it up.

1247 The COURT. Here is the point, when you in your limitation say a witness is a witness, the danger is there. You want to limit the matters which a person knows by his own senses?

Mr. BERTRAM. Yes.

The COURT. I do not think the statute or the Constitution requires the limitation to what a man know by his senses.

Mr. BERTRAM. May I clear it by an illustration? For example, the witnesses Majerczak or Hamby, the way the language is used here are persons who testified to the commission of an alleged overt act in the eyes of the jury.

Mr. FINN. I do not think so.

The COURT. No.

Mr. BERTRAM. They have testified regarding acts that are also alleged in the indictment, on the very point that the——

The COURT. "Rather than to any alleged admissions made" that takes that right out.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think that is the danger.

The COURT. "By the term 'witnesses' used in this connection the Court does not mean persons who testify to admissions, if any, purportedly made by the defendant before the commencement of this trial."

1248 Mr. BERTRAM. That is not the reason. That is not the reason. We do not make that contention.

The COURT. I do not think it is for the Court to say "a witness is a witness" or "a witness is one who has witnessed." This says: "Neither admissions, if you believe any were made by the defendant nor persons who took the stand to testify to such admissions, if any are 'witnesses' within the meaning of the foregoing provisions of the Constitution, and neither such admissions, if any, nor any persons testifying to them, if any, can be considered by the jury as a substitute of the constitutional requirement."

That word "of" is changed to "for".

Mr. BERTRAM. It would need something else.

The COURT. "By the term 'witnesses' is meant persons who testify to the commission of any of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration by the court rather than to any alleged admissions made about them."

I do not feel very strongly about that. What do you say?

Mr. WOLL. We think it is limiting on the government. We put it in there. We feel it is limiting us. If they do not want that in, all right; we will take it out.

1249 Mr. BERTRAM. We say it is tautological and repetitious, repetitious language, if we could use the term "witnesses may be persons who actually witnessed the commission of the alleged overt act."

Mr. HURLEY. We object to any language such as that.

Mr. WOLL. We will take it out if he wants to take it out.

Mr. HURLEY. His suggestion merely confuses it, in my opinion.

Mr. FINN. We want to have it clear.

Mr. BERTRAM. The only objection is it is tautological and repetition, but sometimes the repetition tends to clarification. I think it would in that particular sentence, if the Court would adopt that suggestion of "actual witness on commission."

Mr. WOLL. We will take out the last sentence—that is, if they agree to it. Mr. Bertram suggests we leave it out. We will be glad to leave it out.

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not know if my suggestion was good, taking it out, but I do feel that——

The COURT. I have said there must be two direct witnesses to the same act.

Mr. BERTRAM. Is there anything wrong or objectionable about putting in who actually saw the actual commission?

The COURT. That is something more than the statute
1250 requires. I have said direct witnesses. I have limited the language with the word "direct" so I will leave that there.

Mr. BERTRAM. I mean in the last sentence now.

Mr. HURLEY. We suggest that it either stand or else take it completely out.

The COURT. If you want to I will take it out. If you do not want it out, it will stand.

Mr. HURLEY. It will stand as far as we are concerned.

The COURT. "Unless the Government has established beyond a reasonable doubt not only that the defendant intentionally, traitorously and treasonably adhered to and gave aid and comfort to the enemy, as alleged in the indictment, but also that the said defendant, in furtherance of said alleged adherence and the alleged giving of aid and comfort, intentionally and treasonably performed at least one of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions, and has also established said overt act beyond a reasonable doubt by the testimony of two direct witnesses to the same act, you will find the defendant not guilty."

Mr. BERTRAM. I have no objection to that 43–A.

1251 Mr. WOLL. I object to the beginning, "Unless the Government has established"—also "adhered to and gave aid and comfort to the enemy, as alleged in the indictment—in furtherance of said alleged adherence—intentionally and treasonably performed"—and so on.

Mr. BERTRAM. It was correct as stated. It is correct as stated by the instruction.

Mr. WOLL. That is what I have in mind.

The COURT: I was thinking that I could make it better. The trouble is that I have got not only an "and" and "but also." I have "and" again which is not very good English.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think the English is quite good. I do not think that is a criticism.

The COURT. Let me have that for a minute. I think that is all right. I do not think the jurors decide cases on grammar, anyhow.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, I will agree to the elimination of the entire sentence, "by the term 'witnesses' is meant persons" which Mr. Woll has suggested.

Mr. WOLL. As long as it is definitely clear in the record——

The COURT. You will be content.

Mr. BERTRAM. With your previous statement: yes, sir.

1251-A Mr. WOLL. There is one other thought I had in that connection, if your Honor please. I do not know whether there are any "requested" instructions along that line, but I assume the Court will mark the requested instructions of the 1252 defendant which your Honor thinks have been given, or given in substance. I do not like to have the defendant have anything in the requested instructions, and in that particular last sentence, and say that their requested instruction was refused.

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not see why Mr. Woll is always tying——

Mr. WOLL. I have gone through one case, up to the upper court, to the Court of Appeals.

Mr. BERTRAM. I submit that he makes a statement and tries to have us——

The COURT. Just a minute. I do not think that last sentence adds anything to the instruction.

Mr. WOLL. Does your Honor understand what I said the last time when we were in here?

The COURT. Well, I might go through the instructions which you gentlemen have tendered.

Mr. WOLL. I see.

Mr. BERTRAM. Now on 47 "The Court is submitting to your consideration as possible overt acts of treason the following alleged acts charged in the indictment."

It is our contention that this manner of statement indicates to the jury that the court considers those that are enumerated as sufficiently proved.

1253 The COURT. How would you state it?

Mr. BERTRAM. I would state that the Court is submitting to the jury for their consideration upon the question of the guilt or innocence of the defendant in this case the following overt acts alleged in the indictment.

The COURT. Well, that is the big thing you want in. They stand in there and they can be considered on the question of intent, if only one person testifies, but if they are submitted as overt acts on treason——

Mr. BERTRAM. I understand that your Honor was submitting twelve overt acts which you have designated.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. And then you ask how I think they should be submitted. I think the Court submits to the jury for their consideration——

Mr. WOLL. As what?

The COURT. Overt acts of treason, as what?

Mr. BERTRAM. The following overt acts as alleged in the indictment.

The COURT. No; they are overt acts of treason. We are talking about treason.

Mr. BERTRAM. This paragraph in connection with the paragraph that follows implies that the Court is telling the 1254 jury that these acts have been established by the evidence in the case. It invades the province of the jury in my opinion and practically excludes the question of guilt or innocence as to those submitted overt acts from the jury's consideration.

The paragraph following says that the others were not proven by the degree of proof required and the inference is that they were proven.

Mr. WOLL. May I call your attention to paragraph 51, if your Honor please?

The COURT. "By submitting the alleged overt acts above read to your consideration, however, this Court does not mean to intimate or infer in any way, either its belief or disbelief that any alleged overt acts of treason have been committed by this defendant, or that any overt acts of treason have been proved by the required two witnesses."

Mr. BERTRAM. I have remarked that is removed by two or three paragraphs from 47 and the implication is still there that the "possible acts" which is the term used have been proven and they have not been submitted to the jury for their determination upon the question of guilt or innocence of the defendant. We go into other subjects in paragraph 48 and 49.

The COURT. They are all overt acts. I suppose we are talking about overt acts?

1255 Mr. HURLEY. Each one of them relates to overt acts, straight down to 51.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think that is a matter which invades the province of the jury, in effect amounts to a direction to the jury on submitted overt acts.

The COURT. "As possible" "as possible."

Mr. BERTRAM. I think the implication is clear when you read the two paragraphs, 47 and 48 together, that the jury will get the impression.

The COURT. They have got a duty and they will get impressions. You cannot, just because they are jurymen, expect they will leave their common sense at home. A juryman is not supposed to be without judgment.

Mr. BERTRAM. Will your Honor submit that in neutral language?

The COURT. I am trying to. If they are not—what do you want me to call them? I have got to call them overt acts of treason.

Mr. BERTRAM. Can you not say the Court submits to the jury the following overt acts alleged in the indictment which would read as follows?

Mr. HURLEY. Overt acts of what indictment?

Mr. BERTRAM. Can you say overt acts of treason?

Mr. HURLEY. That is what he said.

1256 The COURT. I do not think you are helping it. There is "possible" and "alleged" and I am just thinking, you cannot try a man for treason and then not talk about treason.

I am entirely willing to bring 51 right to follow the twelve acts which I give.

Mr. BERTRAM. That would certainly help some.

The COURT. I do not think it needs any help.

Mr. HURLEY. I do not either.

Mr. BERTRAM. Do you want to renumber them?

The COURT. Change the number, it would be——

Mr. BERTRAM. 47 to 48.

The COURT. This will be 48.

Mr. BERTRAM. That is, beginning with "By submitting the alleged overt acts——

The COURT. Yes. And 48 will become 49, and 49 will become 50, and 50 will become 51.

Mr. BERTRAM. The paragraph 50, the objection is that this instruction directs a verdict of guilty against the defendant and it excludes the chief theory of defense of father and son relationship and aiding Herbert merely as a son; and also, I do not know whether or not the word "direct witness" is so clear.

1257 The COURT. Well, you have got "unlawfully" "and traitorously". We will insert "with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined."

Mr. BERTRAM. Where is that to go?

The COURT. It is in the eighth line.

Mr. BERTRAM. "Did adhere"?

The COURT. "And treasonably—and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined" make it.

Mr. BERTRAM. "Treasonable intent as hereinbefore"?

The COURT. "And, with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined did adhere to and give aid and comfort to the said Herbert Haupt as an enemy, all as alleged in the indictment and that in furtherance of or in carrying out—with said treasonable intent performed any of the above alleged overt acts submitted for your consideration."

There is "treasonable intent" again—"and that two direct witnesses have testified to such act, then you may find the defendant guilty".

Mr. BERTRAM. The same comment I have made before, the reverse of that proposition being stated, "if you do not so find the defendant——"

Mr. WOLL. Well, we have it one time that the Government must prove. That means find him guilty. In the beginning did we not say if we had proved him guilty, they must find him
1258 guilty? He has told them if they do not find—the converse. We have already told them before, if we do not prove him guilty "you must find him not guilty".

The COURT. How do you want that ended up?

Mr. BERTRAM. "Otherwise you must find him not guilty"—"the defendant not guilty".

The COURT. I have added that to 50, as the new 50.

Mr. BERTRAM. "Otherwise you must find the defendant not guilty".

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. All right. On paragraph 52, "The success or failure of any alleged mission upon which Herbert Haupt may have been engaged——"

The COURT. What are those overt acts? Have you got those?

Mr. HURLEY. They are 10 to 17 and 20 to 23, inclusive.

Mr. BERTRAM. 10 to 17 and 20 to 23.

The COURT. I do not understand this.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Those are all the numbers, your Honor. This is 10 to 17, and this is 20 to 23, which makes up twelve.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court is ready for the next one, paragraph 52—I think it is still 52—"The success or failure of any al-1259 leged mission upon which Herbert Haupt may have been engaged, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that he was engaged on a mission for the German government".

It does not refer to the time of the overt act, or does not state, "If you believe he was engaged during the period of June 17, 1942 to July——"

The COURT: "During the period mentioned for the German Government—" to July?

Mr. BERTRAM. On paragraph 53, this seems to be the fourth time that the Court has referred to them finding the defendant guilty. It uses that same manner of speaking—"before you can find the defendant guilty"—anticipates that they are going to find him guilty. I say also it is the fourth time that the Court has used "find him guilty."

Mr. WOLL. They cannot find him guilty unless it has been proven.

The COURT. I think you are overly critical of that "before you can find him guilty", got to find all those things. I do not know how you can state that any better than it is.

Mr. WOLL. He would like to have each instruction wind up with "Not guilty."

The COURT. That does not do any good.

1260 Mr. BERTRAM. I want to make the further objections, if the Court please; to the sentence which reads: "This is not necessary, for every man in law is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts if they are deliberately done."

Our objection is that the statement is incorrect, when it is applied to the crime of treason, because the specific intent is the necessary thing in a crime of treason; it is the intent that makes the act that otherwise would not be treason. This says specific intent appears not to be necessary.

Mr. HURLEY. Further, it says what is meant.

Mr. FINN. It does not say that at all, if your Honor please. The only difference between any specific intent and constructive intent is where one is engaged in the commission of some unlawful act and commits some other offense, then the law will carry over the constructive intent, such as when one commits robbery and in the midst kills a man. Specific intent can be proved from the direct act but not by direct testimony, being a mental process.

Mr. BERTRAM. In robbery or murder that is the point I want to bring out—in robbery or murder. You have not got the 1261 situation in treason. If a man robs, he robs; in treason it is intent.

Mr. FINN. Intent may be inferred from the acts.

Mr. BERTRAM. You cannot infer intent from the acts. You must have specific proof of intent to make it treason.

The COURT. I will let this stand.

Mr. FINN. Specific intent is specific intent.

Mr. BERTRAM. In violence you have your overt act.

The COURT. Let it stand.

Mr. BERTRAM. And the next sentence follows is also objectionable from the same ground.

The COURT. Which is that?

Mr. BERTRAM. In the same paragraph, "Anyone who is conscious of his acts—" and so on.

The COURT. Well, that is taken care of.

Mr. BERTRAM. I do believe that that is erroneous in a treason case. Mr. Woll's analogy to murder and robbery is not at all applicable to treason; specific intent must be proven under all circumstances in treason.

The COURT. How would you prove it? Do you have to prove in every case that the defendant says "I intend to commit treason?"

1262 Mr. BERTRAM. Suppose we should inform the jury that specific intent is not necessary? I think that is what this instruction does.

The COURT. This tells them he must have the intent, but it does not mean that before it goes to the jury somebody must get on the stand and say "John Smith said that he had an intent to commit treason," that is not necessary.

Mr. BERTRAM. In one case buying a car, and giving food, in the other case—not like robbery with a gun, or murder. It is a principle of criminal law which is found in robbery or murder cases. It does not apply in treason cases at all because that is so different.

Mr. WOLL. We are not trying twelve separate acts.

The COURT. The question was giving aid and comfort to the enemy. This man was giving aid and comfort. Is giving aid or comfort——

Mr. BERTRAM. You do not require specific intent to commit treason in that explanation up there.

The COURT. Oh, I think you do. I said, "Is an essential element." I am content with it. What about 54?

Mr. BERTRAM. That is one I think is particularly bad, if 1263 the Court please. It excludes the principal theory of the defense, the giving of aid to his son as a son.

The COURT. You have a theory that I do not think is tenable at all.

Mr. BERTRAM. Then it winds up with the statement, "the fact his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense." I think that is a very improper statement.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I think it is inconsistent, if the Court please, with some of the instructions we have had heretofore. This one is really bad in the light it nullifies some of the instructions based on father and son.

The COURT. It does not say that he did it to aid the enemy. He said that he did it to help his son.

Mr. BERTRAM. It makes the outright statement, "the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense."

Certainly that is a defense, that certainly is a defense that he had no motive to aid the enemy.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The alternative would be he wanted to aid his son as a son. That, apart from the preceding instruction, is a defense.

1264 The COURT. Well, suppose a citizen of the United States has a son that goes out of the country and comes back, going to aid Germany in this case, and says, "I am going to buy some dynamite. I am going to blow up a bridge."

The father says: "Well, I do not want to aid Germany. I do not want to hurt the United States, but you are my son; I want you to get along in the world. You have chosen to cast your lot with Germany. I want to see you succeed. While I do not want to hurt the United States—I do not want to aid Germany—I do want to help you succeed, son; I will get that dynamite for you." What is that? You tell me.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. He got the dynamite, your Honor, for the purpose of aiding the enemy, because he could not aid his son without aiding the enemy. There was no difference.

The COURT. He buys a car for him under the same circumstances.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. He buys an automobile for the boy, and what is the difference if he bought an automobile?

The COURT. The same thing. He bought dynamite to blow the bridge up and he buys the car to take him down to blow it; what is the difference?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We are saying there is no such motive.

1265 If he buys the car so that he can carry dynamite with it, then there is no difference.

The COURT. Are you content with this?

Mr. HURLEY. Yes, we are.

The COURT. Let us go to 55.

Mr. BERTRAM. That is one instruction your Honor, that really does away with the entire father and son theory.

The COURT. You carry that father and son theory further than I think it should go in treason.

Mr. BERTRAM. May I call your Honor's attention to your Honor's actual words, where you tell the jury that the intent of the defendant does not make any difference, that it is no defense as you say here, and the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense. I think that is extremely prejudicial.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is 54—the difference between motive and intent?

Mr. WOLL. There is a lot of difference.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Not in this case. It is the same thing.

The COURT. No. I am content with this. What about 55?

1266 Mr. BERTRAM. That same error I think goes all through the rest of the paragraph, if the Court please. You have repeated it again.

The COURT. I have passed that before. We have to get on. What about 55?

Mr. BERTRAM. What about 55?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We have the same objection as to 54.

Mr. BERTRAM. On paragraph 55 it says it is right for the jury to infer treasonable intent but it omits that safeguard and protection in favor of the innocence of the defendant.

The COURT. I have covered that and I have thrown all the safeguards around him.

Mr. BERTRAM. And all the objections that we stated to paragraph 54. We want to renew those now because I thought they also apply to 55.

The COURT. How about 56?

Mr. BERTRAM. 56. All of the same objections apply to 56, because it tells the jury that circumstantial evidence may prove these things.

The COURT. Prove what?

Mr. BERTRAM. That the motives and intentions of the defendant are purposeless or not of any importance, that circum-

1267 stantial evidence may be used to prove any fact, including those facts.

The COURT. All right, we will go on to 57.

Mr. BERTRAM. 57 I think is very prejudicial to the defendant because it informs the jury that they may infer from words and conduct as much as six or seven years prior as overt acts.

The COURT. All right.

Mr. BERTRAM. Treasonable intent.

The COURT. Overruled. 58.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think 58 is highly prejudicial. It carries forward the other paragraph, 57, and particularly we object to the language: "Such statements of the defendant, if you believe they were made——"

The COURT. What do you want me to do? Do you want me to take that out?

Mr. BERTRAM. I think it should go out; yes.

The COURT. You want 58 out?

Mr. BERTRAM. I would like to eliminate the last part of the last sentence "but those statements, if you believe any were made, may be borne in mind by you in determining what is intent—" I do not object to what precedes that.

The COURT. Oh, well; no. That would not be a fair statement. What about 59?

1268 Mr. BERTRAM. With respect to 59, some of these alleged statements I understand were as remote as six or seven years and they are used to prove overt acts. We do not believe that should be allowed.

The COURT. Do you want me to strike that out; number 59?

Mr. BERTRAM. I think it should be stricken, your Honor; the entire 59.

The COURT. Yes. Do you want that all stricken out?

Mr. BERTRAM. I would like to have 58 and 59 both entirely stricken out, if that is the Court's suggestion.

We do want the Court to give the instruction which we have submitted upon the lawfulness of persons to express opinions.

The COURT. No. I think 58 and 59 are fair instructions. I do not think it would be fair to the defendant to strike all of them. I do not think it would be fair to your client to strike either 58 or 59. The same is true of 60.

Mr. BERTRAM. We would want the Court to give the instructions that we submitted.

The COURT. We will go on. What about 60?

1269 Mr. BERTRAM. The words in the fifth line, "in committing, if he did commit", I think it should state "which he is alleged to have".

The COURT. Anything else?

Mr. BERTRAM. It should say "at the time he is alleged to have committed", instead of "in committing", instead of "in comitting"—a state of mind at the time he is alleged to have committed any of these.

The COURT. It says "if he did commit".

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not know if that is the same meaning or not.

The COURT. Anything else?

Mr. WOLL. We gave you a different instruction later on 61, if your Honor please.

The COURT. You did give me one last night, did you not?

Mr. WOLL. Yes, sir.

Mr. HURLEY. That is in place of 61.

The COURT. Have you made any suggestion with reference to 60?

Mr. HURLEY. No; it may be the same as far as we are concerned.

Mr. LINN. 60 is all right, your Honor.

Mr. BERTRAM. 60 won't go to the jury?

1270 The COURT. What do you mean, this is submitted in place of 61?

Mr. WOLL. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. What is wrong with 61?

Mr. WOLL. Just a moment, let me read 61.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. We thought we may have inadvertently left out some testimony along the line. That has been covered and we submit the instruction which would be more embracive of what has been testified and which should be narrowed.

In other words, you tried to limit the government more in the second one. We may not have at all done so, but that was our thought.

The COURT. You have a copy of that?

Mr. BERTRAM. No.

The COURT. They gave a copy to you last night.

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not know if I can find it, your Honor.

The COURT. This will be instruction 61. This is government's instruction 61.

1270-A "You are further instructed that the testimony of Ernest Peter Burger and the testimony of other witnesses, if any, concerning alleged events, which may have taken place in Germany and France at the time of Herbert Haupt's alleged stay in those countries, and the testimony if any of any witness concerning alleged events in Florida, and all exhibits in evidence which may have been identified by any witness who may have testified to any such events, and all testimony, if any, of witnesses concerning alleged acts of Herbert Haupt and alleged utterances and statements purportedly made by him, both prior to and during his stay in Chicago in 1942, and out of the presence of this defendant, and all articles purportedly taken from the person of Herbert Haupt while in Chicago in June 1942 and admitted in evidence, have been admitted for the sole and limited purpose of determining whether the said Herbert Haupt was or was not an agent of the Government of the German Reich and an enemy of the United States as charged in the indictment, and you are to consider this evidence solely on this question."

1271 Mr. BERTRAM. I do not see any objection.

Mr. WOLL. That is 61.

Mr. FINN. As this is a limiting instruction, if you have any objection to it I wish you would state what it is so that we can include any element you desire to have put into it at this time. It is an instruction which favors your client.

The COURT. Anything else you want in it?

Mr. BERTRAM. I have not got it. I cannot suggest anything further.

The COURT. 62.

Mr. BERTRAM. In the parenthetical part, "if you find that he was an enemy agent and that he did come to this country as an German Agent—"it should be qualified by a statement expressing the thought "and that he continued acting as such."

The COURT. There is not a scintilla of evidence in this case as far as I see that he changed his character after he came here.

Mr. BERTRAM. Nevertheless, it must be proved by the government, that at the time of the overt act that he was so engaged and it does not limit it to that time; it should say "if you find that he was an enemy agent" during the period from and 1272 to or acting as an enemy agent during the period from and to.

Mr. WOLL. If you want it "came to this country and was here as a German agent as the indictment alleges"——

Mr. BERTRAM. "If you find that he was acting as an enemy agent during the period from June 17th."

Mr. WOLL. Let us have again "came to this country and was here as a German agent."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is your suggestion, Mr. Woll; not ours.

Mr. BERTRAM. "If you find that he is acting as an enemy agent during the period from June"——

Mr. WOLL. You have said that so many times, if your Honor please, if he was acting as a German agent. Evidently the purpose of that is to get the jury to believe you have in your mind some question whether or not he was acting as an agent.

The COURT. I am not fixing any date on that agent's part. What about 63?

Mr. BERTRAM. Can you not using the wording "If you find that he was an agent"?

The COURT. No, no. I am just going to let it as it is.

Mr. BERTRAM. According to the time of the knowledge,
1273 your Honor, that he was then an enemy, I think that is a reasonable request.

The COURT. No. I think that is all right.

Mr. BERTRAM. You don't need to put it if you find——

Mr. WOLL. That is in the sentence preceding. I am giving you that.

Mr. BERTRAM. The parenthetical clause, "if you find that he was an enemy agent."

The COURT. I do not think that is fair, if you want my honest conviction about that, trying to get me to say something in there and there is not a scintilla or shred of evidence in the record.

Mr. BERTRAM. I think there is.

Mr. HUDLEY. Nothing but the statement of counsel.

Mr. BERTRAM. He violated orders. The evidence is he violated orders in going to visit his parents.

The COURT. Not a scintilla of evidence that he ceased to be what he started out to be.

Mr. BERTRAM. The government's own witness stated that.

The COURT. What about 63?

Mr. BERTRAM. I have no comment to make there. 64, whether the indictment goes to the jury——

The COURT. The indictment always goes to the jury.

1274 Mr. BERTRAM. When a large number of overt acts have been withdrawn?

The COURT. But not entirely withdrawn, only withdrawn as to certain overt acts.

Mr. WOLL. You have told them which were withdrawn.

The COURT. I think I will put in a sheet of paper to indicate——

Mr. WOLL. Pardon me?

The COURT. I think I will put in a sheet of paper to indicate which ones, instead of saying 10 to 17 inclusive.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There is one instruction we have passed there which we would like taken out. That refers to "there shall be no presumption of any kind arising from the fact that the defendant did not take the witness stand." I should like to have it stricken. I believe that is the right of the defendant to have it stricken.

Mr. WOLL. If you do not want to make any objection——

Mr. BERTRAM. We might look at it in the paragraph.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We want it to be in, in the exact wording we suggest, or we do not want it.

Mr. WOLL. You tendered an instruction?

Mr. BERTRAM. We tendered an instruction.

Mr. WOLL. Shall we take out the tendered instruction

1275 16 they tell me it is. What is the objection to that?

The COURT. He wants it taken out.

Mr. BERTRAM. And in place give the instruction that we tendered, in the language that it was tendered.

The COURT. I have that in here. You do not want to give that?

Mr. BERTRAM. This is the way we have tendered the instruction on that point: "The fact that the defendant did not testify in this case must have no influence whatsoever upon you in arriving at your verdict."

Mr. FINN. What is the difference between that and the one "not take into consideration?"

Mr. BERTRAM. We could eliminate the whole paragraph 16 and in place thereof merely say "The fact that the defendant did not testify in this case must have no influence upon you whatsoever in arriving at your verdict."

Mr. WOLL. I think it should be pointed out that he has that right under the law.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It is a right that he has not taken. If ours was taken, the one we offered—if that is rejected, then we rather have none.

The COURT. Which is yours?

1276 Mr. BERTRAM. It is the fifth one if you still have the order, the fifth instruction. It is a very short one.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We suggest 16 be stricken and we also want to suggest that in place thereof, the one we offered in place thereof be taken out. We withdraw our number 5.

The COURT. You withdraw your 5?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. And 16 be stricken out.

Mr. WOLL. I think your Honor should instruct on that very definitely.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We have a right, the government has no right, is my understanding.

Mr. WOLL. What do you mean you have a right and we have no right?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. They have no right to an instruction on that point while the defense has.

The COURT. I am striking 16.

Mr. WOLL. I would like if you could give that a little consideration for this reason: How do we know that the jury may not be of the impression that the government has a right to call the defendant to testify and that the government is not giving him his opportunity?

1277 The COURT. Let me ask you, gentlemen, do you feel you have a right to comment on his not testifying?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Do you mean in the argument?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No; not if that instruction is out. We shall make no comment about it.

Mr. WOLL. I did have a situation arise where after the case went to the jury the jury returned a not guilty verdict and the reason they returned a not guilty verdict was they thought we prevented the defendant from taking the stand. I do not want that question to arise.

The COURT. I do not make the law.

Mr. WOLL. I think you can give the instruction. That is perfectly proper and legal.

The COURT. The defendant has withdrawn his request for number 5 which is: "The fact that the defendant did not testify in this case must have no influence whatsoever upon you in arriving at your verdict."

They ask the withdrawal of number 16. It will be withdrawn. I had intended to add to 15, but I think we had better make it 16, a paragraph saying that instructions had been numbered for the convenience of the court and counsel, but the numbers do not 1278 in any way limit or change the instructions, that the instructions shall be considered as one whole.

Mr. BERTRAM. "For the convenience of court and counsel"?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. FINN. There is only one point that concerns me in connection with that, your Honor, on the withdrawal of this instruction and that is this: There are a number of cases in which there have been dealth penalties and the lower courts have been severely criticised by the upper courts for not giving the instructions in that same character with reference to the failure of the defendant to take the stand, things of that fundamental nature, even though no requests was made for such an instruction.

The Courts have said that the lower courts should have given the instruction regardless of any request which may have been made; such fundamental things as that.

Mr. WOLL. Perhaps, if your Honor please, we can check some law in that regard and if we find anything we could submit it. Even though I do not believe I am in error about that, I would like to check it.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The record is here and showed that we agreed upon it, and the record will be open.

1279 The COURT. The chances are about half and half that when the case gets to another court, other counsel may be in it. Maybe I had better give 5: "The fact the defendant did not take the stand in this case must have no influence whatsoever upon you in arriving at your verdict."

Mr. WOLL. Do you want to hold it, Judge? We can get some cases. You will not instruct the jury until late today. It will not take over a half an hour.

The COURT. How about 5.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We withdraw it.

The COURT. You do not want it?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right; we withdraw it.

Mr. BERTRAM. Even though I am not familiar in that connection, I am familiar with cases that say it was error for the District Attorney or for the States Attorney or for anyone else to comment, other than the defendant himself. I think the defendant may request such instruction, then it may be given, but if we do not request the instruction——

Mr. WOLL. Is it your intention to comment on the instructions in your comment before the jury?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I think the situation is serious.

Mr. WOLL. We do not want error.

1280 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We will look it up, if you wish, but I am quite sure you will find that no one has that right except the defendant, and therefore I withdraw the instruction I asked.

Mr. WOLL. The whole thing is contradictory. This man has been given all of his rights.

Mr WARNHOLTZ. I have read a lot of the last criminal cases, some twenty-five years old.

Mr. WOLL. Do you have any cases on that point?

The COURT. As a matter of fact I have given this instruction. I believe just the way it is in here and it was assigned as error in the Circuit Court of Appeals but it was held not error, but that is the way it was written, number 16 was so written, just exactly that instruction. The man got a substantial sentence, too; a five-year sentence.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Was the question in that case whether or not that instruction was correct?

The COURT. No. If any comment is made upon him not taking the witness stand and if they offer that instruction I am going to put it in.

Mr. BERTRAM. We object to 16.

The COURT. Well it is out. You withdraw your number 5?

1281 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is correct, your Honor.

The COURT. If you comment on his not taking the witness stand—I hope you won't complicate the record.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I have stated I shall not, and I do not think Mr. Bertram will.

Mr. BERTRAM. No; I do not want to unless Mr. Woll comments.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That would be error.

1282 (The several suggestions for the instructions, the discussion concerning which was had in chambers and which said suggestions were consecutively numbered from 1 to 65, all numbered inclusive, and during the course of said discussion said suggestion originally numbered 51 was renumbered 48; said suggestion originally numbered 48 was renumbered 49; said suggestion originally numbered 49 was renumbered 50; said suggestion originally numbered 50 was renumbered 51; which said original suggestions are in words and figures as follows, to wit:)

1283 (The following is a preliminary draft of the Court's instructions, which was furnished to both counsel and which furnished the basis of the foregoing discussions.)

Charge to the Jury

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

1. It is the duty of the court to deliver to you instructions for your guidance in the consideration of the evidence and in your deliberations upon this case.

2. The instructions which the court will give you, insofar as they pertain to the principles of law applicable to the case, must be accepted by you as a binding control and guide in your consideration of the evidence and in your deliberations.

3. The responsibility rests upon you to determine the facts of this case, under the law as the court may give it to you, uninfluenced by any expression of opinion that the court has made or may hereafter make upon matters of fact. The court has not intended at any time during the trial of this case, and does not intend at any time, to express any opinion on any matter of fact, and if the court has expressed or does express any opinion on any matter of fact you are at liberty to disregard such opinion, 1284 and it is your duty to disregard it, if it is different from your own opinion.

4. Your verdict in this case must be reached from a consideration of all the evidence in the case, but if any evidence was admitted and was later stricken out, you must wholly disregard such evidence as was stricken out.

5. During the trial of a law suit it often becomes the duty of counsel for the parties to object to questions, or to evidence; and I instruct you that you shall not take into consideration against such party either such objections or the number of them, nor permit yourselves to be in any way influenced by such objections against the parties.

6. This is a criminal case, and the law in such cases is that a defendant comes into court presumed to be innocent, and that presumption protects him until such time, if such time shall come, when the jury shall believe from the evidence in the case, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant is guilty as charged in the indictment.

7. The guilt of an accused is not to be inferred because 1285 the facts proven are consistent with his guilt, but, on the contrary, before there can be a verdict of guilty you must believe from all the evidence, and beyond a reasonable doubt, that the facts proven are inconsistent with his innocence. If two conclusions can reasonably be drawn from the evidence, one of innocence and one of guilt, you should adopt the former.

8. The defendant on trial has pleaded not guilty. This puts the burden of proving the charges in the indictment upon the Government, and you cannot find the defendant guilty unless, from all the evidence, you believe him guilty of the offense charged in the indictment beyond a reasonable doubt.

9. A reasonable doubt is what the term implies—a doubt founded on reason. It does not mean every conceivable kind of doubt. It does not mean a doubt that may be purely imaginary or fanciful, or one that is merely captious or speculative. It means, simply, an honest doubt that appeals to reason and is founded upon reason. If, after considering all the evidence in the case, you have such a doubt in your mind as would cause you, or any other reasonably prudent person, to pause or hesi-
1286 tate before acting in a grave transaction of your own life, then you have such a doubt as the law contemplates as a reasonable doubt.

10. You are the sole judges of the credibility, and the weight which is to be given to the testimony, of the witnesses who have testified upon this trial. In weighing the testimony of each witness you should carefully scrutinize the same, consider all the circumstances under which the witness testifies; his demeanor on the stand; the relation which he bears to the Government or the defendant; the manner in which he might be affected by the verdict; the extent to which he is corroborated or contradicted by other credible evidence, and, in short, any circumstances that tend to throw light upon his credibility. And, applying these tests which I have just stated, it is for you to determine the weight which is to be given to the testimony of each witness.

11. If you believe from the evidence that any witness in this case has knowingly and wilfully testified falsely on this trial to any matter material to the issues in this case, as I shall 1287 define them to you in these instructions, you are at liberty to disregard the entire testimony of such witness, except insofar as it has been corroborated, if you find it has been corroborated, by other credible evidence or by facts and circumstances proven on the trial.

12. You should not allow either sympathy for the defendant or prejudice against him to influence your deliberations. You should not be influenced by anything other than the law and the evidence in the case. You must also disregard anything that you may have heard from others than witnesses or read in the newspapers concerning the case.

13. Certain witnesses who have testified in this proceeding have admitted that they have been convicted of felonies. You have heard their testimony and observed them while testifying. The fact that a witness has been convicted of a felony does not mean that he cannot tell the truth. You should weigh the testimony of such a witness by the same rules that you would weigh the testimony of any other witness. But the fact that a wit-
1288 ness has been convicted of a felony may be considered by you in determining the credibility of such a witness.

14. The fact that an indictment has been returned is not evidence; nor is the indictment evidence and neither the indictment nor the return thereof should be considered by you as any evidence of the guilt of the defendant. Neither should the indictment be treated by you as raising any kind of presumption or creating any kind of prejudice against the defendant. The indictment is simply the form or manner prescribed by law for preferring a charge against an individual, and must be regarded in that light, and in no other light.

15. You must consider each of the statements which I make to you not merely by itself, but as related to all other points covered by the charge. In other words, you must consider my charge as a whole.

16. You are not to take into consideration, as against the defendant the fact that he did not testify. The law gives to a defendant an absolute privilege to testify or not to testify, as he deems best. If he does go on the witness stand and testify,
1289 then he is like any other witness. If he does not testify, that is not in any sense to be taken against him. He is exercising only the absolute right that is given him by the law. What I mean to say is, that you must give full effect to the provision of the law that the fact that a defendant does not testify shall not create any presumption of guilt against him, and must not be taken into consideration by you against him.

17. Preliminary to your being sworn to act as jurors in this case you were examined by counsel as to your competency and qualifications to act as jurors in this case. As part of such examination each of you answered all questions put to you by counsel for the prosecution and for the defendant. Your answers showed that you were competent and qualified to act as jurors and the parties to this case accepted you as jurors on their faith in the truth of your answers. The answers you then made to such questions in regard to your competency, qualifications, fairness, and lack of prejudice are as binding upon you now as they were then, and should so remain until you are finally discharged from further consideration in this case. It would be improper
1290 and unlawful for any of you to disregard the answers that rendered you competent jurors.

18. The defendant in this case, Hans Max Haupt, is charged by an indictment returned by a grand jury in this District on February 25, 1944, with the crime of treason.

19. The definition of Treason in the Constitution of the United States, as far as the definition is material here, is as follows: "Treason against the United States shall consist in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort."

20. The definition of treason in the statutes of the United States, so far as the definition is material here, is as follows: "Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort within the United States or elsewhere, is guilty of treason."

21. The indictment in this case alleges that Hans Max Haupt, at Chicago, in the Eastern Division of the Northern District
1291 of Illinois, continuously and at all times from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, being a person owing allegiance to the United States—in violation of said duty of allegiance, did unlawfully, feloniously, maliciously, intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably adhere to the enemies of the United States, that is, to the Government of the German Reich, its counsellors, armies, navies, agents, representatives, and subjects, with which the United States, at all times since December 11, 1941, has been at war, and did give to said enemies aid and comfort.

22. The indictment further alleges that Hans Max Haupt has been a citizen of the United States since 1930, and a resident thereof since 1923.

23. The indictment further charges that one Herbert Haupt, an agent and representative of the German Reich, came into the United States on or about June 17, 1942, and during the period of time above mentioned served the German Reich as a secret agent, saboteur, and spy, in carrying on its war with the United States, which service to the German Reich included the destruction of certain war materials, premises, and utilities of the United 1292 States, the disbursement of money, received from the German Reich in connection with the procurement, manufacture, and use of explosive substances and sabotage devices for and in the destruction of the war material, premises, and utilities of the United States, and the recruiting and hiring of persons to engage in unlawful and hostile enterprises consisting in the use of said explosives and sabotage devices to destroy the war materials, premises, and utilities of the United States.

24. The indictment further charges that the service of Herbert Haupt also involves the securing of information, and the employment of other persons so to do, concerning the national defense of the United States and the mental attitude of its citizens toward the war and the German Reich, and transmitting such information to the German Reich to assist it in carrying on its war against the United States.

25. The indictment further alleges that said service of Herbert Haupt also involved the making and conveying of false statements and reports within the United States, and the employment of other persons so to do, with intent to interfere with the operation and success of the military and naval forces of the 1293 United States, to the advantages of the German Reich. And said service of Herbert Haupt also involved his remaining within the United States for further orders from the German Reich pertaining to said service.

26. The indictment charges that the adherence of the defendant Hans Max Haupt, to the German Reich, its counselors, armies, navies, agents, representatives, and subjects, and said giving of aid and comfort by him consisted in his receiving, harboring, relieving, and assisting Herbert Haupt by automobile and in his furnishing hospitality to Herbert Haupt from June 17, 1942, to

July 17, 1942, in his aiding, abetting, meeting with, assisting, counseling and advising Herbert Haupt concerning the service of said Herbert Haupt to the German Reich; in his countenancing said service; in his carrying out requests and instructions of said Herbert Haupt in connection with said service; in his purchasing an automobile for said Herbert Haupt; in his attempting to procure employment for said Herbert Haupt; in his giving false information regarding and concealing the identity of Herbert Haupt, as a representative of the German Reich and the mission of Herbert Haupt in the United States; in his receiving,
1294 holding, possessing, safeguarding, and concealing the property and funds of said Herbert Haupt, and in misrepresenting and concealing the ownership of said property and funds, and in his maintaining, harboring, feeding and supporting said Herbert Haupt throughout said period of time.

27. It is further alleged that the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, when so adhering and giving aid and comfort to the German Reich, its counselors, armies, navies, agents, representative, and subjects, well knew all the matters heretofore set forth in this indictment, and well knew the character of said service of Herbert Haupt to the German Reich, and intended to and did adhere to said enemies and gave them aid and comfort.

28. It is further alleged in the indictment that the defendant, in the prosecution, performance, and execution of said treason, and with the intention of adhering to said enemies and giving them aid and comfort did do, perform, and commit certain overt and manifest acts. (The indictment then enumerates certain alleged overt acts.)

29. Every citizen of the United States, whether by birth
1295 or by naturalization, as a matter of law owes a duty of allegiance to the United States and continues to owe this duty of allegiance at all times, though he may have been born in another country with which this country is at war.

30. It has been proved that the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, is and since 1930 has been a naturalized citizen of the United States, and, accordingly, he was at the times mentioned in the indictment, a person owing allegiance to the United States.

31. It has also been proved, that, at the times mentioned in the indictment, there existed a state of war between the United States and the German Reich, and, therefore, the German Reich, the subjects, members of the military and naval forces of the German Reich, and all persons engaged by or working for that government as agents, spies, or saboteurs to assist that government in the prosecution of its war or to hamper the United States in the prosecution of our war against the German Reich were enemies of the United States.

32. Although not explicitly set forth in either the con-
1296 stitutional or statutory provisions, an intent to give aid and comfort to the enemy is an essential element of the crime of treason. Without an intent to give aid and comfort to the enemy, there is no treason.

33. When a state of war exists, any act done deliberately and intentionally and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined by one owing allegiance to the United States which, by fair construction, is directed toward the furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemies of the United States and gives them aid and comfort (or if that is the natural effect of the act), is treasonable in its character.

34. The words in the United States statute "adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort," and words of similar import in the Constitution mean in general any intentional act done with treasonable intent as heretofore defined by one owing allegiance to the United States which clearly indicates a want of loyalty to the United States and a sympathy with its enemies and which, by fair construction, is directly and intentionally done in furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemy, or to 1297 strengthen the enemy, or weaken the power of the United States to resist or attack the enemy.

35. Regardless of any blood relationship which may have existed between Herbert Haupt and Hans Max Haupt, if you find that the natural effect or consequence of any act or acts performed by Hans Max Haupt was to give aid and comfort to Herbert Haupt in his capacity as an enemy agent, and that such act or acts were performed intentionally with knowledge of the fact that he was an enemy agent and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined then such act or acts were treasonable in character.

36. Applying these general principles to this case, if you find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Herbert Haupt was an agent of the government of the German Reich, or an enemy saboteur, and that he was engaged with or working for the government of the German Reich to assist that government in the prosecution of its war against the United States, or to hamper the United States in the prosecution of its war against Germany, and that the defendant knew that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent or saboteur as aforesaid, and with such knowledge
1298 adhered to said Herbert Haupt as an enemy agent and with treasonable intent as hereinbefore defined gave him aid and comfort as such enemy as alleged in the indictment, then you may find that such defendant intended to adhere to the enemies of the United States and give aid and comfort to them.

37. If you are not satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant's intention and purpose in acting as he did was evil, that is, if you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to aid and comfort the enemies of the United States the defendant must be found not guilty. If you believe the defendant's intention in doing what he did during the period from June 17, 1942 to and including July 17, 1942, was not in any way to injure the United States, but merely to assist his son, Herbert Haupt, as an individual, as distinguished from assisting him in his purposes, if such existed, of aiding the German Reich, or of injuring the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty.

38. A person cannot be convicted of treason merely for 1299 having the intention in his own mind to adhere to and give aid and comfort to the enemy. This intention must be manifest by what is termed an "overt act."

39. An "overt act" in criminal law, is an outward act done in pursuance and manifestation of a criminal intent or design, or more simply an act performed for the object of carrying out a criminal purpose.

40. An overt act has been defined by high authority as follows: "An overt act" is such an act as manifests a criminal intention and tends towards the accomplishment of the criminal object."

41. An overt act in itself may be a perfectly innocent act, standing by itself; it must be in some manner in furtherance of the crime.

42. The Constitution of the United States provides that: "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act."

43. It is, therefore, necessary before the defendant can
1300 be found guilty of the crime charged against him in this case for the Government to establish beyond a reasonable doubt not only that the defendant intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably adhered to and gave aid and comfort to the enemy, as alleged in the indictment, but also that the said defendant in furtherance of said alleged adherence and the giving of aid and comfort, intentionally and treasonably performed at least one of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions and that the said alleged act has been established beyond a reasonable doubt by the testimony of two direct witnesses to the same act.

44. It is not necessary for the Government to establish by evidence all of the overt acts alleged in the indictment.

45. By the term "witnesses" used in this connection the Court does not mean persons who testify to admissions, if any, purportedly made by the defendant before the commencement of this trial. Neither admissions, if you believe any were made by the defendant, nor persons who took the stand to testify to 1301 such admissions, if any, are "witnesses" within the meaning of the foregoing provisions of the Constitution, and neither such admissions, if any, nor any persons testifying to them, if any, can be considered by the jury as a substitute of the Constitutional requirement. By the term "witnesses" is meant persons who testify to the commission of any of the alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration by the court rather than to any alleged admissions made about them.

46. One may not of course be convicted of treason upon evidence of an overt act, unless such act has been charged in the indictment.

47. The Court is submitting to your consideration as possible overt acts of treason the following alleged acts, charged in the indictment:

1302 48. Since the law requires that there shall be no conviction of treason unless there are two direct witnesses to the same overt act, all the other alleged overt acts charged in this indictment are hereby withdrawn from your consideration as overt acts of treason, for even if you believed beyond a reasonable doubt they were performed, they may not in themselves be made the basis of a conviction under the Constitution. However, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did actually perform any of these other alleged overt acts which were not proven to the degree required by the Constitution, you may consider any such act in determining the question of the intent with which the defendant may have performed, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt he did perform any of the above alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration and not withdrawn.

49. If you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Herbert Haupt, as alleged in the indictment, was an enemy agent, spy, or saboteur and that he came into the United States on a mission for the German Reich and was acting as such 1303 agent, spy, or saboteur on such mission while here, and that the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, knowing that he was such agent, spy, or saboteur, unlawfully, feloniously, maliciously, intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably did adhere to and give aid and comfort to the said Herbert Haupt as an enemy, all as alleged in the indictment, and that in furtherance of or in carrying out said alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, Hans Max Haupt with treasonable intent performed any one of the above alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration and that two direct witnesses have testified to such act, then you may find the defendant guilty.

50. It is not necessary for the government to prove by two witnesses the performance of more than one of the submitted overt acts, providing, of course, the other elements of the alleged crime are proven beyond a reasonable doubt as heretofore defined in these instructions.

51. By submitting the alleged overt acts above read to your consideration, however, this court does not mean to intimate or infer in any way, either its belief or disbelief that any al-
1304 leged overt acts of treason have been committed by this defendant, or that any overt acts of treason have been proven by the required two witnesses. Under the law, you are the sole judge of the facts and you alone can determine the factual issues including the question of whether this defendant committed any act or acts of treason and whether any such act was proven beyond a reasonable doubt by two direct witnesses to the same overt act.

52. The success or failure of any alleged mission upon which Herbert Haupt may have been engaged, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that he was engaged on a mission for the German government, is immaterial to the issues in this case and should be disregarded by you in your deliberations.

53. As I have heretofore stated to you the treasonable intent of the defendant is an essential element of the crime charged herein, and before you can find the defendant guilty you must find beyond a reasonable doubt, not only that such defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort, but also that at the time of such alleged adherence and giving 1305 of aid and comfort, the defendant intended to do so. This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as a result of which he was conscious of the specific thought, "I am going to commit treason." This is not necessary, for every man in law is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts if they are deliberately done. Anyone who is conscious of his acts and his surroundings and knowingly commits certain acts must be regarded as intending the natural and probable consequences of those acts. These observations are, of course, not intended to cast any inferences one way or another on the defendant's intent.

54. In this regard, motive should not be confused with intent. If a person knowingly and deliberately adheres to and gives aid and comfort to one whom he knows to be an enemy, then he must, in law, be taken to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own deliberate act, and the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense. In other words, one cannot do an act which he knows will give aid and com-
1306 fort to a person he knows to be an enemy of the United States and then seek to disclaim criminal and treasonable intent by saying that his motive was not to aid the enemy. So if you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant as alleged in the indictment, performed one or more of the overt acts submitted to your consideration and that that act or those acts were of such a nature that the natural and probable consequence of their performance was to give aid and comfort to the enemy, and if you further believe that the defendant performed such act or acts deliberately with knowledge that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, if you find that he was, then you may find that the defendant had the criminal and treasonable intent, since he intended to do the act forbidden by the law. Under such circumstances, the fact that you may also believe that his motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was for example, to help his son, would not in such event, change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent.

55. While it is necessary that the government prove treasonable intent beyond a reasonable doubt, it is not necessary to 1307 warrant a conviction under the Constitution, that this intent be so established by the testimony of two witnesses; neither is it necessary that this intent be so proven by direct evidence, as such intent may be so proven either by direct or circumstantial evidence. Criminal intent, being a mental state may not be susceptible of being proved by direct evidence, and, therefore, you may infer the nature of the defendant's intent from all the circumstances.

56. Circumstantial evidence is evidence which tends to prove a disputed fact by proof of other facts and circumstances, which have a legitimate tendency to lead the mind to the conclusion that the fact exists, which is sought to be established.

57. The defendant's own conduct and words, if any, may be the best index as to his intent and you may infer from the defendant's conduct, and words, if any are shown by the evidence, what his intent might have been.

58. There has been some testimony of certain statements purportedly made by the defendant prior to our declaration of 1308 war with Germany. Such statements of the defendant, if you believe they were made, are not grounds for charging the defendant with treason. The defendant, as well as others, had the right to his opinions and he had a right to express his opinions and to do anything lawful in keeping with those opinions and sympathies, but those statements, if you believe any were made, may be borne in mind by you in determining what his intent may have been after this country was at war with Germany, in committing, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that he did so commit, any of the various overt acts charged in the indictment and submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions.

59. The Court has permitted the Government to introduce into evidence in this case certain alleged statements or utterances purportedly made by the defendant prior to the events forming the basis of the indictment in this case. Such statements or utterances, if you believe they were made by the defendant do not constitute evidence of the commission either of the treason alleged or of the commission of any alleged overt act, but may be 1309 considered by you, if you credit them, solely in determining the intent or state of mind of the defendant in performing, if you find he did perform, any alleged overt act or acts of treason charged in the indictment to have been committed by him, and submitted to your consideration in these instructions.

60. The court has also permitted the government to introduce evidence of certain alleged admissions made by the defendant after he was in custody. You are instructed that such evidence may be considered by you solely on the issue of the intent or state of mind of the defendant in committing, if he did commit, any of the overt acts alleged in the indictment and submitted to your consideration in these instructions. In other words, any witness who may have testified to such alleged admissions is not a "witness" within the meaning of the Constitutional requirement of "two witnesses to the same overt act."

61. The Court has permitted the government to introduce evidence of certain alleged acts of Herbert Haupt, and of certain alleged utterances and statements purportedly made by him, both prior to and during his alleged stay in Chicago in June
1310 1942, and out of the presence of this defendant. These alleged acts, utterances, and statements, attributed to Herbert Haupt, out of the defendant's presence, were admitted by the Court and are to be considered by you, if you desire to give them credit, for the sole and limited purpose of determining whether the said Herbert Haupt was or was not an agent of the Government of the German Reich and an enemy of the United States, as charged in the indictment. Of this character, to be considered by you, if at all solely on that issue, namely, whether Herbert Haupt was or was not an enemy agent, is the testimony of Ernest Peter Burger, and the testimony of the witnesses describing the events which purportedly took place in Germany, as well as those witnesses to the events purportedly taking place in Florida, and the testimony of the witness, Joseph William Haas, to conversations purportedly taking place in Chicago. Similarly, you are to consider the exhibits allegedly found in a cache in Florida, including the explosives, incendiary devices, and military caps, on that issue alone. These exhibits and this testimony were admitted for the limited purpose of establishing Herbert
1311 Haupt's alleged identity as a German agent and are not to be considered by you on any other issue in this case.

62. On the subject of the defendant's knowledge of the alleged enemy status of his son, it is necessary for the government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that in adhering to and giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States, if you find that he did so adhere to them and give them aid and comfort, the defendant knew at the time that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, as alleged in the indictment. It is not necessary, however, for the government to prove that the defendant knew in detail all of the things which this alleged enemy intended to do (if you find that he was an enemy agent and that he did come to this country as a German agent as the indictment alleges). Nor is it necessary for the government to prove that the defendant knew all of the facts which the government may have offered in evidence to prove Herbert Haupt's alleged enemy status. It is only necessary for the government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant knew that Herbert Haupt was a spy, saboteur, or enemy agent, if such were the fact.

1312 63. The question of the possible punishment of the defendant in the event of a conviction is not a matter for the jury to consider, and should not in any way enter into your deliberations. The duty of imposing sentence on a defendant rests solely upon the Court, who tries to perform it fairly and with due consideration for all the circumstances. The function of the jury is to weigh all the evidence and determine the guilt or innocence of the defendant, solely from that evidence.

64. You will take with you to your jury room the indictment and the exhibits which have been offered and received in evidence and which are proper to go to the jury room and which counsel will now assemble and hand to the Marshals in charge of the jury. If counsel have any differences of opinion as to which exhibit should go to the jury room they shall call such differences to the attention of the court at the conclusion of these instructions. If the court's attention is not then called to differences the court will assume that there are none. You will also take with you

1313 two forms of verdict. One form of verdict reads, "We, the jury, find the defendant Hans Max Haupt, not guilty as charged in the indictment." The other form of verdict reads, "We, the jury, find the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, guilty as charged in the indictment." Having arrived at a verdict, you will use the first form if you find the defendant not guilty, and the second form if you find the defendant guilty. All jurors must sign the verdict on which you agree, the foreman signing first and the other jurors following.

65. I suggest that before commencing your deliberations, you elect one of your number foreman to preside over your deliberations.

1314 (Prior to said discussion in chambers, as hereinbefore set forth, there has been submitted on behalf of the Government certain requests for the giving of instructions to the jury in the following form:)

1315 Government's requested instructions

The COURT. Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

The defendant, Hans Max Haupt, has been indicted by the Grand Jury of this District for the offense of treason, in violation of Section 1, of our criminal code. Now in considering the case, it is necessary for you to keep in mind the elements of the crime of Treason, so I will read Section 1 to you. It reads as follows: "Treason. Whoever, owing allegiance to United States, levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort within the United States or elsewhere is guilty of Treason."

There is a similar definition of Treason contained in the Constitution of the United States, which, however, adds certain indispensible requisites regarding the proof of Treason. The Constitution provides: "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted 1316 of Treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court."

You are instructed that every citizen of the United States, whether by birth or by naturalization, as a matter of law owes a duty of allegiance to the United States and continues to owe this duty of allegiance at all times, though they may have been born in another country with which this country is at war.

The uncontradicted proof is that the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, foresworc allegiance to Germany, and became a citizen of the United States in 1930.

On the outbreak of war between two nations, the citizens and subjects of the respective belligerents are deemed by the law to be the enemies of each other. Hence upon the declaration of the present war now existing between the government of the German Reich and the government of the United States of America, all subjects of the government of the German Reich became "enemies" of the United States and have continued to remain such enemies down to the present time. Likewise, of course, all 1317 members of the military or naval forces of the government of the German Reich and all persons engaged by or working for that government as agents, saboteurs, or spies, were and are enemies of the United States.

When a state of war exists any act deliberately and intentionally done which, by fair construction, is directed in furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemies of the United States and gives them aid and comfort (or if that is the natural effect of the act), is treasonable in its character.

The words in the statute and in the Constitution "adheres to the enemies, giving them aid and comfort," means in general any intentional act by one owing allegiance to the United States which clearly indicates a want of loyalty to the United States and a sympathy with its enemies and which, by fair construction, is directly and intentionally done in furtherance of the hostile designs of the enemy.

In this connection, I charge you that regardless of any blood relationship which may exist between an enemy agent or representative, and any party who may give him aid and comfort as such enemy, if you find that the natural effect or conse-
1318 quence of any act or acts performed by any person was to give aid and comfort to an enemy agent in his representative capacity, and that such act or acts are performed intentionally with knowledge of the fact that he is an enemy agent, then such act or acts are treasonable in character.

Applying these general abstract principles to this case, if you find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Herbert Haupt was an agent of the government of the German Reich, or an enemy saboteur, and that he was engaged with or working for the government of the German Reich to assist that government in the prosecution of its war against the United States, or to hamper the United States in the prosecution of its war against Germany, and that the defendant knew that he was an enemy agent or saboteur as aforesaid, and with such knowledge adhered to Herbert Haupt as an enemy agent and gave him aid and comfort as such enemy as alleged in the indictment, then you must find that such defendant intended to adhere to the enemies of the United States and give aid and comfort to them.

1319 The indictment in this case does not charge the defendant with levying war against the United States. It does charge that Herbert Haupt, the defendant's son, was a secret agent, spy, and saboteur for the government of the German Reich and that he came into this country for the purpose of destroying certain war materials, premises, and utilities, etc., and to perform other services in assisting the government of the German Reich in its war against the United States. The indictment further charges in substance that the defendant Hans Max Haupt, knowing that Herbert Haupt was an agent for Germany as aforesaid, "unlawfully, feloniously, maliciously, intentionally, traitoriously, and treasonably," adhered to and gave aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States and that this adherence and the giving of aid and comfort to the enemies consisted among other things in the defendant's receiving, harboring, relieving, and assisting Herbert Haupt; in his furnishing hospitality to him; in his aiding, abetting, and assisting him; in purchasing an automobile for him; in attempting to procure employment for him; in giving false information regarding him, and concealing 1320 his identity as a German agent, in his receiving, holding, safeguarding, and concealing funds, and in misrepresenting the ownership of such funds, and in harboring him in his home. These acts are alleged to have been done with the intention of adhering to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort.

The indictment further alleges that in carrying out these alleged acts of adherence to the enemy, the defendant performed certain "overt acts," which are specified in the indictment.

An "overt act," in criminal law, is an outward act done in pursuance and manifestation of a criminal intent or design, or more simply an act performed for the object of carrying out a criminal purpose.

The indictment in this case charged the defendant with the commission of a number of alleged overt acts of treason. In this connection, you are instructed that the Constitutional requirements for the crime of treason include the following: "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court."
1321 There has been no confession in open court by the defendant. It is, therefore, necessary before the defendant can be found guilty of this crime, for the Government to establish beyond a reasonable doubt not only that the defendant intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably adhered to and gave aid and comfort to the enemy, as alleged in the indictment, but also that the said defendant in furtherance of said alleged adherence and the giving of aid and comfort, intentionally and treasonably performed at least one of the alleged overt acts submitted to you by the court in these instructions and that the said alleged act has been established beyond a reasonable doubt by the testimony of two direct witnesses to that same act.

By the term "witnesses," in this regard, the Court does not mean persons who testify to admissions, if any, purportedly made by the defendant before the commencement of this trial. Neither admissions, if you believe any were made by the defendant, nor persons who took the stand to testify to such admissions, if any, are "witnesses" within the meaning of the Constitution, and alleged overt acts submitted to you by the court rather than to any alleged admissions made about them.
1322 neither such admission, if any, nor any persons testifying to them, if any, can be considered by the jury as a substitute for the Constitutional requirements. By the term "witnesses" is meant persons who testify to the commission of any of the

The Court instructs the jury that it is submitting to you, as possible overt acts of treason, the following alleged acts, which I shall read to you:

The fact that an indictment has been returned is not evidence; nor is the indictment evidence. The indictment is not to be treated by you in any way as raising a presumption of guilt or creating any kind of prejudice against the defendant. The indictment is simply the form or manner prescribed by law for preferring a charge against an individual, and must be regarded in that light, and in no other light.

Since the law requires that there shall be no conviction of treason (in the absence of a confession in open court) unless there are two direct witnesses to the same overt act, all of the other 1323 alleged overt acts are hereby withdrawn from your consideration as overt acts of treason, for even if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt they were performed, they may not in themselves be made the basis of a conviction under the Constitution. However, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did actually perform any of these other alleged overt acts which were not proven to the degree required by the Constitution, you may consider any such act in determining the question of the intent with which the defendant may have performed, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt he did perform, any of the above-alleged overt acts submitted to you and not withdrawn.

If you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Herbert Haupt, as alleged in the indictment, was an enemy agent, spy, or saboteur and that he came into the United States on a mission for the German Reich and was acting as such agent, spy, or saboteur on such mission while here, and that the defendant, Haus Max Haupt, knowing that he was such agent, spy, or saboteur, unlawfully, feloniously, maliciously, intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably did adhere to and give aid and com-
1324 fort to the said Herbert Haupt as an enemy, all as alleged in the indictment, and that in furtherance of or in carrying out said alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, Hans Max Haupt with treasonable intent performed any one of the above alleged overt acts submitted to you and that two direct witnesses have testified to such act, then you must find the defendant guilty.

It is not necessary for the government to prove by two witnesses the performance of more than one of the submitted overt acts, providing, of course, the other elements of the alleged crime are proven beyond a reasonable doubt as heretofore defined in these instructions.

By submitting the alleged overt acts above read to you, however, the court does not mean to intimidate or infer in any way, either its belief or disbelief that any alleged overt acts of treason have been committed by this defendant, or that any overt acts of treason have been proven by the required two witnesses. You under the law, are the sole judges of the facts and you alone can determine the factual issues including the question of 1325 whether this defendant committed any act or acts of treason and whether any such act was proven beyond a reasonable doubt by two direct witnesses to the same overt act.

The success or failure of any alleged mission upon which Herbert Haupt may have been engaged, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that he was engaged in a mission for the German government, is immaterial to the issues in this case and should be disregarded by you in your deliberations.

You are instructed that the treasonable intent of the defendant is an essential element of the crime charged herein, and before you can find the defendant guilty you must find beyond a reasonable doubt, not only that such defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort, but also that at the time of such alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, the defendant intended to do so. This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as a result of which he was conscious of the specific thought "I am going to commit treason." This is not necessary for 1326 natural and probable consequences of his acts if they are deliberately done. Anyone who is conscious of his acts and his surroundings and knowingly commits certain acts must be regarded as intending the natural and probable consequences of these acts. These observations are, of course merely abstract and are not intended to cast any inferences one way or another on the defendant's intent.

In this regard, motive should not be confused with intent. If a person knowingly and deliberately adheres to and gives aid and comfort to one whom he knows to be an enemy, then he must, in law, be taken to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own deliberate act, and the fact that his motive might not have been to aid the enemy is no defense. In other words, one cannot do an act which he knows will give aid and comfort to a person he knows to be an enemy of the United States and then seek to disclaim criminal and treasonable intent by saying that one's motive was not to aid the enemy. So if you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant as alleged in the indictment performed one or more of the overt acts sub-1327 mitted to you, and that that act or those acts were of such a nature that the natural and probable consequence of their performance was to give aid and comfort to the enemy, and if you further believe that the defendant performed such act or acts deliberately with knowledge that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, if you find that he was, then you must find that the defendant had the criminal and treasonable intent, since he intended to do the fact forbidden by the law. Under such circumstances, the fact that you may also believe that his motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was for example, to help his son, would not in such event, change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent.

While it is necessary that the government prove treasonable intent beyond a reasonable doubt, it is not necessary to warrant a conviction under the Constitution, that this intent be so established by the testimony of two witnesses; neither is it necessary that this intent be so proven by direct evidence, as such intent may be so proven either by direct or circumstantial evidence.

Criminal intent, being a mental state may not be susceptible
1328 of being proved by direct evidence, and, therefore, you may infer the nature of the defendant's intent from all the circumstances.

Circumstantial evidence is evidence which tends to prove a disputed fact by proof of other facts and circumstances, which have a legitimate tendency to lead the mind to the conclusion that the fact exists, which is sought to be established.

The defendant's own conduct and words, if any, may be the best index as to his intent and you may infer from the defendant's conduct, and words, if any, are shown by the evidence, what his intent might have been.

There has been some testimony of certain statements purportedly made by the defendant prior to our declaration of war with Germany. In this regard, treason, of which the defendant is accused, can only be committed in time of war, so that such statements of the defendant, if you believe they were made, are not grounds for charging the defendant with treason. Prior to the entry into the war by the United States, the defendant, as well as others, had the right to his opinion as to where his sympathies would lie, and he had a right to express his 1329 opinions and to do anything lawful in keeping with these opinions and sympathies, but those statements, if you believe any were made, may be borne in mind by you in determining what his intent may have been after this country was at war with Germany, in committing, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that he did so commit, any of the various overt acts charged in the indictment and submitted to you by the court in these instructions.

The Court further instructs you that the Court has permitted the Government to introduce into evidence in this case certain alleged statements or utterances purportedly made by the defendant prior to the events forming the basis of the indictment in this case. Such statements or utterances, if you believe they were made by the defendant do not constitute evidence of the commission either of the treason alleged or of the commission of any alleged overt act, but may be considered by you, if you credit them, solely in determining the intent or state of mind of the defendant in performing, if you find he did perform, any alleged overt act or acts of treason charged in the indictment to have been committed by him, and submitted to you in 1330 these instructions.

The court has also permitted the government to introduce evidence of certain alleged admissions made by this defendant after he was in custody. You are instructed that such evidence may be considered by you solely on the issue of the intent or state of mind of the defendant in committing, if he did so commit, any of the overt acts alleged in the indictment and submitted to you in these instructions. In other words, any witness who may have testified to such alleged admissions is not a "witness" within the meaning of the Constitutional requirement of "two witnesses to the same overt act."

The Court has permitted the government to introduce evidence of certain alleged acts of Herbert Haupt, and of certain alleged utterances and statements purportedly made by him, both prior to and during his alleged stay in Chicago in June 1942, and out of the presence of this defendant. These alleged acts, utterances, and statements attributed to Herbert Haupt, out of the defendant's presence, were admitted by the Court and are to be considered by you, if you desire to give them credit, for the 1331 sole and limited purpose of determining whether the said Herbert Haupt was or was not an agent of the Government of the German Reich and an enemy of the United States, as charged in the indictment. Of this character, to be considered by you, if at all, solely on that issue, namely, whether Herbert Haupt was or was not an enemy agent, is the testimony of Ernest Peter Burger, and the testimony of the witnesses describing the event which purportedly took place in Germany, as well as those witnesses to the events purportedly taking place in Florida, and the testimony of the witness Joseph William Haas to conversations purportedly taking place in Chicago. Similarly, you are to consider the exhibits allegedly found in a cache in Florida, such as explosives, incendiary devices, etc. on that issue alone. These exhibits and this testimony were admitted for the limited purpose of establishing Herbert Haupt's alleged identity as a German agent and are not to be considered by you on any other issue in this case.

The Court instructs the jury that a reasonable doubt is what the term implies—a doubt founded on reason. It does not mean every conceivable kind of doubt. It does not mean a doubt 1332 that may be purely imaginary or fanciful, or one that is merely captious or speculative. It means, simply an honest doubt that appeals to reason and is founded upon reason. If, after considering all the evidence in the case, you have such a doubt in your mind as would cause you, or any other reasonably prudent person, to pause or hesitate before acting in a grave transaction of your own life, then you have such a doubt as the law contemplates as a reasonable doubt.

The defendant cannot, in a criminal case be compelled to take the witness stand and testify. He may do so or not as he chooses. In this case the defendant has elected to stand upon his Constitutional rights and has not chosen to become a witness. The failure of the defendant to take the witness stand in his own behalf, must not be considered by you in any way against him. He is exercising only the absolute right that is given by the law, and you must give full effect for the provision of the law that the fact that a defendant does not testify shall not create any presumption of guilt against him, and must not be taken into consideration by you against him.

The responsibility rests upon you to determine the facts
1333 of this case, under the law as the Court may give it to you, uninfluenced by any expression of opinion that the Court has made or may hereafter make upon matters of fact. The Court has not intended at any time during the trial of this case, and does not intend at any time to express any opinion on any matter of fact, and if the Court has expressed or does express any opinion on any matter of fact you are at liberty to disregard such opinion, and it is your duty to disregard it, if it is different from your own opinion.

This is a criminal case, and the law in such cases is, that a defendant comes into court presumed to be innocent, and that presumption protects him until such time, if such time shall come, when the jury shall believe from the evidence in the case, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant is guilty as charged in the indictment or some count thereof.

The guilt of an accused is not to be inferred because the facts proven are consistent with his guilt, but, on the contrary, before there can be a verdict of guilty you must believe from all the evidence, and beyond a reasonable doubt, that the facts

1334 proven are inconsistent with his innocence. If two conclusions can reasonably be drawn from the evidence, one of innocence and one of guilt, you should adopt the former.

The defendant on trial has pleaded not guilty. The law does not require the defendant to prove his innocence. The burden of proving the charges in the indictment rests upon the Government, and you cannot find the defendant guilty unless, from all the evidence, you believe him guilty of the offense charged in this indictment beyond a reasonable doubt.

If you believe from the evidence that any witness in this case has knowingly and wilfully testified falsely on this trial to any matter material to the issues in this case, as I have defined them to you in these instructions, you are at liberty to disregard the entire testimony of such witnesses, except insofar as it has been corroborated, if you find it has been corroborated, by other credible evidence or by facts and circumstances proven on the trial.

1335 Your verdict in this case must be reached from a consideration of all the evidence in this case, but if any evidence was admitted and was later stricken out, you must wholly disregard such evidence as was stricken out.

During the trial of a lawsuit it often becomes the duty of counsel for the parties to object to questions, or to evidence, and I instruct you that you shall not take into consideration against such party either such objections or the number of them; nor permit yourselves to be in any way influenced, by such objections, against the parties.

You are the sole judges of the credibility and the weight which is to be given to the testimony of the witnesses who have testified upon this trial. In weighing the testimony of each witness you should carefully scrutinize the same; consider all the circumstances under which the witness testifies; his or her demeanor on the stand; the relation which he or she bears to the Government or the defendant; the manner in which he or she might be affected by the verdict; the extent to which he or she is corroborated 1336 or contradicted by other credible evidence, and in short, any circumstances that tend to throw light upon his credibility. And, applying these tests which I have just stated, it is for you to determine the weight which is to be given to the testimony of each witness.

You should not allow either sympathy for the defendant or prejudice against him to influence your deliberations. You should not be influenced by anything other than the law and the evidence in the case. You must also disregard anything that you may have heard from others or read in the newspapers concerning the case.

The question of the possible punishment of the defendant in the event of a conviction is not a matter for the jury to consider, and should not in any way enter into your deliberations. The duty of imposing sentence on a defendant rests solely, in the Federal Courts, upon the Court, who tries to exercise it fairly and with due consideration for all the circumstances. The function of the jury is to weigh all the evidence and determine the guilt or the innocence of the defendant, solely from that evidence.

1337 On the subject of the Defendant's knowledge of the alleged enemy status of his son, it is necessary for the government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that in adhering to and giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States, if you find that he did so adhere to them and give them aid and comfort, the defendant knew at the time that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, as alleged in the indictment. It is not necessary, however, for the government to prove that the defendant knew in detail all of the things which this alleged enemy intended to do (if you find that he was an enemy agent and that he did come to this country as a German agent as the indictment alleges). Nor is it necessary for the government to prove that the defendant knew all of the facts which the government may have offered in evidence to prove Herbert Haupt's alleged enemy status. It is only necessary for the government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant knew that Herbert Haupt was a spy, saboteur, or enemy agent, if such were the fact.

1338 (There were submitted on behalf of Defendant several suggested instructions said suggestions were designed D and numbered consecutively from 1 to 25, both numbers inclusive, which said suggestions are in the following words and figures, to wit:)

Defendant's requested instructions

D-1

The court instructs the jury that the Constitution of the United States provides that "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court."

The court further instructs the jury that in this case there has been no confession in open court by the defendant.

The court further instructs the jury that the prosecution is required by the Constitution of the United States to prove the commission of treason by the testimony of two witnesses in open court to the same overt act of treason and that proof of an overt 1339 act of treason by only one witness is not sufficient to convict the defendant of treason under the indictment herein, as to such overt act.

The court further instructs you that the requirement of the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act means the oral testimony of at least two witnesses in open court, who actually saw the commission of the particular overt act.

The requirement of the Constitution of the United States of the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act cannot be varied, waived, or ignored in any manner in the consideration of this case.

D–2

An overt act must not only be proved beyond a reasonable doubt by two witnesses who saw the commission of that overt act, but it must also be proved, that such overt act was committed with an intent to commit treason.

Such overt act must be one of the overt acts enumerated as such in the indictment.

D–3

1340 The court instructs the jury that the defendant would not be guilty of treason where he intended merely to assist his son, Herbert, as an individual, and where he did not intend thereby to give aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States.

If you have a reasonable doubt as to what the defendant's intent was in that respect, then you must find the defendant not guilty.

D–4

Where the act of a defendant, which is alleged to constitute an overt act of treason, is of a private and personal nature not having a direct effect either to injure the United States or to give material aid to a country with which the United States is at war, then such act would not amount to treason.

D–5

The fact that the defendant did not testify in this case must have no influence whatsoever upon you in arriving at your verdict.

D–6

1341 The Court instructs the Jury that at the times mentioned in the indictment in this case, to wit, during the period from June 17, 1942 to July 17, 1942, there was, and still is, in full force and effect a certain Statute of the State of Illinois, which reads as follows: "Every person not standing in the relation of husband or wife, parent or child, brother or sister to the offender, who knows the fact that a crime has been committed, and conceals it from the magistrate, or who harbors, conceals, maintains, or assists any principal felon, or any accessory before the fact, knowing him to be such, shall be deemed an accessory after the fact, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not less than one year and not exceeding two years, and fine not exceeding $500.00."

D–7

The Court instructs the Jury that the witnesses, John Majerczek, alias Stanley Norris, and Carl Hamby, are persons who have each been convicted of several felonious crimes.
1342 The Court further instructs the Jury that the testimony of a witness who has been convicted of a felony is to be considered by the Jury with extreme caution and with due regard for the fact that such witness has been so convicted, insofar as such fact may affect his credibility as a witness.

D–8

The Court instructs the jury that the witness Berger is a person who has been convicted of a felonious crime.

The Court further instructs the Jury that the testimony of a witness who has been convicted of a felony is to be considered by the Jury with caution and with due regard for the fact that such witness has been so convicted, insofar as such fact may affect his credibility as a witness.

D–9

The Court instructs the jury that all exhibits of equipment and physical objects, and of photographs of equipment and physical objects, which have been introduced in evidence by the Government's attorneys with respect to the activities of Herbert 1343 Haupt to show the status of said Herbert Haupt as an enemy of the United States, are to be considered by the Jury only for the purpose of determining the question of the enemy status of said Herbert Haupt at the times mentioned in the indictment, and said exhibits are not offered, or to be considered by the Jury, as evidence of any activities or acts on the part of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt.

D–10

The Court instructs the jury that witnesses testifying to oral or written statements made by the defendant before the commencement of this trial, are not witnesses within the meaning of the constitutional provision which requires two witnesses to the same overt act for a conviction of treason.

The court further instructs the jury that neither oral nor written statements made by defendant before the commencement of this trial, which have been testified to by one or more witnesses, can be considered by the jury as a substitute for the requirement of the Constitution of the United States that "No person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court."

1344 D-11

Conspiracy to commit treason does not constitute treason. Mere words or the forming of a plan or agreement to commit are not sufficient to constitute the commission of treason. There must not only be an intention to commit treason, but the intention must be carried out by the commission of the treasonable act which was intended by the accused person, otherwise such accused person is not guilty of treason.

D-12

If the motive for doing an act by a person accused of treason, is to give aid or assistance to an alien enemy in his individual and personal necessities and not to assist thereby such enemy in levying war against the United States, and there is no treasonable intention, then such accused person will not be guilty of treason.

D-13

The court charges you that the law presumes the defendant innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

1345 That if you can reconcile the evidence before you upon any reasonable hypothesis consistent with the defendant's innocence, you should do so, and in that case find him not guilty. You are further instructed that you cannot find the defendant guilty unless, from all of the evidence, you believe him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

D-14

The court instructs the jury that if you believe from the evidence that any witness in this case has wilfully and knowingly testified falsely on this trial to any matter or thing material to the issues in this case, then you are at liberty to disregard the entire testimony of such witness except in so far, if at all, as it has been corroborated by other credible evidence or by facts and circumstances proved on this trial.

D-15

The jury are instructed further that the presumption of innocence is not a mere form, to be disregarded by the jury at pleasure, but it is an essential and substantial part of the law of the 1346 land, and binding upon the jury in this case; and it is the duty of the jury to give the defendant in this case the full benefit of that presumption.

D-16

The burden of proof never shifts from the prosecution to the defendant, but it is upon the prosecution throughout the case to establish every constituent element of the crime of treason beyond a reasonable doubt and by such proof as is required by the Constitution of the United States.

D-17

The court charges the jury that before they can convict the defendant, the evidence must be so strong as to convince each juror of his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; and if, after considering all of the evidence, a single juror has a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, arising out of any part of the evidence, then they cannot convict such defendant.

D-18

As a matter of law, if you believe from an examination
1347 of the evidence in certain of its aspects that the defendant is guilty, and if you further believe from an examination of other aspects of the evidence, that such defendant is not guilty, then you should adopt that view of the evidence which will lead to the acquittal of the defendant rather than that view which leads to his conviction, if that view of the evidence leading to acquittal is as reasonable as that which leads to conviction.

D-19

The Court instructs the jury that in treason there must be not only an act of adherence to the enemies of the United States giving them aid and comfort, but there must be an intention on the part of the accused to consciously adhere to the enemies of the United States and to give the enemies of the United States aid and comfort by the act in question. There must be proof beyond a reasonable doubt not only of the overt act charged, but of the treasonable intent of the accused person in the commission of that act.

D-20

1348 Treason is defined in the Constitution of the United States, which is the supreme law of our land.

The Constitution of the United States provides as follows: "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No persons shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court."

The crime of treason, as so defined in the Constitution of the United States cannot be extended by any statute or legal interpretation beyond the limits of the definition stated in the Constitution.

Nor can the constitutional requirement as to the method of proof of the commission of treason be varied, changed or ignored.

D-21

The court instructs the jury that if you believe from the evidence in the case that the defendant gave food, shelter, or other personal assistance to Herbert Haupt during the period
1349 from June 17, 1942 to July 17, 1942, but that such food, shelter, and assistance was given to the said Herbert Haupt personally, as to a son, or friend, without any intention on the part of the defendant to aid the enemies of the United States in levying war against the United States, then the giving of such food, shelter and personal assistance to the said Herbert Haupt would not amount in law to the crime of treason.

D-22

Statements made by the defendant before this country's entry into the war, in so far as they may have indicated sympathy or preference for Germany or any criticism of the policy of the United States with respect to the war, were, as a matter of law, entirely lawful and proper, and the Jury should not consider such statements as any evidence of treasonable intent.

D-23

The Court instructs the Jury that under the laws of the State of Illinois a parent cannot be prosecuted as an accessory after the fact for harboring, concealing, maintaining, or assist-1350 ing a son who has committed a crime, even though the parent has knowledge of the commission of the crime after the fact.

D-25

To be prosecuted for a crime does not change the presumption of law that the defendant is innocent, and you must so consider him, before you start your deliberations.

1350-A

D-26

Preliminary to your being sworn to act as jurors in this case you were examined by counsel as to your competency and qualifications to act as jurors in this case. As part of such examination each of you answered all questions put to you by counsel for the prosecution and for the defendant. Your answers showed that you were competent and qualified to act as jurors and the parties to this case accepted you as jurors on the faith and trust of your answers. The answers you then made to such questions in regard to your competency, qualifications, fairness and lack of prejudice are as binding upon you now as they were then, and should so remain until you are finally discharged from further consideration in this case. It would be improper and unlawful for any of you to disregard the answers that rendered you competent jurors.

D-24

No law of the United States is violated when a person in a general discussion expresses favorable or adverse opinions as to members of any race, color or creed, or regarding any nationality.

1350-B

D-27

The Court instructs the jury that you should disregard all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to matters involving activities of Herbert Haupt, which occurred prior to the middle of June 1941, in deliberating upon your verdict in this case.

D-28

The Court instructs the jury that you should disregard all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to June 17, 1942, in deliberating upon your verdict in this case.

D-29

The Court instructs the jury that you should disregard all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant prior to December 7th, 1941, in deliberating upon your verdict in this case.

D–30

The Court instructs the jury that you should disregard all testimony of witnesses relating to conversations with Herbert Haupt and all alleged statements made by Herbert Haupt outside of the presence of the defendant.

1351 The COURT. I have numbered this D–1. I think that is covered.

D–2, I think that is covered.

D–3, I think that is covered.

D–4. I do not think that is a good definition. "Where the act of a defendant which is alleged to constitute an overt act of treason, is of a private and personal nature not having a direct effect either to injure the United States or to give material aid to a country with which the United States is at war, then such act would not amount to treason." I do not think that is correct.

Mr. BERTRAM. That I think is very important to us. That comprises the theory.

The COURT. I am against you as to what an overt act must be.

Mr. WOLL. That is what number?

The COURT. D–4. "Where the act of a defendant which is alleged to constitute an overt act of treason, is of a private and personal nature not having a direct effect either to injure the 1352 United States or to give material aid to a country with which the United States is at war, then such act would not amount to treason." I think that is not accurate.

Mr. BERTRAM. If we may go back to the previous instruction, you are refusing this also on the same theory?

The COURT. I think that is covered. I have covered that. I think D–3 is covered.

Mr. WOLL. As a matter of fact I think the other is covered.

The COURT. It is covered.

D–5 is withdrawn as I understand.

D–6 is refused, not applicable.

Mr. WOLL. What is that number?

The COURT. It has to do with the statute of the State of Illinois.

D–9 which relates to photographs of equipment. That is covered.

The instruction on "witnesses testifying to oral or written statements made by the defendant before the commencement of this trial," that is covered. I think that is covered.

D–12, "If the motive for doing an act by a person accused 1353 of treason is to give aid or assistance to an alien enemy in his individual and personal necessities——"

D–12 I think is covered.

D–13, the presumption of innocence and reasonable hypothesis consistent with the defendant's innocence. That is covered.

D–14; if any witness testified falsely. "The jury are instructed further that the presumption of innocence is not a mere form."

The other instruction is that the presumption of innocence continues until such time, if such time shall come, when it is removed by evidence produced in open court.

I think this "The burden of proof never shifts"—no use talking about something that never happens. I have told them the burden of proof is on the Government. What is the use of talking about shifting?

Mr. BERTRAM. Do you not think that on the presumption of innocence my instruction should be given?

The COURT. I have told them the presumption of innocence continues and persists until such time if ever it is removed 1354 by evidence produced in open court.

Mr. FINN. That instruction has been held to be bad in two cases I know of.

The COURT. The burden of proof never shifts. No use talking about something that does not happen. There is something about the levying of the war on the United States. I do not like it, but it is in there at the request of the defendant.

Then "If * * * a single juror has a reasonable doubt—" that is just inviting a disagreement. Neither side is entitled to such an invitation. I am not going to give it.

"* * * if you believe from an examination of the evidence in certain of its aspects that the defendant is guilty * * *"

That is not the law. They should look at the evidence as a whole.

D–18 refused.

Mr. BERTRAM. That is a stock instruction.

The COURT. It is bad. I do not know whether it is a stock instruction. They should look at the evidence as a whole. I have told them if there are two possible theories they shall adapt that theory which indicates innocence.
1355 On the question of intent. I have given that.

Definition of treason. I have given a definition of treason.

Mr. BERTRAM. In the latter part of that instruction it informs the jury that the Constitutional requirement cannot be ignored, varied, or changed.

The COURT. That is the law. It is just like telling them "That is the law positively."

Mr. BERTRAM. It also says it cannot be extended by any statute or legal interpretation.

The COURT. Nobody suggested it would be. No use setting up, or getting the jury to set up something, not here, like setting up a straw man and then knocking it down.

Here is one covering assistance as a son or friend "without any intention * * * to aid the enemies of the United States." That is covered.

Mr. BERTRAM. I do not think your Honor has covered it properly.

The COURT. I am just telling you why I am refusing it. "Statements made by the defendant before this country's entry into the war, insofar they may have indicated sympathy or preference * * *" I have said he is entitled to his opinion, but they 1356 may consider it on the question of motive.

D-7. Felonies and crimes. * * * "The testimony of a witness who has been convicted of a felony is to be considered by the jury with extreme caution." I am considering that further, as well as 13. I want to consider 13 further.

D-8, also.

Mr. WOLL. Defendant's what?

The COURT. In one case you say—that is the defendant says, "* * * testimony of a witness who has been convicted of a felony is to be considered by the jury with caution * * *" and in the other, "with extreme caution."

I do not know what the law is. I will try to find it out. I think probably I could give an instruction along the lines of 13. I have given it many, many times.

D-8, I am considering that in connection with my 13.

Mr. BERTRAM. How is that?

The COURT. That is with reference to Burger, D-8 and D-7, Majerczek and Hamby. I am considering them in connection with my 13.

1357 D-11, relates to conspiracy to commit treason. Nobody has said anything about conspiracy. If we introduce that subject it is a subject foreign to the jury and I will have to define conspiracy. It is refused because it is not applicable.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, there is one here, but in our hurry I do not know if we have had a chance to read it, but I think it is extremely important. "No law of the United States is violated when a person in a general discussion expresses favorable or adverse opinions as to members of any race, color, or creed, or regarding any nationality."

We have got a number of statements here about the Jewish race or Jewish people. I think that is not covered by the court's instructions, and we particularly believe that we are entitled to that.

The COURT. Here are some you handed me, which I am numbering here. You handed these to me last night. D-20, D-21, D-22, D-23, D-24, D-25. "The Court instructs the jury that under the laws of the State of Illinois a parent cannot be prosecuted as an accessory after the fact for harboring, concealing, main-1358 taining or assisting a son who has committed a crime, even though the parent has knowledge of the commission of the crime after the fact."

"No law of the United States is violated when a person in a general discussion expresses favorable or adverse opinions as to members of any race, color, or creed, or regarding any nationality."

That is true but I cannot state all the truth in this one charge. It is long enough now. I have told the jury that those expressions of the defendant prior to June 17, 1942, are to be regarded only on the question of intent. I have told them clearly what the crime is. I cannot see—have you any objection to D-24?

Mr. Woll. I believe your Honor will recall we did say we had a perfect right to make the statements that he did, and we have said he did not violate any law. I think you said that.

The Court. Which is it?

Mr. Woll. 58.

The Court. Yes.

"* * * Such statements of the defendant, if you 1359 believe they were made, are not grounds for charging the defendant with treason. The defendant, as well as others, had the right to his opinions and he had a right to express his opinion and to do anything lawful in keeping with those opinions and sympathies, but those statements, if you believe any were made, may be borne in mind by you in determining what his intent may have been after this country was at war with Germany, in committing, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that he did so commit, any of the various overt acts charged in the indictment and submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions." I think that is covered.

Mr. Bertram. This does not cover the same point at all. As I see it, it says something about expressing an opinion. It does not tell them it is not unlawful to express particular opinions.

Mr. Finn. If you want to insert in here, after "opinions" "including any opinion concerning any race, color or prior condition of servitude" in there.

1360 Mr. Warnholtz. If you have no objection, why not separate them? It makes it cumbersome.

Mr. Finn. If you want it, we have no objection to it being put right there.

Mr. Bertram. Insert that same sentence in the separate paragraph?

1361 The Court. "There has been some testimony of certain statements purported made by the defendants prior to the Declaration of War with Germany. Such statements of the defendant, if you believe they were made, are not grounds for charging the defendant with treason. The defendant as well as others had the right to his opinion, had a right to express his opinion, and do anything lawful in keeping with those opinions and sympathies, but those statements——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It is not true if those particular opinions referred to at that time had a bearing upon the defendant's feelings with reference to the country—either the United States or Germany——

The COURT. Did he say anything about any person or color?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Not color, not in this case. It was concerning the Jewish people. That was brought out, I believe, three or four times quite strongly—at least three or four times.

Mr. BERTRAM. But in all the matters here, there is no emphasis——

The COURT. You are putting in something that is not in the case.

1362 Mr. BERTRAM. If you want to leave out "color", do you not think that should be stricken out?

The COURT. He did not say anything about race?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The Jewish people are considered as a race and as a creed.

Mr. BERTRAM. That phrase.

Mr. WOLL. I have no objection if you want to say: "No law of the United States is violated when a person in general discussion expresses verbally adverse opinions as to the members of any race or creed."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I see no reason why it should not be separated, because it detracts from the other instruction otherwise.

Mr. WOLL. Pardon me.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It detracts if you combine that with the other instruction.

Mr. WOLL. Where would you set it up there?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It is only detracting from the other one there.

Mr. WOLL. I think that is in line with what has been generally considered by the Court as proper form. I do not think it ought to be in any other place.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That ought to be a separate instruction.

1363 The COURT. Then these others, 59, so that these others follow, and they will also be changed, 60 becomes 61; 61 becomes 62; 62 becomes 63; 63 becomes 64; 64 becomes 65; 65 becomes 66.

(Said numbered suggestions were renumbered as stated.)

The COURT. I take it you will give me that decision, and I presume you will do that so that we can consider it before we started. I have covered that in there.

Mr. WOLL. Up to the present time we have found one case which says it is perfectly proper for the Court to instruct if the defendant does not take the stand, even though defendant does not tender an instruction. It does not say you have to.

The COURT. Walker Butler took up a case on that specific thing and the Circuit Court of Appeals felt it was not error. The defendant got five years. I think that is generally a substantial sentence over here. I guess we are through with this.

I think I will attach to the indictment, when it goes to the jury, a statement or sheet of statements showing that overt acts 1 to 9, 18, 19, 24 to 29, inclusive, are withdrawn from the consideration of the jury as overt acts; that overt acts 10 to 17, 20 to 23, inclusive, are submitted to the jury or to the consideration 1364 of the jury as possible overt acts of treason.

Mr. FINN. Do you make the statement, or should it not be stated that the other overt acts, if there is any evidence, may be considered on the question of intent?

The COURT. That is in the jury's instructions. I want to send these instructions to the jury. I am going to send these instructions to the jury.

Mr. FINN. Does your Honor at this time desire to take up any matter as to exhibits going to the jury?

The COURT. What do you think about that?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The matter of what?

The COURT. Exhibits?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It seems to me since we have admitted the status of Herbert Haupt when he came to the United States that the submission of these exhibits, these destructive devices and so forth, might be somewhat prejudicial.

The COURT. How many exhibits have you?

Mr. FINN. I think about 65.

The COURT. Have you a list of those exhibits?

Mr. WOLL. I think we can give you a list.

1365 The COURT. Give us a list of the exhibits that you think ought to go.

Mr. FINN. We are of the opinion, your Honor, they should all go to the jury. They were all admitted in evidence. The jury has not seen any of them.

The COURT. Is there anything else we ought to do now?

Mr. FINN. No, your Honor.

Mr. WOLL. That is all I have in mind right now. Thank you.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No; if the Court please.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken to Tuesday, June 6 A. D. 1944, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock P. M.)

1366 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge, and a Jury

Tuesday June 6, 1944, 2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Counsel present: Messrs. J. Albert Woll, Earle C. Hurley, Richard G. Finn, appeared for the United States of America. Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * * * *

1367 The COURT. Will counsel please step into chambers?

(And thereupon the following proceedings were had in chambers outside the presence of the jury.)

The COURT. I have just found two cases on this felony impeachment, one from the Supreme Court of Illinois and they say: "At the request of the defendants the Court instructs the jury that Wilma Harjes admitted that she stood convicted of the crime of larceny; that the conviction of a witness for a felony was evidence tending to impeach her or his credibility, and that in determining the weight which they should attach to Wilma Harjes' testimony, they had a right to take into consideration the fact that she stood convicted of larceny." Convicted of a felony.

Then there is a case in the District Court of the District of Columbia. The District of Columbia Code has a provision that says no conviction of a crime shall render a man incompetent to testify, but that his conviction may be shown to affect 1368 his credibility as a witness.

"The defendants requested the Court to charge that the convictions of crimes of the witness Harker were admitted for the purpose of affecting his credit as a witness. The jury are entitled to consider whether they would give his testimony as much credence as they would the testimony of a person who was not convicted of a crime.

"And the Court said: 'I think you gentlemen understand from your experience the purpose of allowing that testimony of previous convictions. It is to shed light upon the credibility of the witness and you will consider it, of course, and consider whether Harker, in view of these convictions, should be believed. But you will consider it in the light of the testimony he gave on the stand.

the impression that he made upon you; consider it in the light of all the other testimony in the case as a mere circumstance as you will consider all other circumstances reflecting upon the credibility of Harker's testimony.'"

1369 Some criticism of the use of "mere circumstance." Now, have you got the data in respect to the exhibits?

Mr. FINN. We have no list of exhibits, your Honor. We have all those admitted here in envelopes. I can get the envelopes and bring them here.

The COURT. Suppose you bring them in and we will see what they are.

Mr. FINN. Does the Court desire those three shovels and the box of TNT? Do you want those brought in?

The COURT. I think not.

Mr. WOLL. First are these eight photographs of the saboteurs, Kappe and including Herbert Haupt?

The COURT. Any objection to the first eight?

Mr. WOLL. Photographs.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Your Honor, I think allowing them in, allowing any of this, will be prejudicial.

The COURT. No. Objection overruled.

Mr. WOLL. So far as Herbert Haupt is concerned. The money belt, which was Burger's own money belt.

The COURT. No necessity for Burger's belt to go in.

Mr. WOLL. The caps?

1370 The COURT. The military caps might go.

Mr. WOLL. The ring?

The COURT. I do not think that adds anything to that.

Mr. WOLL. The Social Security card?

The COURT. I think that is material.

Mr. WOLL. The time device?

The COURT. I do not think that is necessary.

Mr. WOLL. The pen and pencil set?

The COURT. I do not think that is necessary.

Mr. WOLL. The carton cover. If you will recall there was some controversy over that handwriting and the witness was cross-examined very severely how he knew it was the exact handwriting on that box in Germany. You may remember that.

The COURT. What is this?

Mr. WOLL. This is a case, a cover of a box which included these articles.

The COURT. I do not think that it should go in.

Mr. WOLL. The second box?

The COURT. No.

Mr. WOLL. Pictures of the boxes?

The COURT. No.

Mr. WOLL. The box does not show explosives?

1371 The COURT. No.

Mr. WOLL. The scene, taken at different times of the excavation of the boxes in Florida. That is just on the scene there——

The COURT. Well, I think as to the scene, number 29.

Mr. WOLL. I will refer to that.

The COURT. 29 is the only one.

Mr. WOLL. Only 29. The contents of the box. Another picture of the contents of the box. These are some more pictures of the exterior appearance of the box.

The COURT. These two can go in. You need not send those in.

Mr. WOLL. This?

The COURT. No; that does not go in.

Mr. WOLL. The registration card, Hotel Mayflower?

The COURT. That can go in.

Mr. WOLL. These are Mayflower records; Florida records?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There were some that were not admitted in evidence, if you remember.

Mr. HURLEY. These have been admitted.

Mr. WOLL. The hotels, if you recall.

1372 The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Those are the hotel records.

The COURT. Yes. They may go in.

Mr. WOLL. This is the wrist watch, the Jewelry Company's bill of sale.

The COURT. That may go.

Mr. WOLL. This is the watch taken from Herbert Haupt.

The COURT. It need not go in.

Mr. WOLL. This is the telegram delivered to his folks.

The COURT. It may go in.

Mr. WOLL. This is the draft card; Herbert's card that he got in Chicago.

The COURT. That may go in.

Mr. WOLL. Originally?

The COURT. It may go.

Mr. WOLL. This is the Warner Motor Sales.

The COURT. It may go.

Mr. WOLL. This is a copy, a wash copy.

The COURT. It may go. Let us see—it is just a wash copy. No; the telegram is in, is it not?

Mr. WOLL. They are both wash copies.

The COURT. Is not the telegram in here?

Mr. WOLL. No; the telegram—we had a different tele-

1373 gram, I think.

The COURT. This is the telegram.

Mr. WOLL. This is the telegram sent on December 7th.

The COURT. It may go.

Mr. WOLL. A picture of the front steps.

The COURT. It may go.

Mr. WOLL. Of the house.

The COURT. Of the house?

The COURT. It may go.

Mr. WOLL. The naturalization petition.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. The declaration of war?

The COURT. Yes; it may go.

Mr. WOLL. The letter of Norris testified to, written to us, cross-examined; and then on redirect I offered to introduce it of Norris and Hamby?

The COURT. No. I do not think that ought to go in. Unless there has been argument made, which has not yet been made.

Mr. WOLL. I understand, your Honor, we can use those with the jury in argument?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. Because those have gone in as exhibits here?

1374 The COURT. They may be read.

Mr. WOLL. For the purpose of the record, Government's Exhibits 65, 66, 62, 60, 61, 59, 53, 55, 54, 51, 52, 46, 45, 44, 47, 48, 49, 43, 42, 40, 39, 36, 31, 30, 29, 21, 15, 16, 17, 18, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 are being, under the Court's order, submitted to the jury after they have retired. All other exhibits are not being taken into the jury room.

The COURT. There is a sheet of paper which reads:

1375 "In accordance with the instructions of the court, heretofore given you, there are withdrawn from your consideration, as possible overt acts of treason, the following alleged acts charged in the indictment:

Overt acts numbered 1 to 9, both inclusive;

Overt acts numbered 18 and 19; and

Overt acts numbered 24 to 29, both inclusive.

And that there are submitted for your consideration, as possible overt acts of treason, the following alleged acts charged in the indictment:

Overt acts numbered 10 to 17, both inclusive; and

Overt acts numbered 20 to 23, both inclusive.

The COURT. I am amending instruction numbered 13 to read as follows. I am going to insert, or I am going to make an insertion: "Certain witnesses who have testified in this proceeding have admitted that they have been convicted of felonies. Proof of conviction of a witness of a felony is evidence tending to impeach his credibility and in determining the weight which the jury 1376 should attach to the witness' testimony, they have a right to take into consideration the fact that the witness has been convicted of a felony. You have heard the testimony of these witnesses and observed them while testifying. The fact that a witness has been convicted of a felony does not mean that he cannot tell the truth. You should weight the testimony of such a witness by the same rules that you would weigh the testimony of any other witness. But the fact that a witness has been convicted of a felony may be considered by you in determining the credibility of such a witness." That will go in as 13.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. We have a few exhibits, if the Court please; the defendant.

Mr. BERTRAM. Those only include the ones actually received?

The COURT. They may be received.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I enumerate the exhibits?

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Numbers 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10.

The COURT. Anything else, gentlemen?

1377 Mr. BERTRAM. May I ask, are you going to adjourn at 4:30, your Honor?

The COURT. Yes. You may bring in the jury.

(And thereupon the following proceedings were had in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

1378 Opening argument on behalf of Government

The COURT. You may proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. FINN. May it please the Court.

The COURT. Mr. Finn.

Mr. FINN. Counsel, and ladies and gentlemen of the jury:

I do not believe there has ever been a jury within my memory which has with such patience and in such insufferable weather listened through the evidence of a long trial. Neither the heat nor illness, nor the tedium of the trial in any way has deterred you from giving us your utmost attention, and I know that the defense will join with me in thanking you right from the beginning for that avid attention in this case.

It is the duty of the government and it has been passed on to me, to open the arguments at this time. I confess to a certain sense of inadequacy at this task. The gravity of the charges, wartime, and the repercussions of a trial of this character, all weigh heavily upon a person who has the burden of arguing the facts in a case of this importance, and yet that burden has 1379 been cast upon me. I intend to carry it out to the best of my ability. You likewise have a duty to perform.

When you were selected as jurors in this case you pledged us your word, and we know that you meant it, that you would decide the issues in this case without prejudice, without bias, with your minds and your intellects, rather than with your sympathies, that you would let the chips fall where they might and decide the issues of fact, and we know at this time, at the conclusion of this trial, you were sincere in your pledge, and that you will stick to it to the end.

In our country, if in no other, matters of this character and questions of this type are decided in a Court of Law in accordance with the Constitution and the strict rules of Evidence. There is cast about the defendant the cloak of the presumption of innocence. There is also cast upon the government the burden of proving the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt. We, of the prosecution gladly accept those rules and that burden in this case. We feel confident that under those rules, in carrying that burden you will eventually reach a just, a true verdict.

1380 On the morning of December 7, 1941, the crunch of bombs was heard at Pearl Harbor and the clarion call of war sounded throughout this Nation. At that time every man, woman, and child in this country was called upon to bear true faith and allegiance to the loyalty which he had sworn to this Nation. It mattered not whether he was born here or whether he came here, attracted by the obvious benefits to be achieved and accomplished in a society of this character. From that hour when the President by proclamation acknowledged a state of war to exist, every German soldier, every spy, and every saboteur became and was an enemy of the United States. The Court will instruct you that that was true regardless of the relationship that might exist between the parties, regardless of whether that spy or saboteur was a son or a brother or a cousin, or whatever relation he might be to the citizen of the United States.

It was still the duty of every man to bear true faith and allegiance to his country in its time of peril. Under the law any relationship between the parties is immaterial.

1381 Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that, your HONOR, I do not think that counsel should make the statement that the Court may give in his instructions; that matter should be left to the instructions of the Court.

The COURT. I shall instruct the jury with respect to relationship.

Mr. FINN. Ladies and gentlemen, proceedings of this character are started in the criminal court by the filing of an indictment. That, of course, the Court will instruct you is not evidence of guilt. In this instance I merely wish to point out a few of the provisions of the indictment. The Court will in its instructions, as I understand, analyze the indictment for you.

This indictment, was returned in February of this year by the Grand Jury of the Northern District of Illinois and provides that this grand jury enrolled for this district: "* * * upon their oath present, that Hans Max Haupt at Chicago, Illinois, in the Eastern Division of the Northern District of Illinois and within the jurisdiction of this Court, continuously and at all times from June 17, 1942, up to and including July 17, 1942, under the 1382 circumstances and conditions and in the manner and by the means hereinafter set forth, then and there being a person owing allegiance to the United States, in violation of his said duty of allegiance, unlawfully, feloniously, maliciously, intentionally, traitorously, and treasonably did adhere to the enemies of the United States, to wit, the Government of the German Reich, its counselors, armies, navies, agents, representatives, and subjects with which the United States, at all times since December 11, 1941, has been at war, and did give to said enemies aid and comfort; that is to say—"

Then the indictment goes on to allege that Hans Max Haupt in the year 1930 became a citizen of the United States and thereafter owed allegiance and loyalty to this country.

The indictment further alleges or recites that the son of this defendant, one Herbert Haupt came into the United States on or about June 17, 1942 as an agent, spy, and saboteur for the government of the German Reich to serve that government during a period here.

1383 The indictment then alleges the character of the service of Herbert Haupt as an enemy agent; such things as the bringing here of explosives, materials, destructive devices, things of that character for the purpose of disrupting national defense. There are other allegations of that character. Then after the character of Herbert Haupt's service is alleged the indictment goes on to charge that Hans Max Haupt, that the service of giving aid and comfort by Hans Max Haupt to Herbert Haupt consisted: "* * * consisted in his receiving, harboring, relieving, and assisting Herbert Haupt, in transporting said Herbert Haupt by automobile, and in his furnishing hospitality to the said Herbert Haupt * * * in his aiding, abetting, meeting with, assisting, counseling, and advising Herbert Haupt in and concerning said service of said Herbert Haupt to the government of the German Reich; in his countenancing said service; in his carrying out requests and instructions of said Herbert Haupt in connection with said service; in his purchasing an automobile for the 1384 said Herbert Haupt; in his attempting to procure employment for the said Herbert Haupt; in his giving false information regarding and concealing the identity of said Herbert Haupt, as a representative of the Government of the German

Reich, and the mission of Herbert Haupt in the United States; in his receiving, holding, possessing, safeguarding, and concealing the property and funds of said Herbert Haupt and in misrepresenting and concealing the ownership of said property and funds."

The indictment then alleges that in the course and for the purpose of accomplishing these objects which are charged that the said Hans Haupt then and there performed some twenty-nine overt acts, or what are known as overt acts. The Court will instruct you as to what the nature of an overt act is and I shall not go into it, I shall not go into that subject too deeply at this time. However, I do wish to point out to you one thing, because Mr. Warnholtz in his opening argument made the statement that the evidence would merely show that Hans Haupt performed commonplace, little things.

1385 With reference to the nature of the overt acts I want to say this: The overt act, or an act of treason if you want to call it that, is any act which is done in pursuance of in the furtherance of a treasonable design. In other words, it is any act which is done with treasonable purposes.

The Court will instruct you, as I understand it, that that act need not show upon its face that it is treasonable. It does not have to be that.

For example, it does not have to be an act which by its very nature shows upon its face that it is done with treasonable intent. Any act even though it may be innocent appearing on its face, if it is done with the requisite treasonable intent is an overt act of treason.

Now, let me give you an example of what Mr. Warnholtz might term commonplace things. He said, and he will argue undoubtedly that after all what was done was to house a boy, a son, a commonplace sort of thing, the boy comes home and he is 1386 housed there, and he will argue that is not treasonable, to feed a son; it is not treason to buy an automobile; and it is not treason to procure a position; those are just normal, commonplace things. But if those commonplace things are done with the knowledge of the fact that this young man is an enemy agent, and if the things help him in his character as an enemy agent then those are treasonable in their nature, because no one questions or can say——

Mr. BERTRAM. I will object to that. I will object to that, if the Court please, on the same ground. I dislike to interrupt counsel, but counsel is invading the province of the jury.

The COURT. Objection overruled.

Mr. FINN. The gist of the whole matter is this: Did Hans Haupt at the time when he performed those acts know that his son was here as an enemy agent? Every man is presumed to intend the usual and probable consequences of his deliberate act. If A comes here as an enemy agent and B knows that he is an enemy agent and with such knowledge performs any such act of aid of comfort to that person, then that act is treasonable in its nature. You know these little commonplace things are just exactly what are 1387 needed by these agents who come from foreign countries. Every expedition of this character, every one, depends for its success or failure upon the cooperation in little commonplace things by people just of this defendant's character, who supply his needs and a place to hide. A spy needs someone to buy an automobile in a manner in which his own identity is concealed. A spy needs someone to get him a job in an optical concern so that he can get plans out of there and furnish that information to the rest of his saboteurs. A spy needs a place where he can send his mail, where it can be taken by somebody and brought into the home. A spy needs a room some place. Those little commonplace things are the acts of cooperation which are, although on their face they do not show perhaps, treasonable design, yet underneath, if performed with that treasonable intent with knowledge of the fact that he is a spy, then they are treason.

The theory of the law is this: That the door of every citizen must be shut to agents of this character, who come from foreign nations to skulk in our midst, the doors of every citizen must be closed so that he must roam, so that he cannot hide, so that 1388 he can be caught. That is the theory of this overt act proposition.

What is the crime of treason? It is defined similarly in the Constitution and the statutes. The Constitution provides, I believe, and the defense will certainly correct me if I am wrong: "Whoever owing allegiance to the United States levies war against them, or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid or comfort, shall be guilty of treason." The Constitution then goes on that: There shall be no conviction of treason unless on confession in open court—of which there has been none in this case—or on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act.

In other words, the Consfitution requires only that one overt act be proven by the testimony of two direct witnesses—not twenty-nine acts, or twelve acts. The Court is submitting twelve to you as overt acts of treason in this case. All of those do not have to be proved, just one overt act must be proved by the testimony of two direct witnesses.

Treason is defined in the first section of the criminal code
1389 in somewhat the same manner as it appears in the Constitution. Treason is the first crime in the category of all crimes, and that is true because treason strikes at the very root and the very foundation, and the very existence of our society as a whole, beyond robbery, larceny, or murder. These other crimes strike at individuals, but treason strikes at us all, and that is why it is placed as the first crime and the most heinous crime in the criminal code. The law of self-preservation, of ourselves as a nation, demands that this be so.

There are two types of treason. One is the levying of war, which is not charged in this case; and two, the adhering to the enemies, giving them aid and comfort. Of course, the Court will instruct you that treason cannot be committed inadvertently, and before a defendant can be convicted of treason it must be shown that he has the requisite treasonable intent as the Court will define it to you.

I want you, however, and I think the Court will instruct you on this subject, to distinguish between intent on the one hand and motive on the other. Intent means that an act is done deliberately, deliberately, and not inadvertently. Motive on the 1390 other hand means the thing which moves a person to do it, and if I may I will give you an example which I think is pertinent.

Let us say that A is the son of B, and A comes from Germany to this country; he goes to B, who is his father and says, "I am over here as an agent of the Government of the German Reich; I have certain duties to perform; I have got to blow up some factories," or something of that character.

B says, "Well—(A asked for his assistance).

B says: "Well, I do not like to injure America. I do not like to help Germany, but you are my son and I would like you to get along in your business. I like you. You are a fine boy, so I will give you what assistance you want. I will go out and buy some dynamite for you. If you need an automobile to transport these explosives I will go and get you an automobile. I do not want to injure America. I am doing it for you because you are my son."

Ladies and gentlemen, that person is guilty of treason.
1391 The motive which impels the act, may be a motive to help his son, or it may be for example to make money, if the boy comes home with a lot of money, but as soon as he knows that that person is a German agent, over here to do these things and he gives and deliberately gives him aid and comfort then he has the requisite treasonable intent. I would like to have you thoroughly understand that in your decisions on the issues in this case.

There are certain elements which it is necessary for the government to prove. First, it is necessary to prove that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent. Second, we must prove that Hans Haupt knew he was an enemy agent. Thirdly, it is necessary to prove that Hans Haupt with that knowledge of his enemy character, committed with treasonable intent one overt act which was proven by the testimony of two direct witnesses to the same act. Those are the elements which are required and which it is required of the government to sustain.

Now, let us get to the first element. The government has to prove beyond a reasonable doubt, to your satisfaction, that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent. We introduced a great deal 1392 of proof on that issue. We had first the testimony of Mr. Burger whom I do not think you will forget for a long time. We have the testimony of Liebl, this young man who forsook his family in Germany and came back to the United States and joined the Army, first the Marines and then the Army. I think we all owe him a tribute.

Then there was Mr. Parsons, and Mr. Connelly, Mr. Pryor, these agents who dug up the material down in Florida and identified it, and testified to its explosive nature, and who explained it to you.

Then we have the hotel people in Florida, the record of the watch purchased by Herbert Haupt down in Florida. The Draft Board officials, Miss Gordon from the Draft Board and Ralph Gregg from the FBI who testified that this young man came to register and told them that he had come back from Mexico, and we have this young man, Mr. Haas, who was contacted by Herbert Haupt while he was here, I believe it was on a Thursday night—while he was here and who said that Herbert Haupt told him that he had a message—that Herbert Haupt had a message which had come from a High Germany military source, to give Mr. Gerhard Kaufman, from his brother-in-law, Walter Kappe 1393 I think you will remember Mr. Kappe, the leader of this sabotage school in Germany.

These witnesses, all of them have told to you, in my opinion, the most shameful saga of this war. This was the most diabolically conceived, the most carefully prepared plot to strike at the heart of the airplane production of this country. It was conceived with the idea in mind that one of these skulking saboteurs with inside knowledge of the various devices in defense plans, such as the Alcoa Company, the Aluminum Company of America, and the other productive concerns, with inside knowledge of their workings, with a little TNT could do more damage and more effective damage to that industry than a flock of bombers at twenty thousand feet. You see, they had everything all worked out with characteristic German precision.

When they went out to the factories in Berlin they showed them the weak spots of all of these industries, the places where the electrical current went, for example, you remember

1394 Burger's description, of how they planned to destroy this Alcoa plant and make it ineffective for months. These aluminum pots, when the electricity is cut off, freeze. The metal freezes and the pots themselves are filled up, and they have to be removed after long, long months, and during that time they are ineffective. You see it is scientific. It was a scientific process, a precise plan that was worked out.

You will remember that Mr. Burger said they sent them out to various locks in Germany, and an expert on locks there instructed them. He had definite figures on the various types of locks and dams and developments over here in this country so they would know just where to place these explosives and just how much explosives to use, so that they could cripple those locks in this country.

We introduced in evidence in this case a number of exhibits which were not given to you at that time. Before I show them to you I want to refer a little bit to the sabotage school in Brandenburg; but perhaps before getting to that I had better get to the story how the young men got over there.

You will remember that about the middle of June 1941,
1395 Wolfgang Wergin and Herbert Haupt, these young Nazis, for they were that, they were brought up to be that, Nazi philosophy was infused into their character at their very fireplaces by those fathers who hated this country, infused with this German philosophy; Nazi philosophy.

When the young men of our country were rallying to the Colors and we were preparing for war, and were being called to the draft, these two young men instead of seeking adventure in their own army, or in their own navy, or in their own Marine Corps, left this country, obstensibly on a trip to Mexico. You know the story of how they got down to the border, and how when they got there one of the boys had to turn back, Hugo Troestkin had to turn back, but Wergin, Wolfgang Wergin and this young Herbert Haupt went down to Mexico. There these two young men, American citizens, contacted, not the American consul, but the German consul and by means of the German consul they got transportation to Japan; and in Japan they again contacted the German and the Japanese consuls and through their assistance got on this blockade breaker. Leibl testified Haupt sail'd to Bordeaux. Do you remember how from there in some 1396 manner or other, Herbert Haupt arrived at the Brandenburg school

You remember Burger's description of what took place at that school. I am not going through all of these details. However, I would like to show you some of these exhibits. First are the pictures of Mr. Koppe, and evidently his wife, who was the leader of that school. The next one is of John Daseh. These are going to the jury so that you can have them with you and you can look at those. This is the young man, Herbert Haupt. I think this is Burger; this is Kerling who was the leader of the second group, to which Herbert belonged.

This is Neubauer. This is not the first time we saw Neubauer in this case. You remember Mrs. Fishman said that Neubauer and several other young men, Herbert Haupt's friends, used to go out to the Fishman estate out in Glencoe where the Haupts lived and that he was one of those who had rifles cached out there at that place. This is Heinck and Querin, and the rest are shown in this picture. I am not going to review the testimony of Mr. Burger, because I think it is vivid in your memory. However, there are some things about it that I think I ought 1397 to draw to your attention, just in order to show you that these people meant business. I just want to show a few of these things to you.

This is a photograph which was identified as the photograph of a coal bomb, which is made with a plastic substance around it, and then a hole which you can see in the end of it, and inside is enclosed a block of TNT. The requisite detonator is set into that hole. Of course, that will set off the bomb. It can be placed in the firebox of a train. It can be placed in a boiler in any kind of an engine and, of course, it will accomplish the desired result.

These two exhibits, I think, are particularly interesting to you and, inasmuch as they will not go to the jury, you may want to take a look at them. I think they are ingenious, so much so that they should be brought to your attention. This is a pen and pencil set. One of them is the pen and I think it is marked "King" and the other is marked—I think both of them are marked "King." At any rate, both of them write. You can write with this 1398 pencil just as you would write with one that is in your pocket. The pen has a very fine point in it.

Enclosed, as Mr. Parsons described to you, in the pencil was a capsule of acid and below that capsule was a diaphragm of cellophane and below that was a deposit of a chemical.

Then when you screw the two together the capsule would break so that it permits the acid to eat its way through the diaphragm. That acted as a timing device, down to the explosive material. That, of course, would generate heat, as he said, at 2,500 degrees centigrade. It could be used as a detonator or as an incendiary device.

The next, I think, is very ingenuous, and consists of a fine jewel mechanism, which as Mr. Parsons described, can be set and used as a timing device and can be set for fourteen days. In other words, I can set this clock, I can set it and attach it to a detonator, and set it for two weeks from now, and at the very precise moment when it is set for, it will blow up the object that is desired.

When the material was uncovered in Florida and taken to the garage in Jacksonville, there appeared to be four boxes.
1399 There were eighteen individual blocks of TNT in each of two boxes, and then a smaller amount of TNT in another; and the fourth box contained all these various devices which you see here. You see they came prepared not only to blow up, not one thing, but many things.

In addition to that at this school—in addition to that at this school these people learned to build up what Mr. Burger called a "front!" That was perhaps the most interesting, precise psycological process in the whole case. You remember that Burger said that each one of them was given a certain task; one was to buy a farm. He had been a farmer before. Incidentally I think the record shows that all of these men had been chosen because they had been over in this country before, and could pass around among you, pass among us without any suspicion whatsoever, speaking good English. Of course, Herbert Haupt was certainly in that category.

One of them was to buy a farm so that he could buy nitrates, things which were apparently to be innocent appearing and yet which would, when mixed with other chemicals, make these very explosive devices.

1400 Another one Burger said was to open up a Commercial Artists studio here in Chicago. Another was to be a cook. The farm was to be used for two purposes. One was to buy these chemicals inconspicuously. The other purpose was to have a place to put this explosive material when they got it from Florida so they could bring that to this place and they could go to this place and from there go around this country with it and blow up what they wanted to blow up or do what they wanted to do.

Some of the instructions that were given—some of the instructions that were given to Herbert Haupt are significant. In the first place he was to furnish a car for his group so they could get around. In the second place he was to get employment in the Optical Industry and if possible furnish all information that he could get concerning the Norden Bomb sight. You see there they are still striking at another phase of the airplane industry. I presume the Simpson Optical Company was mentioned because they were at that time engaged as subcontractors in the making of the Norden Bomb sight and Herbert Haupt had worked there before.

1401 Inasmuch as they knew that the Federal Bureau of Investigation were looking for Herbert Haupt because of his failure to register for the draft he was told to register for the draft immediately upon his return and to report to the FBI so as to throw them off the trail, so as to allay suspicion.

He was also instructed that he should not go near his folks—but he evidently broke those instructions. I do not think there is any question about that. He was instructed to find a place to cache this amount of money which he, together with other members of his group brought over to this country in a zipper bag.

As to Brandeburg, after they had gone through all those instructions, these tests including practicing in rubber boats and so forth, they went on to Berlin where they were taken on to these factories and these places that were mentioned. From there he went to Lorient. You know the story how they got into the submarine and came to this country.

Unfortunately all of Herbert Haupt's group have been executed as spies. We have no direct witness as to what 1402 took place, but it is easy to follow the trail from the evidence that has been presented in this case. The four young men evidently landed on the 17th of June or about the 17th of June and proceeded to Jacksonville, and they split up. Just as Burger's group split up. They split up into two groups. One went to the Mayflower and the other to the Seminole Hotels down in Jacksonville, just two blocks away.

If you will examine the records of the hotel people when you go into your jury room to deliberate, you will find that within ten or fifteen minutes Kerling and Thiel, I think it was, or as he was called Thomas, registered. Kerling and Neubauer registered at one hotel and Haupt and the other man had registered at another hotel.

We find that very day that telephone calls as shown by the hotel records went from the rooms of one hotel to the rooms of the others, of these people, and that evening, Kerling who was the leader of the second group came over to visit Haupt and his companion in their hotel. So you see the whole thing is tied up, not only tied up in Germany, not only linked in Germany, but linked in this country.

1403 They were brought to America. Then in accordance with their instructions Herbert Haupt and this Neubauer arrived—Herbert Haupt and another young man came here to Chicago.

From there on let us examine this evidence microscopically. Do you not think the Government has proven beyond all reasonable doubt that Herbert Haupt came here as an enemy agent, a spy and saboteur for the German government? Mr. Warnholtz in his opening statement stated that he would show that Herbert Haupt abandoned his mission. Why, ladies and gentlemen, there is not the slightest scintilla of evidence in this case of any such abandonment of this mission. I say that the evidence is clear that this young man was acting as a German spy, carrying out his instructions when he was here. What do you think he went over to see Haas for on Thursday night? He told Haas that he had a message from the high German military authority, that he wanted to give to Gerhardt Kaufman, a message from Kappe, the leader of the sabotage school at Bradenburg, his brother-in-law, in this country.

1404 Was he acting as a spy? Do you think that he would have been executed in Washington if he had abandoned his mission?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Objection, I object to that as being a conclusion.

The COURT. Sustained.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Counsel has no right to draw.

Mr. FINN. All right. What does the evidence show? On the second issue, that Hans Haupt knew that this boy had come here as an enemy agent, and then with such knowledge he aided him.

Let us look at this from the standpoint of common sense, without any reference whatsoever to any admissions made by anybody, or any talk to anybody in this case. Let us look at it from the common sense standpoint.

You people are here as jurors and you come from all walks of life, and you all have ideas on each one of these subjects. You do not have to throw away your common sense when you come into the jury box.

Here is a young man who was brought up by his father as a German; his father had been a veteran of the German 1405 Army; he was a trustee of the German Ward War Veterans in this country. His only statement through the year from 1936 down to 1941 showed that he was a most fanatical Nazi. That is all on that.

Here was a boy, a perfect product of his father's ambitions. Why in 1939 this father declared that he would never allow his boy to join the American army to fight over in Germany, that he would kill him first. That is the type of man that Hans Haupt was. That was the type of man that this young boy came home to. He made similar statements of his feelings at different times. He said that if he was called or drafted into the American army he would crawl over the line and give information to the enemy. All right, this young man comes home to such a father, to such a home, to such an atmosphere in which he has been brought up as a German, not an American boy, and he is just bursting with this information, this secret information, and he is bursting to the extent that he told a comparative stranger, Mr. Haas, that he had come from Germany Thursday night.

Well, ladies and gentlemen, what do you think took place that night in Herbert Haupt's home here. Do you not think 1406 that that boy told his father and this mother all about his travels? They were in sympathy with him; they had sent him there; he was fulfilling the prophecy of his father made in 1940 when he said that we would have a revolution from within; here was a boy, come back to fulfill that prophecy. So do you think that he kept from his mother and father the story of where he had been? Can you in all common sense believe that?

Let us glance at the evidence of whether this man knew or did not know whether his boy had come from Germany as an agent of the German Reich. On August 5th, two weeks after he had been originally arraigned, this man evidently enraged at one of his codefendants, Wergin, called the marshal and asked the Marshal to have an FBI man or somebody from the FBI come over and interview him. This came at his own suggestion. These two young, clean-cut young men were sent over there and what did they do?

Well, Mr. Hirsch says that Hans Haupt told him that right then, that on that very first night, June 19th, he and his wife went to the Froehling home; that there Herbert Haupt, in the presence of the Froehlings and the Wergins told the story about his trip to Mexico and to Japan, and running through the 1407 British blockade to France, and of his going to enlist in the German army, but enlisting in some type of German government Intelligence school, and his return to the United States in a German submarine. That is what Hirsch testified to as to what Hans Haupt said took place that first night.

He also testified that on June 20th, that was the night they went over, if your remember, at eleven o'clock, to the Wergin home, he testified that Haupt told him that on June 20th that he, his wife and Herbert went to the Wergin home on South Wood Street, and in the presence of all Herbert Haupt told his story of his trip; that he contacted a German consul in Mexico and obtained passage to Japan, where he was met by the German and Japanese consuls, that he ran the British blockade landing in France, that Herbert stated that he was in an intelligence school; that he had huge sums of money to use in that connection; that Wergin said that "he was no dummy and knew the ropes, and that he himself had worked in a similar capacity in the last war;" and that Wergin thereupon offered his services because he said he could use some of this money that Herbert had.

1408 What took place on the evening of the 21st; Sunday?

Sunday they were all in the Froehling home. They were all there and what took place there? Well, you know there was no birthday party at that time. They said there was a birthday party, but there was no birthday party at that time. There was only these six people there, and they were always the same people on the various evenings and you will recall when this boy came, and incidentally the evidence shows that this young man, Wergin, went over to Germany with him when he went to Japan, through Mexico to Japan into Germany. Do you not think that if this young man went over there at that time to the Wergins he did not tell them about this son? And where he went in Germany? Do you think he lied to the mother of his pal who had gone through all of these adventures with him, and who was evidently of the same character and stripe that he was.

On the 21st, with reference to that, this meeting Hans Haupt said also—on Sunday night, June 21st the Wergins were also to the Froehling home and stayed there and there for about an hour he told the same thing about his trip to Japan and into Germany and into the Intelligence School and he told how 1409 they came to the United States, on the German submarine and he told the people, these various people, and they were all over there in the Froehlings. From Froehlings they went to the Haupt home, and again he told them about his being in the Intelligence school. Haupt said that he wanted to testify against Wergin because he, Wergin, had told the boy he wanted to help him in this plan of his.

Robe's testimony is almost identical; very similar: that Hans told him on the first night, Haupt told Robe that Herbert had told him on this first night, told of his trip to Germany, of the return by submarine, at the Froehling home at dinner. Then he said—Haupt stated or started the conversation by saying that he felt that Wergin and his wife were just as responsible, knew just as much about the situation as Haupt and his wife and they were equally responsible and he wanted to testify against them. I am not going to read this. You will remember the testimony of Mr. Robe to the same effect.

There is one further addition, and that is that Haupt said or mentioned having a large sum of money and also mentioned 1410 that Herbert's duties in this country were that of contact man.

At the meeting on Saturday, June 27, the Haupts, Froehlings, and Wergins were all present at the Haupt home and all decided that Hans Haupt—that is what Hans Haupt said, they all decided that if anybody made any inquiry they would not know anything about Herbert. That is what Hirsch and Robe testified.

And that Saturday evening they all said. Hans Haupt told him.

that on Saturday evening they were all worried because Herbert had not come home and it was then decided that if anybody asked any questions, or if the FBI came around, or the FBI asked any questions they would all say they knew nothing about the matter, except that he had been to Mexico. Do you think that Hans Haupt knew that his boy was a German agent?

What else have we on this subject? There is the testimony of the two convicts. You know the government in this case holds no brief for convicts. It would be ill advised on the part of Mr. Woll, Mr. Hurley, or myself to try to condone or excuse the crimes which put Norris and Hamby in the penitentiary; and yet you know there are some things in this country—there are some 1411 things that even the worst convicts won't do, and some of them have the "guts" enough, some of them have courage enough, some of them have principle enough, even though they are in jail, not to betray their country.

What did Norris say? I think you were impressed by this little fellow, by his sincerity, and his apparent efforts to tell the truth, the whole truth on the witness stand, through what was a very gruelling cross-examination.

Norris said that Hans Haupt told him that he was in jail for having German money. You will remember how the conversation happened to come about. I think Hamby related that he and a number of the other convicts were "beefing" as they called it, about their sentences and complaining about gestapo methods that were used by the people's attorney or the state's attorney in the state courts.

They were all talking about their convictions, what they should try to do about them, and you remember Haupt said, "What will they give me?"

Hamby said: "Well, how can I tell you what they will give you unless you tell me what you are in here for? What are you in here for?"

1412 "I am in here for taking German money."

"What do you mean by that; German marks?"

"No; not German Marks, American money that was brought over from Germany."

And then Haupt related what happened when his son came back, and what did he say? Norris said that Hans Haupt told him he was in jail for having German money, that is, United States money from Germany and Hans also stated that he had received a letter from Mexico stating that Herbert was on his way to Germany, and then he received word from Herbert from Tokyo and Hans stated that he was—the night he was notified from his relative's home, the night when he got there he was scared and surprised because Herbert was there.

Is that the normal reaction that a father would have when a son went away, when he found that his boy had returned from an innocent trip to Mexico? He had been away when it was time for him to register, but that is nothing against him. A lot of people are away when it is time to register and they come back and report to their draft board and that is all over with, 1413 but Hans Haupt was scared when his son came back here.

Sure he was scared. There was a cold clutching hand of fear at his heart and why? Because Hans Haupt knew what happened, and he knew what happens to spies in wartime and he knew at that time what happens to people who harbor them, and who give them aid and comfort. Sure he was scared.

He was not scared because the boy was not there when the draft call came. He was scared from that very moment when he knew that the boy was back here and as he said to Norris, "To do no good to this country." How much time have I, your Honor?

The COURT. You have used 57 minutes.

Mr. FINN. Continuing with the analysis of the testimony of Mr. Norris, Hans also stated that he received a letter from Mexico stating that Herbert was on his way to Germany and of his receiving word from Herbert from Tokyo.

Incidentally, you will remember that Carl Eggert, who was a very close friend of the Haupts also testified that Haupt told him that his boy was on his way to Germany, which is another reason why he was scared at the time the boy came back.

Hans stated that when he was notified from the relatives' home, when he got there he was scared and surprised because 1414 Herbert was there. He was scared because the FBI agents and the Selective Service people were looking for him, to report for his classification and Haupt said that Herbert had told him how he came from Germany in the submarine; and how they had landed in the submarine at Florida, in a rubber raft, and had told about being in the sabotage school in Germany; and he told about the making of the chemicals in Germany and he told about leaving Germany in the submarine and he was scared.

Hans also said that Herbert said that they had landed by means of a rubber raft and he told about the change of clothing, and he stated that they had buried their clothes in the sand, and also what he had done after they had changed clothes.

Hans also told him about the money that Herbert gave him, $1,000 to buy an automobile, and he also told he gave him some money. Hans said that he had hidden some of the money under a rug; and that Herbert had the money, had taken it out of a money belt.

Hans told him that Herbert wanted an automobile to travel around in, and Herbert gave him the money to purchase the car.

Hans said that the first conversation took place in the 1415 Froehling home incidentally all of these witnesses have testified that at the Froehling home, they were all there, Froehling and his wife, Wergin and his wife, and Hans Haupt and his wife were all there.

What does Hamby say about that, on this question of knowledge. He said, as I have told you, the conversation was introduced by the discussion about various convictions and what they were there for and so forth, and in that conversation Hans Haupt told him of the boy's desire to go to Germany and to join the German army; that he went from home, to Mexico and to Japan; that on June 19th the relatives telephoned him and told him to come over to the Froehling house, and what does he say: "How did you get here?" And Herbert told him; that is, he said he asked the boy how he got there. That would be the first question the father would ask, would it not?

Herbert told him that he come back on a German submarine, and he saw Hans at first did not believe him, that he told him he was to blow up ammunition dumps, factories, and he said Haupt said he told him, that is he told Herbert he would help 1416 him as much as he could.

Hans said Herbert gave him a large sum of money which he hid under the rug. Herbert also gave him money to buy an automobile, and the son told him he did not believe it was advisable for him, Herbert, to buy a car, so Hans agreed to buy it for him.

Mr. Haupt told him his son told him he needed a car to get around in, to do the work he was supposed to do. At first Mr. Haupt tried to get him to use the old car but Herbert said it would not stand up under the strain.

Herbert told him the boy said he had intended to join the German army, but instead he had joined the sabotage school. Hans stated that Herbert told him after graduating the German Government gave him the money and sent him with seven other men over to this country on a submarine and that he landed on the coast of Florida and he asked him why he did not report Herbert and Hans said he did not turn his boy in because he was his own flesh and blood and because he was helping the fatherland.

1417 There are your motives for you. There are your motives for you.

All of these witnesses by their testimony have said that Erna Haupt was present at these conversations. We saw here yesterday a most interesting spectacle. Erna Haupt was placed upon the stand by the defense.

You know it is a rule of law that no cross-examination may be made upon any subject that is not gone into on direct.

The evidence had shown that Erna Haupt, according to this testimony was present at each one of these meetings.

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, I object to the statement as improper argument.

Mr. FINN. Upon what ground?

Mr. BERTRAM. Talking about the rules of evidence.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. That is certainly——

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. The evidence has shown that Erna Haupt was present at each one of these meetings.

Ladies and gentlemen, here is one person who would know all of these things, and they put her on the witness stand. Was there one word of denial on her part? Was she asked one question about what took place at these meetings? Was she asked one question as to whether or not Herbert Haupt had told on those four nights those various things that these witnesses have described? No.

Instead you saw the most palpable, the most patent, the most obvious appeal to your sympathy, and that was all.

Why, ladies and gentlemen, I think that is an insult to your intelligence, to the intelligence of this jury. I think that is an insult to the integrity of your minds. Do you not believe for one moment that if everything that was said was not true, that woman would not have denied it? Do you think for one moment——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment, counsel. I object to all of these inferences, because Erna Haupt today is under indictment together with her husband.

Mr. FINN. If she is a defendant in another case, what difference does that make, your Honor?

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. FINN. What is the difference?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. She need not testify against herself.

The COURT. Overruled.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that.

Mr. FINN. Ladies and gentlemen, if it were not true as we have alleged in the indictment that this boy was harbored in that home from June 19th to June 27th when he was picked up—if it were not true that they harbored and sheltered him in that home, then why did they not ask Erna Haupt about it? She was in the home. She was living there with her husband, and you know what her answer would have to be. Why, of course, the boy stayed there.

Of course, he told these various things at the meetings. Of course, they went down to buy the automobile for these reasons.

The defense knew at the time when Erna Haupt was upon the stand that the evidence had shown that that automobile was purchased for the purpose of assisting Herbert Haupt to get around——

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to that, no such evidence at all which counsel——

Mr. FINN. Of course there is.

Mr. BERTRAM. No; there is not.

1420 The COURT. Well, counsel has a right to draw reasonable inferences from the evidence. Objection overruled.

Mr. FINN. If it was not true that they did not purchase this automobile to assist Herbert Haupt, who would know it better than Mrs. Haupt? If it were not true that they had gone to the Grunaus for the purpose of getting a job and assisting in his mission here in this country who would know it better than Erna Haupt? Who would better know of all of these things and all of these acts than this woman, who is silent upon the witness stand?

Ladies and gentlemen you will never get more expressive evidence than that silence of Erna's, if you sat there for years. One more point along that line. You know that the evidence showed that on the 28th day of June, the day following, the Sunday after the boy had been arrested, they talked again about it.

1421 This man, this defendant, went over to meet a friend of his by the name of Carl Eggert. He met him in a tavern there. He said, "Carl, I got $900 of my own money that I would like to have you hold. The FBI are liable to get it, and it is my own money, and I want you to hold it for me," but Eggert, of course, was right on the spot. Pretty cunning, after all, isn't he? So Eggert says, "All right, I will hold it for you." And Haupt brings the money over to Eggert, $900; coincidentally in $50 bills; eighteen $50 bills.

Ladies and gentlemen, if Hans Haupt had $900, if he was in the habit of collecting $50 bills and had $900 of his own money, at that time, who would know it better than Erna Haupt? And who would claim if it was true, if that was so, who would claim that on the witness stand? Erna, of course. Was she asked about it? No. What other conclusion can you draw?

Now, let us take the chronology of these events just a moment, if we can. On Friday night, according to the admissions Haupt made to these four men, these various four people had met at Froehlings and went——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I object to that statement, "testified by four people."

1422 Mr. FINN. How many were there; three?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I do not know; not four, as stated by counsel. One, I believe.

Mr. FINN. Well, just to make sure Mr. Hirsh, testified——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Mister who?

Mr. FINN. Mr. Hirsh and Mr. Rode and Mr. Norris testified that one night they were together and his relations at the house, when they come in, he was scared and surprised because Herbie was there. That is the first night they were there.

Mr. Hamby testified that Haupt said that on Friday, June 19th, he got a telephone call to come over to Froehlings, so that there were four witnesses who testified to it, but at any rate, that meeting took place on Friday night. The next day Herbert wasn't seen around the house at all, and at 11 o'clock that night he went over to Wergins, and you remember Miss Demmler testified the manner in which the people tried to conceal the identity of Herbert Haupt in the early morning, at any rate, the next morning, when Grunau slept in the Froehling home. He gets up and finds Herbert Haupt in his bed. They were over at Wergins after 4, 4:15, according to Miss Demmler, evidently some time after that the 1423 boy was brought to the Froehling home that evening, and he stayed there most of the day. That evening, they had another meeting at the Froehling home in which Mr. Wergin and his wife again entered into the picture, and the Froehlings according to these admissions, that is, the Froehlings, according to the admissions, were afraid that the neighbors would be suspicious and moved the meeting over to Haupts. Now, the next morning, Herbert Haupt carried out his first assignment. He was told in Germany to report to the Draft Board and the FBI, so Herbert Haupt went down that morning, and he reported to the Selective Service Board, and he told Miss Gordon there he had been in Mexico mining gold. Was he abandoning his mission at that time? He went to the FBI, according to Mr. Greeg, and told the same story at that time. You will remember the testimony following that. The evidence by way of these admissions shows that the father had warned him there were agents that had been around the house, inquiring about his Selective Service Status, and he, Hans Haupt, had advised him to go to the FBI and to go to the Draft Board, to go to the agent's office, or at least down to the Government office.

Monday night, June 22, Herbert Haupt carried out his second assignment, that is, to get back in the optical industry.
1424 Hans and Erna Haupt took the boy to Grunau's home, and you will remember Herbert Haupt was driving, drove down about four blocks, then stopped, and Herbert Haupt got out of the car and went around to the side, and Hans Haupt, the father, switched positions with him, and he did the driving from then on. And they drove over to Grunau's and there the young man applied for the job. They knew Koch, the foreman, in this plant, and they told him, in order to break the news to him, that Herbert Haupt may be coming to work within a few days. He had already applied to Mr. Grunau to come back that night.

And now Tuesday, Herbert Haupt starts to carry out his third assignment, namely, the purchase of this automobile. They were two purposes for that; one was so that they could get the explosives, which were buried on the beach in Florida, they were not doing any good down there, and the second was so that he would be able to travel around. So Hans Haupt goes down to the Warner Motor Sales, and they purchase an automobile. Hans takes the lead. Hans buys the car. Hans puts down the deposit. Hans signs the credit statement. Hans gives the reference, not 1425 the boy's references, but Hans Haupt's references, for that financial statement. Why? Why? Of course, so that the identity of the boy as a German agent will be concealed.

Now, I will prove that to you, I think, beyond a reasonable doubt within just a few moments. The next night, they again came around. There Hans Haupt signs the mortgage. Hans, I think, put down the $450, wasn't it, and signed an additional note for $50. Hans does all this. Now why does he do it? It is merely because he owes Herbert a car? The Defense claims that Hans Haupt owed his boy a car because Hans had taken over the boy's car when he left. Of course, that wouldn't be a defense, if he owed him ten cars; if he owed him ten cars and the boy came back, and Hans Haupt knew he was a German agent, it wouldn't make any difference. He furnished his car. He was still guilty of treason, because he knew he was a German agent and knowing that he helped him.

Now, let me see about this transaction, you will remember the gentlemen who testified by the names of Mr. Vinson and Mr. Farrell. There were three $50 bills put down by Hans; the price of the car was $1,045. I think Farrell said there was $5 put 1426 down for a half a year's license, the total price therefore is $1050.00. Later on in the week on Sunday, Hans Haupt shows up at Eggert's with $900 in $50 bills. That is the exact amount. $1,045 is the amount that Hans Haupt obligates himself to pay. He puts down $460, or whatever it is, and he obligates himself to pay up to $1,045 on that car. Here are three $50 bills, $900 in $50 bills, which shows up in Hans Haupt's possession at the end of the week. All right. Do you know what happened? This boy gave his father the money for that car. His father, in order to conceal his identity put this money down, put some money down and obligated himself to pay the rest of it, the full amount for the purchase of the car, which had been given him by Herbert.

What other explanation is there for the $900, or how else is the defense going to account for this $900? There isn't a scintilla of evidence that it is Hans Haupt's. Do you think that this man, who is a painter, who works so hard for his money, is in the habit of keeping $50 bills as souvenirs around his house?

Now there is another incident I want to discuss that I think is most significant—most significant, and particularly on the question of intent.

1427 I wonder if the Jury would like a rest for a few minutes, if the court please?

The COURT. Very well. We will take a recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon a recess was had, and on the coming in of court after recess, the trial of this cause was resumed as follows, that is to say:)

The COURT. Proceed.

Mr. FINN. May it please the court, I should like to call to your consideration, particularly the evidence with reference to this Zerner incident on Tuesday night, because I think it is a matter of tremendous significance. I think that you could throw away out of this case entirely all of the evidence of the admissions that were made and still from that Zerner incident you would be forced to conclude that Hans Haupt knew what his boy was here for.

Now let us look at that evidence, if you will. Zerner was that little fellow whom we had to draw evidence out of, you remember, on the witness stand. I had to cross-examine him. He had been a friend of Haupt's for a number of years. He was also a German World War Veteran in the last war. Incidentally, I want

1428 to say this: You know I want you to understand, ladies and gentlemen, that this isn't a prosecution of this man, because he is a German, or of German descent, or anything of that character. I don't think there is anyone who has more admiration for the German people, as a people, than I have. German citizens coming to this country from the Old Country have settled here for years and years throughout the history of this nation. They have formed a part, and integral part of this community, fine hard working loyal Americans. So I want you to understand that that has nothing whatsoever to do with this situation, but Zerner was a member of this organization with Haupt, and a friend of his, and he used to come over there regularly. He lived within a few blocks, so he came over there regularly to Haupt's home. He happened to be there on Tuesday night. Now mind you, this wasn't a question of Haupt being afraid at that time that the FBI would know his son was back in the country, because he hadn't registered for the draft. There was no such excuse, because Herbert has registered for the draft, had reported to the FBI on Monday, the day before, and you remember, there was a conversation at Grunau's house to that effect. The boy took out his card. The boy told Grunau he had gone to the Draft 1429 Board and registered. That he had been down to the FBI and everything was straightened out, so that Haupt at that time wasn't afraid for the boy because of his Selective Service status, but he told Zerner on that occasion he first asked Zerner what his address was, and he said, "You remember, it is 851 Fullerton," is what he said and then he said, "I want you to get a room for my boy over at your place." A rooming house. "I am afraid to have him around the house."

Now, you see the pressure was getting pretty great on Hans Haupt at that time, evidently, from these admissions, and I think it was Hamby or Norris, or one of them, I think it was Norris, the little fellow, said that Haupt told him the boy said he didn't intend to stay around the house very long. He had to get this car so that he could travel then he would be on his way, but the pressure was getting pretty hard and pretty heavy on Haupt at that time, so he was afraid to have him around the house. So he tried to get him a room over there. You remember, Zerner said, you will have to see the landlady, I have nothing to do with that, or something to that effect. Then Hans Haupt said "The 1430 boy is going to be travelling around. I want you to receive mail from him directed to us, receive the mail at your place and come over and bring it to our house."

Now, ladies and gentlemen, do you think for a moment that that is the action of a normal American father who is trying to aid his son because he is his son, or is that rather the action of a person who is actively giving aid and comfort to the enemies? I think that that incident is so tremendously significant, because it shows on its face that Hans Haupt knew that his son was a German Agent, and you cannot draw any other inference. Zerner was reluctant to give up that information, of course. He was a friend of Haupt's, and he was a co-patriot of Haupt's, and, of course, he was reluctant because it involved him also.

Now, the next night, Thursday night, if you remember, was the night the boy went over to the Vine Gardens there, and met Haas over there and tried to make contact for Kappe with a relative—Kauffmann in this country. On Saturday the boy was picked up at 908 Webster Avenue, at the L station. Saturday night was the meeting which has been testified to by these four people, through the admissions of Haupt. On Sunday Haupt goes 1431 over to the tavern and calls Eggert in the back room, and tells him about this money of "his own" that he has,

then later delivers it over there, Eggert keeping it in the meanwhile for him, and the money, of course is gotten by the FBI a few days later.

Now, so much for the chronology of these events that took place. Now, I want to deal for a moment with the overt acts that were involved here, and I want to be perfectly frank with you. It isn't the Government's position that we have proven all the overt acts by any means; some of them have been proven, but we haven't proven them all to the degree required by the Constitution.

The Court submitted to you twelve overt acts; overt acts of treason. The other acts the Court will instruct you, not having been proven to the required degree, that is, of two witnesses to the same overt act, the degree required by the Constitution, may not be considered by you as overt acts of treason; however, I wish you would take cognizance, if you will——

Mr. BIGGERAM. If the Court please, I think counsel is making statements here about the Court's instructions to the Jury, and I know and I feel that he is not giving the instruction the 1432 Court will. I think he is trespassing on your territory.

The COURT. No; I don't think he has as yet.

Mr. FINN. However, these other acts which were not submitted to you, and which were not proven to the degree required by the Constitution (two witnesses to the said overt act), may be considered by you, if you believe there is any evidence on them, it may be considered by you on the question of the intent with which any of those other acts may have been performed. Now, for example, the Zermer act that was testified to about the mail, in procuring the "mail drop" there for him, and the attempt to get the room for the boy was testified to by, of course, one witness, is not submitted to you as an overt act of treason. Yet I think you will agree with me, it is of the utmost significance in determining with what intent Hans Haupt may have performed other overt acts that are submitted to you. Is that perfectly clear? Now, of those which are submitted to you, I would like to deal with them for just a moment.

The first act which is submitted to you, I think, is number 10. That act alleges "that on or about the 22nd day of June 1942, Hans Haupt accompanied Herbert Haupt to the home of 1433 Andreas Conrad Grunau, for the purpose of assisting the said Herbert Haupt in securing employment so that the said enemy might conceal his identity and mission as an agent of the German Reich, and be permitted and enabled to carry out and pursue his said mission."

Have we proven that? Well, how many testified to that act? You have Mrs. Grunau, Mr. Grunau, Edith Grunau, and you have, I think, four agents who followed him from their home out to the Grunau Home. The purpose with which he performed that act has been shown to you by admission made to four witnesses as well as by these other acts, such as the Zermer Act, which we know that Hans Haupt performed. From Grunau's he went to Koch's and that is covered by the testimony of the Kochs, and also the testimony of four or five or six agents; I don't know how many there were, who were following him.

The next act is number 12: "That on or about June 22, 1942, said Hans Max Haupt harbored and sheltered the said enemy Herbert Haupt at the home of Hans Max Haupt and Erna Haupt, etc."

1434 With reference to harboring, I would like to refer you to all of these harboring situations, those overt acts are number 12, and overt act number 17, and overt act number 20, and overt act number 21 and 22 and 23. Each of those I have enumerated, allege a haboring of Haupt on a separate day.

Now, you may have wondered why all these men, these agents, witnesses to this surveillance were put on, but you should keep in mind we must have two witnesses to each act of harboring. I am not going to go through all of this. I will just take a few of these, as for example, and go through them.

At 12:25 P. M. on the 22nd, Herbert Haupt entered 2234 North Fremont Street. He came from the Draft Board. He was seen entering by Handley and Dixon.

At 4:50 he was seen by Handley and Dixon entering the premises. At 4:50 he left the premises at 2234 Fremont Street.

At 5:15 he came in again. At 7:30 he went out again with Hans and Erna. They went to Grunau's and the Koch's, as has been testified to. Then they went from Grunau's to Koch's. Then they came home at 10:50. Herbert Haupt arrived, Herbert and Erna, and Hans went down and parked his car.

1435 Now, we get to the 23rd, Herbert and Erna at 12:20 left 2234 and were seen by Lynch, Fletcher, Meach, and Dixon who testified to that. Erna went downtown. Herbert went over to the plymouth Motors, and at 5:15 Herbert entered 2234 North Frement Street. At 6 P. M. he went out again with Herbert and Erna and Hans left 2234 North Fremont, and went into a restaurant, Wagner's Restaurant. Then Herbert and Hans were later followed by all these agents, and they came back. That was the time, you remember, Herbert walked up and down the corner, then went in and had a glass of beer, stopped at the tavern for twenty-five minutes and then came back. That was the evening he was seen around the flat by Lynch, Dixon, Schneider, and Meech. He was also observed by Zermer and Melind in the house.

At 10:15 he came out, with Miss Melind. He got back at 12:05 A. M. or 12:30 A. M. that morning.

On the 24th he entered at 12:30 A. M., and was seen by Meech, Schneider, Dixon, Lynch, and Lewis.

He came out again at 7:05, and was seen at that time by several agents also; when that was—well, it was at Eggert's, perhaps I am mistaken on that, but at one o'clock he was seen 1436 by Meech, Lynch and he came out again at 5:31, and was seen by Mr. Berg.

At 6 p. m. he went out again. Hans went to the Warner Motor Sales again, where, of course, they were followed by these numerous agents.

At 6:45, Herbert came out of 2831 North Fremont. Let me see. 6:30 he went in again, and 10 minutes later came out again, and they went to the Vine Gardens and the Blue Danube Cafe. I am not going through all of this. You will recollect where they were on each day this boy came in and out of those premises.

Now, we have proven beyond a possibility of a doubt that the only place he could have gone was the home of Haupt's.

The Kluczyks testified Herbert was only at their house one evening. He came too, and the father and mother, they stepped to the door a moment, and Erna said he was in a hurry, that they had to go to Grunau's. He never went into Probst's. They testified he was never in their apartment. Kluczyks testified this front entrance served only the three front apartments, and you couldn't get down into the basement except by going through Kluczyk's apartment and no one did that, nor could any-1437 one get through to the back. The only place Herbert Haupt could be, was in the home of his parents. In addition, to that, the agents saw him on numerous occasions when he went in there, and the lights of the apartment went on and off again.

By checking the record, the evidence shows that from Monday noon, when he first was seen coming out of that house until 9:05 a. m. on Saturday, Herbert Haupt was seen going into the premises, thirteen times, and was seen going out of the premises fourteen times, being a total of twenty-seven times in and out that this boy was seen around that building.

Now, Mr. Warnholtz in his opening statement, told you that the evidence would only show that this boy was there on one occasion for a short time and was seen on the sidewalk on one other occasion. Now, is that true, after all this evidence is in? Was that statement anywhere near correct? Can anybody with a sane mind come to any other conclusion but what that boy was harbored in this place every day that we have alleged in this indictment?

Now, with reference to the other overt acts which we claim were proven, and mind you, we only have to prove one by two witnesses.

Number 13 alleges that on that date, June 23rd, Hans 1438 Haupt accompanied by the said enemy, Herbert Haupt, went to the Warner Motor Sales to arrange for the purchase of an automobile for the said enemy, Herbert Haupt, for the purpose and intent of assisting the said enemy in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich aforesaid. All right, we have discussed the purpose before. The two witnesses in the record, were Mr. Farrell and Mr. Vinson who testified without equivocation as well as the agents who followed them.

The next act submitted was on the evening of the 23d at the Warner Motor Sales, where Hans Haupt signed a financial statement and order for the purchase of an automobile. And the financial statement, the order blank is here in evidence. The evidence you heard both from Farrell and Vinson, who testified the money was laid down by Hans Haupt. The reason given for that act, has been proven without equivocation, without a question of doubt.

The next act on this subject alleges that on June the 23d, the next night, Hans Haupt again accompanied the enemy Herbert Haupt, to the Warner Motor Sales to complete the arrangements for the purchase of an automobile for the said enemy, with the intent and purpose of assisting said enemy in carrying out 1439 his mission as an agent; of the Government of the German Reich. That also has been proven. On every occasion when he went down to the Warner Motor Sales, he was followed by at least four agents. This thing we have proven beyond any question as required by the constitutional degree. I don't think there will be any question under the evidence.

Now, let us take this one more subject, that is the question of the intent, because without treasonable intent, there would be no conviction for treason. We were permitted by the court to introduce into evidence in this case certain testimony on the question of intent, statements that were made by this defendant from, I think it was, 1936, or 1937, was the first one of them, up until the time of the bringing of the indictment; even after that. These statements in and of themselves are not treason, and don't make any mistake about that. We don't claim that. A person has a right, certainly, when it is not wartime, to speak their mind, to say what they think. That is all right. That is legal. But you also have a right to consider these statements on the question of intent with which these various submitted acts were performed. You have a right to consider these statements in determining 1440 with what purpose, with what intent Hans Haupt did these overt acts.

Now, what do these statements show? Do they reveal a picture of a good loyal American? A man, who although he loves his son, wouldn't do anything to aid Germany, or to hurt the United States? Do they show he is that kind of a man? Oh, no. They show you a picture of a most vitriolic out-spoken Nazi; they show you a picture of a man whose allegiance to this country meant nothing to him, who never intended to remain here; who, in his every utterance expressed his venom and hatred against this country, and his love for the Vaterland.

Just look at some of the statements made, for instance, by Willie Schroeder. In 1937, Hans Haupt said, "We need a man like Hitler here to build up this country, like it was built up over there. He would chase the Jews out of here like he did in Germany."

Well, that may be legal, but it shows what kind of a picture, what kind of a mind this fellow has.

He also said, "Before I would send Herbert over to Germany to fight against Germany, I would kill him myself."

1441 A fine picture of true Americanism, isn't it? Then we have Mr. Poppe, who testified he saw Hans frequently at meetings of the German World War Veterans Association, from 1936 to 1940.

In July 1939, Hans said: "Herbert was going to leave for the Bund Camp in Michigan for a week or ten days." He also said on several occasions he took the boys and Herbert to this Camp in Michigan.

Here he is, allowing this boy to grow up as a German in our very midst.

In the summer of 1936, Hans said: "If war would break with the United States and Germany, he would never permit his boy to join the American Army. He would send him to Mexico, and from there he could go to Germany and join the German Air Forces."

He also said: "If war broke out, and he was taken in the Army, he would crawl over the enemy lines and tell them our position."

Well, he didn't do that exactly, but he sent his boy on a mission of the same kind and character, and when he came back, he did everything he could do to help him.

He also said: "He had no feeling for the United States. His feelings were only for Germany. He wished Hitler would come over here and drive the Jews out, because the Jews are running the country."

1442 Take him down through 1937, 1938, and 1939, these people that worked with this man, mind you, were of the same nationality he is, Willie Schroeder, who is a veteran of the World War, too, and they are coming in and testifying against him to these things. This man worked from February 1940 to March 1941, for the Fishman's. He lived out on the Fishman premises.

In the summer of 1940, his boy used to go up to the Bund Camp in Michigan every week end, and when Mrs. Fishman questioned him about that procedure, whether that was a good thing to do for the boy, he told her it was the proper thing for German people, who were really Germans, to send their children there to raise them like that.

Ladies and gentlemen of the Jury: Is it any wonder that this boy turned out to be a spy and a renegade, living in an atmosphere of that character?

In 1940, in the summer, Mr. Haupt said: "If we entered the war against Germany, we were going to have a revolution in this country, because our utilities and armories and telephone companies would be taken over by people belonging to German organizations he belonged to."

1443 Now, ladies and gentlemen, what do you think was this man's intent? What kind of a person was he? You, yourself, have the record complete before you, and you can judge now. What did they put up by way of defense in this case?

Well, there was a witness by the name of Peter Wolf, and one by the name of Nolan, and one by the name of Sausen, and one man Graf, and a man by the name of Schoenfeld. Four of them testified that Hans Haupt worked doing those various jobs. What difference would that make? We don't claim he didn't work at his job. That has nothing whatever to do with the issues in this case. That didn't prevent him going out to buy a car in the night time. It couldn't prevent him at other times from trying to get a mail drop for this boy. Mr. Schoenfeld testified something about a check for $101 cashed for Hans Haupt on Saturday. What difference would that make? Would that explain how this fellow got $900 in eighteen $50 bills? What kind of a defense do you think that is? Miss Melind testified that on one occasion in 1940, I think it was, Mrs. Haupt had come back from Germany and she said, "She was glad to be back." And Mr. Haupt said, 1444 "well, there is no place like home. Now, for heaven's sake, they have a right to show that Hans Haupt was a good American. They have just as much right to bring in a string of witnesses and put them on the stand, and have them testify to things of an American patriotic nature, that this man had done, and all they could say was, "There is no place like home." Why it is ridiculous; just ridiculous. Then as I said before, we had the most palable and most obvious attempt to reach into your hearts and have you decide this case on sympathy, that I have ever seen.

This woman, Mrs. Haupt, testified to nothing. We were perfectly willing to admit and stipulate that the boy died whatever date they said he died, and so, instead of going into the things Haupt was charged with, that she knew of in this case, they merely put her on the stand and tried to introduce a letter that was sent by a Chaplain; isn't that the most obvious attempt to get you to decide this case on sympathy that you will ever see? I think it is an insult to your intelligence. I think it is an insult to the intelligence of this Jury to present evidence of that character to them.

Now, just a word in closing. Now, just a summary, ladies and gentlemen. I think that we have proven beyond all 1445 possibility of a doubt, first, that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, and that he came here on a mission for the German Government, and was acting as a German Agent while he was here. I say that we have proved beyond a reasonable doubt, beyond the possibility of a doubt that Hans Haupt knew that he was a German agent.

I say that we have proved beyond a possibility of a doubt that, with that knowledge in his mind Hans Haupt committed any number of overt acts which were submitted to you and proven by the required number of witnesses. These facts have all been marshalled before you.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I don't have to remind you that we are at war. Your obligation is clear. The young men of our nation are spread throughout the world, on the battlefields of the world and——

Mr. BERTRAM. If the court please, I object to appealing to the passion and emotional appeal.

Mr. FINN. Your Honor, I think this is serious enough. We are at war, and I have a right to argue this matter.

Mr. BERTRAM. I object to the further remark.

1446 The COURT. Well, we are at war. The question is whether this defendant committed treason by adhering to the enemy and giving them aid and comfort.

Mr. FINN. Ladies and gentlemen, not only have soldiers military duties to perform, but you also have duties to perform, and where the evidence as in this case clearly and unerringly points to the guilt of this man, I say it would be a shame to permit your sympathies which were appealed to so obviously in this case to sway you from the duty which you swore to uphold at the beginning of this case.

At the beginning of this case you promised us then that if we proved to you beyond a reasonable doubt the issues that were necessary in this case that you would decide this matter without prejudice, without feeling and without bias, and on the facts, and we are confident that having done that, you will now fulfill your duty and obligation as jurors and as citizens of the United States.

The Court. We will adjourn at this time, ladies and gentlemen, until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

In the meantime, do not discuss this case with anyone. Do not permit anyone to discuss it with you. I suggested to you at the beginning of this case you should not read any news printed about it. I again enjoin upon you you do that.

1447 If anyone attempts to communicate with you about the case, refer that back at once to the court.

One of the reasons I don't want you to read about this case is this: You will be glad if you don't. I told you at the beginning you will be glad if you don't read about this case.

When you go to your jury room you want to perform your duty in accordance to what you found, not confusing yourself reading about this case. You may be able to do that duty, so don't read about the case over night and come here tomorrow morning and we hope to conclude the case in the morning. At 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Thereupon an adjournment was had to Wednesday, June 7, 1944, at 10 o'clock A. M.)

1448 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge and a Jury

Wednesday, June 7, 1944, 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard G. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America; Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * *

1449 Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:

Mr. HURLEY. If the court please, on the opening of this trial there was some discussion about Mr. Bertram not appearing of record. I would like to have the record straight on that matter. I believe, to participate, which, of course, that extent is shown by the record. And he is continually referring counsel to the statute and has taken a most active part in this defense. I don't think there is any distinction between this case on trial here now and I hear now that he intends to argue the matter, and I think his appearance should be a matter of record.

The COURT. What do you say?

Mr. BERTRAM. If your Honor thinks I should enter my appearance, I would not want to have any responsibility in this case beyond the present trial; that is, beyond the argument to the Jury, although I may in the future also help Mr. Warnholtz. If the Court thinks I should file an appearance—

The COURT. The only responsibility I have is what transpires in this courtroom. I think you should enter your appearance for that purpose.

Mr. BERTRAM. I will do so. May I do so during the course of the day?

Mr. HURLEY. That will be the start of the trial; not showing it is entered now.

Mr. BERTRAM. I don't suppose it makes any difference.

The COURT. You might file your appearance as of the time the trial started.

Mr. BERTRAM. Put that into the record.

The COURT. Yes. Will you step into the Court's chambers a moment, gentlemen?

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the Court's chambers, outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. In order that the issues submitted to the Jury may be clear, I am going to attach this by a clip to the indictment when it goes to the Jury and they retire to consider the case, this sheet of paper, to which I referred yesterday and of which I hand you each copies, and the reporter may copy it into the record, and then you may hand that back to me after you copy it, Mr. Reporter.

"In accordance with the instructions of the court heretofore given you, there are withdrawn from your consideration, as possible overt acts of treason, the following alleged acts charged in the indictment.

"Overt acts numbered 1 to 9, both inclusive.

"Overt acts numbered 18 and 19; and overt acts numbered 24 to 29, both inclusive.

"And that there are submitted for your consideration, as possible overt acts of treason, the following alleged acts charged in the indictment.

"Overt acts numbered 10 to 17, both inclusive.

"And overt acts numbered 20 to 23, both inclusive."

I am also going to send to the Jury, after instructing the Jury orally, I am going to send to the Jury the typewritten instructions from which I shall read, and the forms which I gave you have been corrected in accordance with the suggestions which the Court adopted at our conference of yesterday, and in addition to the instructions concerning all the instructions on which we conferred yesterday, I have added an additional instruction, and inserted it as number 64, and that moved up the numbers of the last three instructions.

1452 64 reads as follows: Just a minute. The forms of instructions have been rewritten, all of them except pages 1, 2, 3, and 14. All except pages 1, 2, 3, and 14 were rewritten, and I am handing you copies of all of the pages which have been rewritten, so that you may use the forms which you already have and make exact copies of the instructions which the court is going to read.

Now, instruction number 64, which I have inserted, reads as follows:

"The task which is imposed upon you is one which should be performed by your intellects and should not be attempted to be performed by your emotions. The psychologists tell us, as you know, that our minds are made up of two parts, our intellects and our emotions. Our intellects are those parts of our minds whereby we reason. Our emotions are those parts of our minds which generate hate, prejudice, sympathy, pity, and like feelings. The task which now confronts you as jurymen and women cannot and should not be attempted to be performed by your emotions.

1453 If you attempt to use your emotions to decide this case, you will probably make a mistake. If you use your intellects, as you should, the possibilities of your making a mistake are minimized. Furthermore, if you attempt by your verdict to decide some question other than that submitted to you by the court, you will probably make a mistake. While if you decide by your verdict only the questions submitted to you by the court, the possibilities of your making a mistake are minimized.

The question of the possible punishment of the defendant in the event of a conviction is not a matter for the jury to consider, and should not in any way enter into your deliberations. The duty of imposing sentence on a defendant rests solely upon the court, who tries to perform it fairly, and with due consideration for all the circumstances. The function of the jury is to weigh all the evidence and determine the guilt or innocence of the defendant solely from that evidence".

Mr. WOLL. If I understand it, we have about forty-minutes left; is that right?

The COURT. I can tell you by looking in my book. I can tell you when we get back to the courtroom.

1454 You will observe that in the place reserved for the insertion of the overt acts, in the place reserved in the form instructions for the overt acts, I have inserted, twelve statements of twelve overt acts submitted to the Jury.

Mr. HURLEY. That is right.

The COURT. I will tell you how much time you have left.

The pages which are not rewritten, you will note, are 1, 2, 3, and 11.

Anything further now before we go in the courtroom?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No.

Mr. WOLL. No; if your Honor please.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. Mr. Finn concluded about 4:25, wasn't it?

Mr. FINN. Between that time and 4:30.

The COURT. He started at 2:57, and it shows about eighteen minutes and then thirty minutes; one hour and forty-eight minutes. He has about forty-two minutes, I guess.

1455 Mr. WOLL. All right. Thank you.

The COURT. Yes. You may bring in the Jury.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

Mr. WOLL. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Good morning.

The JURY. Good morning.

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

The JURY. Good morning, Judge.

The COURT. Will you proceed, counsel?

Closing argument by Mr. Bertram

Mr. BERTRAM. May it please the court, your Honor, Judge Barnes.

The COURT. Mr. Bertram.

Mr. BERTRAM. And counsel for the prosecution, and ladies and gentlemen of the jury:

I have never had a case where the life and liberty of a man depended in any way, or to any extent upon my poor ability. I have had no criminal practice or experience in defending criminal cases. I trust I will say nothing that will irritate you, ladies and gentlemen, and that you will, as you promised, not permit 1456 the personalities of counsel on either side to interfere with or prevent you from giving the defendant a fair trial.

Please forgive my nervousness and any shuffling of papers, because I will have to consult my notes in making this argument. I do not know how an experienced criminal attorney would argue this case to a Jury, but I will discuss it with you as I would in discussing it with you each one individually. That is the only way I know how.

First, I would like to reply to the arguments made by Mr. Finn on yesterday or as much of it as I can remember. In reply to Mr. Finn I desire to say that the defense does join with him in thanking the Jury for your attention and for bearing up under the hot weather and the strain of this trial--and it has been a strain upon all of us.

In his opening remarks Mr. Finn declared that the prosecution wanted you to decide this case without prejudice or bias, and to decide it on the basis of fairness and also that if the Government did not prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant was guilty of treason in this case, that it was your duty to find the defendant Not Guilty. That is the law, and that is your duty as we all know, but I was sorry to see that soon after he made 1457 this statement, Mr. Finn apparently forgot all about it, and began to appeal to prejudice and passion and emotion.

I urge you not to let prejudice or passion or unfairness interfere or prevent you from giving this defendant a fair trial, and justice, uninfluenced by prejudice of war emotions, all of which you have pledged to do.

I hope I will say nothing that is unfair and nothing that will create prejudice of unfairness, and I hope I will keep that resolve better than Mr. Finn did, in my opinion.

Mr. Finn said, according to my notes, "It is not treason to aid a son. The gist of the crime is that Hans Haupt knew that Herbert was a German agent." That is Mr. Finn's statement. I agree it is not treason to aid a son, but it is not true that the gist of the crime of treason is that Hans Haupt is claimed to have known Herbert was a German agent. That is not the law. The gist of the crime of treason is First, an overt act, and Second, a treasonable intent. Meaning that the person that committed that particular act had an intent to commit treason in so doing. It 1458 seems that the Government's attorneys would have you believe that treason is about as comprehensive and abroad and loos as the charge of disorderly conduct which is the common catch-all for all acts of minor misconduct. I will come back to that later.

Mr. Finn gave you the following example of what is supposed to be the theory of the defense in this case. Apparently his purpose was to ridicule the defense. According to Mr. Finn, the father is supposed to say, "I don't want to injure America, but I will do these things for you as my son; I will help you blow up bridges, but I will do this for you as my son, therefore, I will not be guilty of treason."

Nothing could be further from the fact. There are no charges of blowing up bridges. The twelve overt acts and all of the twenty-nine original overt acts, there are only twelve that are being submitted to the Jury, but all of the twenty-nine overt acts in the indictment do not charge anything like that against Hans Haupt. He is charged with sheltering Herbert, with visiting friends, with buying an automobile, and other similar acts, all lawful and innocent in themselves. If the defendant did these acts which are stated without any intent to injure the United States, or to 1459 aid an enemy, then it is not treason, and that is all there is to it.

Mr. Finn's next statement was this, according to my notes: "Herbert was brought up to be a Nazi and when men of our country were sent to the colors, Herbert went away on a vacation."

Those were Mr. Finn's words. I made a note of them. Ladies and gentlemen, we were not at war in June 1941, when Herbert went away. Another statement Mr. Finn referred to was rifles cached; no rifles were cached or hidden in Mrs. Fishman's garage. That was the home of the Haupts, Erna and the defendant Hans Haupt, and you know that every man has a right to keep firearms in his home; that is one of our constitutional privileges and on the Warnecke farm there was nothing hidden. There was no evidence of anything hidden there. Many of us have had rifles and have gone to a shooting range or out in the country or to a farm to hunt. This is just an illustration as to how each of these little things are given a sinister meaning by the prosecution in this case. All of the little scraps of petty, trivial occurrences supposed to have occurred during the boyhood of Herbert Haupt are assembled by the prosecution and thrown at his father on his trial for 1460 treason, and yet Mr. Finn says he would not appeal to prejudice.

Mr. Finn asked you about the evidence for the defense in this case. What difference does it make, says he, if the evidence shows that Hans Haupt worked every day, even on Sunday, at his trade as a painter and decorator and bricklayer during the eight days of time that Herbert Haupt was in Chicago after his return from Germany. I will answer Mr. Finn.

It shows that Hans Haupt was working hard to support his family and his time was occupied and that he was not plotting to blow up bridges or do any harm to the United States, and again Mr. Finn asked you, "Does that explain how Hans Haupt got the $900, which he told Mr. Eggert was his own money?" I will ask Mr. Finn, "Don't we all get the money by working for it?"

The only evidence in this case is that it was the money of Hans Haupt. This particular overt act was withdrawn from the case, gentlemen and ladies—I am sorry, I should say, ladies and gentlemen.

Next Mr. Finn stated, "Hans and Erna Haupt took Herbert to Grunau's home, and Herbert there applied for a job"—Herbert applied for a job. I ask, is that act an act inconsistent with 1461 the innocence of Hans Haupt? The unfortunate person who is charged with treason, is under suspicion, on every act he does, no matter how innocent it is. If Mr. Haupt would go out, or did go out, and bought his own son a razor on June 19, 1942, with which to shave himself, I suppose he would be charged with treason for that. Oh, my good people, we have not come to the point where anything and everything that an accused person may do, is treason, nor is it regarded as treason.

Next, Mr. Finn stresses the Zermer incident, as he called it. You will remember when Mr. Zermer first told you that Hans Haupt—you will remember, ladies and gentlemen, that Mr. Zermer first testified here, and told you Hans Haupt told him—now, these are Hans Haupt words, as Mr. Zermer told him on his examination, as Mr. Zermer testified on his examination. He says, "Mr. Zermer said, Hans said, we have no room for Herbert Haupt, only one bedroom; can he get a room in this rooming house?" Then you will remember that Mr. Zermer testified nothing further was said. He was asked again and again by Mr.—I think it was Mr. Woll, or perhaps Mr. Finn, who was examining him on direct examination—he was their witness, ladies and gentlemen. He was asked again and again. He said nothing further was said, nothing 1462 further was said he had it—He did not tell you then that Hans Haupt said, "I am scared to have Herbert Haupt around here." You heard also Mr. Zermer's testimony, which was read to you to save time, and because it had been testified to while you were in the anteroom and the court was deciding whether or not it was competent and proper for you to hear it; you heard the court reporter read to you the Zermer testimony that he was threatened by the FBI and thought that he would lose his citizenship papers. You heard how he testified he was kept in custody for three days under constant interrogation by three FBI agents, and how they took his clothes away. Kept him locked up for three nights and three days and after getting statements from him in writing, that no one can doubt were abstracted from him in his confusion and fear, and then be brought before the Grand Jury, and then he is read to from the statement by counsel for the prosecution from the record, and he says, "Yes," he made that statement. What else could he do? Although you could see plainly that he was utterly confused, he was still utterly confused when he was on this witness stand, and that he had no recollection whatsoever of any such conversation with Hans Haupt. He told you so, first and last, and all they could get him to say was "Yes." That was "Yes, that statement I made." I ask you, ladies and gentlemen, is that evidence to be regarded as evidence beyond a reasonable doubt?

Now I call your attention further to the fact that the Kerner overt act has been withdrawn in this case.

Mr. Finn made another statement, and I shall comment on what Mr. Finn said: "We have circumstantial evidence of sheltering Herbert; that he was seen going in and out of the entrance of the building."

I wish to state here and now, ladies and gentlemen of the Jury, that circumstantial evidence, no matter how strong, cannot take the place of a witness to overt acts.

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, I am going to object to this line of argument.

Mr. BERTRAM. As required by the constitution.

Mr. WOLL. On statements not made by Mr. Finn; that the statements that are made is an attempt to build up something by way of argument, which isn't here before the Jury.

Mr. BERTRAM. Well, I made notes on it, and that is the way my notes show it.

The COURT. The Jury will remember what was said. I do not remember it exactly.

Mr. BERTRAM. Ladies and gentlemen, it is the defendant's right to be entitled to the protection of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, and it is my duty to urge it on his behalf.

Now, the last statement which Mr. Finn made, which I shall comment on, is a statement as follows: "The question here is the question of intent, because without treasonable intent, there can be no treason."

On this statement, I agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Finn, because that is the law, and it is on that point, that the defendant here is entitled to your verdict of Not Guilty.

There have been few treason trials in the history of the United States, still fewer convictions of treason. This present case, rather, the former trial was the first case in Illinois on treason. I have never heard in the history of England or the United States of a treason case against a father for giving aid and comfort to his own son.

Treason is the greatest of crimes with which a man can be charged with. You might have supposed before this trial began from the very magnitude of the crime charged, that the evidence would show that this defendant had done some great injury to the United States; that he had blown up bridges or factories or had done some other act of violence against our country, but no—the charges against the defendant here are acts which you and I do in the ordinary course of life. Shall I name some of them?

Giving food and comfort or shelter to our children. Purchasing an automobile for our own son. Talking and visiting with a member of one's own family, and visiting the friends in company with their children.

Now, just to confirm that, ladies and gentlemen, what are the horrible acts of treason in the indictment, charged in the indictment? I tell you, ladies and gentlemen, that they are neither horrible nor are they treasonable. Let us read: "First, overt act number 12. Said Hans Haupt on or about June 22, 1942, harbored and sheltered the said enemy, Herbert Haupt, at the home of Hans Max Haupt and Erna Haupt at 2234 North Fremont Street, Chicago, Illinois, well knowing that the said enemy was an agent of the Government of the German Reich in the United 1466 States, to commit a saboteur act as a spy and perform other services for said government as aforesaid, or with the intent and for the purpose of assisting said enemy Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich as aforesaid."

When the Constitution of the United States was written and adopted by the thirteen colonies, after winning the Revolutionary War, our founding fathers were extremely aware of the abuse to which prosecution for the crime of treason was subject.

In the various struggles for the possession of the crown to the throne of England, the charge of treason was made use of by the successful aspirant to the throne to dispose of his defeated rivals by a charge of treason and execution. In Colonial days before the Revolutionary War there were likewise many abuses in making and prosecuting the charge of treason against our Colonial Americans, and so our forefathers were keenly conscious of the abuses and of the necessity for placing safeguards in the Constitution itself, regarding the prosecution of this crime of treason. It was never intended that the crime of treason should be extended by construction or by the theory of constructive treason used in England. That was never adopted or applied in the United States.

1467 It was never intended that the prosecution for the crime of treason should be broadened beyond the limits set in the Constitution.

I do not believe that anyone ever conceived that a father might be charged with treason for giving food or shelter to his own son, or even for concealing and sheltering his son from arrest.

"Once disregard these exceptions and render the constitutional rule as flexible or comprehensive as it is now suggested to be, and prosecutions for treason may become as common as indictments for petit larcenies, assaults and batteries, or other misdemeanors. None of us can feel any ambition to leading the way in setting a precedent so dangerous or one that will in any degree tend to demolish that barrier which has been raised by the Constitution against constructive Treasons."

Those are not my poor words; those are the words of a learned Judge. I use them, because they are more eloquent than my own could be.

Ladies and gentlemen, much of the evidence in this case needs no comment or denial from the defense. Dozens of FBI agents, and when I say FBI agents, I mean, of course, Federal Bureau of Investigation men. We use that term merely because 1468 it is short and easy to say. Dozens of FBI agents have testified here concerning the movements of Herbert Haupt—Herbert from the time of his arrival in Chicago until the day of his arrest eight days later.

We were pleased to have this evidence. Indeed we regarded it as favorable to the accused, because it shows beyond the slightest doubt that Herbert did not commit any act of sabotage after his arrival in Chicago, and it showed further that the defendant Hans Haupt never committed any act of sabotage at any time. It is not even claimed by the Government that Hans Haupt ever did anything other than the list of so-called overt acts which are mentioned in the indictment. Every one of which acts any father might do for his son in the ordinary course of the affairs of life, but the charge here is that he did these ordinary acts of life with the intention of committing treason.

It occurs to me that I, myself, or most any other person might be charged with committing some overt act of every day life, and then be charged with doing that act with treasonable intent.

Oh, yes, they could review my whole life history and every 1469 foolish hasty statement that I ever made regarding the war or regarding events happening before the war can be thrown at me, to show that I entertained treasonable intent, which otherwise would have been an innocent act.

For Herbert Haupt, I have no need to undertake to defend him, or his action. I do not defend him. He has suffered the supreme penalty for his misdeeds. Whether or not he would have pursued his mission and destroyed property in the United States will perhaps never be known. It is a secret that is buried with his body. We know from the Government's evidence, the Government's witnesses, that Herbert Haupt violated his instructions in visiting his parents in Chicago.

The Government's witness, Ernest Peter Berger, made some statements which I thought were very significant at the time I heard them. He maintained that he, Berger, was a German soldier, and that the others were not soldiers, but were given contracts for hire. Perhaps you recall the contempt that he showed for the men who were under contract. And then he said, as you will perhaps well remember, A German soldier never forgets an order. It appeared from his testimony to me at least that he held Herbert in great contempt. He talked about Herbert dancing 1470 and girls. He wasn't like Herbert, and that Herbert had disobeyed orders, and that Herbert may have deserted his companions.

But, ladies and gentlemen, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt is not on trial for the crimes of Herbert Haupt. In the United States we do not punish parents for the crimes of their children. The defendant in this case can only be tried for his own acts and deeds and not for the acts of anyone else; not for Herbert's acts; not for Froehling's acts; nor Wergin's acts; nor even for the acts of his own wife.

Now it is necessary in this case, at least, by virtue of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States itself, not only that the prosecution must establish beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did not one or more of the overt acts charged in the indictment, but the prosecution must prove by two witnesses who were present that such act was actually done by the defendant at the time and place mentioned in the indictment. Over and beyond this the prosecution must prove, ladies and gentlemen, beyond a reasonable doubt, that Hans Haupt did that particular act with the intent to commit treason against the United States.

1471 What is the character of the evidence offered by the prosecution to establish an alleged treasonable intent on the part of the defendant? I feel certain that you cannot examine such evidence without entertaining a reasonable doubt, providing that you do so with a fair and unprejudiced mind.

The evidence come mainly, if not entirely, upon this point from hardened habitual criminals, who had been violators of the law since their 18th birthday, if not even before that. Their first conviction for felonies, it seems, in both cases, began with their 18th birthdays. They have told you amazing stories of their habits in beating raps and advising others what to do, their knowledge of legal terms, and legal procedure in criminal cases. I am not going to pass judgment upon these men or condemn either of them. God only knows their full stories. We know that most of their lives, even, were spent behind iron bars. They may be stir crazy, or they may be psychopathic liars. You may, from your own experience, know of cases of psychopathic lying in children, in adults with infantile minds, in adults with twisted minds and mental complexes. A man who is a habitual criminal and 1472 commits crimes all of his adult life, perhaps in childhood, there must be something wrong with him. He must have a twisted mind. There is some complex there. I have said I would not pass judgment upon these criminals for the law has passed judgment upon them, not once, but several times. And it is the rule and safeguard of all courts of justice that the testimony of convicted criminals must be regarded with caution and with due regard for the source from whence it come.

I have a right to—and I am going to discuss that testimony with you from the standpoint of whether or not it can be accepted as proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

Would you be willing to dispose of the life and liberty of a human being upon the basis of the testimony of convicted criminals? It is not a matter of condemning these men. It is a matter of using their testimony to convict a human being. Let us examine some of the statements of these men. They talked glibly, and knowingly, of such technical, legal terms as accessory and accessories after the fact. I have no doubt that they know what these terms mean, but how many first offenders or people of no experience with the law, would know what these terms
1473 mean? You will recall that both of these witnesses testified that when the witness Hamby, one of the convicted criminals, thrice convicted, when he asked Hans Max Haupt, "What are you in jail for?" And Hans is supposed to have replied, "I am an accessory to my son Herbert."

Ladies and gentlemen, I assure you that this foreign-born defendant never before heard that term and he never made such a statement. He never had committed any offense before in his life, and as far as the law or infractions of the law are concerned, his record had been clear and blameless.

That term "accessory" is a term which was familiar only to these two convicts. They were accessories together in a number of joint crimes of armed robbery, and they were no doubt tried as accessories with other persons in their previous crimes. Both of these witnesses told you that Hans Haupt was scared of one or more of the prisoners that had been threatening him at that particular time. He was being called a Nazi, a saboteur, a Nazi spy, by lockup guards and Majerczak said he saw a guard handle him roughly. Hans was so frightened he was afraid to take a shower, Majerczak said that. The guard told Hans he would throw him under the shower, clothes and all. Somebody, if not the witness Hamby himself, then somebody else told Hans Haupt that 1474 he should not have a trial at all; that he should be shot by a firing squad. The night superintendent of the jail told the boys, according to the Government's witnesses, these men, the night superintendent said to these men, "We have got the famous Nazi saboteur here."

The witness Carl Hamby admits that he had a brag with his jailer. He could get newspapers and perhaps other favors, because he had established diplomatic relations with the authorities to his own advantage. He was moved into a cell near Hans Haupt.

I ask you, ladies and gentlemen, would any sane man who found himself threatened and accused of being a Nazi, a saboteur, a spy—would he confirm their accusation whether he was, whether it was true or whether it was false; would he confirm the accusation when he was threatened? Would he tell everybody in a loud voice, loud enough to be heard thirty-five or forty feet away by Majerczak, Majerczak was either thirty-five or forty-seven feet away—I couldn't tell whether the figure was after twelve feet—thirty-five feet, or thirty-five feet plus twelve feet or forty-seven feet, from the answer he gave. Would any sane man tell everybody there—where he was hated and threatened—would he tell it in loud 1475 voice, so that Majerczak could hear, and would he identify himself with saboteurs and flaunt them with all these self-accusing details you heard from the lips of these witnesses, would he expose himself to greater hatred and violence by giving these men more reason to do so, more reason to hate him?

I forgot to mention the most frightful of all things—told Hans Haupt while he was surrounded by hostile prisoners and hostile guards, "Your wife is here in the County Jail and she is being used for immoral purposes." That is what Carl Hamby testified to was told to Hans Haupt by one of the prisoners, whether he told it himself, or by another prisoner, I don't know. He told you, he is the Government witness, that that statement was told to Hans Haupt, that his wife is in the County Jail being used for immoral purposes. I can't imagine anything more terrible to tell this distracted man than that his wife was being used for immoral purposes in the County Jail. That was even worse than the news of his son having been executed in Washington. Far worse.

Ladies and gentlemen, it is a fact, as you have heard in this trial, that Hans Haupt during that terrible night in jail did 1476 attempt to commit suicide by hanging himself. Says Majerczak, sure I saw him do queer things, but I know he was supposed to be putting on the bug act; so, likewise, says the witness Hamby. You may have noticed that these witnesses corroborated each other with remarkable perfection; that is a feat which can only be the result of the careful rehearsing, especially since it happened two years ago. You take any two honest people and put them in a room together and have certain conversation take place or certain physical things done, and even one hour later, ladies and gentlemen, you ask each of those persons separately what was said or what was done, and you will see how they differ, honestly, from each other. The only time it is possible to tell a story that clicks together is by rehearsing. These men testify as a team. They have been cellmates and partners in crime they committed. They committed one crime together jointly, as they said, and they have been partners in jail. They testified as a team before at the insanity trial. Hamby is obviously the brains of the team, and Majerczak is just a s'ooge.

You will remember after Majerczak told his story almost near perfect on direct examination and on cross-examination he 1477 was lost. He could not remember dates. He could not remember the month. He could not remember the year, even, that was beyond his recall. His voice trailed off with vague repetitions of the questions asked on cross-examination as he tried to remember the story he had told on direct examination.

You will notice also that this joint letter, this joint letter of Hamby and Majerczak, which is in evidence, speaks about the bug act. The bug act is an obsession with these people. They were talking about it, about somebody down at Menard, about another prisoner. They say that they ignored the significance of the queer and crazy conduct of Hans Haupt, because they thought he was putting on the bug act.

Outside of the testimony of these two convicts, all other testimony in the case is insignificant. No other witness in the case, not even the FBI agents, have told you that Hans Haupt has said that he was going to help Herbert Haupt commit an act of sabotage. Not one.

On this matter of intention to commit treason, the prosecution must rely solely on the testimony of two habitual criminals, thrice convicted of felonies. Let us examine it a little further,
1478 please, the testimony of Carl Hamby. In July 1942, when he says this occurred, when he heard the story of Hans Haupt, the story which he told you, which Hamby told you here, he says he felt sorry for Hans Haupt and he undertook to give him legal advice, and undertook to befriend him. He didn't use the word "befriend." He said, try to help him. He was asked, why did he do it. He testified, that he did it because he had nothing against this man. He said: "Why shouldn't I help him." I think he also said, "We were both in the same boat."

Remember, please, ladies and gentlemen, that in July 1942, when this conversation is supposed to have taken place, the United States was in the war, no less than it is now, and it had been in the war since December 7, 1941. Almost two years later, Carl Hamby testified at the insanity hearing of Hans Haupt in this very courtroom. Ladies and gentlemen, he did not then at the insanity trial tell anything about the story you heard from this witness stand. His reason—what was his reason? He gave his reason, "He was not asked about that." I say he lied to you when he made that statement. He was asked about conversations with Hans Haupt during that very same few days in July 1942, when they had adjoining cells—— 1479 Mr. Woll. I am going to object to this, if your Honor please. There is nothing of that kind in the record.

Mr. Bertram. He so testified.

Mr. Woll. This witness has not been impeached.

The Court. Who testified to that?

Mr. Bertram. Carl Hamby.

The Court. No, he wasn't asked about that.

Mr. Bertram. He was asked about a conversation during the same period, as I recall it.

The Court. He wasn't asked about the matters you say he testified to.

Mr. Bertram. I am saying he was asked about conversation during the same days, that is what I am saying. I believe the Jury will recall his testimony. I do not intend to mislead the Jury. My recollection is that Carl Hamby told from this witness stand on cross-examination that he was asked about conversations during this same period.

The Court. Carl Hamby wasn't asked about matters of which we have been hearing here within the last two weeks. He wouldn't have been permitted to answer, had he been.

Mr. Bertram. May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court. Yes.

1480 Mr. Bertram. Such conversations would have been just as important in the insanity trial as they would on this trial, in my opinion.

The Court. That is a misstatement of the fact. Don't make another one like it.

Mr. Bertram. I am sorry, your Honor, if I have trespassed.

Let me say here that the witness Majerczak also admitted that he did not tell this story at the insanity trial, and his reason for that is, "They did not ask me about that." Was it patriotism, ladies and gentlemen, that made these witnesses keep silent for these two years? Proof of conviction of a witness of a felony is evidence tending to impeach his credibility and in determining the weight——

Mr. Woll. If your Honor please, I am going to object to that, because the last time he went along that line and he said those are the words of some jurist. After he finishes, I am going to quote some law, too.

Mr. BERTRAM. I believe the court will instruct you——

The COURT. Go ahead.

Mr. BERTRAM. That proof of the conviction of a witness of a felony is evidence tending to impeach his credibility, and 1481 that in determining the weight which the Jury should attach to such witness's testimony, the Jury have a right to take into consideration the fact that the witness has been convicted of a felony. I believe the court will give you that instruction. These men were not convicted once of a felony, but three times. This is the evidence that the Government offers to prove the intent of Hans Haupt, to help Herbert commit sabotage, and the only evidence of such an alleged statement of Hans Haupt. If any evidence is to be considered an insult to your intelligence, and remember Mr. Finn made the remark, it should be the fact that the prosecution offers upon a treason trial the testimony of habitual criminals to supply a most essential part of their evidence, and that you are supposed to accept such testimony as evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Is there any other evidence in this case to the effect that Hans Haupt ever intended to assist Herbert Haupt in committing sabotage? I am confident you will find absolutely none. In all fairness and justice, you could not consider any unrelated statements made by Hans Haupt in 1935 and 1936 to 1940 as any reasonable evidence that Hans Haupt intended to assist his son five or six years later in commit-
1482 ting sabotage. Or that he offered to assist his son to commit sabotage. He never intended any such thing, and never said so.

I feel deep in my heart that this evidence was introduced by the prosecution for the purpose of creating prejudice in your minds against the defendant. I do not approve of any of these statements—if you believe they were made by Hans Haupt in the various years, the several years prior to the war, and you must consider that these statements were made in peacetime, and it was not unlawful for any person to make such a statement.

I do understand, however, how some of these statements could be made by a foreign-born person, who was a soldier in the last war, a German World War Veteran, but in the United States we do not punish men for any statement they make in time of peace. We pride ourselves upon our freedom of speech. We have two precious jewels here in the United States.

Freedom and Justice are the things for which every American is proud and it is both freedom and justice that we assure to every American whether he is foreign-born or not. Someone may make the argument, and I think Mr. Finn did, that Hans Haupt 1483 should be found guilty in this case, because he raised Herbert Haupt and that he failed in his duty as a parent, because Hans Haupt is responsible for the sins of his son, but ladies and gentleman, that it is not a proper argument. That is an appeal to prejudice. It is not a fair argument, because Hans Haupt is not on trial for the sins and omissions of a whole lifetime. It is not a fair argument, because he is not on trial for anything he did or failed to do before Herbert left his home in June 1941. And, furthermore, Hans Haupt is not on trial for anything he said himself prior to June 17, 1942, the date of the overt act in the indictment.

Who is there among us who would look well if we had all of the faults and mistakes of our lifetime marshalled up at one time, with no good word, with no word of good deeds, or of our good qualities?

I want to limit that to myself. Are there many other people—I don't want to include you—I think you understand what I mean. It is so easy to make a person look bad by criticism, by reviewing his or her faults.

The defendant in this case, ladies and gentlemen, Hans Haupt surely has been punished for any fault or dereliction of 1484 duty in raising his son by the execution of his only son, and by his own confinement in jail for two years and by the mental anguish that he has suffered as a result, and also by the confinement of his wife in jail.

Now, most any father and mother will comfort a son and will give him food and shelter, but that does not mean that those parents have intentions to commit treason against the United States by so aiding their son.

1485 Christ in his Sermon on the Mount asked of his followers this question: "Oh, what man is there of you, who, if his son asked for bread, will he give him a stone?"

The human heart cannot deny its own flesh and blood. There is enough pain and suffering in the world without convicting a man of crime, which he never intended. He is innocent of treason because he never intended to commit treason. The Constitution of the United States defines treason and says "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." The enemies of the United States—in this case are the German Reich. The Constitution further provides: "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court."

After counsel for the defense have made their arguments to the jury, we may not address you again. If the prosecu-
1486 tion makes any further points which we have not answered, bear in mind that we are not allowed to make a further reply to them. Please do not allow prejudice against this defendant which will prevent you from doing him justice. Please do not allow the fact that we are now engaged in a great war prevent you from giving this man the benefit of a reasonable doubt. We do not appeal either to your emotions or to your prejudices. If ever a case required the exercise of a person's mind and common sense this is the case that requires it. These facts are simple. You know them as well as any lawyer. They are fundamental facts. Please judge not the defendant in unkind thought nor with hatred or unfairness. I know you assured me when you were qualified as jurors in this case and I believed your answers then and I believe them now. Your own good conscience must control your decision in this case. We all must answer to our conscience in the years to come and the decision you make now cannot be recalled after it is rendered.

I pray to God you will decide this case according to the principles of American justice of which you have heard so much 1487 about in your examination as jurors and of which the Court shall again instruct you, and I say that with all reverence to the Deity.

May I say to you again that I believe with all my heart and soul and with all my mind and intelligence that Hans Haupt never did any wrong against the United States and never intended to do any wrong against our country.

I ask you ladies and gentlemen to bring in a verdict of not guilty.

May I in closing express my appreciation and gratitude to all of you ladies and gentlemen for your kind attention and forbearance in listening to me and may I also express my appreciation of the kindness and forbearance of His Honor, likewise, and I thank also counsel for the prosecution. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

The COURT. Take a short recess, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon a recess was had and on the coming in of court after recess the trial of this cause was resumed as follows, that is to say:)

1488 The COURT. Proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the Court.

The COURT. Mr. Warnholtz.

Closing argument by Mr. Warnholtz

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Gentlemen representing the prosecution, ladies and gentlemen of the jury:

At this time I wish to thank his Honor, Judge Barnes for the extreme patience and courtesy he has extended to all of us during this time. I also wish particularly to thank my good friend, Mr. Bertram, who has in such unselfish manner given to me of his time, energy, intelligence, and ability to assist me in carrying the burden of the defense, which otherwise it would have been upon me to carry alone.

At the beginning I shall briefly reply to Mr. Finn, inasmuch as Mr. Finn referred to some of these statements which I made in my opening statement. I believe I told you at that time that I should be conservative and that I would be conservative in my statements. Now, it is true I stated that government would not be able to produce any evidence as to the sheltering of Herbert Haupt except that at one time two witnesses were present who saw Herbert Haupt in the home of his father and mother. I 1489 still maintain that contention is correct.

They were Gerda Melind Saure and Gustav Zerner. They are the only two witnesses who have ever seen Herbert Haupt in the home of his parents after he returned to Chicago. It is true there was a large number of FBI agents who noticed Herbert went into the house and who noticed that he came out; and by inference it may be concluded that Herbert, during the time, or between the time when he went in and came out, was in the apartment of his parents. I say by inference.

But the Constitution does not state about any inferential evidence, or any circumstantial evidence. It says there must be two witnesses to the act. But supposing one hundred people had seen Herbert Haupt at the home of his parents? What of it? I do not know why Mr. Finn made a particular point of that.

Then another thing I wish to reply to Mr. Finn is that Mr. Finn at quite great length claimed that I brought Erna Haupt to the witness stand for one purpose, to create sympathy in your minds, and that it was a "spectacle."

1490 Well, supposing I did want to create sympathy in your minds? What of it? I will ask the government what did they try to create in your minds when they brought Peter Burger and all these instruments of death and destruction to this courtroom?

They say, yes—they say while Mrs. Haupt was on the stand "if you wish to prove the death of Herbert Haupt we shall consent, or we shall agree that he is dead. We will admit it."

Well, did I not admit in my opening statement, that Herbert Haupt was sent to the United States as a saboteur? Well, most of the time was spent for one purpose, to create hatred in your minds by the proof of that one issue. Now, that evidence was not any more necessary than the evidence that they claim I brought for the one purpose, of creating sympathy. They wanted to create prejudice, hatred. I admit that I wanted you to see Mrs. Haupt, Mrs. Erna Haupt. I wanted you to see her.

They claimed that Hans sheltered Herbert. He was sheltered.

not only by his father he was sheltered by his parents and that included his mother.

It is easy to sit back in an office, smartly talk about "convicting" people. It is so nice to keep out of sight the result, or the 1491 ultimate result, namely, these people, among them Erna Haupt who has been in the county jail, according to her testimony, for two years.

The government forgot that they had not one witness—ten, twenty, thirty, perhaps or more—I did not keep track of it—to prove the point which I had admitted in my opening statement. That was all right, but when I bring Erna Haupt that was all wrong. Then it was done for one purpose, to create sympathy and it was called an insult to your intelligence.

Well, if that was an insult to your intelligence, was it a compliment to your intelligence when they brought the dynamite. What was that? I wonder why they are getting so excited about it, that Mrs. Haupt took the stand. Why? Do you think it was easy for me to ask Mrs. Haupt those questions I did ask her? No, it was not easy.

Now, I want to tell you there is something that compelled me to do this. I have a duty to perform, a duty for the defendant, to bring out whatever there is in his favor. That is what I am here for. That is what Mr. Bertram is trying to do.
1492 We must not be derelict in that duty. We are the only friends that that man has today; we are the only ones who stand between his liberty and his—possible death in the electric chair; and that duty we are going to perform in spite of everything.

Our duty is one-sided. It is just the duty to defend our client. Of course, there is one more thing we have to do. We have to conduct ourselves in accordance with the ethics as are laid down for the legal profession. That we hope we have done in the past and shall continue to do now.

Counsel representing the prosecution or the "government" as it is termed, also has a duty to perform. I will tell you what that is:

To procure and present evidence in a fair manner so that justice may be done. The Government has the right to strike hard blows, but it has not got the right to strike foul blows. It must not hit below the belt.

The United States' attorney or the "District Attorney" as he is often called, is the representative not of either party to a controversy, but, of a sovereignty whose obligation to govern impartially is as compelling as its obligation to govern fairly, 1493 and whose interest therefore in a criminal prosecution is not that it shall win a case, but that justice shall be done.

Those are not my words. Those are the words of the Supreme Court of the United States of America, when it recently reversed a case where the District Attorney had forgotten that.

Mr. WOLL. If your Honor please, just so the inference does not follow, it was not this District Attorney. I want the record made clear.

The COURT. That is correct.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Ladies and gentlemen, permit me to read to you a few paragraphs from the opening statement made to you by the District Attorney. Incidentally, I will reply to Mr. Woll at this time, as to what he stated just now.

Just as Mr. Woll desires to have his record clear, I would like to have one point clear, too. I am defending Hans Max Haupt. I am not on trial. If there is anything about me that you do not like, my face, my voice, my nose, my behavior, whatever it may be, do not charge it to the defendant. He cannot help it.

1494 I shall read a few paragraphs from the opening statement of the gentleman who spoke first, Mr. Finn, my colleague, referring to the alleged instructions given to Herbert Haupt in Germany, according to Burger. The District Attorney said this: "We will show that Herbert told his father that he needed his car to carry out the job that he had to do in America; that he needed an automobile to get around faster, so that he could do as much damage to the defense industries of America as possible," that is what the United States District Attorney told you in his opening statement. And here is something else he told you.

"We will show that Herbert attempted then to seek employment at the Simpson Optical Manufacturing Company. We will show that this defendant, although Herbert had told him, according to his own statement, that he intended to steal the plans from the optical companies, that he took Herbert over to the home of the Superintendent of the Simpson Optical Company, where 1495 Herbert attempted to secure a job with the company."

That is what the United States District Attorney told you. It is not the allegation that Hans bought an automobile to which I object. It is not the allegation that Hans took his son over to the Superintendent and to the foreman of the Simpson Optical Company, to which I object, but I do object to the poison that was put in to this statement, alongside of what was a statement which was objectionable in its nature, and that poison was the following:

He said: "Herbert told his father that he needed his car to carry out the job that he had to do in America; that he needed a car to get around faster, so that he could do as much damage to the defense industries of America as possible."

I want to further object to several other little statements, that additional poison that was put into it at the time by the District Attorney when he said: "That Herbert told his father" that 1496 is what he says—"that he intended to steal plans from the optical companies."

These statements, ladies and gentlemen, are perhaps the most damning statements of the entire case. There is nothing in the case that surpasses these statements. These statements are of such a serious nature that a mob out on the street would lynch a man and a jury might condemn a man if such allegations are made.

Of course, there is one thing, a jury demands proof, the mob on the street does not—frequently not.

Now, I will ask you: What proof did the District Attorney bring as to these most terrible charges, not regarding the camouflage, not regarding the window dressing as to these two terrible charges, a most terrible thing that was said in the opening made by the gentleman representing the government. What proof?

Mr. WOLL. Mr. Warnholtz, as a matter of fact I said that, not Mr. Finn.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. When he made these statements here,
1497 on the real truth whereof the very life of a man may depend, it would be expected they would be supported by responsible evidence. It is reasonable to expect that.

What evidence was offered in fact? Not the testimony of two witnesses to an overt act, which is the proper way of proving treason under the provisions of the United States Constitution, not even by the testimony of one witness to an overt act. No; by the testimony of one single witness who was not present at the time, and he told you that somebody told him that Hans Haupt told him; a witness who could not qualify under the constitutional provisions.

Let us see, let us see one more thing. Was this witness at least a person of credibility, a person whom you or I can fully believe? No. I will tell you who it was. It was that master-mind from the Joliet Penitentiary, Hamby, a type of man whom you and I do pray that we will never meet if we have some evening to walk alone on some deserted street. I have pity for that man, as I have for every person whose mind has become twisted in some manner.

1498 But, that does not detract from the fact that this man is a dangerous person, and perhaps more so because he is intelligent. He is now serving a life sentence for robbery with a gun, and he is one of those men, that type of man, a gunman. That is all that the United States District Attorney offered in support of these two most terrible charges made in the entire case. It is the sole proof the government brought.

While I am on the subject of witnesses, who have testified in this case, let me call your attention to five different sets of witnesses. First, we have Mr. Hamby and Mr. Majerczak, the gentlemen who have come into conflict with the law and who are now confined in the penitentiary. It is understandable they do not like it there and hope to shorten their term by being of service to authorities in whatever way they can conceive of. They will tell a lie under oath or otherwise, as readily as they will point a gun at you to take your property. Rest assured of that.

Then we have two agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. In the performance of their duty they talked to Hans 1499 Haupt at the office of the United States Marshal on August 5, 1942, about one hour and a half before the arraignment of Hans Max Haupt took place, the continuance of that arraignment which had been had first, I believe, on July 21. It seems they talked to Hans Max Haupt while he was in a mentally upset condition, and that they did not pay much attention to the entire conversation, and did not attribute great importance to it at the time, at that time.

These two gentlemen—they are upright, fine men. You cannot become a member of the Federal Bureau of Investigation without being upright. They are thoroughly investigated before they are accepted, so there is nothing—please do not construe anything that I say is for the purpose of discrediting them as witnesses—but here is what Mr. Hirsch testified to regarding the mental condition of Hans Haupt at the time when these statements were made and were supposed to have been made.

I asked him: "When you talked to Hans Haupt did you at that time believe you were talking to a sane or an insane person?"

His answer: "Do you want my opinion?" "Yes".

1500 "I would say that Hans was upset."

That is as far as he went and I did not pursue the question any further. At any rate, these two agents, Mr. Robe and Mr. Hirsch, never testified at the first trial regarding this conversation which took place on August 5, 1942, at the office of the United States Marshal.

I will also state this, in support of my contention that they did not attribute much importance to the entire matter. In support of that I submit this: Mr. Hirsch referred to five meetings which Hans Haupt and several other persons had, according to what Hans Haupt told him. Mr. Robe who was present at the same time referred to only three meetings. That is all that he heard about. They evidently were not much impressed.

They saw a man who had been in jail for a number of weeks, who was terribly upset, and who did not know what had become of his wife, or his son.

I ask you to put yourself into the position of Hans Max Haupt and try to fathom, if you can, what your mental condition would be under such circumstances, what your mental condition would be.

1501 I ask you, gentlemen, in the County jail—those inmates around there, around you, told you that your wife is also in jail and that she is being used for immoral purposes there—if a man had not been insane as yet, that gradually possibly would drive him insane.

Now, these two groups of witnesses, Mr. Hamby and Mr. Majerczak, and later on Mr. Robe and Mr. Hirsch, they both belong to a group of witnesses who did not testify to overt acts. They do not qualify, according to the Constitution, to prove an overt act, because they were not present when the overt act was committed. They had no direct knowledge thereof.

Then we have a third group of witnesses. There was Mr. Zermer and Mr. Eggert, both truthful. They did not intend to lie, but they were very confused. I wonder if you remember Mr. Zermer, the gentlemen, I believe, said he was a tinsmith, and Mr. Eggert, a plasterer.

Let us take Mr. Zermer. He was confused when he was a witness in this trial here and it seems that he must have been con-1502 fused at all times when he was questioned until ultimately, he became so enmeshed in the many statements which he had made he did not know any more his way in or out. He simply did not know any more what to say. He made statements without properly understanding questions, and those statements were taken down by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, by members of the office of the United States District Attorney.

Mr. Zermer is not a man who wants to tell a lie. He seems to be entirely of a harmless nature. He is a good man, but his testimony, involving only two or three points, was the result of Zermer being quizzed for three days: three long days by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

During these three days they held him a prisoner without lawful authority. They did not allow him to go home. They also threatened him with revocation of his citizenship papers. I just wonder what it was that he said when they claimed they would take his papers away, or his papers should be taken away later on. I wonder what he said then. Did he say something different from what he testified here? We were not able to find out.

1503 So, by the time he came here to testify, the same as at the last trial, he was completely confused, so that he did not know any more whether he was going or coming, but there is one thing he does remember, he knows, and that is underlying threat every time when he is asked, Mr. Zermer, did you not testify before the Grand Jury, and were you not then under oath?" That he remembers, and meekly he will answer "Yes."

"Was that the truth then?" "Oh, yes; yes."

Because if he would state otherwise you know what would happen to him and he knows somewhere subconsciously, he does realize he is in some kind of a tight spot. That was Mr. Zermer.

Let me also call your attention to something in order to substantiate my charges that Mr. Zermer was confused and did not understand. You remember Mr. Zermer testified that he arrived at the Haupt home on Tuesday evening, June 23, 1942; that at the time when he arrived there he found there Hans Haupt, Herbert Haupt, and Erna Haupt.

I did ask him, if I remember correctly, whether Herbert Haupt left during the time that he was there.

1504 "No, not until later on, until 10:30, when he—Herbert—left with the young lady."

What did Gerda Melind Haure state? She stated this:

"When I arrived at the Haupt home Herbert was not there. I had an appointment with him there and I asked his mother where he was and she said" I believe this is what she said "'he went out to meet you.'"

And so immediately, Hans Haupt, the father, went out, after Herbert, to tell him that Gerda had already arrived, that they must have missed each other at whatever place Herbert thought that he could meet her. I will tell you what place it was. It was at the corner of Webster and Clark Streets.

That this is correct can easily be verified. The testimony of at least two agents of the FBI will prove it. They saw Herbert that evening and at that time at the corner of Webster and Lincoln Avenue where he was for about twenty minutes. He knew that Gerda Melind coming up north could there take a streetcar, the Lincoln Avenue streetcar or the Clark Street car, and he knew that in either event, whichever car she took, she had to pass 1505 or get off at the corner of Webster and Lincoln Avenue.

Then that Hans Haupt did go over there, and on his way Herbert saw him. In the meantime Herbert had grown tired waiting and jumped on a street car and rode a few blocks. Evidently seeing his father coming in the opposite direction he got off and they both went into a tavern and came out again in about three or four minutes. Then he went into the house. You will remember this was the testimony of the FBI agents, but still Zermer testified when he got there Herbert was in the house. Zermer did not want to lie about it. He just has forgotten. He is confused. He is confused on that point, as he is confused on every other point except one, when the threat is made, "Did you not" or "Did you testify before the grand jury on that subject, then under oath?"

Then his confusion slightly disappears, as a matter of self protection.

Then we go to the witness Eggert. He was also threatened, with loss of citizenship papers by members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. There was some testimony about an effort
1506 to throw him into a concentration camp. Ladies and gentlemen, you observed Mr. Eggert. He was this stoutish, middle-aged man. He said he was a plasterer by trade. He was not the type of man, as far as I can judge, who would go out to lie to people. He is a simple man. So I am wondering, if that assumption is correct, that he does not want to lie, I am wondering just what did he say when he was being threatened with the concentration camp, when he was being threatened that his citizenship papers would be taken away from him. I wonder what he did say. Did he say something inconsistent with the testimony which was offered here? There was only one thing that he knew, but he said they had statements, and likely as not he appeared before the grand jury. That is the third group of witnesses. We have another group, four. We have Mr. Schroeder, Mr. Poppe, and Mrs. Fishman. There might have been another one that I have forgotten. They testified to things which took place, I would say—well, I believe it was anywhere as far back as 1935. They testified about Haupt, statements made by Hans Haupt since that time, to about the year 1941, the early part.

1507 If Hans Haupt made the statements I will say it was wrong; he should not have made them, but he did not then commit a crime when he did make them. It was his right. He may not have shown good judgment, and we do not know the circumstances under which they were made, but he should not have made them. This country has been good to him; it had been good to him up to then, as far as I know. True enough he went through the depression, the same as all of us, but he found a home in America. His boy went to school here; and he should have trained his mind, as far as possible, to see the United States in a light favorable to our country rather than the other way. Perhaps the affection for the country from which he came, where he had spent his childhood, was still too great. It takes years and years until that wears off, not only with Hans Haupt, with all people. It is natural, unless they come from a country where they were persecuted. Then they may in bitterness against that country forget themselves faster.

You know—not just Hans Haupt—I would say almost every person, everyone, barring none, some time in his lifetime has made some statements or has done something of which he is not particularly proud.

1508 I would like to see the person who can—I say barring gone—who would dare walk out on the street, having in front of him a signboard, and painted on it the things he has done in his lifetime, or said in his lifetime whereof he is not proud. I would like to see that person who would dare to.

So, you see, you have Hans Haupt paraded before you, just in that manner, and not anything to show what good he may have done. But, if Hans Haupt did make those statements, I am sure that it was not anything which indicated that he intended to commit treason. In fact, you cannot commit treason in times of peace. Treason can only be committed, and that is also according to the Constitution of the United States of America, in times of war.

I will ask you, if he made statements in the year 1935, how are you going to conclude that at that time he made that statement with the intention of later on committing treason? How did he know then that we would ever have a war? How did he know then that he was going to buy an automobile in 1942?

Still they say the statements made in 1935 show a 1509 treasonable intention with which he bought an automobile in 1942. You figure it out. I cannot.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, I come to the fifth class of witnesses, the FBI agents who trailed Herbert Haupt, whereby the government claims that it has partly established the overt act of harboring; then the persons who testified to the purchase of the automobile whereby the government claims that it partly establishes the overt acts relating to the purchase of the automobile; and then the testimony of Mr. Granau and his family and Mr. Koch and his family—or his wife—whereby the government claims partly to have established that Hans Haupt accompanied Herbert so that Herbert could secure employment with the Simpson Optical Company where he had worked before.

These witnesses, all of them, testified in a manner to which we can attach no criticism whatsoever. They told us what they saw and what they heard. They evidently were not subjected to any intimidation at any time. And we accept their testimony.

1510 Now, you notice that I stated that the government claims by this testimony that it partially established the overt acts, these three overt acts and that is all there is, three.

True enough, there are twelve in number, but these twelve overt acts which were submitted to you as overt acts on treason relate only to three matters, the purchase of the automobile, the sheltering of Herbert Haupt and the going of Hans Haupt along with his boy when Herbert applied for a job. That is all you have of those twelve overt acts, nothing else.

I say that the government contends that it has partly proven them—partly, why? Because an overt act consists of two things.

the act of itself and of the intention with which it was committed. And these witnesses testified only to the acts, not to the intention.

As far as the automobile is concerned, there is no dispute about the facts of purchase. I am quite sure I admitted it in my opening statement. Hans Haupt went to this Warner Sales Company, accompanied by Herbert and bought an automobile.

We also know that later on Herbert had that automobile
1511 and drove around in it. There is no evidence to show that he drove around to any place to blow up bridges, but he drove around in it.

But we also brought witnesses who showed that Herbert had an automobile before he left in 1941; that he left this automobile behind; and we have documentary evidence which will be given to you when you retire to the jury room, showing the title of that car when it was acquired, namely, about November 1940, about the time when Herbert became 21 years old, at which time this automobile was given to him by his parents, who were, perhaps, foolish, but we all are with reference to our children at times.

This record will also show that later on that title was corrected and the title was brought into Hans Haupt. That was after Herbert had left. These records will further show, as was brought out by testimony, that Hans Haupt had his own automobile. He had an automobile before he gave Herbert one for his birthday. It was an old car of 1936, an Oldsmobile. Hans did not need a very good car for driving around, putting his painter's and decorator's tools and equipment in the car, and the old car was good enough for the purpose; but after Herbert had left and did 1512 not return, according to these records under the seal of the State of Illinois, Hans sold that old Oldsmobile, and he started to use the car which Herbert had left behind.

So what is so strange about that, that upon the return of Herbert, Hans should replace the car which he had in that manner taken from Herbert, replace it by a new car. Young men like to have automobiles.

If you have sons, or if you have children you know. What is so strange about it? For Hans to go somewhat out of his way for that purpose? We all do that. Any man, any father who has a boy, and there is but one car in the family, knows on Saturday evenings and on Sundays the father will stay at home and allow the boy to take the car. Maybe we are foolish, but we just do it, every one of us.

You are supposed to believe [illegible] and without this you cannot find the defendant guilty, you are supposed to believe that Hans Haupt bought the automobile with traitorous intent, with an intention to do harm to the United States as Mr. Finn said in his opening statement, not for the purpose which I believe we have 1513 have actually shown it was bought for.

Let us go now to the next proposition. That is the matter of Herbert Haupt in the company of his father—and for that matter in the company of his mother—going to the place of Mr. Grunau, the superintendent and Mr. Koch the foreman of the Simpson Optical Company. I will ask you, what was wrong about that? I will show you later on, as I have shown you, shown to you during the trial, that Hans Haupt was a man who worked and who worked hard. He did not believe in his son being at home, loafing around. He wanted the boy to work like any son should do. What was the most logical place where he should go but to the Simpson Optical Company?

Herbert had worked there two years. He knew something about that business, so what was wrong about it? But, according to the government, of course, there was only one reason, there could be only one reason, there never could be anything else in this case, but treason. According to the government, no matter what Hans ever did, according to the government, Hans went there with Herbert so that Herbert at any time could steal
1514 the plans of the Norden bomb sight, that is the only thing it possibly could have been.

Then we talk about the harboring matter.

Well, there were two witnesses who saw Herbert in the home of his parents, Gerda Melind and Zermer and many agents saw Herbert go in and go out. Now, if Herbert was harbored in the home of his parents, I would ask you what is wrong about that? Is it so strange for parents to extend to their son that which it is the custom to give him, a home? Give him the comforts of home life, to allow him to sleep there and perhaps to give him a cup of coffee?

Is it possible that that can only be done with one intention, in order to blow up the United States; or might there have been, might the intention have been for Hans, and also the boy's mother, to do that which every father and mother does to help him? To help the boy, to re-establish him as well as they knew how?

Well, according to the prosecution you are supposed to believe that these three acts, the buying of the automobile, the harboring, if it was proven, and this accompanying to the Simpson
1515 Optical Company were done for one purpose; it was done for the purpose of treason. Hans did that with traitorous intent and with nothing else; it just could not be any other way.

You are supposed not only to believe that that is possible, no; they want you to say that you believe too beyond a reasonable doubt; they want you to exclude the possibility that Hans Haupt may have acted as a father. I say the "possibility" what I should say is they want you to believe the most perverse or remote conclusion that a man can draw, namely that Hans Haupt did all of this in order to lead his own son to destruction. And with Herbert to lead his own wife to destruction, because that would be the natural—naturally an incident that would have to follow.

A mother whose boy is taken away under conditions as subsequently happened is destroyed, and everything in her soul. Maybe her body still lives. A mother is the only person who never deserts her own child. There is no one else. These impulses of nature are the laws of God. We are supposed to exist with reference to these. You can take all your laws that were ever passed, anywhere in the world, and they would all go to 1516 smash, to pieces, before these laws of God will terminate, because with that would terminate mankind.

Now I wish to give you some of the evidence which the defense brought, and which was so belittled by the prosecution. I will admit it is just matter of fact evidence. It is very simple. It is very sober. It was brought by witnesses who were not quite as colorful as Mr. Burger. It does not involve objects as colorful as introduced by the government. It is merely the working record of Hans Haupt during the time that his boy was in Chicago.

There is one distinction, however, between that evidence and the evidence brought by the government. Every one of those witnesses told the truth. They did not know how to lie nor did they become terribly confused, or if they did become confused, it was because it was the first time for them that day here on that witness stand, because the defense could not and would not send out subpoenaes for the purpose of getting anybody into the defense counsel's office, witnesses and to question them. The defense could not go out and take the witnesses, bring them into a private jail and hold them there, threatened with de-1517 naturalization or being thrown into a concentration camp.

These witnesses had no occasion to become confused beforehand.

And if I should go beyond the record I might say to you that one of them did at this——

Mr. HURLEY. I will object, your Honor.

The COURT. I cannot hear you.

Mr. HURLEY. Talking about going beyond the record.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I have not done so yet.

Mr. WOLL. He warned us that he would.

The COURT. Stay within the record.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Withhold your objection.

The COURT. Stay within the record.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The record of Max Hans Haupt working schedule and so forth, during the time that his boy was here have been taken from the testimony of these witnesses and also from the testimony of government witnesses here before.

We were told that Max Hans Haupt first saw his son Friday, June 19, 1942. On the afternoon of that day Herbert Haupt is supposed to have returned to Chicago.

1518 The next day, that is the first day that follows, Saturday, June 20, Hans Haupt worked from eight o'clock in the morning until eleven o'clock at night as a painter, decorator, and so forth, at a building at 2545 North Clark Street. He worked there, according to the witness Peter Wolf who worked with him, from eight to eleven o'clock at night, or fifteen hours. That type of work is not easy work.

When he came home, it was a Saturday weekend, and he had the automobile along.

According to the witness, he then had to go out again, to the south side, to the Wergins. As you remember, Herbert did not leave Chicago alone. With him was Wolfgang Wergin. Then the direct testimony was, as testified here, that in some way or other Herbert evidently prevailed upon his father to take him down there that evening, so that Herbert could talk to Mr. and Mrs. Wergin and tell them about their boy, Wolfgang. Wolfgang had not returned.

So after this man had worked fifteen hours that day he spent another four hours or five hours in making a social visit—whatever it was. That was not treason. No one could testify much about that, of what happened, but he, his wife and Herbert 1519 did that evening drive to the Wergin home. And that is one of those "famous meetings".

You have all heard so much about the meetings. Well, let me call your attention to this one fact, that all of these meetings that you have heard about took place on a Saturday, on a Sunday evening, when people happened to be home. They could not show you any meetings during the week, because these people were busy, but on Saturdays—you and I also meet people. Later on somebody comes along and says, "You had meetings." If they held meetings with the sinister meaning that the government likes to attribute to it, why did they not have meetings during the week, but weekends is the only time that the working man can find to meet his friends. That was Saturday.

Sunday, what did Hans do? He again worked from ten o'clock in the morning until one o'clock in the afternoon, painting and decorating, finishing up at the same apartment where he had worked all day Saturday. That is according to the testimony of the janitor of that building. That you may remember. That was Mr. Tischler who is now a farmer in Hartford, Michigan. To go on——

The COURT. About how much more time will you
1520 require, Mr. Warnholtz?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would say about fifteen or twenty minutes. It could be interrupted.

The COURT. I think we will recess at this time until 2:00 o'clock. Do not discuss this case, ladies and gentlemen, and do not permit anyone to discuss it with you and return here at two o'clock.

(And thereupon the jury withdrew and the following proceedings were had in the absence of the jury:)

The COURT. Can you say about how much time you will require?

Mr. WOLL. Forty two minutes. I think that is what your Honor said we had left.

The COURT. That is about an hour and two minutes. Unfortunately, the Court's instructions will take some considerable time. What do you gentlemen think of instructing the jury this evening? What does the defense say about it?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, we do feel that it might possibly 1521 be best, unless we can adjourn until tomorrow morning and continue this?

The COURT. The only thing, I can allow you to finish your argument today and have the case submitted to the jury today, or will you finish the argument today and have me instruct the jury in the morning?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The defense would say or be disposed to say that it would be better to have the jury get the case today.

The COURT. Gentlemen, that is your settled judgment, is it?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I was just asking. On that point I think it would be better time, to avoid the jury being locked up, if the instructions are given in the morning. I will take my chance.

The COURT. Finish your argument today and I will instruct the jury in the morning. Be back at two o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to Wednesday, June 7th, A. D. 1944, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock P. M.)

1522 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge, and a Jury

Wednesday, June 7, 1944, 2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Counsel present: Messrs. J. Albert Woll, Earle C. Hurley, Richard G. Finn, Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram.

1523 The COURT. Bring in the jury:

(The following proceedings were had in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

The COURT. Ladies and gentlemen, I did think we would conclude the arguments today and that I would instruct you as to the law and submit the case to you, but just prior to noon I concluded it probably would be better to conclude the arguments today and then I shall instruct you tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. The case will be submitted to you then, some time before eleven o'clock tomorrow. You are ready to proceed, Mr. Warnholtz?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please your Honor?

The COURT. Mr. Warnholtz.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury: Continuing on the working record of Hans Max Haupt I will now come to Monday, June 22. On that day, according to Mr. Nolan, the contractor, Hans Haupt worked as a bricklayer somewhere on the south side on 43rd Street. There is no evidence to show when he left his home in the morning. So all we can do is to use our good common sense.

1524 I believe that tells us that men engaged in that type of work usually leave bright and early in the morning. They do not start in the afternoon. Mr. Nolan, I believe told you that on that day Mr. Tobsing, the man who died later on through an accident in the building trade, was working with Hans Haupt at this particular job.

In the evening, you may remember, Hans Haupt, his wife and Herbert dropped in for a few minutes, downstairs where they lived, at the home of the Kluczyk and said "how do you do," and remarked that they had something more to do and could not stay very long; the record shows that later on that evening they all went out to see Mr. and Mrs. Grunau, Mr. and Mrs. Koch, regarding this employment of Herbert. That is Monday, June 22nd.

On the succeeding day, June 23, we again find Hans Haupt working as a bricklayer on 43rd Street in Chicago, where Mr. Nolan saw him at work. During the evening you may remember from the testimony Hans went, together with his son Herbert, to the Warner Motor Sales Company and there made a down payment on an automobile and still later he was at home, if I 1525 recollect correctly, and I believe it is correct. In the evening when Gerda Melind Saure and Mr. Zermer were at his home. That accounts for Tuesday, June 23.

On Wednesday, June 24, we again find Hans Haupt working as a bricklayer on 43rd Street. It seems that on that day they finished over there. Evidently he got through quite early because according to the testimony he was at four o'clock in the afternoon on Wellington Avenue and there, as Mr. Eggert testified Hans helped Mr. Eggert to "clean up" as they call it. Mr. Eggert was a plasterer. That was over on Wellington Avenue, on the north side.

On Wednesday, Hans Haupt and his son Herbert again were at the Warner Motor Sales Company and completed the transaction of purchasing an automobile.

Thursday, the succeeding day, June 25, Hans Haupt left his home at about 7:15 in the morning. Outside were waiting for him Mr. Eggert and Mr. Tobsing. It was at that time Mr. Eggert testified that he saw Herbert come out of the house. Hans proceeded with Eggert and Tobsing taking them into his car and over to Oakley Boulevard where Hans had undertaken to do some sort of a chimney job for Mr. Nolan.
1526 Upon arriving at the place of work Hans helped in putting up the scaffold. Then he went to work at some other place. According to the testimony of Mr. Nolan, it seems that he went to Adams Street where he was also doing a chimney repair job. He did not finish that on that day because as Mr. Nolan testified Hans Haupt was afraid he might fall off the roof or something like it, being alone.

On Friday we again find Hans Haupt, together with Mr. Eggert and Mr. Tobsin, at the Oakley Boulevard address where they finished up the work at about two o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Nolan has joined them at that time and the four men, Mr. Nolan in his car, Eggert and Tobsing in Mr. Haupt's car went over to this Adams Street job. There Hans, together with Nolan completed the chimney repair job. After that Mr. Nolan left, and Hans Haupt together with Mr. Eggert and Tobsing proceeded over to Burling Street where Hans Haupt explained to them or told them what they should do there on Monday of the succeeding week. This was Friday.

1527 On the day following men engaged in the building trades—being Saturday—usually do not work.

Later on in the evening of that day we find Hans Haupt—that was Friday—we find Hans Haupt—or was it perhaps Thursday—in some tavern on Lincoln Avenue, the Smokenberg Tavern, as testified to by the witness Sausen, Jr., who engaged him to do work for him, painting work, the following week.

Still later in the evening of that day Max Haupt attended a meeting at the Atlantic hotel of the German Day Association, where he was an officer of some sort.

The testimony in that case was given by Mr. Graff. You may remember him. He testified that he and Haupt were officers of the German Day Association which, if I remember correctly, distributed the proceeds of the one affair that they had annually, for charitable purposes.

The last day, Saturday, that was the day when at nine o'clock in the morning, or 9:05 when Herbert Haupt, unbeknown to his parents was arrested on Webster Avenue near the elevated station.

1528 On Saturday, according to the witness, Mr. Schoenfeld, Hans went over to Wellington Avenue and there received a check for work he had done for Mr. Schoenfeld. Some time during that day Hans Haupt went to the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank and cashed that check. That bank is located at the corner of Belmont Avenue and Lincoln Avenue in Chicago.

And that closes the record as far as we have proven it by testimony. I believe that this record shows that Hans Haupt intended at all times to do but one thing and that was to make his family, which included his son, as happy as possible, through the products of his labor, and not through ill-gotten money or gains, to make his family happy. That is what he worked for and that is all he worked for.

I feel that it will be entirely in conformity with the instructions which you will get from His Honor, Judge Barnes, in this case when I say that Hans Haupt did not commit treason when he bought that automobile for his son Herbert, if it was Hans Haupt's intention, sole intention, that Herbert should derive from the use of that automobile such convenience and pleasure as young men do derive therefrom; and if it was the sole intention of Max Haupt when he accompanied his son to the superintendent of the 1529 Simpson Optical, to have his son lead a good, orderly, and productive life, then Hans Haupt was not guilty of treason in that respect; and if it was the sole intention of Hans Haupt in giving his son a room to sleep, or a cup of coffee or something else to eat or drink, if that was done so that his son should enjoy such advantages of home life, and not for any traitorous purposes, then Hans Haupt did not commit treason in that respect.

When we take all this camouflage away again from this case, there remains in this case this: The buying of the automobile, the sheltering of Herbert Haupt and the going of Hans Haupt, together with his son to the superintendent of the Simpson Optical Company.

Ladies and gentlemen, you are supposed to believe beyond a reasonable doubt that Hans Haupt with reference to these three actions was motivated by only one thing, to commit treason against the United States of America.

For that to a large extent, particularly with reference to the terrible charges which were mentioned in the beginning you 1530 have the word of two habitual criminals, men who are now confined in the penitentiary, men who are supposed to be, according to those who judged on them, unfit to society. Those are the men upon whose word you are supposed to judge and say that Hans Max Haupt is a traitor. The prosecution wants you to believe that and nothing else. Otherwise the prosecution cannot win this case.

You are asked to substitute this unnatural conclusion for that which always motivates parents in their actions towards their children, namely, for love and affection. And I say it was solely love and affection for his boy and not a desire to destroy his boy, to aid the German government, which motivated Hans Haupt.

Yes: Hans Haupt was born in Germany. It is also true that he belonged to several so-called "German-American societies," but have we become so blinded that today we say everything connected with Germans or German-Americans represents the devil?

You may remember that Mr. Graff mentioned some of 1531 these German-American societies. He mentioned the German Aid Society which has been active in the City of Chicago for almost one hundred years, for time beyond our memory and recollection. He mentioned another society, the Singing Society, the oldest one in Chicago, he claimed, which has been engaged in its particular activities or functions—he called it a Glee Club—for more than seventy-five years. I believe seventy-eight years, he said. What harm have these societies done? I ask you. I could perhaps tell you of a great deal of good they have done, but that does not fit into the picture just now, so I will pass that up.

There is one question I want to ask you. What has Hans Max Haupt done since America entered the war? What has he done that was traitorous? What has he done that was traitorous? I know of one thing. He has suffered.

That boy of his was of a young and immature mind, of whom I do not want to speak because I do not wish to harm the father still more. I also could say something against that boy and with the same right the government can because I am living here. It is my home.

1532 Well, that boy committed a terrible wrong. For it he paid a terrible penalty when he was but 21 or 22 years old. He is dead and he has left behind him a shattered home and broken hearts. For these two the sun will never shine again, no matter what you do, but in the darkness which must be theirs for the rest of their lifetime, there might be, perhaps, a little consolation, some small comfort may come to them, to this father and mother by having each other.

There has been some objection that I may appeal to your sympathy—sympathy and understanding which is another word for it. Yes, I do appeal to your sympathy. When I do that I appeal to the normal mind. You cannot find a normal mind at all without sympathy. Hatred is something that is not normal. It is for the government to appeal to hatred, prejudice, but there is not any man, any good man who can cut out sympathy and understanding which is always within. That is a natural function of every good, human being and so I do appeal for it anyway, but I also ask for something else. That is justice.

1533 I told you in the beginning, in my opening statement which is now almost three weeks ago, that to be just means to be courageous and I will ask you again to have the courage to be just.

I ask you to set Hans Max Haupt free, for all he did is that he acted as a father to a son and not as a traitor. Hans Max Haupt is not a man with a black heart. I thank you.

Closing argument on behalf of the Government

The COURT. Mr. Woll.

Mr. WOLL. May it please the Court.

The COURT. Mr. Woll.

Mr. WOLL. Mr. Warnholtz, Mr. Bertram, Mr. Hurley, Mr. Finn, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Mr. Warnholtz has been good enough to advise you that he is appealing to your sympathy. Now, you know sympathy can work two ways, and misplaced sympathy for one man can cause a lot of grief for a lot of mothers and fathers in this country who are loyal to this country and who are hoping that "By God they are safe" that their boys and girls are safe in these times.

1534 If you want sympathy let us not make it one-sided. Let us have a little sympathy for the government of the United States, also. Let us not just think of this man in this courtroom.

Let us realize the responsibilities and duties that are placed upon us and let us realize that an idle act on our part, an inadvertent verdict on our part which is swayed by sympathy may in the long run cause each of us to regret it as long as we live.

We know that an invasion took place in this country on June 17, 1942.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Just a moment. I object to that. This war is not being won, nor is the invasion being won by what is before us, nobody landed here. It has no place in this argument, I believe.

Mr. WOLL. I am not referring to anything there. I am referring to this invasion of this country on June 17, 1942, by these saboteurs.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will withdraw it, pardon me.

Mr. WOLL. We know that an invasion took place in this country on June of 1942.

Do we know that the ultimate success of that mission would not have determined a future course? Do we know the ultimate success of that mission may determine a future course?

1535 Can we be at liberty and comfortable as we are in this country which, thank God right now, is safe for the time being? Can we sit here comfortably, saying to ourselves that we need not worry about saboteurs and spies landing here, we can take care of ourselves?

That is what the Federal Bureau of Investigation did in this case. The Federal Bureau of Investigation took care of us. Now, because the agencies of government were able to cope with the smartest intellects the German Reich could furnish are we to say that this is an unimportant incident in the American life? Are we to say that this incident should be brushed aside because the mission was a failure? To do so would be to jeopardize the government and to jeopardize the splendid work performed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Because they were alert, because they realized the seriousness, the danger to our country and because our counterespionage system was so efficient, they nipped this plot in the bud. Is that any reason why we should say to ourselves that no harm has been done, and Hans Max Haupt should walk out of this courtroom a free man?

1536 I have never heard an argument like that advanced in courts before in my whole life.

This is serious business. As Mr. Finn told you more damage could be done by the proper placing of a bomb in a particular part of a factory than all the paratroopers, and all the shiploads of men than could possibly be assembled. This was a serious threat to our national existence, as serious as any that we have experienced in this war.

Let us not lose sight of our sense of value. One American life is not worth misplaced sympathy. By that I mean you cannot misplace sympathy to jeopardize one American life.

Now, I am going to tell you something. It has been brought out by defense attorneys. I think Mr. Bertram again commented on the meaning of an accessory and he said that Hamby brought out the word accessory and that Hans Max Haupt did not use that expression. Let me tell you what the evidence was.

Hamby said that Hans Max Haupt told him that Herbert Haupt, a spy, a saboteur, a paid agent of the German government, had told him that if he was caught he would get life, that the father would be an accessory. Hans was merely repeating 1537 what Herbert Haupt told him, but the important thing about that, as I see it is this:

Herbert told Hans that if he were caught he would get life. Herbert said that we were so soft here that he could get away with something like that. Herbert believed the Americans did not realize that there was a war on.

I am very serious about that. We know that Lieutenant Koppe was in charge of these boys, these men, and we know Lieutenant Koppe lived in this country, and we know that these men were well trained.

"It is not treason to harbor a man." Let me ask you this question: Supposing a spy and saboteur came into this country to do damage. Suppose also that every true, loyal American locked his doors to keep out the man as though he was plague ridden though he was a pariah, untouchable? What would happen to that man? What would happen if nobody would take him in?

First of all he could not eat, could not sleep. He would have no place to stay. He would be forced to roam the streets until he was tired. He would not be able to eat, he would not be able to do a thing.

1538 That, ladies and gentlemen, is the duty and obligation of every decent, loyal American citizen who believes it down in his heart when he says that "I swear to uphold and defend the Constitution and the laws of this country." That is the obligation of every American citizen.

You cannot have spies in this country; you cannot have saboteurs in this country; you cannot have paid agents of the German government in this country; you cannot have paid agents of the German government in this country roaming our streets doing a successful mission in sabotage if people turn them out of their doors, keep them away, because they have no place to go.

This mission was unsuccessful. It was unsuccessful because of the alertness of the FBI. Let us think for a moment of the awful consequences if it had been successful. Let us think about that for a minute. Is not that the thought you should have in your mind when you go back into your jury room and somebody says "I feel kind of sorry for this defendant"? Is not that a thought to have?

If it were not for the Federal Bureau of Investigation,
1535 if this mission was successful, what would have happened?

The aluminum industry, the light metals industry would have been crippled and bombers that now fly in the air over the enemy country, dropping their bombs might not be there.

It is a serious business, is it not? We have yet to regard this matter as it is. Do you think for a moment that I enjoy prosecuting that man? Do you think I enjoy it? No, no; I do not enjoy it at all, but I have a duty to perform. I am going to perform that duty to the utmost of my ability. I assure you of that, ladies and gentlemen.

I am not going to allow any misplaced sympathy to prevent me from doing my duty and to do what Justice Sutherland said and that Mr. Warnholtz mentioned with respect to striking hard blows but fair blows. If I did, I would not deserve to be an American, I would not deserve to represent the government of the United States in this prosecution.

While we are on that striking of hard blows but not foul blows, let me recall your attention to my opening statement. I told you at that time that the government expected to prove certain things. Have we done it? Have we proved them?
1540 What does Mr. Warnholtz say?

Mr. Warnholtz says in effect this: "Why what Mr. Woll said was the most damning thing in the world, he said he was going to prove certain things and these were very damning things."

Of course they were. Of course they were. I did not commit them. Somebody else committed them, but if they were damning things what is the objection that he found to it? That I did not prove them? No, no. He pointed out two or three sentences in my opening statement. It took a long time. So I assume that he has agreed that I have proved everything else, but he picks out two or three things and he does not say that the government did not prove them.

He says, "Sure, the government proved them, they proved them, but we do not like the person by whom they proved them."

Well, of course, one thing is certain and that is the government does not go and say "Mr. So and So, I want you to be a witness, I want you to testify to these things."
1541 We do not go out on the street and pick up witnesses.

We find the people who know the things. Then we bring them into a court and we say "You tell the Court and the jury those things."

Can we help if a man is in the penitentiary? We present the evidence to you. Of course, I assume— as a matter of fact I know that there is not one person in this jury box now who believes that the government would induce these people to tell falsehoods so I am not going to mention any more about that. That, I assume is understood.

Now, then, there has been a vicious attack on these two men from Joliet, a very vicious attack. In making this attack the attorneys for the defendant would like to have you believe that is the only evidence the government has, that these people are not corroborated in any way.

Let me ask you a question: Did Hirsch say anything about what Hans Haupt told him? Did Robe say anything? Of course, they did. What did they say? Hirsch and Robe, I think, said that Hans told them that the boy told him about his trip to Germany when he left America. That he told him of coming 1542 back in a German submarine; going to some kind of a school in Germany "an intelligence school." I think they used that term; coming back here on a German submarine. Are Hirsch or Robe inmates of a penitentiary? No. They are the type of men that Mr. Warnholtz classified as being very upright and upstanding men, men whose records in the past years have been investigated before they became members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. What is he going to do with that testimony? Throw it out of the window? Are you going to ignore it? No. There has been no impeachment of any kind on anything that has been testified to by a number of these witnesses.

Hirsch and Robe also stated that Hans told them that on the subsequent night, Saturday night, that they went to the Wergins. Supposing you were inclined to find fault with the testimony of Hamby and Norris. Suppose also you wanted to find fault with the testimony of Hirsch and Robe. The fact that they were at the Wergin house was proved by another witness, by Miss Demmler. What is the object of the argument of the defense counsel? Are you to disregard; throw out entirely, all the government 1543 witnesses? That has to be their argument. There is not anything that stands alone in this case. There is not a thing that stands alone in this case.

A number of agents said that Herbert Haupt went into that home every night that he stayed there. There are more than two witnesses to that.

When Hans went down to purchase the automobile there were more than two witnesses that saw him in there together with Herbert. At that time we had two people in the place when Hans purchased it for Herbert. You have got to conclude everybody for the government is lying. Do you want to take that step? Do you want to come to that conclusion?

If you do, then what have you got? What evidence has the defense introduced? They have introduced evidence that Hans Haupt worked. They had Erna Haupt on the stand. They had her testify that as far as she knows her boy is dead. Is that a defense to treason? Is that any defense to treason? Use your common sense. Of course not. But the significant thing, the significant thing is that this woman was placed on the stand; that there was a woman who, according to the government's 1544 evidence, could say "we did not go to the Wergins, we did not go to the Froehlings, Herbert did not say anything about being in Germany, Herbert did not say a thing about coming back on a German submarine. Herbert did not say any of these things."

Did she do it? The opportunity was there, the time was there, the time for her to give her reasons for the purchase of an automobile, the reasons for harboring the boy, the reasons for going to the Optical Company was right then and there on the witness stand and not in final argument when the ingenuity of counsel can attempt to raise doubt in your mind with respect to evidence.

We are not speaking at random. We are not speaking our random thoughts. The defense attorneys frankly admit they are standing between this man and punishment.

Let us just consider Hamby and Norris for a moment. I cannot in the short space of time that I have even attempt to straighten out all of the inadvertent misstatements made by counsel. I can only hope that your common sense has pointed those out to you and to attempt to point out some that I think are more important.

1545 The first thing is this: "Everybody threatened Hans Haupt at the jail; he was in a hostile atmosphere; nobody liked him."

What is the evidence? The evidence is that Hamby said he felt sorry for him; he was in the same boat; he was in jail. Norris said also that he was sympathetic. Hamby got cigarettes for Hans, got cigarettes for him. You heard him say all the things that they did for Hans Haupt while he was in the jail. No one mistreated Hans Haupt in that jail. No one mistreated him at all.

You know it is a nice thing to pick out some small isolated incident, particularly if you have not got much to talk about, and build it up to huge proportions. That was done in the situation involving the so-called statement that Erna Haupt was being mistreated in jail. I do not know why they brought that out. I suppose they felt that that might be something that might "chill" you. It does, but what is the fact about it? The fact is that some convict made that statement; that then Hamby told Haupt, he said, "Do not believe that, nothing to that. If she is in the County jail—I do not know whether she is or 1546 not—she is taken care of by women guards. Do not worry about that."

Did Hamby hate Hans? Did Hamby hate Hans when he told him that, to assure him?

Hans told Hamby quite a few things. I wonder why he told him them, why did he tell Hamby these things? Here was a man who was charged with treason. Here is a very cunning man, a very shrewd man, make no mistake about that. Here was a very cunning man, a shrewd man, a man who was thoroughly imbued with the principles of the German Reich. Here is a man charged with treason. One of the first things that comes to his mind is: "Well, I have got to get help. I may have to have a lawyer."

Hans hears Short's name: "What kind of a lawyer is Ben Short?" He has perhaps heard of him. He asks Hamby. Why? Hamby, the old-timer who has gone through all these things. Hamby is telling the boys how to take care of a lot of things. He is some sort of a leader around the boys, and he is telling them how to handle their cases. Hans has got his secret in his heart. He has got that secret in his heart that is worrying him. He is worrying, "What can a jury do, what can a court do to me?"

1547 Hans is figuring now: "How am I going to get out of this thing?" He has to take the best counsel that he can get. He has to take the best counsel that he can get. He begins to ask Hamby questions. Hamby has been kind to him and he thinks Hamby knows what he is doing. He thinks Hamby can advise him.

He says "What kind of a lawyer is Short?" Then they get into a conversation, and he says, "Well, how about me? What is going to happen to me?"

Hamby says to him, "Well, I do not know what is going to happen to you, I do not know what you are charged with. What are you charged with? How can I help you if you do not tell me?"

"Well, I am charged with having Germany money."

Hamby said "Real German money?"

"Not real Germany money, it was real American money, but it came from Germany."

Hamby said, "How did you get it?"

"Well, my son gave it to me."

He gets into a discussion about that point. He has got to confide in somebody; he has to tell somebody what is in his heart.

It must come out.

1548 He said to Hamby: "My son gave me money he got in Germany."

He said, "How did he get in Germany, how did he get to Germany?"

"Went from Germany, that is all."

"What did he do when he got in Germany?"

Then the story comes out. Does that not strike you as being logical, being sensible? Does that not appeal to you as being the perfectly natural thing that did happen? Of course it does, but as I have said, how are you going to dispute Hirsch and Robe?

We come to what I consider to be one of the most important bits of evidence. That is the testimony of Zermer. Mind you, Hans has straightened out all difficulties that he might have had with the draft board, or Herbert had and Hans no longer has any worries on that score. Herbert is staying at his house.

Hans asks Zermer to get a room for Herbert. Why? He was scared. He also later on said, "I want to use your address so that Herbert who is going to travel around a lot can send mail 1549 to your address, then you bring it over to my house."

Ladies and gentlemen, supposing your boy, or a relative of yours went away on a perfectly innocent trip to Mexico; he went down there for a vacation; then he came back, came back to your house. He is a boy who has always stayed at home with you, always stayed at home.

Now, this boy says to you, "Mother, I am going to travel around a little bit," and it is perfectly innocent. You will say, "All right, son, drop me a line now and then." He would write you, write you at home, he would write to you at home. Why should you say or why should you have him write to some one else's home if it were a perfectly innocent thing, if the boy had just planned to go to Mexico, if he is going to take an innocent trip, travel around, would you go to a neighbor of yours, or some one living away and say, "Mrs. So and So, my boy is going away. He is going to write me in care of your house. Then you go ahead and bring the letters to me." Would you do such a thing if it was perfectly innocent? Can you conceive of any mother or father, if the purpose is innocent doing that?

1550 That to me speaks more eloquently than any testimony of Hamby, Norris, Hirsch, or Robe, or any of them. That is what defense counsel have been worried about throughout this trial, because that is the touchstone. That is a revealing light of that man's knowledge of the purpose of his son being in this country.

Now they point also to the time when the first negotiations had been made for the car. Let us see how this all matches up. The boy buys a car. Does he want a car for the purpose of taking his girl out as defense counsel wants you to believe? It was not for the purpose of taking his girl out because Hans Haupt told the purpose to Zermer. He did not say to Zermer that Herbert wanted to take his girl out riding in the car. No; they talked about the car. Then Hans said, "My boy is going to travel around a lot, travel around anyway in the car." That is the purpose of buying the car. The boy is going to travel around a lot. What is he going to do travelling around a lot? He is going to travel around with the companions who landed with him in the 1551 rubber boat from the German submarine. That is what he is going to do.

You recall Burger's testimony, do you not? Herbert was instructed to get a car for the group, and to find employment—no: to get information from the optical company and if necessary find employment to get it. I can just see that picture.

Mind you, these people were laying low for a while. Burger told you there was to be a meeting July 4. Herbert hit Chicago on June 19th. They were to lay low for a while. Nothing particularly to be done except the preparation, to get ready; to get ready. So Herbert comes home.

Now, then, he goes to the Simpson Optical Company. Hamby said that Hans told him he was going there to steal some plans. Burger told you that he was instructed to get some plans. To do it Herbert goes to the optical company to secure employment.

What was the mission that the saboteurs were supposed to have?

Each one had to have a front, of course. Of course, they 1552 had to have an air of respectability in this country, to carry out these things, to appear to be hard working people. That was necessary for the success of their venture.

Now, then, having negotiated that, getting the job, getting a car—this did not have to be a permanent job arrangement or anything like that. It was to establish a front only, work a few days, if necessary, go out and get the car, and plant the explosives. If necessary quit the job—after you get a front, sneak out of the place, but keep your front as long as you can.

Mind you, operations are not to begin at once. The preparations were now in state of being, in existence, and he told his father of the preparations.

Then the father, who said that he preferred Germany over America, fell in with the plan, this father who said if we ever got into a war he would crawl over to the enemy lines and give our position away, this father who sent his boy to the Bund Camp up in Michigan, this father who taught him to love Germany; this father who was imbued with the Nazi principle of "Ein volk ein reich" "once a German always a German." That is not the 1553 view expressed by our loyal Americans of German decent:

There is no room in this country for divided loyalty. There is room only for one loyalty and that is 100 percent loyalty to America. This man was 100 percent loyal to the present regime in Germany.

They tell you that "Perhaps he should not have made these statements, that we all some time or other have made statements, foolish statements."

Do you know of any person of your acquaintance who has said that, "rather than see my boy fight against Germany I will kill him myself." Did you ever hear any of your acquaintances say anything like that? Of course, some of these statements were made in 1937, 1938, and 1939 and 1940. Some times these statements projected themselves beyond the present to peer into the future, and that is what Hans did in those statements when he said, "in the event, if there is a war, if there is a war," mind you, "and if there is a war between Germany and America, then I will crawl over to the enemy lines."

How can you come to any other conclusion in the face of this evidence but that this man was imbued with the spirit of 1554 Germany, and that when he took his oath of citizenship and foreswore allegiance to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and especially the German Reich, that his heart was still with the "fatherland."

Throughout this argument the defense attorneys have stayed away from talking facts. They talked about Eggert. Did you hear Mr. Warnholtz say anything about $900 given to Mr. Eggert? Did you hear him say a word about it? He said Eggert was an honest man, but that Eggert was threatened with the concentration camp. Does that make sense? This man is an honest man, but he lied because he was threatened? If he lied he is not honest. You see the thing is inconsistent. The only thing defense attorney can be attempting to do is to avoid being forced into a position of saying the government witnesses were all liars and did not tell the truth. He contends on one hand, as you might say, that they told the truth, but on the other hand that they lied, because of threatened action.

Let me ask you a question: You have heard Eggert testify. Did Eggert say at any time that he was threatened with being sent to a concentration camp? In case you do not recall, I make 1555 the statement right now that he did not.

Was Zermer confused as to whether Hans Haupt was home when he first got there that night? In case you do not know, I say that he was not. Zermer's testimony was that when he got to the home of the Haupts that Mrs. Haupt was there and later on Hans and Herbert came in. You do not want to allow these things to confuse you. The only important thing in this case, the only important things are these. Did we—did we prove these overt acts which the court will submit to you by two witnesses? Have they told you that we did not prove the purchase of the automobile by two witnesses? No. Have they told you that we did not prove going to the Grunaus and the Kochs by two witnesses? No.

Have they told you that we did not prove the staying in the Haupt home on the days alleged in the indictment by two witnesses? No. That has been proven definitely.

Any one of those overt acts, if you find they have been committed, and they were proved by two witnesses, would authorize you to return a verdict of guilty, would authorize the return 1556 of a verdict of guilty?

There are going to be some overt acts which the Court is going to tell you are withdrawn. Let us not have any misunderstanding about this. It is important. These overt acts are not withdrawn from your consideration for all purposes. They are not withdrawn. You are entitled to consider the proof of those overt acts. You must consider the proof of those overt acts. They are not taken away from your consideration for all purposes.

The only thing is that those overt acts that the court says are withdrawn, are withdrawn as a basis authorizing conviction because there is not—I say frankly—there have not been two witnesses to that act. Such an act is the act that Zermer testified to. That does not mean that you are to forget Zermer's testimony. You have it and you should give it all the weight it is entitled to. You should do that. But you cannot say that act itself would authorize a verdict of guilty, because Zermer is the only witness to it. Let us see. In the purchase of the automobile you say to yourself, "Was the purchase of this automobile in furtherance of this treason?" Can you say to yourself it was?
1557 Let us look at Zermer's testimony to find out just the intent of this thing? You look at Zermer's testimony and you come to the conclusion that the man knew about his boy's activities and he wanted that car because the boy wanted to get around and he wanted to get this mail drop because they wanted it, they needed it. You can use that testimony of Zermer's as given in concluding the intent concerning that act, concerning the use for which that automobile was made. So nothing is withdrawn from your consideration in the sense you cannot consider it. Nothing at all.

There has been a lot of talk about "purpose" and all this and all of that. Mr. Warnholtz has the effontery to stand up before you and to tell you that if there had been a meeting at the Wergin home on Saturday night there is no one who could say anything about it. Erna Haupt could have said about that. Erna Haupt could have told you all about it. There is a question for you, why did she not? She could have told you all about that particular night but she did not, and why did she not? She could have told you about Sunday night. She did not. Why did she not?

1558 She could have told you why the car was purchased, whether it was because they had used Herbert's old car, but she did not. She could have also told you why they went to the optical company, but she did not. The opportunity was then and it is not now through the mouth of defense counsel.

There has been some mention made here of the life and liberty of this man. I do not know why counsel said that. I strongly suspect why, but let me say this to you, ladies and gentlemen: Your duty is only to determine the facts in this case and return a true verdict. You have nothing whatsoever to do with the punishment his Honor, Judge Barnes, may inflict in the event you find him guilty. That is his responsibility, not yours. It is up to him to decide what punishment may be given and you should not allow that for one minute to enter into your deliberations. The Court will instruct you that it is his duty, not yours. Your duty is clear cut. Your duty is great, to decide this with the impartiality of a neutral judge, as a person with common sense, as a person free from prejudice or free from sympathy, a person who realizes 1559 the dire consequences of his verdict or her verdict, either for the defendant or for the government. As a person who realizes that it is not good citizenship, it is not being a good juror to allow a man, guilty of crime, to escape because of misplaced sympathy. As a person who realizes that if he concludes beyond a reasonable doubt that this defendant is guilty, it is his duty—a duty in the stern face of danger—to find him guilty if he believes that he has been proved guilty.

It is your duty to America; it is your duty to the 130,000,000 people of this country if you believe him guilty to find him guilty. It is your duty under your oath, and it is your duty as a citizen, and it is your duty as an American.

Mr. Bertram has spoken of the two jewels of American life, freedom and justice. We have the jury system in this country, that is one of our bulwarks. We have also the protection thrown around a man accused of crime that he must be found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt and he is presumed to be innocent until he is proven guilty.

The COURT. Your time is up.

Mr. WOLL. May I close in two minutes?

1560 We must keep our democratic system. We must keep the principles that we love, and the only way we keep this is by following our duty as a jury, by following our oaths and obligations, to uphold the Constitution and the laws of this land.

The COURT. We will recess at this time, ladies and gentlemen, until ten o'clock tomorrow morning, at which time I will instruct you with respect to the law applicable to this case.

In the meantime do not discuss this case with anyone, or permit anyone to discuss it with you, and if anyone should attempt to communicate with you about the case report that fact at once to the Court.

Again I enjoin you to refrain from reading about the case until after you have completed your services as jurymen and women. Report here tomorrow at ten o'clock, please.

1561 IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS,
EASTERN DIVISION, AT CHICAGO

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge, and a Jury

Thursday, June 8, 1944, 10 o'clock a. m.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Mr. J. Albert Woll, United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, and Mr. Earle C. Hurley, and Mr. Richard G. Finn, Assistant United States District Attorneys for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, at Chicago, appeared for the United States of America; Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * *

1562 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had outside the presence and hearing of the Jury in the Court's Chambers:)

Mr. WOLL. We have two suggestions in regard to the instructions, if your Honor please.

Mr. FINN. They are with reference to number 55 and 57.

Mr. WOLL. The last sentence in 55, the first word of the last sentence we suggest it might be taken out, the word "criminal."

Mr. FINN. Criminal intent.

The COURT. I think that would be better to strike out the word

"criminal", on the fourth from the last line on 55, strike out the word "criminal".

Mr. Finn. The next one with reference to number 57. We would like to strike out, "the best" and "an index".

The Court. That may be better.

Mr. Finn. An index to his intent.

The Court. The word "criminal" is stricken out.

Mr. Bertram. In 59 the word "criminal" is stricken out?

The Court. 57. And the words "the best" is stricken out and the word "an" is substituted in the first and second lines.

1563 Now, sheet 1 I referred to, calling particular attention to the overt acts which are withdrawn, and the overt acts which are submitted will be attached to the indictment by clips in the form which I now indicated to you.

Now, is there any objection to the form of the verdict?

Mr. Finn. We have no objection to that.

Mr. Warnholtz. No objection to it, your Honor.

Mr. Bertram. If the court please, we would like to have the record show that we object to the refusal of all the instructions that the court may have refused; that we object to any and all modifications to the instructions that the court may have modified upon those that we have offered, and we would like to renew all our objections now so that we do not have to say anything when your Honor closes in the presence of the Jury about objection.

The Court. Very well.

Mr. Bertram. We renew the objection made heretofore with reference to all matters we have spoken about in the chambers.

Mr. Woll. I would like to get the record straight now on this particular thing. The other day we had a conference on 1564 instructions, and at that time you stated what objections you wanted to the instructions.

Mr. Bertram. Yes; and we renew all objections we have stated, and they are in the record, and all comments made to strike them.

Mr. Woll. The objection was made at the time the instructions were gone over and proposed.

Mr. Bertram. Our objections are now renewed, that is right, to everything that was said before. We want to have the benefit of what was said in the chambers. We do not want to have it in the presence of the Jury or make any statements that might be embarrassing.

The Court. Very well. That will be understood.

Mr. Woll. One other matter, if your Honor please. Yesterday, the Defense Attorneys did refer to the Hamby letter. I think that should go to the Jury. Now, Hamby related the letter was written, and you referred also to that. I think it was referred to.

The Court. Let it go to the Jury if it was referred to.

(Thereupon court and counsel returned to the courtroom and the following proceedings were had:)

The COURT. Bring in the Jury.

1565 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

The JURY. Good morning.

(Charge to Jury omitted. Printed side page. 80 ante.)

1601 Mr. FINN. Your Honor, may I respectfully call your attention to one here, I believe, overt act, number 16. I believe in reading the overt act number 16, you read the date with reference to the Warner Motor Sales, the second overt act with reference to the Warner Motor Sales, I believe the record shows you read it the 12th day of June rather than the 24th day of June.

The COURT. In the 16th overt act, which I read,

1602 it should read as follows:

"16. Said Hans Max Haupt on or about the 24th day of June 1942, while at the Warner Motor Sales, 958 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, Illinois, did—" and so forth.

Any other suggestion from either side. Will you swear the Marshals, Mr. Clerk?

(Thereupon the Clerk of the United States District Court administered the oath to the Marshals.)

The COURT. Have you assembled your exhibits, gentlemen?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The Defendant has; yes, your Honor.

The COURT. You may hand the exhibits to the Marshal. Now, those are the exhibits of all of your gentlemen?

Mr. FINN. That is correct.

The COURT. Now, I understand that this is the proper time for the discharge of the two alternate jurors. Is that the understanding of counsel for both sides?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right, that is our understanding.

The COURT. I understand both counsel now desire the two alternates discharged.

Mr. WOLL. Correct, if your Honor please; yes.

1603 The COURT. And you so understand?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. The alternate jurors may now be discharged from further consideration of this case with thanks of the court.

The remaining twelve of you may depart with the Marshals to consider your verdict.

(Thereupon the Jury retired to the jury room to consider their verdict at 11:22 A. M. Thursday, June 8, 1944.)

The COURT. I am sending these instructions into the jury room together with the indictment and that one page which I made reference to by number.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. All right, your Honor.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

Which were all the proceedings had in the above-entitled cause including opening statements, arguments of counsel, instructions, and all other proceedings in the above entitled cause to date.

* * * * *

1604 (On June 8, 1944, at the hour of approximately 4:50 o'clock P. M., after the jury had retired to deliberate upon the verdict and before a return thereof, the following proceedings were had in chambers:)

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. There was a point I wanted to take up in respect to certain instructions. I refer particularly to instructions 37 and 53 and 54. In reading these instructions I would suggest that as far as I can digest them, that instruction 37 can never apply if instructions 53 and 54 are also existing instructions in this matter. Instruction 37 reads: a

"If you are not satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, that this defendant's intention and purpose in acting as he did, that it was evil, that is, if you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to aid and comfort the enemies of the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty. If you believe the defendant's intention in doing what he did 1605 from the period of June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, was not in any way to injure the United States, but merely to assist his son, Herbert Haupt, as an individual, as distinguished from assisting him in his purpose, if such existed, of aiding the German Reich, or of injuring the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty."

With that instruction the defense is entirely in harmony, but if we take instructions 53 and 54 as I construe them it would read about like this—I am not quoting from the instruction—if the defendant at all knew about the mission of his son then whatever he did with reference to any one of the overt acts must be construed as having been done with the intention of injuring the United States.

If that is true, if my construction is as I believe, true, then instruction 37 is unnecessary. It would then be quite immaterial whether a man is a father or is a relative or is a friend, or even a total stranger. A total stranger or friend or relative who has no knowledge of what is called in this case "the enemy mission" can of course never be found guilty. Hence, in such case it would not be necessary to put that in the instruction.

1606 If I do not know that I deal with an enemy how can I ever be found guilty?

The COURT. What is it you want? What is your motion?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. To have instructions 53 and 54 either completely eliminated or modified.

The COURT. Motion denied. Never in the thirteen years that I have been here have I given counsel the opportunity to make suggestions and objections to instructions that I have given them in this case.

I asked counsel for both sides for your instructions days ago. After your instructions came in I prepared a form of instructions which I handed to you days ago, and I took your suggestions. We spent from ten o'clock until approximately one o'clock considering those instructions or suggestions before the arguments began as well as at other times.

We have considered the instructions and we have done the best we can. The jury is instructed and your motion is denied.

I think the instructions are as clear as we can make them for the jury. If the jury does not understand them it will be because the jury cannot understand instructions in a treason case.

1607 Mr. WOLF. I would ask permission to point out how long the jury has now been deliberating.

The COURT. They have been deliberating since 11:28 and it is now 4:55.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Your Honor, I may state—the motion is denied—I raised the same objection at the time we were discussing it. I maintain that instructions 53 and 54 completely violate——

The COURT. It would just confuse the jury by sending in another instruction and emphasize something all out of proportion. No matter how much we tell them about the instruction or what has been said, they could never refrain from overemphasizing what we would now send to them.

Mr. BERTRAM. May we say we pointed out the very same objections to your Honor?

The COURT. Yes; they have all been pointed out and all these points have been raised. I do not think we have to take any more time on that.

Mr. BERTRAM. All right.

(Whereupon counsel withdrew from chambers:)

1608 In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois Eastern Division, at Chicago

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT

Before Hon. JOHN P. BARNES, Judge and a Jury

Friday, June 9, 1944, 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Parties met pursuant to an adjournment.

Counsel present: Messrs. J. Albert Woll, Earle C. Hurley, Richard G. Finn, appeared for the United States of America. Messrs. Paul A. F. Warnholtz, Frederick J. Bertram, appeared for the Defendant.

* * * * * *

1609 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the Court's Chambers.)

The COURT. A few minutes before I sent for you gentlemen, I guess I sent for you about a quarter of ten, half past nine I received this communication from the foreman of the jury:

"JUNE 9, 1944.

"Judge BARNES:

"May it please the Co rt to grant the request of the jury that the testimony of Messrs. S ort, Hirsch, and Robe be read to them at this time.

"JOSEPH M. CALLNER, Foreman."

Short, I don't know who he is.

Mr. FINN. Ben Short.

The COURT. Oh, Ben Short; that is right, Short.

Mr. FINN. And Hirsch and Robe.

The COURT. Hirsch and Robe, what are your ideas in respect to that request, gentlemen? How do you feel about it, Mr. Warnholtz?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well. May I ask this, your Honor; is it customary to send in some testimony——

The COURT. No; what would happen, they would be put in the jury box and then I take it the best way to present it would 1610 be for counsel for the party who presented the witness, to read the direct examination and for his opponent to read the cross-examination. That would be the best way to present it, and then the testimony of Messrs. Short, Hirsch, and Robe would be read to them and having been read to them then they would retire.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Well, personally your Honor, I do not favor that very much.

The COURT. How do you feel about it?

Mr. WOLL. What do you say Mr. Warnholtz?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I do not favor it very much.

Mr. WOLL. Well, I will be frank with the Court. I think if the defense object to it it might be dangerous to do it aside from the question——

The COURT. Oh, I don't believe so. I think here is a jury we assume, twelve reasonable people trying to perform their duty to the best of their ability. Now they sat there—we started to get the jury on Monday and this is the third week. There were quite a number of witnesses and they have labored with this case for nearly twenty-four hours and they say, "Now we would like to hear read to us the testimony of Messrs. Short, Hirsch, and Kobe."

Now, we ought to forget the fact we lawyers do so many unreasonable things—I don't know why we do—but the jury, they are reasonable people and they say, we are trying to decide this case and let us hear the testimony of these three men. I can't see any good reason why that shouldn't be.

1611

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I will state my reason. This testimony goes to the intention—I still feel, as I did yesterday when I came in here, when I made an objection the other day that instructions 53 and 54 cancelled out instruction number 37.

The COURT. You are just getting off altogether from this subject. Altogether.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. It is our contention, your Honor——

The COURT. You are getting off onto another subject. It is just a question, really, in fairness to these people that have given almost three weeks of their time to try this case. They make what to anybody on the street would seem to be a reasonable request. That is the way I feel about it. I do think if it is read to them they should be cautioned, we should say to them now, you must bear in mind that you are hearing this testimony for the second time at your request. You are hearing it for the second time, you should exercise caution to see that you do not give it more weight than the testimony of other witnesses. Bear in mind that you are hearing it the second time, and consider it just as though you heard the witnesses, together with all other testimony. With that instruction, I can't see any reason in the world why they should not hear the evidence if you want to have a fair trial. Mr. Short, what did he say? And the witness Hirsch, I don't remember exactly.

1612

Mr. WOLL. Hirsch said he was upset.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. He didn't just say that on that question? Yes; that is right.

The COURT. I haven't any doubt about it.

Mr. WOLL. Most certainly I don't have any objection to any action on the part of your Honor. I feel as you do that this case is an important case and has been an expensive case and there should be a determination one way or the other.

The COURT. I do not care so much about the expense, but we shouldn't waste our time, particularly in these times. We must assume here are twelve people trying to do their duty to the very best of their ability and they make, what seems to be a reasonable request and to anybody that wasn't a lawyer, that would seem a most reasonable request, and merely because we are lawyers 1613 why should it seem unreasonable. I don't see it. I don't know what will happen; which side will benefit. Frankly, I don't care.

Mr. BERRYAM. We pointed out those particular instructions in connection thereto, your Honor, how we felt as to the competency.

The COURT. I don't see how the instructions on the testimony of these three witnesses——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. The intention question I say on these instructions——

The COURT. I don't think you are talking to the point at all. Of course, you represent the defendant. You represent the defendant. Mr. Short certainly didn't say anything upon which the government——

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No; they have Hirsch and Robe. Both of them testified to an alleged confession that was made in all respect——

The COURT. Well, my disposition is to read it to them. Now, if I make up my mind it should be read—you presented Mr. Short.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is right, your Honor.

The COURT. And the government presented Hirsch and Robe.

Mr. HURLEY. That is right.

1614 The COURT. Now, do you want to follow in this to the extent of reading the direct examination of Mr. Short and the cross-examination of the other folk or do you want to take no part in it? It makes no difference to me.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would rather not. That would be acquiescence in it. I don't know those three instructions. I can only repeat that once more again——

Mr. WOLL. I suggest the Court read it.

The COURT. No; I don't want to read it. I will let the reporter read it. No; I don't think you waive it. In fact, I will make a ruling and I will say the reading is done by the direction of the Court.

Mr. HURLEY. That wouldn't be a waiver. I will agree as far as that is concerned to his saving the point in having it read to the jury at all.

The COURT. You are objecting to it being read? In fact I will direct it. I think that would be fair. I don't want you to waive your point. You have a responsibility. I think the request of the jury is reasonable. If you don't feel right about it, complying with it, I think I will direct you to read the direct examination of the witness the defendant produced, then the government 1615 read the direct examination of the witnesses they produced and the cross-examination of the defendant's witness and vice versa and that will be the directions of the Court. I understand you will do that without any further protest. I don't want any scene in here.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. No; I don't make scenes, after saving an objection and exception.

The COURT. You don't think it should be done and I think it should.

Mr. WOLL. Would your Honor consider a motion that I would like to make that perhaps prior to that time we give the jury an instruction along the line in the Allen case, 164 U. S. 492.

The COURT. No. I won't give that instruction. I won't give that instruction.

Mr. WOLL. I might say that has been approved in numerous decisions. We have five or six or seven decisions on that point.

The COURT. No; I won't give it. I think I used it as frequently as anybody, but I won't give it in this case.

If I get your transcript—now wait, Miss Green bring your book here. I want to get an instruction.

1616 Mr. WOLL. May I make a suggestion as to the instruction you suggested might not be given and the instruction be finally wound up by saying that this is not considered, they should not arrive at their verdict, they should consider all the evidence in the case.

The COURT. I think they should be cautioned not to give undue weight to this evidence.

Mr. WOLL. I don't want anything said that would indicate there was such and such or was not important.

The COURT. Take this, Miss Green and write it up for me.

"Pursuant to the written request of the jury through your foreman there has been read to you a transcript of the testimony of the witnesses Short, Hirsch, and Robe. The jury are cautioned to bear in mind that they have now heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice while they have heard the testimony of the other witnesses only once, and that they shall not allow the fact that they have heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice to cause them to give undue importance or weight to it. The jury should, on the other hand, consider the testimony of these three witnesses, and that of each of them, as though they had 1617 heard it but once and consider it together with all the other evidence in the case."

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May the record show, your Honor, at this moment, practically almost to the minute the jury has been deliberating, uninterruptedly for twenty-four hours.

The COURT. Oh, yes; but——

Mr. WOLL. They have been interrupted, of course, for luncheon, and dinner and breakfast this morning.

Mr. BERTRAM. Not by sleep, though.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Not by sleep. I think one of the ladies is at least about 65 years old or so.

The COURT. Well, they all appear to be in good condition. This request was made of me nearly two hours ago and the delay was necessitated by reason of the fact that I had to call counsel and the reporter and then my ten o'clock motions interrupted which took my attention for a period of about what, one hour?

Mr. HURLEY. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. You want to take Short first?

The COURT. I think we will take them in the order the jury asked for them. Short first, Hirsch, then Robe.

1618 Mr. HURLEY. I have Short, Hirsch, and Robe's testimony here.

Mr. WOLL. Do you want a copy of Mr. Short's?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. You mean just now?

The COURT. Have both sides been over this record to see if there is anything wrong with it? I think that is all right.

Mr. FINN. Omit this taken outside the presence of the jury.

The COURT. Omit from 1133 over to where?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. 1136.

The COURT. 1133 to 1136. Omit those pages, omit 1133 to 1136.

Mr. FINN. Down to where Mr. Warnholtz starts.

The COURT. Yes.

Mr. BERTRAM. Did you say omit something?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes; what happened in chambers.

The COURT. Yes; all that happened in the chambers. Now where is the other witness?

Mr. WOLL. Hirsch is the next one in order and that starts at page 659. The only thing is the word "won" instead of "son."

The COURT. Where is that?

Mr. HURLEY. Page 665.

The COURT. Oh, that is only a typographical error.

1619 Mr. HURLEY. Yes.

Mr. WOLL. June 20th instead of July 20th, but that is corrected later.

The COURT. Yes; that should be June 20th instead of July 20th.

Mr. WOLL. 666 in connection with that over here at the end of the paragraph, page 666.

The COURT. The British Blockade. I think that is right, "ran through". It is "ran through the blockade" and changed to "of the" running of the British Blockade" on page 667 and "memorandum" instead of "memoranda" on page 672. Now, where is Robe?

Mr. WOLL. Hirsch is at 673, and I think it is short also. Now, at the end of Mr. Hirsch's testimony there is colloquy, I suppose.

The COURT. What page is that?

Mr. WOLL. 672, and then it says Mr. Finn: "All right, that is all."

Mr. Warnholtz says "That is all".

Mr. Bertram says: "I want to make a motion to exclude the last witness' testimony," and then Mr. Bertram says:

"If the Court please, I want to exclude all of the testimony of the last witness regarding statements of the defendant Hans Max Haupt."

1620 Then the Court says: "On what theory?" and then Mr. Bertram says: "As being made, not in open Court, as required by the Constitution," and then the Court says: "What"?

The COURT. What page is that on?

Mr. WOLL. 672.

The COURT. No, don't read the motion.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

The COURT. Well, let us go ahead, gentlemen.

Mr. WOLL. Here is another copy of that one, Hirsch and Robe.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court room outside the hearing and presence of the jury:)

The COURT. Are you ready, gentlemen?

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. Bring in the defendant. Have the defendant brought in.

Mr. WOLL. I think the defense attorney should be with the defendant at this time.

The COURT. Oh, that 's all right. Let him sit back there. Sit right there with him. Bring in the jury, Mr. Marshal. Tell the jury to get ready to come in. Bring in the jury.

1621 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the courtroom in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

The COURT. Good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

The JURY. Good morning.

The COURT. I received some time ago, about 9:30 I think it was this morning, a communication from you which reads as follows:

"JUNE 9, 1944.

"Judge BARNES:

"May it please the court to grant the request of the jury that the testimony of Messrs. Short, Hirsch, and Robe be read to them at this time.

JOSEPH M. CALLNER, Foreman."

The COURT. That request is granted and counsel will now, by the Court's direction read to you the testimony of the three witnesses and will you read the testimony, the direct testimony of Mr. Short, Mr. Warnholtz, please?

(Thereupon the direct testimony of Mr. Short was read by Mr. Warnholtz, as follows:)

A. I know him, yes; to speak to him. Know who he is, and talk to him.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom now?

A. I don't think I could identify him.

Q. You couldn't identify him, you say?

A. I don't think I could out of all these gentlemen here. I don't know whether I could or not.

Q. When and where did you see or meet Hans Max Haupt first?

A. In July 1929, I think, or 1939, with you.

Q. I call your attention to July the 29th, in the year 1942, and will ask you if on that day you had a conversation with Hans Max Haupt?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And where was that, Mr. Short?

A. County Jail.

Q. Cook County Jail?

A. Cook County Jail; yes, sir.

1624 Q. And where within the County Jail did you see Hans Max Haupt at that time?

Q. Who was present at the time?

A. You were.

Q. I was with you at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember a conversation which you had with the Desk Clerk when we first arrived at the County Jail?

A. Some of it I do.

Mr. WOLL. I object to a conversation with a Desk Clerk, if your Honor please.

The COURT. He answered your question, he said, part of it.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. What was that conversation?

Mr. WOLL. Was it a conversation, if your Honor please?

The COURT. Sustained.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Did you have a conversation with Hans Max Haupt?

A. I did.

Q. And who was present at that time?

A. You were.

1625 Q. On that particular day, on the 29th day of July 1942?

A. That is the day; yes.

Q. What do you remember that occurred during that conversation and what was said?

Mr. Woll. I object.

The Witness. I beg your pardon. I don't understand you.

Mr. Warnholtz. I would like to know the grounds of your objection.

The Court. Step in the jury room, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had in the court-room in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By Mr. Warnholtz:

Q. Mr. Short, will you kindly state about how long the conversation lasted between yourself and Mr. Haupt and Mr. Haupt and myself, on the 29th day of July 1942, in the Cook County Jail: approximately how long?

A. I would say it was about one session of the jail, maybe a couple of hours.

Q. Did you during that time form an opinion based on your observation at that time as to whether or not Hans Haupt was sane or insane?

1626 A. At that time I was positive he was insane, the way he acted and talked.

Q. That was your opinion?

A. At that time.

Mr. Warnholtz. That is all.

The Witness. Thank you.

The Court. Now Mr. Woll you read the cross examination.

Cross-examination by Mr. Woll:

Q. Mr. Short, you are associated in the defense of Hans Haupt, or were at the first trial, were you not?

A. At the first trial, I was associated with Mr. Warnholtz.

Q. Were you an attorney of record on that first trial?

A. I am not certain that I was. I usually do file an appearance.

Q. But you did participate in the trial?

A. Yes; I participated in it; sure.

Q. And you examined witnesses also?

A. And examined witnesses and made an alleged argument to the jury.

Q. Mr. Short, did you file any petition in court asking that Hans Haupt's sanity be adjudicated?

Mr. Warnholtz. I object, if your Honor please.

1627 The Court. Overruled.

The Witness. I don't think I did.

By Mr. Woll:

Q. Did you at the time of the trial file any motion before the presiding judge, asking that an inquiry be made as to the sanity of Hans Haupt?

A. Mr. Warnholtz took care of all that. I don't think I did.
Q. Do you know whether any such petition was filed?
A. No, I don't. It was one case I bowed to him.
Q. Your best recollection is no petition was filed?
A. My best recollection.
Q. But you assisted Mr. Warnholtz in the trial of the case?
A. That is all.
Q. Mr. Short, without going through the conversation; I don't want you to do that; can you remember whether or not the conversation you had at that time was mostly in German?
A. No, I don't speak German. Mr. Warnholtz and Mr. Haupt talked in German, sure; yes.
Q. And what portion of that conversation, the time of that conversation, was devoted to talking in German?
A. Well, it is a long time, Brother, I don't recollect
1628 exactly. It was quite a bit, because Mr. Warnholtz talked in German and Mr. Haupt talked in German. All I could do was sit there most of the time.
Q. Of course, all the talking in German, you didn't understand that, did you?
A. No; I didn't know what they were saying.
Q. You don't recognize this man, now, do you?
A. No, I imagine, of course, from my experience, he is over there on that side of the table.
Q. You imagine that?
A. If I met him out in the hall, I wouldn't know him.
Mr. WOLL. I think that is all, Mr. Short.
The WITNESS. Thank you.
The COURT. Now Mr. Warnholtz the redirect.

Redirect examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Short, you saw Mr. Haupt for three weeks every day in court, did you not?
A. Yes. If it was three weeks the trial lasted, I did.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Yes. That is all. Thank you.
The WITNESS. Thank you.
1629 The COURT. Now, will you read the testimony of Mr. Hirsch, Mr. Woll, the direct testimony of Mr. Hirsch?
(Thereupon the direct testimony of Mr. Hirsch was read by Mr. Woll, as follows:)

EARL HIRSCH, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?
A. Earl Hirsch.

Q. You have been sworn, have you?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Hirsch?
A. At the present time?
Q. Yes.
A. I am in the manufacturing business of men's clothing, in Atlanta, Georgia.
Q. Where do you live at the present time?
A. Down in Atlanta, Georgia.
Q. Now, calling your attention to the year 1942, were you a member of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?
1630 A. Yes, I was.
Q. How long had you been an agent for the the FBI?
A. Since October 1933.
Q. When did you sever your connections with the Federal Bureau of Investigation?
A. January 10, 1944.
Q. Calling your attention to the morning of the 27th day of June 1942, at approximately 9:00 o'clock, can you tell us where you were?
A. Yes; I was parked on the corner of Fremont Street and Webster Street, here in Chicago.
Q. And with whom were you at that time?
A. At that time there were several agents in the car in which I was, and we also had several other cars in the close vicinity.
Q. Now, will you tell us what you observed on that occasion?
A. At a few minutes past nine o'clock on the morning of June 27th, we received radio information from another agent who was watching the Haupt home, that Herbert Haupt was leaving his home, and approximately eight minutes past nine we saw Haupt turn the corner on Fremont down to Webster. At that time, he was taken in custody by myself and other agents.
Q. Was he on foot or in an automobile?
1631 A. No; he was in a car.
Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 3 for identification, and ask you if you can tell us who that is?
A. That is a photograph of Herbert Haupt.
Q. Now, then, was he taken to the Federal Bureau of Investigation?
A. Immediately.
Q. And did you remain with him during that day and for what period of time afterwards?
A. Yes; practically I was with him almost constantly from that time on until he arrived in Washington for the military trial.
Q. Did you bring him down to Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you remain there during the military trial?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when he was taken to the Federal Bureau of Investigation that morning, can you tell us whether anything was taken from him?

A. Yes; there were several things on his person that I took from him at that time.

Q. I will show you Government's Exhibit 52 for identification, being a Selective Service Registration Card, Government's 1632 Exhibit 50 for identification, a gold watch; Government's Exhibit 21 for identification, being a Social Security Card, and Government's Exhibit 19 for identification, a ring, and ask you if you have ever seen these before?

A. This is a ring that I took from Herbie Haupt at the time of his arrest. This is a Social Security Card that I also took and my initials are there on the back.

Q. Whose initials are they?

A. Right in the office at the time I took it from him, this is his registration card.

Q. You say, "This." Will you refer to the exhibit, is that Government's Exhibit 52?

A. That is correct, Government's Exhibit 52, I took from Herbie Haupt in the office, and put my initials and the date on the back of it.

This is the watch that I took from Herbie Haupt, except the crystal is now broken.

Q. You didn't break it, did you?

A. No.

Mr. FINN. All right.

Q. Now, Mr. Hirsch, when did you get back from Washington?

A. July 22, 1942.

Q. Now, calling your attention to the time thereafter
1633 were you engaged in the investigation of this Haupt trial here in Chicago?

A. I was.

Q. Calling your attention to the morning of August 5, 1942, were you in the office that morning?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you assigned, after a telephone call from the Marshal, were you assigned to go over and interview Mr. Hans Max Haupt in the Marshal's office?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you go over there alone or with someone else?

A. No; I went over with Special Agent P. D. Robe.

Q. Will you tell us what the time was when you arrived at the Marshal's office?

A. It was approximately fifteen minutes to twelve.

Q. Now, when you got there, just what did you do, and whom did you see?

A. Well, I went to see the Marshal, because Al Johnson, the agent in charge of the Chicago office, told me——

Mr. Bertram. Objection. The explanation of the witness——

By Mr. Finn.

Q. Just tell us, whom did you see?

A. I went to see the Marshal; Marshal McDonald.

Q. Then after that, what happened?

1634 A. He told me that Hans Haupt——

Mr. Warnholtz. Objected to.

Mr. Finn. Leave out the conversation.

The Court. Sustained.

By Mr. Finn:

Q. What did you do?

A. Thereafter went in to talk to Hans Haupt.

Q. Now, where did this conversation take place?

A. In the private room in the Marshal's office.

Q. And who was present at the time the conversation took place?

A. Special Agent Robe.

Q. And yourself and who else?

A. Hans Haupt, the three of us.

Q. Now, will you tell us just what was said on that occasion?

Mr. Bertram. If the Court please, I will object to the conversation had with the defendant outside of court.

Mr. Finn. Outside of what?

Mr. Bertram. Outside of court while he was in custody.

The Court. Overruled.

By Mr. Finn:

Q. Will you tell us just what was said on that occasion?

A. I introduced myself to Hans Haupt, showed him
1635 the credentials I had, and told him that I understood that he wanted to see an agent of the FBI. The three of us then seated ourselves and Hans Haupt said, "That he told me Wergin and his wife were responsible for his son's condition, that is, being apprehended, but he said, he was very mad at them, and wanted to testify against them in court."

Mr. Bertram. I object.

Mr. Finn. Strike that out and start over again, if we may.

The Court. I said and he said, if you will, please.

Mr. FINN. If you will, please, let us have what he said and what you said, the best you can remember.

The WITNESS. Do you want me to start?

Mr. FINN. If you will, please.

The WITNESS. When I walked into the room I introduced myself to Hans Haupt. Showed him the credentials. The three of us, Special Agent Robe, Hans Haupt, and myself sat down in chairs in the private room. Hans Haupt said, "That he was very mad at Otto Wergin and his wife, because he blamed the predicament of his son on them, and he wanted to testify in court against them."

Mr. FINN. Yes.

The WITNESS (continuing). He then said that on 1636 Saturday night, July 20th, that his wife Erna Haupt, himself, and Herbert Haupt went over to the Wergin home on South Wood Street, and at that time in the presence of all present, Herbie Haupt told a complete story of his trip to Mexico. How he contacted the German Consul there and how he obtained a passage to Japan, and in Japan they were met by the German and Japanese Consul; thereafter they ran through the British Blockade on a boat and landed in France. Hans Haupt then said Herbie Haupt related that he was in an Intelligence School. He didn't exactly specify just what it was. He said an Intelligence School, and that he had a huge sum of money to use in connection with that over here.

Hans Haupt then said Otto Wergin said he wasn't a dummy and that he knew the mission Herbie Haupt was on. He also said he served in a similar capacity during the last World War——

Mr. FINN. He said this to you?

The WITNESS. That is, Wergin served in a similar capacity in the last World War in Egypt——

Q. Are you relating what Hans Haupt told you Wergin said on that occasion?

A. Exactly.

Mr. FINN. Go ahead.

1637 The WITNESS. Hans Haupt then said that Wergin offered his services to Herbie Haupt in his activities in this country, because he could use some of the money Herbie Haupt had.

Q. Now, was there any further conversation at that time?

A. Yes. Hans Haupt then related on Friday night June 19th, he and his wife went over to the Froehling home and while at the Froehling home, Herbie Haupt related the story in the presence of the Froehlings and the Haupts about his trip to Mexico and Japan and the running of the British Blockade to France, and his being enlisted in some type of German Government, and the Intelligence School, and his return to the United States on a German submarine.

Q. Now, do you recall any further conversation?

A. Yes. Hans Haupt further said that on Sunday night, June 21, the Wergins and the Haupts went over to the Froehling home again, they only stayed a short while, but during the stay in the Froehling home, Herbie Haupt again discussed his activities, that is, his trip to Japan and Germany, the Intelligence School, then back to the United States on a German submarine. However, they became a little afraid that the visitors, the people in 1638 the building, might overhear them, and that the Wergins and the Haupts left the Froehling home and went over to the Haupt home, and again Herbie Haupt discussed his story and his Intelligence School attendance with them, and Hans Haupt said that it was for this reason, that is because the Wergins—Otto Wergin and his wife were so insistent on Herbie going forward with these plans, he wanted to testify against him in court.

Q. Was there anything further stated on that conversation, as you recall?

A. Yes. Hans Haupt related that on Saturday night, June 27th, in his home on Fremont Street, that the Froehlings and Wergins and themselves, that is, Erna and Hans Haupt, were in their residence, and because Herbie had not shown up all day, they became rather fearful something had happened to him, and at that time they all discussed on that date in the event something had happened, they decided if anything had happened to Herbie, or if they were questioned, they would all tell the same story, that they knew nothing about his activities, except the fact he had gone to Mexico.

Q. Now, have you related the substance of all of the conversations that took place that day?

1639 A. Yes.

Mr. FINN. You may cross-examine.

The COURT. Now, Mr. Warnholtz, you may read the cross-examination.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. You say, Mr. Hirsch, that this conversation took place at the beginning of the——

Mr. FINN. Excuse me just a minute.

Q. Do you see Hans Haupt in the courtroom here?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you point him out, please?

A. There he is over there.

Mr. FINN. Indicating the defendant Hans Max Haupt.

By Mr. WARNHOLTZ.

Q. You said this took place at about a quarter to twelve, August 5, 1942?

A. Approximately a quarter of twelve; that is right.

Q. Do you know whether or not Hans Haupt had been already before the United States Commissioner Walker at that time?

A. It was my understanding he had been arr*ai*n*g*ed July 21st, 1942.

Q. And was he arraigned again on that day, do you know, on August 5th?

1640 A. I understood he was to be arraigned at 2 o'clock on that afternoon.

Q. At 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know whether or not he had retained counsel by the time you talked to him?

A. That was not my business, Mr. Warnholtz.

Q. I am asking you, did you ask him if he retained counsel?

A. My recollection is that Hans Haupt said he did not want counsel, because he wanted to testify.

Q. Are you a lawyer, Mr. Hirsch; had you ever studied law?

A. Yes.

Q. The other gentleman who was present with you, what is his name?

A. Robe.

Q. Has he ever studied law?

A. You will have to ask him.

Q. You do not know?

A. No.

Q. When you spoke about Hans relating this, did he volunteer all of that, or did you ask him?

A. When he first started off, he volunteered.

Q. And later on, he didn't relate it, but answered your questions; right?

1641 A. That is right.

Q. Did you ask him?

A. I asked him questions.

Q. Did you have any stenographer present?

A. No.

Q. You took down this conversation.

A. No; I took my own notes.

Q. Mr. Robe also took notes?

A. That I can't tell you. I took notes for myself.

Q. Who gave you the message at the Bankers Building, the Headquarters; for you to go to the Marshal's office?

A. A. H. Johnson.

Q. That was the Special Agent in charge; is that right?
A. At that time that is correct.
Q. You returned from Washington July 22, 1942?
A. That is right.
Q. By that time had the military trial been had already in Washington?
A. It was in progress and almost over.
Q. When you talked to Hans Haupt, did you at that time believe you were talking to a sane or insane person?
A. You want my opinion?
A. Yes.
A. I would say that Hans Haupt was upset.
1642 Q. Had you at that time heard he tried to commit suicide prior to that date?
A. No; I had just returned from Washington.
Q. Mr. Hirsh, when you arrested Herbert Haupt on the morning of June 27th, was he alone in his car?
A. Yes, he was.
Q. You had also followed him the day preceding, had you not, on Friday, June 26th?
A. I personally didn't.
Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Thank you kindly.
Mr. FINN. Pardon me, one more question.
Mr. WOLL. Now I will read the redirect examination.

Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Did you make a memorandum immediately after the conversation, of the conversation that took place?
A. With Hans Haupt?
Q. Yes.
A. At the time I was talking to him I took notes.
1643 Mr. WOLL. Shall I proceed with the direct examination of Mr. Robe?
The COURT. Yes; if you please.

PENNEL V. ROBE, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, after having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you state your name, please?
A. Pennel V. Robe.
Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Robe?
A. I am a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.
Q. How long have you been a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Since September 1940.

Q. Calling your attention to August of 1942, were you assigned to the Chicago office at that time?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. And in the course of your duties, were you assigned to a portion of the investigation in the Haupt case?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

1644 Q. Now calling your attention specifically to the morning of August 5, 1942, did you go anywhere with Agent Hirsh at that time?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Where did you go?

A. I went to the office of the United States Marshal, in Chicago.

Q. Who gave you orders to go with Mr. Hirsh?

A. The Special Agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. What was his name?

A. A. H. Johnson.

Q. Now, will you tell us where you went when you first got there?

A. We went immediately to the office of Mr. McDonald the United States Marshal.

Q. And thereafter, did you interview, or were you present at an interview with Mr. Hans Max Haupt at the time in this case?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Can you point out Mr. Haupt in the courtroom?

A. Yes, sir. He is the gentleman there at the end, in the dark suit.

Mr. FINN. Indicating the defendant Hans Max Haupt.

Q. Now, where did this interview take place?

1645 A. In the private room of the United States Marshal's office.

Q. And who was present at the time?

A. Former Special Agent, Earl Hirsh.

Q. And who else?

A. And myself and Mr. Haupt.

A. All right. Will you tell us just what was said by the various parties on that occasion?

Mr. BERTRAM. If the Court please, I want to make the same objection on the same grounds as made to the previous testimony of the Witness Hirsh.

The COURT. Overruled.

By Mr. FINN:

Q. Will you tell us what was said on that occasion, Mr. Robe?

A. Mr. Haupt said he wished to talk about Mr. and Mrs. Wergin, that they were just as involved in this case as he was. He stated that on June 20, 1942, Mr. Haupt, Herbert Haupt, and Erna Haupt visited at the Wergin home on South Wood Street. At that time Herbert Haupt went over the entire story concerning his trip to Japan, then to Germany. He also told of his return to this country by submarine. Mr. Haupt said that Herbert Haupt left the impression that he had attended an Intelligence School in Germany. Mr. Wergin then replied——

1646 Q. Are you saying what Mr. Haupt told you?

A. Mr. Haupt told us. Mr. Haupt then said Wergin told Herbert that he had served in a similar capacity in the First World War, so that he was no dummy, and that if Herbert needed help, he should call on him. Mr. Haupt said that Herbert also mentioned having a large sum of money, the amount was not specified.

Herbert Haupt said that his duties in this country was that of a contact man. Mr. Haupt then said that he blamed Mr. and Mrs. Wergin for the predicament that he was in, and he blamed this on the fact of the influence that Mr. Wergin exerted over Herbert at that meeting on Saturday, June 20th.

He said that Herbert also related the same story in the Froehling home on June 19th.

Q. What did he say with reference to that meeting?

A. He said that Herbert told a complete story of his trip to Germany and return by submarine at the Froehling home at dinner time, and that Mr. and Mrs. Froehling also knew of Herbert's trip.

Q. Now, was there anything further said, anything else said on that occasion?

A. Mr. Haupt said that one June 27th, Mr. and Mrs. Wergin were again in the Haupt home, at 2234 North Fremont 1647 Street, and at that time Mr. and Mrs. Froehling, Mr. and Mrs. Haupt, Mr. and Mrs. Wergin all decided if anybody made any inquiry as to why Herbert was in this country, that their answer, all their answers would be, that they did not know.

Q. Anything further that you recollect?

A. Not that I can recall.

Mr. FINN. You may cross-examine.

Mr. BERTRAM. I wish to make a motion to exclude all the testimony of this witness on the grounds heretofore stated, your Honor.

The COURT. Denied. Now, Mr. Warnholtz, please read the cross-examination.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Robe, have you ever studied law?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you admitted to the Bar in any state?
A. In this state?
Q. Any state?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Before you went over to the marshal's office with whom did you talk in your office, in the FBI headquarters; who told you to go there?
1648 A. I talked with Special Agent Hirsch.
Q. What did he tell you?
A. He told me that I was to accompany him to the United States Marshal's office.
Q. When you talked to Hans Haupt in the marshal's office, did you suggest to Mr. Haupt he should consult an attorney of his own before he talked?
A. No, sir. He asked us——
Q. I am asking you did you suggest that; yes or no?
A. No, sir.
Q. He did not have an attorney with him at the time, did he?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Hirsch ever studied law?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know whether or not Hans Haupt had an attorney up to that time?
A. No, sir; I do not.
Q. Mr. Robe, you stated that Hans told you at that time in the marshal's office that he wished to talk to you; then he started off talking. Is that right?
A. When we first went into the room we asked him what he wished to talk about.
Q. Then he started to tell you a story?
1649 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you ask him from date to date? Did you suggest dates to him. Did he tell you the story?
A. He told us the story.
Q. He gave you dates as you gave them just now?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It was a story that he told and it was not a matter of him replying to your questions, was it? Was it one of the two?
A. He was asked questions; certainly.
Q. So you did ask him questions?
A. Mr. Hirsch asked him questions; yes.
Q. You did not?
A. No.

Q. Concerning that meeting at the Haupt home on Sunday—on Saturday night, June 27, did Mr. Haupt tell you that evening that the Wergins, Mr. and Mrs. Froehling and their two children were in the home, celebrating Mrs. Haupt's birthday?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you why the children were over there?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not testify concerning any of these facts at the trial that was had in this courthouse about a year and a half ago, did you, Mr. Robe?

1650 a A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. To the best of your knowledge Mr. Hirsch did not either?

A. No, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all. Thank you.

The COURT. Now, Mr. Woll, you read the redirect examination.

Redirect examination by Mr. FINN:

Q. Were you asked anything about it at that time or not?

A. No, sir.

Mr. FINN. That is all.

MR. WOLL. If your Honor please, at the time Mr. Short's testimony was read I had the direct impression one of the jurors did not hear a particular portion of it and I wonder whether it would be advisable to read that.

The COURT. Well, now, they have heard it twice and I think that is sufficient.

Mr. WOLL. All right.

The COURT. Ladies and gentlemen, pursuant to the 1650 A written request of the jury through your foreman there has been read to you a transcript of the testimony of the witnesses, Short, Hirsch, and Robe. The jury are cautioned to bear in mind that they have now heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice while they have heard the testimony of the other witnesses only once, and that they shall not allow the fact that they have heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice to cause them to give undue importance or weight to it. The jury should, on the other hand, consider the testimony of these three witnesses, and that of each of them, as though they had heard it but once and consider it together with all of the other evidence in the case.

1651 The COURT. You may now retire with the marshal, ladies and gentlemen to consider further of your verdict.

(Thereupon the jury retired to consider further of their verdict.)

1659 ARGUMENT BY MR. WARNHOLTZ ON MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL

The COURT. How much time will you gentlemen require?

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. I would judge, if the Court please, we will take about thirty minutes. There is also a motion in arrest of judgment. I may state at this time, I do not want to offer any argument as to those points. They have all been covered by the argument in respect to the demurrer.

The COURT. Very well. I will finish my motions of course and then take this matter up.

(Thereupon a recess was had, for the Court to dispose of his regular call, and thereupon the following proceedings were had:)

The COURT. You may proceed.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May it please the Court: I have in this case presented a motion in arrest of judgment and do not desire to offer argument on it at this time, and will ask that the Court rule on that motion without further argument.

The COURT. Very well. I will rule at the conclusion of the argument.

1660 Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Now, with respect to the motion for a new trial, I have also filed a written motion at this time. I desire to present argument, only, as to the few of what I see questions of law on the vital points.

Particularly do I wish to go into the matter of intent which must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt before the defendant can be found guilty of the crime of treason.

I shall first reread in connection with this matter certain instructions, which were given to the jury in typewritten form, after they had first been read to the jury by your Honor. I should like to read instruction number 37, because most of my argument will be based on that particular instruction:

"If you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant's intention and purpose in acting as he did was evil, that is, if you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to aid and comfort the enemies of the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty.

1661 "If you believe the defendant's intention in doing what he did during the period from June 17, 1942, to and including July 17, 1942, was not in any way to injure the United States but merely to assist his son, Herbert Haupt, as an individual, as distinguished from assisting him in his purposes, if such existed, of aiding the German Reich, or of injuring the United States, the defendant must be found not guilty.

The defendant takes no issue with this instruction, assuming, however, that it is intended to mean to apply to a case where aid and comfort is given by a father to his son in the personal needs of the son, as an individual, although the father knows that the son is a foreign agent of a country with which we are at war. It seems that this presumption on our part must necessarily have been included or intended, for this instruction, because if it were otherwise there would be no reason for such an instruction; in fact, if otherwise, there would be no reason to put the man on trial for a crime of treason because neither a father nor a stranger can be guilty of the crime of treason by dealing with a foreign 1662 agent or the agent of a foreign power with which we are at war, if such person, namely, he father or such stranger does not know that he is dealing with such particular agent.

It seems that under this instruction, number 37, there remains only one question to be answered, and that is whether or not the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by the overt acts which were submitted to the jury intended to aid his son as an individual or in his capacity as an agent of the enemies and thereby the German Reich.

In order to ascertain this intention, we have only two sources from which we can get our information, and that is the testimony of witnesses and the nature of the particular acts which were performed by the defendant as charged in the indictment. Concerning the nature of the overt acts submitted in this case to the jury, as a source of ascertaining the intent with which the same were forthcoming, we contend that instructions 53, 54 and 63, which were suggested by the government, and which, with the exception of a few words were given verbatim as so suggested in the charge to the jury, must have had a confusing and misleading in-1663 ference upon the jury; in fact, to such an extent that the defendant's right to a fair trial was taken away by these instructions from him thereby.

Now let us first examine all of the 12 overt acts given to the jury as to their nature and the natural and probable consequences of such acts. These twelve overt acts state, in fact, or contain in fact but three different statements of facts. Namely, first, that the defendant harbored and sheltered his son, Herbert Haupt.

The second one would be that the defendant accompanied his son Herbert Haupt when Herbert Haupt went out to seek reemployment with a company with which he had worked for approximately two years.

The third one would be that the defendant bought his son an automobile.

Now, in order to find to what extent these situations or statements of fact may have a bearing on the matter of intent we will have to analyze the natural and probable consequences of such acts. We say that these natural and probable consequences would be the following:

"The harboring and sheltering of the son, would give the 1664 son a place in his father's house where to live."

That is the natural and probable consequences of that act, and, concerning "Accompanying his son to the home of the foreman and superintendent of the particular company where Herbert Haupt had worked before he left the United States" the consequences of that act would be none, unless it were shown that the father aided or did procure the reemployment, and even then the natural and probable consequences of such act would merely effect to keep the boy off the street or permit him to work as all other young men do or ought to do.

Now, as to the third one "the buying of an automobile," I would say the natural and probable consequences of that act are to allow Herbert Haupt to enjoy the pleasures of a car, the conveniences of a car for such purposes as young men usually use cars nowadays. With this in view, I would like to point out the vices of instructions

53, 54, and 63 and also show incidentally how thereby instruction number 37 which I have read in the beginning and which 1665 involves the relationship of father and son is completely cancelled out; as to instruction number 53 which reads:

"As I have heretofore stated to you the treasonable intent of the defendant is an essential element of the crime charged herein, and before you can find the defendant guilty, you must find beyond a reasonable doubt; not only that such defendant adhered to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort, but also at the time of such alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, the defendant intended to do so.

"This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as the result of which he was conscious of the specific thought, 'I am going to commit treason.' This is not necessary, for every man in law is presumed to intend the natural and probably consequences of his acts, if they are deliberately done. Anyone who is conscious of his acts, and his surroundings and knowingly commits certain acts, must be regarded as intending the natural and probable consequences of those acts.

1666 These observations are, of coarse, not intended to cast any inferences one way or the other on the defendant's intent."

We say that this instruction is erroneous. In order to commit treason a man must have the specific thought or intent to commit treason or to commit that evil which we call treason. Proof of that thought or intent may be brought by showing the commission of acts; that is true, but such acts must manifest the treasonable purpose, or must have been committed pursant to prior arrangements, plan, or a conspiracy to commit treason, which plan of conspiracy must first be proven.

Now, considering the facts in this case, if your Honor please, we maintain that the overt acts are in themselves innocent acts of every day occurrences, and not manifesting treasonable purposes, and for that reason we do maintain that there is no basis whatsoever for instruction number 53 which I have just read. It never should have been included in the charge to the jury:

Now, instruction number 54 goes several steps further: I shall read it:

1667 "In this regard, motive should not be confused with intent. If a person knowingly and deliberately adheres to and gives aid and comfort to one whom he knows to be an enemy, then he must in law, be taken to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own deliberate act, and the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense.

"In other words, one cannot do an act which he knows will give aid and comfort to a person he knows to be an enemy of the United States and then seek to disclaim criminal and treasonable intent by saying that his motive was not to aid the enemy. So, if you believe from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant as alleged in the indictment performed one or more of the overt acts submitted to your consideration and that that act or those acts were of such a nature that the natural and probable consequences of their performance was to give aid and comfort to the enemies and if you further believe that the defendant performed such act or acts deliberately with knowledge that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, if you find that he was, then you may find that the defendant had the criminal and treason-1668 able intent, since he intended to do the acts forbidden by the law. Under such circumstances, the fact that you may also believe that the motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was, for example, to help his son, would not in such event change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent."

It should be observed that in this instruction number 54, the instruction no further speaks about the enemies of the United States, namely the German Reich, as was properly done in instruction number 37, and partly also in instruction number 53. This instruction number 54 merely speaks about "an enemy" and "the enemy." A very careful reading and scrutiny of this instruction will show that this is an additional factor which may have tended to confuse and mislead the jury.

Briefly stating the instruction says, as we see it, that when a father gives aid and comfort to his son, whom he knows to be an agent of some country or an enemy of the United States, then the father must necessarily be acting in the matter of giving aid and comfort to his son with criminal and traitorous intent, 1669 even though it was not his intention "to adhere to the enemies of the United States by giving aid and comfort." We place this construction upon this particular charge, inasmuch as the instruction has to be read in connection with the overt acts submitted to the jury in this case and all of the overt acts submitted to the jury were innocent and lawful per se.

It is our contention that this instruction number 54, particularly if read in connection with instruction number 53 is utterly inconsistent with instruction number 37 and with the law on the subject of treason.

Now, instruction number 63 is just a further step on eliminating instruction number 37. In connection with these instructions we must remember that the jury took these instructions with them in typewritten form to be used by them in their deliberations and we contend that by reason of the inconsistency of the instructions, as far as we have pointed them out, the jury must have become utterly confused and misled as to the law of intent, and possibly the most important part as to the crime of treason, and that 1670 by reason of said fact the defendant is entitled to a new trial.

We also maintain that these instructions completely deprive the defendant of his defense of no treasonable intent.

I shall now touch on another matter, the so-called background testimony which was introduced by the government for the purpose of proving traitorous intent on the part of the defendant with reference to the overt acts alleged in the indictment and which, according to the indictment were committed between June 17, 1942, and July 17, 1942. In connection herewith, the testimony of three witnesses was admitted concerning remarks made by Herbert Haupt—no, made by the defendant Hans Haupt somewhere between the period of time of from 1935 to 1940. We claim that such testimony cannot possibly prove the treasonable intent of Hans Haupt. The remarks which Hans Haupt is supposed to have made according to that testimony were of such nature that they would necessary intend to incite prejudice in the minds of the jurors against this defendant on this trial. The making of the remarks at the time when they were made did not con-
1671 stitute unlawful acts and there is not a single authority on the law of treason on which is based the contention that intent to commit treason may be proven by statements made during the time of peace, in fact, as long as six and a half years prior and not less than one year before our country was at war.

The Circuit Court of Appeals stated with reference to this evidence in the case of the United States vs. Hans Max Haupt, et al., as follows:

"It covered an extremely wide field. In fact as to some of the defendants it reads as though they were on trial for the sins of a lifetime." It seems that the authorities hold the intent in the matter of treason must be a specific intent and not a general evil disposition. Indeed we might state that it would be very difficult to understand how a lawful act committed in the year 1935, and during peacetime, could give the required element of traitorous intent to commit treason in 1942. We deem that the admission of this so-called background evidence was highly prejudicial to the rights of the defendant to a fair trial.

1672 Now, what other evidence did we have with reference to the matter of intent? I recall nothing. If I am mistaken about it, counsel for the government will so point out. I recall nothing except the testimony of one single witness and that witness was Hamby and he testified that the defendant told him that he intended to help Herbert Haupt in the purposes for which he was sent here. But who is Hamby? A man who is now serving a life term in the penitentiary for robbery with a gun. A man who has been thrice convicted of a felony. A man who testified in this case about two months ago to the effect that at about the very time when Hans Haupt is supposed to have made this statement that he wanted to aid his son, also stated at that time the defendant was acting queerly. This man Hamby thereupon, according to his own testimony, offered aid and instructed the defendant in the matter of shamming insanity for the purpose of deceiving the prosecution.

The words of such a man is the only direct testimony which we have with reference to the intent of Hans Max Haupt.

1673 To sum up in the matter of proof of intent, we have the statement of this man Hamby, now serving a life term. Then we have the background evidence, in addition to that we have the nature of the overt acts which were of a lawful and innocent nature. That is all, but the law requires proof beyond a reasonable doubt also as to the element of intent. We claim that such proof has not been produced and that the defendant is entitled to a new trial by reason thereof.

A further point—I also took exception to the fact that the testimony of two government witnesses and one defense witness was reread to the jury, upon the request of their foreman, after the jury had been out for a period of twenty-two hours without sleep and without having any sleeping or resting facilities.

Then, too, is to be considered that the jury consisted of six men and six women who were confined during all that time, without sleep, in a single room. We believe that under the circumstances the verdict of the jury, which was brought in after about twenty-1674 eight hours, without sleep, by the jury, was not and could not have been a verdict fairly arrived at and that the jury should have been discharged before arriving at a verdict, after such a long period of time.

In conclusion, I wish to mention that the verdict must have been undoubtedly also the result of passion, prejudice and war hysteria, induced by the tactics of the government's attorneys. The closing argument in this case by the United States Attorney was made the day after what we have for many months termed, "The Invasion Day," a day on which millions of our people had been asked to kneel down in prayer for our boys now facing death on many battlefields in widely scattered parts of the world. The name of that day, sacred to us, because on that day our sons offered their lives for America, was used inadvertently or otherwise, I do not know, in connection with winning a lawsuit in this case, and then let us consider the argument by Mr. Finn, the Assistant District Attorney. Here are his words:

"Ladies and Gentlemen:

"I don't have to remind you that we are at war. Your obligation is clear, and the young men of our nation are spread 1675 throughout the world and the battlefields of the world."

And then the objection stopped him, but the appeal had been made.

I do not know what this case, what justice and fair deliberation of the merits of this case has to do with the fact that, at the present time we are at war. It was an appeal to hatred and to passion instead of an appeal to justice as it behooves the United States Attorney, according to the decision of the United States Supreme Court, to make. In fact, we know it is his duty to make such an appeal to justice and not to passion.

I want to close my argument by asking that the defendant be given a new trial. I thank your Honor.

Mr. FINN. If the Court please——

The COURT. I don't think I care to hear from the government. The motion in arrest of judgment will be overruled and denied.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. May I respectfully ask the Court that an exception be noted?

Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to matters involving activities of Herbert Haupt, which occurred prior to the middle of June 1941, upon the grounds that the same is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial, and relates to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, tending to the great prejudice of the rights and interests of the defendant and deprives him of the right to a fair and impartial trial herein;

And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider such testimony relating to activities of said Herbert Haupt which occurred prior to the middle of June 1941.

PAUL A. F. WARNHOLTZ,

Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of all witnesses relating to conversations with Herbert Haupt and alleged statements made by Herbert Haupt outside of the presence of the defendant, upon the following grounds:

(c) All such testimony was incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant to the issues in the case.

And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider any such testimony relating to such conversations and alleged statements of Herbert Haupt.

PAUL A. F. WARNHOLTZ,

And now comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case, all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant herein prior to June 17th, 1942, upon the grounds that all such testimony is irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial and relates to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, and tends greatly to the prejudice of the rights and interests of the defendant and deprives him of the right to a fair and impartial trial herein:

And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider such irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial testimony herein.

PAUL A. F. WARNHOLTZ,
Attorney for the Defendant.

1737 But the Court overruled said motion of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, to strike and exclude from the evidence the testimony referred to in said motion and refused to instruct the jury not to consider such testimony; to which said ruling of the Court and refusal to give said instructions, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

Motion

And now comes the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz, his attorney, and moves the Court to strike and exclude from the evidence in the case all testimony of witnesses for the prosecution relating to any statements alleged to have been made by the defendant herein prior to December 7th, 1941, upon the grounds that the United States was not then engaged in any war, and that all such testimony is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial and relates to matters not involving the charges against the defendant contained in the indictment, and tends greatly to the prejudice of the rights and interests of the defendant and deprives him of the right to a fair and impartial trial herein:

And the defendant further moves the Court to instruct the jury that they are not to consider such irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial testimony herein.

PAUL A. F. WARNHOLTZ,
Attorney for the Defendant.

1739 But the Court overruled said motion of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, to strike and exclude from the evidence the testimony referred to in said motion and refused to instruct the jury not to consider such testimony; to which said ruling of the Court and refusal to give said instructions, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

That, by leave of Court, said motion was renewed at the close of all of the evidence in the case, to wit, on the 5th day of June A. D. 1944, and the Court thereupon again overruled and denied saaid motion; to which ruling of the Court the defendnt, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

1740 And upon the trial of said case, after the conclusion of the Government's case and during the presentation of the defendant's evidence, on, to wit, the 5th day of June A. Q. Do you go by the name of Norris?
A. Yes, sir; Stanley Norris.
Q. At the present time you are incarcerated in the Illinois State Penitentiary, are you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you been there?
A. Eighteen months.

Q. Prior to the present imprisonment, were you ever in state prison before?

A. I spent thirteen months in Statesville for parole violations; the state reformatory.

Q. You say you spent how many months?

A. Thirteen months in Statesville.

Q. For parole violations?

A. Yes, sir; from the reformatory.

Q. The reformatory was what; Pontiac?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you go down to Pontiac?

A. 1930 for that one.

Q. 1930?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you stay in Pontiac?

A. Until 1934.

Q. At that time you were paroled, were you?

A. Yes, sir.

1743 Q. Then what happened?

A. I was out. Is was arrested for parole violations. I was sent to Statesville for thirteen months.

Q. When were you released from Statesville?

A. I was released from Statesville in 1941; July 3rd.

Q. Were you arrested after that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you arrested?

A. I was arrested in 1941—no; January 7, 1942.

Q. Are you sure of the date?

A. 1942.

Q. 1942?

A. Yes, sir, that is right.

Q. And as a result of that arrest, were you indicted?

A. Yes, sir; I was indicted.

Q. Were you convicted.

A. I was.

Q. Were you sentenced?

A. I was.

Q. What was the sentence?

A. Natural life.

Q. Is that the sentence you are now serving in the Illinois State penitentiary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, while you were in the Cook County jail in 1942, did you become acquainted with a man by the name of Hans Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall about when it was you became acquainted with him?

A. The middle of September 1942—I mean July.

Q. July 1942?

A. July 1942.

Q. Where were you at the time?

A. I was on H–4, Cook County jail.

Q. Was H–4 on the same floor.

A. Yes, sir.

1744 Q. At that time did you have any conversation with Hans Haupt, yourself, concerning sanity or insanity?

A. Directly; no, sir.

Q. Did you hear anyone having a conversation with Haupt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you participate in a conversation with anyone else in which conversation Haupt joined.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, calling you' attention to sometime after you met Haupt, and while you were detained in the Cook County jail, did you and Hamby have a conversation in regard to a man who had been sent to Menard?

A. Yes, sir; I remember that.

Q. Do you know when that conversation was?

A. That conversation was pertaining to putting on an insane act.

Q. About when was that?

A. That was in July.

Q. Did Hans Haupt talk in that conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say? Give the conversation as you heard it; tell us what you heard Haupt say.

A. Well, Cael Hamby was bawling me out for not telling my attorney, W. W. O'Brien, to enter a plea of insanity on my behalf. I advised my attorney about that and he told me it was foolish, it would be no good in my case; and Hamby, after he met this fellow in the Cook County bullpen, he was telling me about this and bawled me out; I should have done it because this fellow, he had numerous robberies on him and he was indicted like I was and he got natural life but he put on an insane act and he went to 1745 Menard and stayed there between four and five years and he come back to Cook County and by that time the witnesses were not interested in the case and, with the agreement of the State he got two years in the Cook County jail. That was the subject of that conversation.

Q. What did Hans Haupt say, if anything?

A. He discussed it with Hamby, why he would do that.

Q. You mean Haupt asked Hamby why he didn't do it?

A. Hamby advised him, so he was under sentence and why he couldn't do it. He asked Mr. Haupt what he thought of the idea and Mr. Haupt did tell him he liked it, he thought it would go as a last resort he would take it.

Q. While you were in the County jail did you engage in any mental tests games with Mr. Haupt?

A. Yes, sir; to divert the time we played games, a numerous number of games.

Q. How would the matter be worked?

A. Worked; one I remember particular you take nine squares and you take numbers from 1 to 9 and you put them in—one number in each square and when you finish you have to have 15 in each way all totals, horizontally and diagonally, that is, adding up to 15. Then later on we progressed to having 12 squares, using any number at length, your points are all inserted and it may make 20 and then you add it horizontally and diagonally up and down, either way.

Q. Did you have any problems relating to contractual problems, for instance——

A. Yes; one problem I remember distinctly, because in figuring that we lost track of that particular problem. This concerned paving, for instance, there is a lot on the corner, say 40 feet by 66 feet, or such and a man wanted to have a sidewalk built around his property. It would cost, the sidewalk was four feet wide, 1746 for instance, and it cost ten cents per square foot. Well, he always, when I worked mine, rather I multiplied each side by the four feet wide and I multiplied that by ten cents and in that way I would get the answer, but by doing that I had always to lay out fourteen square feet which is the corner adjoining this lot and that problem Haupt worked.

Q. In your opinion, worked correctly?

A. Oh, yes; he did, because most of us we would leave out the corner.

Mr. WOLL. Your witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. Mr. Majerczak, when did you first meet Mr. Hamby?

A. I met him here in the State penitentiary at Statesville.

Q. That is at Statesville?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were released on July 3, 1941; correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you came out, where did you see him again?

A. I did not see Hamby until October.

Q. Until October?

A. Same year.

Q. And then the two of you did on or about January 7, 1942, what did you do, hold up somebody?

A. Yes, well, Hamby—I was not with Hamby on January 2nd.

Q. Then when you were arrested, did you commit the crime together?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were not a codefendant with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were not convicted with the same crime that he was?

A. I was convicted for a crime with Hamby.

1747 Q. With Hamby?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You committed the crime together?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did you last talk with Hamby about this case of Mr. Haupt?

A. I should judge about two hours ago.

Q. What did you discuss together?

A. He told me I was nervous; I shouldn't be nervous. I should go up there and tell the truth.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Oh, yes; and did he tell you specifically how you should say it, by way of telling the truth?

A. No, sir.

Q. Yet he posted you on something?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him, try to obtain any information from him as to some facts you might have forgotten?

A. No; I never asked him about any fact.

Q. Today, yesterday, or the day before yesterday?

A. No, sir.

Q. And did you talk with him about these yesterday?

A. Last night he said we probably would take the stand today.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. Oh, yes.

Q. And then what else did you or he say about the case?

A. He says we probably would take the stand today.

Q. Did he tell your what you should testify to when you would get on the stand?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him what cell block you were in?

A. What cell block I was in?

Q. What cell, or at the time when Mr. Hamby was in the Cook County jail yesterday?

A. I don't understand the question.

1748 Q. Well, what did you ask him yesterday that he should straighten you out on, the particular cell you were in, while you were in the county jail?

A. I was in number 8.
Q. Number 8?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. He didn't straighten you out on that yesterday?
A. No, sir.
Q. About how long did you talk about the case with him today?
A. I did not talk about the case. He told me I was nervous and I shouldn't be so.
Q. How long did you talk to him about the case yesterday?
A. Just he told me we probably would take the stand and probably would be in Statesville tomorrow.
Q. Just took a few minutes; right?
A. Less than that.
Q. Less than that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did Mr. Hamby often talk about this insanity matter?
A. Yes, sir; he did.
Q. Seemed to be quite an expert on the subject?
A. Well, he did work among insane persons in the Michigan City penitentiary; Michigan City penitentiary.
Q. And he approached this insanity proposition when he first met you in jail?
A. Yes, sir; he advised me to tell my attorney.
Q. Do you know if he advised anybody else?
A. Well, to the best of my knowledge I don't know. He talked about it to numerous people, yes; I don't know whether he advised anyone.
Q. He often talked about feigning insanity?
A. Oh, yes; he talked about insanity.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

1749 Redirect examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. There were a number of conversations between Hamby and Hans Haupt; you paid no attention to that; is that right?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WOLL. I think that is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. One more question, please.

Re-cross-examination by Mr. WARNHOLTZ:

Q. What crime were you convicted of?
A. Robbery.
Q. Robbery?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

Mr. WOLL. There is one more question, your Honor. Pardon me.

Re-re-direct examination by Mr. WOLL:

Q. Did Mr. Hamby attempt to straighten you out as to the cell in which Hans Haupt was?

A. Yes; he did.

Mr. WOLL. That is all.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That was yesterday, was it?

The WITNESS. Yes; that was yesterday.

Mr. WARNHOLTZ. That is all.

1750 But the Court, upon objection being made by the counsel for the Government, refused to admit into evidence the transcript of the testimony of said John Majerczak, which was given by him as a witness at said insanity hearing of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, in this cause, a copy of which testimony is hereinbefore set forth, and the Court refused to receive any of said transcript so offered by the defendant for the purposes of impeachment; to which ruling and refusal of the Court to receive in evidence such transcript so offered by the defendant, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

1753 But the Court, upon objection being made by the counsel for the Government, refused to receive in evidence the said Statute of the State of Illinois, viz. Section 4, Division 2, Criminal

1759 Motion for directed verdict overruled

But the Court overruled said Motions of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, and refused to direct the jury to find the defendant "not guilty" under said indictment, and refused to direct the jury to find the defendant "not guilty" upon the overt acts designated and numbered in said indictment from one (1) to twenty nine (29), both inclusive, or upon any of the said overt acts, to which said rulings of the Court and refusal to give such instruction and direction to the jury, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

And, thereupon, the Court refused to give the following instruction to the jury, which was requested by the defendant, to wit: "The Court instructs the jury to find the defendant not guilty." And the Court thereupon marked said instruction denied, to which said ruling and refusal to give said instruction, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

1761 And, thereupon, the defendant, by his counsel, requested the Court to give to the jury the following instructions, in writing, numbered D-1 to D-30, both inclusive, to wit:

1762 (Defendant's requested instructions omitted. Printed side page. 1338 ante.)

1792 Ruling on defendant's requested instructions

The defendant, by his counsel, thereafter withdrew his request to give instruction number D-5.

But the Court refused to give to the jury said instructions numbered D-1 to D-4, both inclusive, and numbered D-6 to D-30, both inclusive, requested by the defendant, and refused to give any of said instructions to the jury as requested by the defendant, with-the exception of instructions numbered D-14, D-24 and D-26, requested by defendant; to which said rulings and refusal of the Court to give to the jury said instructions, numbered D-1, D-2, D-3, D-4, D-6, D-7, D-8, D-9, D-10, D-11, D-12, D-13, D-15, D-16, D-17, D-18, D-19, D-20, D-21, D-22, D-23, D-25, D-27, D-28, D-29, and D-30, as requested by the defendant, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

1793 And, thereupon, at the close of all the evidence in the case and at the conclusion of the arguments of counsel for the Government and of counsel for the defense, the Court gave the following instructions and charge to the jury, to wit:

1794 (Charge to the jury by his Honor Judge J. Barnes omitted. Printed side page. 80 ante.)

1818 To the giving of which instructions and charge to the jury by the Court, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

Motion for withdrawal of paragraphs 53 and 54 of charge

And, thereupon, the jury retired to consider their verdict, and thereafter, on, to wit, the 8th day of June A. D. 1944, after the jury had been deliberating on their verdict for approximately seven hours, without reaching a verdict, the defendant, by his counsel, in the presence of the United States Attorney and his assistants, but not in the presence of the jury, renewed his objections to paragraphs 53 and 54 of the court's charge to the jury and moved the Court, in the alternative, to eliminate and withdraw said instructions contained in paragraphs 53 and 54 of the Court's charge to the jury, or for the Court to modify the said instructions, paragraphs 53 and 54, in accordance with the objections and suggestions of defendant's counsel, and for the Court to advise the jury of such request, withdrawal or modification of said paragraphs 53 and 54 of said charge to the jury, which said paragraphs 53 and 54 of the Court's charge to the jury were and are in words and figures, as follows; to wit:

"53. As I have heretofore stated to you the treasonable intent of the defendant is an essential element of the crime charged herein, and before you can find the defendant guilty you must and beyond a reasonable doubt, not only that such defendant adhered

1819 to the enemies of the United States, giving them aid and comfort, but also that at the time of such alleged adherence and giving of aid and comfort, the defendant intended to do so. This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as a result of which he was conscious of the specific thought, "I am going to commit treason." This is not necessary for every man in law is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts if they are deliberately done. Anyone who is conscious of his acts and his surroundings and knowingly commits certain acts must be regarded as intending the natural and probable consequences of those acts. These observations are, of course, not intended to cast any inferences one way or another on the defendant's intent.

54. In this regard, motive should not be confused with intent. If a person knowingly and deliberately adheres to and gives aid and comfort to one whom he knows to be an enemy, then he must, in law, be taken to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own deliberate act, and the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense. In other words, one cannot do an act which he knows will give aid and comfort to a person he knows to be an enemy of the United States and then seek to disclaim criminal and treasonable intent by saying that his motive was not to aid the enemy. So if you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant as alleged in the indictment, performed one or more of the overt acts submitted to your consideration and that that act or those acts were of such a nature that the natural and probable consequence of their performance was to give aid and comfort to the enemy, and if you further believe that the defendant performed such act
1820 or acts deliberately with knowledge that Herbert Haupt was an enemy agent, if you find that he was, then you may find that the defendant had the criminal and treasonable intent, since he intended to do the act forbidden by the law. Under such circumstances, the fact that you may also believe that his motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was for example, to help his son, would not in such event, change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent.

But the Court overruled and denied said motions of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by his counsel, and refused either to withdraw or modify the said instructions contained in paragraphs 53 and 54 of the Court's charge to the jury, aforementioned, and refused to give to the jury on behalf of the defendant, any other or further instructions, to which said rulings of the Court and refusal to give the jury further instructions, as requested, said defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

1821 Thereafter, on, to wit, the 9th day of June A. D. 1944, at about the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., on the said day, and while the jury in said cause was still deliberating upon their verdict, counsel for the Government and counsel for the defense, appeared before the Court, in the Court's chambers, pursuant to the Court's request, and the Court then informed counsel for respective parties that at 9:30 a. m. on said day, he had received the following communication from the foreman of the jury, to wit: "June 9, 1944, Judge Barnes: May it please the Court to grant the request of the jury that the testimony of Messrs. Short, Hirsch, and Robe be read to them at this time. Joseph M. Callner, foreman."

Whereupon, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by his counsel, then and there objected to the reading of the testimony of the defense witness, Short, and of the Government's witnesses, Hirsch and Robe, and again called the Court's attention to the erroneous instructions of the jury, claimed by the defendant in the giving of paragraphs 53 and 54 on the Court's charge to the jury and to the refusal of the Court to grant the defendant's request for the withdrawal or modification of said paragraphs 53 and 54 of the Court's charge to the jury, and the defendant, by his counsel, objected to any repetition of the hearing by the jury of the testimony of said witnesses, Short, Hirsch, and Robe, and the defendant, by his counsel, further objected to the order in which it was proposed to read such testimony to the jury, that is to say, to the reading of the testimony of the defense witness, Short, first to the jury and the reading of the testimony of the prosecution's witnesses, Hirsch and Robe, last to the jury, but the Court overruled each and all of the objections of the defendant, by his counsel, so made as 1822 aforesaid; to which rulings of the Court in overruling said objections, and each of them, of the defendant, the defendant, by his counsel then and there duly excepted.

And thereupon, the Court ordered and directed counsel for the defendant to read to the jury, upon the jury's return to the courtroom, the transcript of the testimony of the defense witness, Short, and the Court further directed that counsel for the Government should immediately thereafter read to the jury the transcript of the testimony of the Government's witnesses, Hirsch and Robe; to which orders and rulings of the Court, the defendant, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted; and it was further ordered by the Court that the compliance of defendant's counsel with such order and direction of the Court to read to the jury the transcript of the testimony of the defense witness Short should be without waiver of the objections and exceptions of the defendant and without prejudice to the rights of defendant with respect to such objections and exceptions.

And the defendant's counsel, in connection with and in support of his said objections and exceptions, asked that the record show that at that moment the jury had been deliberating for a period of twenty-four (24) hours since the submission of the case to the jury, and without interruption of their deliberations for the purpose of sleep.

And, thereupon, the jury were summoned from the jury room where they were deliberating, and the jury returned to the courtroom to hear the reading of the transcript of the testimony of the witnesses, Short, Hirsch and Robe, and the transcript of the testimony of said witnesses, Short, Hirsch and Robe, was then read, in the order named, to the jury, in the courtroom, as appears in the transcript of proceedings herein, on pages 1621 to 1651, inclusive, ante; to all of which proceedings the defendant, by his counsel, duly excepted.

1823. And, thereupon, immediately after the reading of the transcript of the testimony of the witnesses, Short, Hirsch and Robe, and before the retirement of the jury, the Court gave the following oral instruction to the jury, to wit: Pursuant to the written request of the jury through your foreman there has been read to you a transcript of the testimony of the witnesses, Short, Hirsch, and Robe. The jury are cautioned to bear in mind that they have now heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice while they have heard the testimony of the other witnesses only once, and that they shall not allow the fact that they have heard the testimony of these three witnesses twice to cause them to give undue importance or weight to it. The jury should, on the other hand, consider the testimony of these three witnesses, and that of each of them, as though they had heard it but once and consider it together with all the other evidence in the case.

1824. And the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by his counsel, duly excepted to all of said proceedings pertaining to the summoning of said jury from its retirement after deliberating upon their verdict for approximately 24 hours without arriving at any verdict, and to the reading of the transcript of the testimony of said witnesses, Short, Hirsch, and Robe, and to the review, repetition, and reiteration of that portion of the evidence and testimony of witnesses in the case, which was only a very small fraction or portion of the evidence and testimony of witnesses offered and presented on behalf of the defendant, upon the trial of said cause and which was a still smaller fraction and portion of the entire evidence presented in the case and of the examination and cross-examination of witnesses produced upon the trial of said cause.

1825. Verdict

And thereupon, the jury again retired to consider their verdict and thereafter on, to wit, the 9th day of June A. D. 1944, the jury returned a verdict against the defendant herein, which said verdict was as follows: "We, the jury, find the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, guilty as charged in the indictment."

Whereupon, on, to wit, the 9th day of June A. D. 1944, immediately after the return of said verdict and in the presence of the jury, in open Court, the foreman of the jury presented to his Honor, Judge John P. Barnes, the following written communication, signed by all of the members of the jury, to wit: "June 9, 1944. Your Honor, Judge Barnes: Realizing fully that our function terminates with the rendering of our verdict, we, the jury, are moved humbly to beseech your Honor's consideration in dealing mercifully with this defendant. In conformity with your Honor's instructions, neither pity nor sympathy has entered into our deliberations. In this plea, we express only what is in our hearts. Respectfully." (Signed by the Twelve Jurors in said cause.)

Whereupon, the defendant, by his counsel, requested that the records show that the verdict of the jury was read at 3:39 p. m., 9th day of June A. D. 1944, after the jury had been out and deliberating upon their verdict since 11:20 a. m. on the 8th day of June A. D. 1944.

1826 Whereupon, on, to wit, the 13th day of June A. D. 1944, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by his counsel, then and there moved the Court that said verdict finding him guilty as charged in the indictment, be set aside and that a new trial be granted in said cause, and the defendant filed his said Motion to set aside said verdict and to grant a new trial in said cause, in writing, in words and figures as follows, to wit:

1827 (Motion for new trial omitted. Printed side page. 101 ante.)

1834 Motion for new trial overruled

And thereupon, on, to wit, the 14th day of June A. D. 1944, after hearing the arguments of counsel, the Court overruled and denied the said motion of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, to set aside the verdict, and for a new trial in said case; to which ruling of the Court in overruling and denying said motion to set aside the verdict and for a new trial, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by his counsel, then and there duly excepted.

1835 Whereupon, on, to wit, the 13th day of June A. D. 1944, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by his counsel, then and there moved the Court to arrest judgment on said verdict, and said defendant filed his said Motion in arrest of judgment in said cause, in writing, in words and figures, as follows, to wit:

1836 (Motion in arrest of judgment omitted. Printed side page. 108 ante.)

1838 Motion in arrest of judgment overruled

And thereupon, on, to wit, the 14th day of June A. D. 1944, after hearing the arguments of counsel, the Court overruled and denied the said Motion in arrest of judgment of the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, to which ruling of the Court in denying said Motion in arrest of judgment, the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, then and there duly excepted.

1839 And the defendant, Hans Max Haupt, by Paul A. F. Warnholtz and Frederick J. Bertram, his attorneys, tenders this, his Bill of Exceptions (consisting of four volumes, pages of which are numbered consecutively from number 1 (a) and (b) to number 1839, both inclusive) and prays that the same may be signed, certified, and sealed by the Judge of this Court, pursuant to the statute and rules of Court in such case made and provided.

Memorandum of authorities

Filed Oct. 26, 1945

1844 During the oral arguments in the above-entitled cause our attention was directed to the question of whether or not, if any of the overt acts, either as alleged or proven, submitted to the jury as possible overt acts upon which it could base a conviction for treason, were insufficient, it would be necessary for the court to reverse the conviction. We have therefore addressed ourselves to that problem, keeping in mind Instruction No. 51 (Bill of Exceptions 1591), by which instruction the jury were told:

"It is not necessary for the Government to prove by two witnesses the performance of more than one of the submitted overt acts, providing, of course, the other elements of the alleged crime are proven beyond a reasonable doubt as heretofore defined in these instructions."

It would seem from a review of the authorities, including Cramer v. United States, 65 S. Ct. 918, 89 L. Ed. Advanced Sheet No. 13, page 937, et seq., footnote 45; Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359, 368; Williams v. North Carolina, 317 U. S. 287, 292; and Roth v. Swanson, 145 F. (2d) 262, 269 (C. C. A. 8), that the failure to prove or the insufficiency of any of the submitted overt acts would require a reversal of the conviction.

We reached this opinion despite the fact that in the case of Stephan v. United States, 133 F. (2d) 87, overt acts Nos. 1, 2, 8, and 9 (all of which were submitted to the jury) were re-
1845 jected by the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit as not proven. In that case the court, after reviewing the evidence, held that submitted overt acts Nos. 3, 7, 11, and 12 had been sufficiently proven as overt acts, but that submitted overt acts Nos. 1, 2, 8, and 9 had not been proven as overt acts and were insufficient. As in the case at bar the jury had been instructed as follows:

"Now, there is only the one count in this indictment, and your verdict will be either 'guilty as charged' or it will be 'not guilty.' That is the only two.

"I have talked a good deal about overt act, but you don't need in your verdict to report, and divide this charge up and say, 'We find this and we don't find that.'

"If you find he did the things I have talked about, and with the intent I talk about and find that one of the overt acts or more of them has been proved by two witnesses or more than two witnesses, and you then return a verdict of guilty as charged, you don't add anything more and tell me which overt acts you found. You don't say anything more in this verdict except if you find this defendant guilty, you say, when they ask you what your verdict is, you say, 'Guilty as charged.' That is what your foreman will say for all of you."

Although this instruction was given to the jury and although the Court of Appeals specifically found that four of the submitted overt acts had been insufficiently proven, the conviction was sustained and certiorari denied. In the opinion, however, no mention is made of the instruction in question and it appears that the propriety of the verdict, when considered in the light of the instruction given, was not raised in the Court of Appeals.
1846 The Court merely decided, in accordance with the general rule, that "The failure to establish all the overt acts alleged is not fatal upon a motion for peremptory instruction" and that "if one or more of such acts have been established, all others may be disregarded as surplusage."

In concluding this memorandum, however, we wish to strongly urge again the sufficiency of all of the overt acts submitted in the case at bar and particularly of overt acts Nos. 10 and 11, the subject of some discussion at the oral argument. In the Stephan case overt act No. 3, which was upheld by the Court of Appeals as sufficient, merely alleged "that Stephan on April 18, 1942, escorted Krug from Mrs. Bertelmann's home to the automobile then being used by Stephan" (which was standing in front of Mrs. Bertelmann's house). The evidence showed that Krug, an escaped German prisoner, came to Mrs. Bertelmann's home and that she called Stephan who came to her home and met Krug. Krug testified that he left Mrs. Bertelmann's apartment with the appellant, walked to his car, and drove to the appellant's residence. Mrs. Bertelmann testified that she watched them leave the apartment together, observed them go to appellant's car and saw appellant open the door. She did not see them get in, although she assumed that they did. The court, upon review, held that this was a sufficient overt act of treason.

In the case at bar the evidence relating to overt acts No. 10 and 11 showed that the defendant drove his son from a place in Chicago around the corner from 2234 North Fremont
1847 Street to the home of Andreas Conrad Grunau, his friend, at 6361 North Leoti, a distance of many miles; that he stayed with his son all during the various conversations that were held by his son and Grunau relative to the procuring of a job at the optical factory; that he then drove his son to the home of Mr. Koch, where a similar process was repeated and where Hans, when questioned concerning the boy's draft status, said he had sent him to the F. B. I. and the draft board that morning; and that he thereafter drove the boy back to his home.

When viewed in its "setting," including Hans' complete knowledge of his son's saboteur status and of his complete knowledge of the boy's plan to get into the optical company and steal the plans of the Norden bomb sight, we believe that these acts are much stronger overt acts of treason than the above referred to in the Stephan case or the "tippling in a tavern" rejected by the majority of the Court in the Cramer case. In the latter decision four Justices strenuously contended that the act of "tippling" in the tavern with Thiel was an act of aid and comfort. In our case there could be little doubt of their feeling relative to overt acts Nos. 10 and 11.

Respectfully submitted.

1849 In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit

No. 8607—October Term and Session, 1945

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PLAINTIFF-APPELLEE

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT, DEFENDANT-APPELLANT

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

Opinion

Filed December 20, 1945

Before EVANS, MAJOR, and KERNER, Circuit Judges

EVANS, Circuit Judge. Hans Max Haupt was tried and convicted on an indictment which charged him with the crime of treason. It was his second trial and his second conviction, on a charge of treason. The death sentence on the first trial was reversed on appeal. (136 F. 2d 661.) On this conviction on a second indictment, the trial judge sentenced him to imprisonment for life and to pay a fine of $10,000.

Giving Aid and Comfort to a war enemy, the German Reich, in June 1942, by harboring and assisting its agent, Herbert Haupt, was the heart of the charge. Herbert was the son of the defendant. Herbert and his comrades came to this country, in June 1942, in a German submarine, landed on the Florida coast, cached their supplies on the beach, and dispersed to their various assignments. Herbert was later executed pursuant to the judgment of the military tribunal (See Ex Parte Quirin, 317 U. S. 1).

The story of this German war stratagem is quite fully stated in the opinion of this court in 136 F. 2d 661, and more particu-
1850 larly in the decision of the Supreme Court in 317 U. S. 1. See also Cramer v. United States, 325 U. S. 1.

In Ex Parte Quirin, supra, the Supreme Court disposed of a case where the trial by a military commission, of the German saboteurs, who were the members of the expedition of whom Herbert was one, was reviewed. We refer to those opinions for a factual background and thereby avoid repetitions. The story is one of great hazard and audacity. The venture had for its objectives the destruction of the aluminum plants in the United States, as well as other vital industries, also our transportation systems. This was to be accomplished through the use of high power explosives, made in German war plants. The participating parties had, for the most part, lived in the United States. They had been thoroughly trained as expert saboteurs to do widespread damage to places, people and plants where such damage would most effectively cripple the United States in the then existing World War. Their devotion to German Nazi-ism was suicidal in its intensity.

In the instant case, there was a lengthy trial before a court and jury. The evidence came from F. B. I. investigators, the fiancee of the son, the jail-mates of the defendant in the County Jail in the summer of 1942, and co-workers and employers of defendant. It also came from co-members in various German associations, particularly from members of the Veterans of the German Army in World War I, of whom defendant was one. Defendant did not take the witness stand. His wife testified, but her testimony was brief and unimportant.

Upon the rendition of the verdict, the trial court made an earnest, sincere statement explanatory of his sentence of life imprisonment instead of death—on the basis of a recommendation of mercy given by the jury in the form of a letter received after verdict.

The usual pleadings in criminal cases were filed by defendant, namely, demurrer to the indictment, motions for directed verdict, for new trial, exceptions to instructions, objections to evidence, etc.

Defendant, Hans Max Haupt, was born in Germany in 1894. His son, Herbert, the saboteur, was also born in Germany, in 1919. Defendant came to this country in 1923, and his wife and son followed two years later. Defendant, in this country, worked as a painter, decorator and bricklayer by trade. He also worked with his wife as a "couple" in a Chicago suburb. Herbert had worked for the Simpson Optical Company, and was being trained as an optical worker. In the midst of the training, Herbert and Wolfgang Wergin, a friend, took a trip to Mexico, leaving Chicago in June 1941. Eventually they reached Tokyo, and finally Germany.

In Germany, Herbert attended a school, military in character, devoted to training saboteurs. The soldiers attending were taught the use of explosives, how to place them and to fire them, and to avoid detection, etc., and they were also taught the arts commonly practiced by spies, etc.[1] One of Herbert's classmates and co-actors on this bold and fanatical expedition, Ernest Peter Burger, detailed their training, and what is more important—their mission to this country. He stated that Herbert "received orders to procure an automobile and put this automobile to the disposal of our group." "He also received orders to procure information and details concerning the optical industry in Chicago, especially of the Norden bomb sight, and furnish information which was * * * to equip us to carry out our assignments." The automobile was to be used to transport the explosives from the cache where hidden and to give "range to the operations." Herbert was ordered to go directly to Chicago.

When the schooling and instructions in Germany were completed, the expedition, composed of two units of four men each, was outfitted with explosives and other equipment,[2] with large sums of money,[3] and embarked for the United States on German submarines. One of the submarines, on which Herbert was a passenger, landed in Florida. They went ashore and Herbert participated in burying the equipment in the beach. He then came to Chicago. Herbert received $5,000 which he carried in his money belt and $400 in smaller bills. He was also given a zipper bag of which he was told to take particular care, for it contained $10,000.

Upon arrival in Chicago Herbert went to the home of a relative, and his parents were summoned there by phone. They evi-
1852 dently had no prior notification of his coming and were surprised at seeing him. Herbert related to his parents, his travels from Chicago to Germany, and his mission to this country.[4] Herbert thereafter went to his parents' home where he stayed the week of June 22.[5] His father went with Herbert on two successive evenings to an automobile agency to effect the purchase of a Pontiac car.[6] His father (and mother) also went one evening to the home of one Grunau, and later to the home of one Koch, both foremen at the Simpson Optical Company, where Herbert asked to be reinstated in his former position at that company.[7] It is upon these activities that the overt acts of treason alleged in the indictment, and submitted to the jury, were predicated. Herbert was seized by Government officials on Saturday morning, June 27.

Proof of treason necessitates the testimony of two witnesses to at least one legally sufficient overt act.[8] Treason is a crime defined by the Constitution rather than by statute. The Constitution (Article III, Section 3, clause 1) reads:

---

[2] 8 boxes of TNT, chemical equipment and fuses and detonators, timing devices. They were also given draft registration cards and social security cards. They received shovels.

[3] Leader of Witness Burger's group was given an emergency fund of $82,000. Herbert's leader had $66,000 in addition.

[4] Testimony of Hamby, Majerczak, Hirsch and Rose.

[5] and [7] will be discussed later in detail.

"Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court."

Defendant's attack on the validity of the judgment is most vigorously and extensively directed at the overt acts, their sufficiency, their proof and the judge's charge to the jury in respect to them. Numerous other assignments are made and earnestly argued. But the attack on the overt acts appears to be the most confidently asserted one and the one most extensively argued. The decision of the majority of the court in the recently decided case of Cramer v. U. S. supra, doubtless accounts for defendant's chief and confident reliance for his extended attacks on the overt acts rulings, although some of the other assignments of error would have been quite as impressive with counsel as they are with us, were it not for the ruling in the Cramer case.

We here set forth the various assignments of error which the defendant presents:

1853 (1) The acts charged do not constitute the crime of treason.

(2) The submitted overt acts were colorless and innocuous and not treasonable in nature.

(3) The duplicitous indictment charged many offenses even of different criminal classification.

(4) Denial of motion to quash indictment because of pendency of prior treason indictment, the conviction under which this court reversed and remanded with directions for a new trial.

(5) Denial of bill of particulars, seeking details of how the son was to be assisted in obtaining employment and in what manner and by what acts the son was harbored; in what manner the son would be aided in carrying out his mission in purchasing a car.

(6) The evidence of statements made up to six years prior to the time of the overt acts, to show intent (much of it pre-war conversations); statements and admissions made while in custody, were inadmissible, not being made in open court; admission of evidence of conversations occurring outside presence of appellant; improper examination and intimidation of witness Zermer; improper for the Government to prove by but one witness overt acts which they knew could not be submitted because not provable by two witnesses; evidence as to withdrawn overt acts should not have been introduced or submitted to jury. Overt acts 1-9, 18, 19, 25-29 were not supported by two witnesses and it was improper to use any evidence relating to any such acts to obtain a conviction upon any overt act submitted to the jury.

(7) Court improperly received in evidence highly prejudicial exhibit without requiring that they be first connected up with the defendant.

(8) Court improperly refused to receive in evidence copy of Ill. Stat. relating to accessories after the fact, which it is contended is receivable in a Federal trial where not inconsistent with Federal statute or constitution.

(9) Court should have directed verdict of not guilty because of insufficiency of evidence to support charge of overt acts submitted; there was error in overruling motion for new trial, also motion in arrest of judgment.

1854 (10) Errors occurred in 21 instructions which were given and in refusal to give 15 proffered instructions. In particular the court's charge failed to impress upon the jury the fact that acts done solely to aid his son as an individual did not constitute treasonable action.

(11) Error to send to jury the entire indictment containing many prejudicial statements, in particular the unsubmitted overt acts.

(12) Error to send to jury room the typewritten copy of instructions thereby accentuating errors therein.

(13) Government counsels' argument was prejudicial, inflammatory and appealing to war hysteria.

(14) The verdict was the result of war hysteria and misappresion of the law and facts because of erroneous instructions; the verdict was induced by physical exhaustion of the jury in deliberating 28 hours without sleep; and was the result of the improper reading of the testimony of three witnesses' testimony, at the request of the jury; 24 hours after submission of the case to them.

(15) The general verdict cannot be sustained, if any specific overt act or its proof were insufficient. There was insufficiency of proof both as to overt acts submitted and overt acts withdrawn. The court cannot say on which of the alleged overt acts the jury found against the defendant.

A study of the entire record leaves us with the impression that the trial was conducted in a manner such as to impart confidence in the fairness and the earnestness of the effort of the court to accord the defendant every right which our laws extent to all, regardless of the nature of the crime charged, or the strength or weakness of the evidence which the accused might offer.

It was no doubt unfortunate that the trial occurred before the decision in Cramer v. U. S., supra, and the trial judge did not have the benefit of the discussion which appears in the opinions in that case.

Concededly* there must be direct proof, by two witnesses, to each overt act, submitted to a jury, upon whose general
1855 verdict the sentence in a treason case is pronounced. There may be overt acts of legal sufficiency and established by the direct testimony of two witnesses, but the conviction will fall if the court submitted to the jury certain alleged overt acts which were charged in the indictment but which were either legally insufficient or not sufficiently established to present a jury question, by the direct testimony of two witnesses. The holding of the court in the Cramer case may make conviction in treason cases difficult. It may in actuality make treason a theoretical crime, a paper crime, but we have no alternative but to follow the law as there announced by the Supreme Court.

True, the prosecution might have withdrawn several of the alleged overt acts charged in the indictment. It did in fact withdraw over half of them. It could have withdrawn more and made its conviction less vulnerable to the many attacks which defendant makes to the evidence, instructions, etc., thereon.

Doubtless counsel for Government believed they were trying a real case, not toying with a theoretical or supposititious one. They were confronted by actualities, not a theory. They were not preparing the facts for an interesting detective story. It was treasonable action with which they were dealing, and the overt acts and the two witness rule provoked a full and complete presentation of the facts, not cautionary action inspired by a fear of error in the charge or the production of evidence. Perhaps a special verdict where the jury would be required to pass on each overt act separately would have helped some. Even then additional questions interrogating the jury as to each overt act found to be established would, we believe, be necessary to avoid the multitude of questions which astute counsel has raised although some of them are not worthy of serious consideration.

Defendant asserts that there are numerous overt acts alleged, and which were submitted to the jury but which had not the testimonial support of two witnesses.

The law being as announced in the Cramer case, it is our duty to carefully examine the long record here involved and determine if the requisite constitutional measure of proof was adduced by the Government. In performing this task, we have, as we read the respective witnesses' testimony, recorded the evidence relevant to any submitted overt act, to the said overt act to which it
1856 appertains. Because of the indispensability of such proof on one theory which has been advanced by government counsel, as to each overt act submitted we set forth such evidence and overt acts seriatim.

The indictment charged 29 overt acts. Only 12 were submitted to the jury. The others were withdrawn as overt acts. Generally stated, six of the submitted overt acts charged harboring of the son for six successive days from June 22 to June 27, inclusive; two[9] charged accompanying the son to the respective homes of former employers to secure re-employment; and the remaining four[10] charged accompanying and assisting the son in the purchase of an automobile.

The overt acts submitted to the jury were numbers 10 to 17 and 20 to 23, both inclusive. We, therefore, begin with overt act No. 10.

OVERT ACT NO. 10

"Said Hans Max Haupt, on or about June 22, 1942, accompanied said enemy, Herbert Haupt, to the home of Andreas Conrad Grunau, 6361 Leoti Ave., Chicago, Illinois, for the purpose of assisting the said Herbert Haupt in securing employment so that the said enemy might conceal his identity and mission as an agent of the German Reich and be permitted and enabled to carry out and pursue his said mission."

Concerning this Act No. 10, eight witnesses, including Mr. and Mrs. Grunau, testified. They testified to Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and Herbert leaving the Haupt residence, getting into the Plymouth car, with Herbert driving, but exchanging seats with his father, after a few blocks, and the father driving them to the Grunau home, where they all alighted, met with the Grunau women folk, and entered the Gerunau home. Mr. and Mrs. Grunau both testified to Herbert's asking for his position back with the Simpson Optical Co., and Mr. Grunau told Herbert to come down on Thursday to fill in an application. The Grunaus' daughter testified to the visit of the Haupts that evening. The remaining testimony dealth with the Haupts driving away, after having been at the home for an hour or an hour and a half (Mr. Grunau had come in after the Haupts had arrived). Mr. Haupt drove the car on leaving the Grunau residence. The verbatim testimony in support of this brief fact statement is set forth below.[11]

The evidence of five witnesses, including Mr. and Mrs. Koch, on this count, disclosed the fact that the Haupts, with the father driving left the Grunau residence and drove to the Koch home,

Joseph W. Kriofske, F. B. I. Agent.

"Q. What did Herbert * * * Hans * * * and Erna Haupt do after they came out of that apartment building that day? A. They got into a 1940 Plymouth sedan * * * Herbert drove the car approximately two blocks, at which he stopped the car and changed positions with his father who then proceeded to drive * * * they went to 6361 North Leoti, arriving there approximately 8:00 P. arriving there about 9:30. Mr. Koch is the Shop foreman and supervisor for Simpson Optical Company, under whom 1858 Herbert had worked in his prior employment there. Herbert asked for re-employment. The visit lasted about an hour, when the trio emerged, with Hans driving the car, to the Haupt home. The specific evidence in point is set forth below.[12]

1859 Overt Act No. 12. Overt Act No. 12 is charged in the indictment in this language:

"Said Hans Max Haupt, on or about June 22, 1942, harbored and sheltered the said enemy Herbert Haupt at the home of 1860 Hans Max Haupt and Erna Haupt, 2234 N. Freemont St., Chicago, Illinois, well knowing that the said enemy was an agent of the Government of the German Reich in the United States to commit sabotage, act as a spy and perform other services for said Government as aforesaid, all with the intent and for the purpose of assisting said enemy Herbert Haupt in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich as aforesaid."

The evidence on this, as well as some of the other "harboring" acts submitted, consists simply of F. B. I. agents testifying they saw the several Haupts enter or leave the front entrance of the 2234 N. Fremont Avenue apartment building. The legal sufficiency of this evidence as "direct" or "circumstantial" will be subsequently discussed. Mr. and Mrs. Kluczyk, the landlord and his wife, who lived on the first floor of the three story building (which also had three apartments in the rear, not reachable by the front entrance) testified that on the evening of the twenty-second, Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and Herbert came to pay a brief call and in answer to the question where Herbert had been, was told Herbert had been to Mexico, South America, and "all over." Mrs. Kluczyk had seen Mrs. Haupt talking to Herbert out on the sidewalk, in the morning. Several of the F. B. I. agents saw all the Haupts enter the apartment building and testified to the condition of the Haupt apartment lights on entry, and shortly after entry.

[12] Heinrich Koch, Government witness.
He testified he knew Herbert Haupt. Herbert worked under him in his department. Herbert was a lens grinder and polisher. "Q. Calling your attention to the 22nd day of June, 1942, in the evening of that day, did Hans Haupt and Erna Haupt and Herbert Haupt come to your home? A. Yes, sir. Q. Approximately what time was it when they got to your house • • • A. It was about 9:30 • • •" "Mrs. Haupt said 'Herbert is back. I want to show him to you, so you won't be surprised if you see him one morning in the shop • • • then, he said that he wants to start working again in defense work, and he talked quite a while to Mr. Grunau about it, and I told him then, well.— Q. Did he say anything on the subject of getting his job back? A. Yes, he likes to get back his job. Q. Was that at the Simpson Optical Manufacturing Company? • • • yes • • • Well, I told him, 'Well, you are in that age, where you will get drafted,' and then Mr. Haupt said, 'I sent him all this morning to the Draft Board and to the FBI.' • • • And he (Herbert) said, 'Well, maybe through my two years' experience as a polisher and lens grinder, I might get deferment.' • • • The only thing I can recall is that Mr. Haupt told—said that he wants to buy him a car so that he can go to work, because he used Herbert's car all the time and she is in pretty bad shape, and he wants to buy another car."

as indicative of occupancy by them shortly after entry. The precise evidence on this Overt Act is also set forth below.[13]

Anna Koch, Government witness. Wife of Heinrich Koch. Knew Herbert Haupt and Hans Haupt. "Q. Calling your attention to the evening of June 22, 1942, at approximately 9 o'clock, were you home that evening? A. Yes. Q. Will you tell us what happened? A. Maybe 9:30 Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and Herbert Haupt came to our house. * * * Then they talked about his son wanted work." "Q. Do you recall what was said. A. Well, they want to say 'Hello,' to see my husband on business when he came in. Q. Into the factory, do you mean? A. Yes, sir." Asked Herbert where he had been and he replied Mexico, and Herbert said he had just bought a nice new suit.

Richard W. Axtell, Government Witness.
On June 22, 1942, he was watching the Haupt movements, saw them (Hans, Herbert, and Erna Haupt) drive from Grunau home to Koch home. "With Hans Haupt who was then driving the car—then we followed the car as it drove off from that address (Grunau) and we followed it and saw them stop in front of * * * residence of Heinrich Koch. * * * As the car stopped the three individuals, that is Hans * * * Erna * * * and Herbert * * * got out of the car and * * * went up to the front porch of the Koch residence. * * * thereafter they were admitted to the residence. I saw them * * * They arrived there at about 10:00 P. M. and they stayed until about 10:30 * * * I saw the three of them, that is Hans * * * Erna * * * and Herbert * * * came again, came out from the Koch residence. * * * they * * * got into the Plymouth * * * Hans Haupt driving the Plymouth then proceeded on south on Fremont Street."

John A. Lynch, F. B. I. Agent, Government Witness.
Assigned to following Herbert Haupt's actions on June 22, 1942. "What did they do after they entered the Plymouth automobile? Did you see who was driving at that time? A. At that time Mr. Max Haupt was driving. Q. Where did they go from there A. From there they proceeded to 7236 North Odell Avenue * * * At that residence the car was parked and the three individuals emerged from the car and entered that address * * *. That was the residence of Mr. Koch. * * * They remained in there approximately half an hour * * * They emerged, entered the car and proceeded back (to the Haupt home) * * *."

James C. Conerty, F. B. I. Agent, Government Witness.
"What, if anything, did Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and Herberf Haupt do when you saw them in front of 6361 North Leoti? A. They entered a Plymouth automobile and drove to the address 7236 North Odell." "At what time did Hans and Erna Haupt and Herbert Haupt arrive at 7236 North Odell? A. At approximately 10 P. M. * * * They parked their automobile and three of them entered that address. Q. Do you know now who lived at 7236 North Odell? A. Mr. and Mrs. Koch. * * * They remained there until about 10:30. At that time then they came out and got into the Plymouth * * *."

[13] Barbara Kluczyk, Government Witness, Landlady of Haupts.
"Q. When was the first time thereafter that you saw Herbert Haupt around your house? A. It was Monday, around eleven o'clock * * *." "Q. Would that be June 22, 1942? A. Yes. Q. Where were you at the time when you first noticed him? * * * A. I saw Herbert and his mother standing out on the sidewalk. * * * Q. When was the next time you saw Herbert Haupt? A. Monday evening. Q. That was the same evening, was it? A. The same evening, June 22, 1942. Q. Where did you see him on that occasion? A. In our apartment. * * * Q. Was any one with him. A. Mr. and Mrs. Haupt. * * * they rang the bell and I let them in * * *."

Stanley Kluczyk, Landlord.
"Q. Now, calling your attention to the 22nd day of June, 1942, in the evening were you at home? A. I was home. * * * Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and Herbert came in to me and said, 'Hello.' * * * it was a matter of minutes and they left." "I saw them leaving by their own car." Saw Herbert leaving by taxicab once or twice.

Frederick Martin Wittrock, Government Witness.
"Q. Calling your attention to the 22nd day of June, 1942, on Monday evening, where were you on that evening? A. I was at Kluczyk's home. * * * Mr. and Mrs. Haupt and also Herbert Haupt knocked at the door and came into the front room. * * * Mr. Kluczyk asked Herbert Haupt how far have you been, and he said, 'Well, South America, Mexico and all over'; * * *."

Pentel V. Robe, F. B. I. Agent
"Q. Calling your attention to Monday, June 22, 1942, at approximately 7:30 P. M. were you in the vicinity of 2234 North Fremont Street, Chicago? A. Yes, sir. * * * I observed a young man and older lady and older man come out of the address, at 2234 North Fremont Street * * *. They entered a car, * * *." (He identified Mr Haupt in the courtroom.)

Joseph W. Krupfske, F. B. I. Agent.
Testified he arrived at the Haupt home on June 22, at about 5:45 P. M. "At that time he observed three individuals coming out of the house at 2234 North Freemont."

1861 Overt Act No. 13. The specific wording of Overt Act No. 13 was:

"Said Hans Max Haupt, on or about June 23, 1942, accompanied the said enemy Herbert Haupt to the Warner Motor Sales, 958 Diversey Park Way, Chicago, Illinois, to arrange for the purchase of an automobile for the said enemy Herbert Haupt, with the purpose and intent of assisting the said enemy in carrying out his mission as an agent of the Government of the German Reich as aforesaid."

The testimony to support this overt act is that of four F. B. I. agents who were watching the Haupt movements stated they saw them leave the Haupt residence, go to a restaurant, and thence to the Warner Motor Sales, driving in the Plymouth car. They were seen to remain in the sales room for thirty-five or forty minutes, then leave together in the Plymouth car and drive back to the Haupt residence. The evidence is outlined 1862 below.[14] Overt Act No. 14. This overt act is couched in these terms:

"Said Hans Max Haupt on or about the 23rd day of June 1942, while at the Warner Motor Sales, 958 Diversey Park Way, Chicago, Illinois, signed a financial statement and an order for the purchase of an automobile and made an initial payment of (Testifying re June 22) "Q. And did they subsequently stop at another address? A. They stopped at 2234 North Fremont. • • • Then went in the front entrance. • • • Q. who • went up the steps into that apartment building? • • • A. Herbert Haupt and his mother • • •" "Shortly after Herbert • • • and Mrs. Haupt entered that address, the lights in the front of the third floor apartment were extinguished."

[14] Edward C. Dixon, F. B. I. Agent.

"Q. Now, on the same afternoon, June 23, 1942, at approximately 5:15 P. M. were you in the vicinity of 2234 North Fremont Street • • • A. I was. • At that time (6 P. M.) I observed the young man, • • • and another man, an elderly man, middle aged. • • • come out of the house. • • • They entered the automobile. • • • Q. Where did they go? A. They went to the corner of North—northwest corner of Sheffield and Diversey, I believe it was the Warner Motor Sales. • • • The two men parked their automobile and went inside the Motor Sales room. Q. All right now, what did you do? A. Got out of the automobile and walked around the corner and observed the show room. Q. Did you see anyone in the show room? A. I did. Q. Who did you see there? A. The young man with the elderly man that was driving with him • • • (identifies elderly man as defendant). Q. How long did they stay in the Warner Motor Sales? A. They came out of the Warner Motor Sales approximately 7:35 • • •" (Testifies the men drove to the Fremont street address).

John A. Lynch, F. B. I. Agent.

"Herbert and Mr. Hans Max Haupt went into the Plymouth automobile and proceeded to the Warner Motor Sales • • •" "They emerged from there and returned to 2234 North Freemont Street where the car was parked."

Peter F. Schneider, F. B. I. Agent.

"Q. Where did Hans and Herbert Haupt go when they entered the automobile? A. They drove to Warner Motor Sales at 958 Diversey, West Diversey Parkway • • • They entered this business establishment." (Testified they were in the place about forty minutes.) "They again entered their Plymouth automobile and the car was driven to 2234 North Fremont • • •"

Frank F. Meech, F. B. I. Agent.

"They • • • drove to the Warner Motor Sales • • • Hans Max Haupt and Herbert Haupt entered the Plymouth automobile and drove to the Warner Motor Sales. • • • They remained there approximately thirty-five or forty minutes. • • • I saw them emerge at approximately 7:35 • • • They entered their Plymouth automobile and drove to 2234 North Fremont. • • •"

The evidence on this overt act is that of two witnesses, a salesman, Vincent Farrell, who greeted Hans and Herbert Haupt when they came in and informed him Hans wished to purchase a good used car for his son Herbert. Upon their inquiry, he gave them the cost, the terms of sale, the amount of down payment, the credit arrangement. During the progress of the negotiations, Mr. Philip Vinson, the general manager, came in and was introduced to the Haupts. He OKed the arrangements, saw the deed signed by Mr. Haupt, the credit statement was taken and 1863 signed in his presence. The testimony of these two witnesses is summarized below.[15]

Overt Act No. 15. The 15th overt act is charged in this language: "Said Hans Max Haupt on or about June 24, 1942, again ac-

"Q. Were you on duty at the place of business of the Warner Motor Sales • • • on the evening of June 23, 1942? A. I was. Q. Did any prospective customer come in? A. About six o'clock there were two gentlemen that came in. I approached them, and they said they wanted to buy a good late model used car. • • • Q. Did the man, Hans Haupt, • • • say any thing to you? A. Well, I asked if I could be of help to him and he said, yes, he wanted to buy a good used late model car. So I showed him a number of cars. • • • He seemed to like this car (Pontiac) very much. Said he wanted to know if he could buy it on a time-payment. I said, Well, I have a car, but he says 'I do not intend to trade it in. It is for my son.' Q. What was for his son? A. This car that he was buying. So I said, 'You can buy it on time payments.' He wanted to know how much was required to pay down. So I said, 'If you will step over to my desk, we will set up the deal. I will show you just the required down-payment, and the monthly payments, the insurance, and so forth.' Q. What was the price of the car? A. $1,045. • • • Q. Was there any decision made as to the purchase of the car that evening? A. Well, I set up the deal • • • • • • "They wanted to know if they could put $10 down, and I said they could. They said, 'We will have the money, and we will have to bring in some cash.' • • • Hans Haupt wanted to know how much he would have to put down for the car. I said, 'That is approximately half the price of the car.' He wanted to know if he could put down $10 deposit and come the next day, the following day, and put down the balance. I said that would be perfectly satisfactory. So I wrote up the financial statement, and asked his name, and he told me, 'Hans Haupt.' He introduced me to his son as Herbert Haupt. I filled out the financial statement complete, to the Finance Company, and I wrote up the order, and he signed the order, and he put down, he put down a $10 deposit down on the car. • • • In the meantime, the manager came in. Q. Who is the manager? A. Phil Vinson. • • • He came in approximately 7 o'clock. • • • I called him over and introduced him to Hans Haupt and to Herbert Haupt the son; and told him that they had bought this car, put $10 deposit, and would drop in the following day and pay the balance. He said it looked like a good order, looked very good. • • • Q. Was the signature of Hans Haupt placed there? (On the order) • • • A. That is right. • • • Q. How long did the defendant, Hans Haupt, and Herbert Haupt remain in your place of business that night? A. I venture to say they were there about an hour and a half. • • • Q. In reference to this financial statement, did you state you took a financial statement from him? A. Yes. Q. That information was given to you by whom? A. That was given to me by Hans Haupt. • • • Q. Were there any references given? • • • business associates and friends • • • of Hans Haupt." "Was there any contract executed. A. Well, the usual finance contract. Two F. B. I. agents who were covering the actions of the Haupts testified to seeing the father and son leave the Haupt residence and drive to the Warner Motor Sales Company on June 24, remain there awhile, and then they saw Herbert drive away from the auto company in a Pontiac coupe. Mr. Haupt had 1865 driven them to the auto company in a Plymouth car. The testimony of these two agents is outlined below.[16]

Overt Act No. 23. The final act submitted to the jury is also a "harboring" accusation, in similar terms as the other harboring charges, except that it deals with the day
1873 of June 27, 1942. Five F. B. I. agents testified to the entering and leaving of the building by Herbert Haupt.[2]

It would seem inexcusable to set forth the lengthy statement of witnesses which supports or tends to support the numerous so-called overt acts. We feel like apologizing therefor.
1874 Yet, on the theory advanced by the defendant's counsel we have found no way to avoid it. The errors assigned deal not only with the legal sufficiency of the acts and deeds of the defendant but also with the sufficiency of the evidence to establish or make a jury question as to whether two witnesses proved all of them and by direct testimony. the court to the jury in respect to said overt acts and the necessity of proving all of them.

SUFFICIENCY OF PROOF OF OVERT ACTS, BY TWO WITNESSES

(A) The Overt Acts as to Harboring. Overt Acts 12, 17, and 20–23, charged harboring each of the successive days from June 22 to June 27. As to several of these days there was simply the testimony of F. B. I. agents that they saw the saboteur, Herbert, and his father leaving and going into the front entrance of the six-apartment building wherein the Haupts lived. Counsel for defendant strenuously argues that there is no "direct" proof that Herbert was actually in the Haupt apartment, the F. B. I. testimony being circumstantial proof.

This argument is drawn from the language in the Cramer case: "While to prove giving of aid and comfort would require the prosecution to show actions and deeds, if the Constitution stopped there, such acts could be inferred from circumstantial evidence. This the framers thought would not do. So they added what in effect is a command that the overt acts must be established by direct evidence, and the direct testimony must be that of two witnesses instead of one."

In our opinion the testimony of persons who saw the son enter the front entrance which led to the front three apartments of the six apartment building, on the third floor of which the defendant father lived, saw lights either go on or off in the third floor apartment soon after entry of the persons, saw the son emerge in different garments than that in which he entered that same entrance some time before; saw the son leave many hours after having entered—is direct testimony that said son was being quartered in the father's home. To call such evidence circumstantial, rather than direct, is the extreme of tenuity. Such was not the protection intended to be accorded by the Constitution to one charged 1875 with treason, when it required the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act. It is worthy of passing note that it is the decision in the Cramer case, not the definition found in the Constitution, which adds the necessity of "direct evidence." We must, however, and do follow the court holding.

SUFFICIENCY OF PROOF AS TO OTHER OVERT ACTS

(B) The Automobile Transactions. Overt Acts 13 to 16 covered the automobile transactions. Two of the acts charged accompanying by the defendant, of the son, to the auto sales agency. Two charged the signing of the financial statement, making initial payment, and the further payment on the car.

The proof of accompanying is also by F. B. I. agents, as well as of the two men in the agency. There can be no doubt that two witnesses testified to the father's going with the son to the agency; nor that he signed the statement, nor that he handed over the cash.

Counsel for defendant argues that there were not two witnesses to the financial aspects of the transaction, that the deal was handled by the salesman, and the manager came in later, or was at some distance from the parties at the time of the negotiations. A careful reading of the testimony of Mr. Vinson, discloses that he was cognizant of the whole transaction, had met the father and son; had been consulted by the salesman as to whether the price were satisfactory (having been reduced by the salesman); he talked with them about the preliminary bill of sale; it was signed in his presence by the father; the credit statement was made in his presence. As to the next evening (June 24) the manager had no conversation with the father and son, but he saw them come in, he stated "we" receipted for the down payment, and he received the money which had been put down, saw Hans Haupt's name on the note, and saw the invoice.

To discount testimony of the manager as above outlined as not direct support for the charge of the overt act that "Hans * * * while at the Warner Motor Sales * * * made a further payment in cash towards the purchase of an automobile for said enemy Herbert Haupt and completed arrangements for the purchase of said automobile and did purchase said automobile for said enemy Herbert Haupt", would seem to us ludicrous—were this not the serious charge of treason.

576 SUFFICIENCY OF PROOF AS TO THIRD GROUP OF OVERT ACTS, TO-WIT 10 AND 11

(C) Accompanying Herbert to Regain Employment in Simpson Optical C6. These Acts charged the father with "accompanying" the son to the homes of two persons influential in the company for the purpose of assisting Herbert in seeking re-employment. There is no doubt that the father did accompany the son to these homes, that he was present when the son asked for re-employment, sometimes volunteered information as to the son's whereabouts in the interval since he left the employ of the company, or that the son had now registered for the draft, etc. This was established by the testimony of two witnesses. There can be no doubt the father's (and mother's) presence lent an air of respectability (and moral support) to the son's application—gave the impression that here was a returned traveller now ready to renounce farflung adventure (digging for gold) and settle down to the serious business of making a living.

LEGAL SUFFICIENCY OF THE OVERT ACTS CHARGED

Introductory. The Cramer case supplies many markers of the legal attributes of a treasonable overt act. Alas, not all of them contribute to clarity of understanding. Still they are our guides. We quote therefrom:

"Of course the overt acts of aid and comfort must be intentional as distinguished from merely negligent or undesigned ones. * * * he must intend to betray his country by means of the act. * * *

"Actions of the accused are set in time and place in many relationships. Environment illuminates the meaning of acts, as context does that of words. What a man is up to may be clear from considering his bare acts by themselves; often it is made clear when we know the reciprocity and sequence of his acts with those others, the interchange between him and another, the give and take of the situation."

"From duly proven overt acts of aid and comfort to the enemy in their setting, it may well be that the natural and reasonable inference of intention to betray will be warranted.

"The very minimum function that an overt act must per-1877 form in a treason prosecution is that it show sufficient action by the accused, in its setting, to sustain a finding that the accused actually gave aid and comfort to the enemy.

"It may be that in some cases the overt acts, sufficient to prove giving of aid and comfort, will fall short of showing intent to betray and that questions will then be raised as to permissible methods of proof that we do not reach in this case. But in this and some cases we have cited where the sufficiency of the overt acts has been challenged because they were colorless as to intent, we are persuaded the reason intent was left in question was that the acts were really indecisive as giving of aid and comfort. When we deal with acts that are trivial and commonplace and hence are doubtful as to whether they gave aid and comfort to the enemy, we are most put to it to find in other evidence a treacherous intent."

All of the acts charged in this indictment could have been innocent acts. Parents house their adult children; they buy them cars; they help them seek employment. But such children are rarely enemies. Yet even performance of the accused acts for an enemy-child might not establish treason. The setting for the overt acts, i. e., the father's knowledge of the enemy-son's mission with specific instructions to acquire a car to effectuate the mission's objects, to gain reemployment to obtain knowledge of the Norden bomb sight and plans of the Simpson Company—it is this setting which transforms the innocent into the sinister.

We believe the defendant is laboring under one fundamental misapprehension of the Cramer case—that we may not take extraneous evidence, allegedly by one witness alone, to breathe traitorous design into seemingly innocuous acts. He relies on this statement taken from the Cramer opinion:

"Every act, movement, deed, and word of the defendant charged to constitute treason must be supported by the testimony of two witnesses. The two-witness principle is to interdict imputation of incriminating acts to the accused by circumstantial evidence or by the testimony of a single witness. The prosecution can not rely on evidence which does not meet the constitutional test for overt acts to create any inference that the accused did other acts or did something more than was shown in the overt act, in 1878 order to make a giving of aid and comfort to the enemy." [Latter italics ours.]

We do not construe this quotation to deny the right to prove by extraneous evidence the intent with which the very acts charged were done. Quite shortly after the above quotation, the court says:

"It may be that in some cases the overt acts, sufficient to prove giving of aid and comfort, will fall short of showing intent to betray and that questions will then be raised as to permissible methods of proof that we do not reach in this case. But in this and some cases we have cited where the sufficiency of the overt acts has been challenged because they were colorless as to intent, we are persuaded the reason intent was left in question was that the acts were really indecisive as a giving of aid and comfort. When we deal with acts that are trivial and commonplace and hence are doubtful as to whether they give aid and comfort to the enemy, we are most put to it to find in other evidence a treacherous intent."

We think the earlier language in the same opinion is of prime importance in construing the legal requisites of proof of intent to betray. The court says:

"Bearing in mind that the constitutional requirement in effect is one of direct rather than circumstantial evidence, we must give it a reasonable effect in the light of its purpose both to preserve the offense and to protect citizens from its abuse. What is designed in the mind of an accused never is susceptible of proof by direct testimony. If we were to hold that the disloyal and treacherous intention must be proved by the direct testimony of two witnesses, it would be to hold that it is never provable. It seems obvious that adherence to the enemy, in the sense of a disloyal state of mind, cannot be, and is not required to be proved, by deposition of two witnesses.

"Since intent must be inferred from conduct of some sort, we think it is permissible to draw usual reasonable inferences as to intent from the overt acts. The law of treason, like the law of lesser crimes, assumes every man to intend the natural consequences which one standing in his circumstances and 1879 possessing his knowledge would reasonably expect to result from his acts. Proof that a citizen did give aid and comfort to any enemy may well be in the circumstance sufficient evidence that he adhered to that enemy and intended and purposed to strike at his own country."

Of great importance is also this statement:

"It is only overt acts by the accused which the Constitution explicitly requires to be proved by the testimony of two witnesses. It does not make other common law evidence inadmissible nor deny its inherent powers of persuasion. It does not forbid judging by the usual process by which the significance of conduct often will be determined by facts which are not acts. Actions of the accused are set in time and place in many relationships. Environment illuminates the meaning of acts, as context does that of words. What a man is up to may be clear from considering his bare acts by themselves; often it is made clear when we know the reciprocity and sequence of his acts with those of others, the interchange between him and another, the give and take of the situation."

In the Cramer case, the court held the act of "tippling in a tavern" to be a harmless act, of no possible benefit to the enemy, but even possibly a detriment to the illegal venture. No evidence was shown of any aid or comfort given at that tavern meeting—not even that Cramer had paid for the food or drink.

The Court thought, on the other hand, an overt act charging the taking a large sum of money from the German agent was not such a "usual amenity of social intercourse" and was of such fibre as could constitute an overt act in a treason case. They noted that Cramer had given the German agents no "shelter, nothing that can be called sustenance or supplies, and there is no evidence that he gave them encouragement or counsel, or even paid for their drinks." They said, "Meeting with Cramer in public drinking places to tipple and trifle was no part of the saboteurs' mission and did not advance it. It may well have been a digression which jeopardized its success."

The overt acts here involved were harboring an enemy, buying a car, accompanying to seek reemployment, the first an essential to any accomplishment of the saboteurs' mission, the latter
1880 two were directly ordered by the saboteur's superior. Their seeming harmlessness therefore is dispelled when they are viewed in their "setting," their "environment." During the week the son was with the father, little else was done (except visits to restaurants, cinema, taverns, and friends).

Harboring and sheltering overt acts. There can be little doubt that on the respective dates alleged, the son, Herbert, stayed overnight in his father's home, ate meals there, changed clothes there, and lived as a regular member of the family.

Nor can we entertain much doubt that the harboring and sheltering, with the treasonous intent, constitute adhering to the enemy and giving aid and comfort. A saboteur must be lodged, and he must be lodged in a safe place if his mission is to be effected. One witness testified that the father sought lodging for the son at another place, also a "mailing address" at this witness' rooming house, but did not succeed. It was essential for the son to be quartered in Chicago if he were to gain reemployment with the Simpson Optical Company, in accordance with his directions.

We are clearly of the opinion that an overt act which showed the knowing harboring of a saboteur was an act which met the requirements of the Constitutional definition.

The Overt Acts repurchase of automobile. It is defendent's argument that the purchase of the automobile was an innocent act in its entirety—the father had been using the son's Plymouth car during his absence, using it hard, and upon the son's return immediately went about to replace it with another car. While this explanation has plausibility, it does not comport with the facts actually disclosed.

One of the instructions Herbert received was to obtain a car to facilitate transportation of the explosives from the beach in Florida, for delivery to the various points of sabotage, and as a means of travel for the members of the expedition. The purchase of the car was arranged for within a couple of days of Herbert's return—showing urgency of his duty. The old Plymouth car had not become obsolete, in fact it was used by the Haupt family during the week of surveillance. There would not have been the rush to buy the new car, without the pressing need for it.

This son had just returned from a year's absence, yet
1881 he and the father immediately went out and arranged for the purchase of a car on one day and picked it up the next—paying for it in cash, which included several $50 bills. The father purchased this car in his own name, signed the financial statement, gave references. It is most probable it was the enemy-son's money, yet the father purchased the car. The father drove him there, took part in all the negotiations.

We do not feel this, a harmless innocent act, incapable of being an overt act in a treason charge, although an ordinary act in every day life. Here it was an essential link in a deadly chain. It was an indispensable instrumentality to the effectuation of the mission of the saboteur group.

Defendant stresses the negligibility of the father's driving the son ("accompanying") him to the motor sales place as an overt act. True, it may not be considered as of gross proportion in the entire scheme of things, but it was essential, and the father's driving the son there facilitated the accomplishment of the purchase.

SUFFICIENCY OF OVERT ACT RE SEEKING REEMPLOYMENT

Again we have an act which assuredly is a commonplace one, i. e., seeking reemployment upon return from a trip. It's also natural to return to the place of prior employment. Again the sinister aspect is revealed when it is shown Herbert was the one member of the gang of saboteurs instructed to return to his old job to obtain secrets of the Norden bomb sight manufactured by the Simpson Optical Company, and to obtain plans of the Plant lay out for incendiary purposes. He was not merely seeking reemployment. What is more, his father knew it. The father's accompanying him to the homes of the foremen, participating in the conversation (though not himself asking that his son be reemployed) was helping the son to carry out his instructions. Of course, the son could have sought reemployment alone—but it was not to the Company that he went—he went to the homes of the foremen, in the evening, and it was natural for the innocent outward appearances, that his father and mother go with him. These foremen were acquaintances of the family. The father's presence gave weight to Herbert's application. It also made for better concealment of Herbert's wicked objective.

Evidence of traitorous intent. "* * * to make treason the defendant not only must intend to act, but he must intend 1882 to betray his country by means of the act" (325 U. S. 1, 31).

It is on this point that defendant leans heavily—his acts were alleged those of a devoted father, harboring an erring son, solely because of paternal solicitude. He claims there is no "two witness" direct proof of any contrary possibility.

Again the Cramer opinion must be our guide. It says:

"What is designed in the mind of an accused never is susceptible of proof by direct testimony. If we were to hold that the disloyal and treacherous intention must be proved by the direct testimony of two witnesses, it would be to hold that it is never provable."

Inasmuch as it is obvious that direct proof of a man's thoughts is well-nigh impossible, we rely on his utterances, as well as his acts, for a disclosure of intention. In the instant case the utter-

Pennel V. Robe, Government Witness, F. B. I. Agent.

Gives same story as Hirsch, above, including defendant's saying that Herbert told them he went to Germany and returned to this country by submarine. "Herbie Haupt said that his duties in this country was that of a contact man."

William Max Schroeder, Government Witness, co-worker of defendant.

Mrs. Louis Fishman, Government Witness, Employer of Defendant.

"Hans Haupt said that if we entered war against Germany we would have a revolution in this country like they had there after the last war; that we have German organizations back here that would take our armories over, our electrical companies, our telephone companies; that the same think would happen to us as happened in Norway and France, that we would be taken from within by Fifth Column activities."

John Majerczak, Government Witness, Convict.

1883 are this: Hans in June, 1941 said his son liked Germany better than the United States and wanted to go back and fight for the Germans. In June of 1942, Hans gave a friend eighteen fifty dollar bills "of my own money" to keep for him because he was afraid the F. B. I. would come and take it (the F. B. I. took it from the recipient). After defendant was taken into custody he asked the marshal if he might speak to the F. B. I. and two agents went to see him. They were Agents Hirsch
1884 and Robe. Defendant told them that Wergin was responsible for his son's and his apprehension, and he wanted to testify in the trial against him. Defendant told them the Haupts had gone to the Wergin home on June 20th and Herbert told a complete story of his trip; defendant told them Herbert was in the Intelligence School and "that he had a huge sum of money to use in connection with that over here." Wergin
1885 said he wasn't a "dummy," inferring he knew the purpose of Herbert's trip, because he had a similar duty in World War I. Wergin offered to help Herbert because he wanted some of the money.

Defendant told Agent Hirsch, the three Haupts went to the Froehling home on June 19th and Herbert told the same story, and told of coming back on a German submarine. He also told the Agent that on June 27th when Herbert had not shown up all day, the Haupts, Wergins, and Froehlings had a meeting in the

"He told me (in 1939) that if war would break out with the United States and Germany, he would never permit his boy to join the American Army. He would send him to Mexico and from there he could go to Germany and join the Air Force. He told me at the same time that if war broke out, that if the country would take him in the Army, he would crawl over to the enemy lines and tell them our position."

Haupt home and decided on a uniform statement they would all make, if apprehended, namely, that they knew nothing of Herbert's activities except that he had been to Mexico. F. B. I. Agent Robe testified to the same as Agent Hirsch, adding that defendant said Herbert had said he was to be a "contact man" in this country.

A coworker of defendant in 1936 stated that Hans told him that he, the witness, was "not a good German" and he "should shame" himself for not contributing to the German cause; he lauded Hitler.

An employer of defendant and his wife testified to conversations wherein defendant said:

"If we entered war against Germany we would have a revolution in this country like they had there after the last war; that we have German organizations back here that would take our armories over, our electrical companies, our telephone companies; that the same thing would happen to us as happened in Norway and France, that we would be taken from within by Fifth Column activities."

He again lauded Hitler and his regime.

Additional overwhelming evidence comes from two convicts who were jail-mates of Haupt in the County Jail after apprehension in 1942. They are Hamby and Majerczak. Defendant told these jail-mates that Herbert had related how he had landed in this country, how they hid the explosives; that Herbert gave him money; that Herbert asked him to purchase an automobile and gave him $1,000 out of the money belt to buy it with; Herbert also gave him thousands of dollars which he hid; defendant told the witnesses he purchased the automobile for the son, he lauded Hitler.

We have not overlooked the warning which appeared in the opinion of the majority of the Supreme Court in the Cramer case, to wit:

1886 "To use prewar expressions of opposition to entering a war to convict of treason during the war is a dangerous procedure at best. The same may be said about the inference of disloyal attitude created by showing that he refused to buy bonds and closed the door in the salesman's face. Another class of evidence consists of admissions to agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. They are, of course, not 'confessions in open court.' The Government does not contend and could not well contend that admissions made out of court, if otherwise admissible, can supply a deficiency in proof of the overt act itself." [Italics ours.]

In the instant case the prewar utterances are not half so damning as the postwar ones. The prewar utterances show a very strong pro-Nazi adulation. The postwar utterances show a knowledge of Herbert's mission here, and defendant's cooperation to effectuate it.

Defendant stresses the flimsiness of the convicts' testimony. It is admittedly not the weightiest of evidence. If true, it revealed defendant as an indiscreet person. Why should the jury believe it? If defendant had been of good sense, why would he join his son who chose to serve Germany on so important a war mission? Reconciliation of these statements, conclusively established, with ordinary horse sense and good judgment is impossible. Rather it characterizes the action of one who was drunk with Hitler Naziism and aflame with the delusion that he belonged to a superior people whose mission was to conquer the world, and his son was playing a leading role in that conquest. True, outside of an overweaning self-confidence he had little to support his belief in membership in a superior nation. But the jury was weighing the story of the witnesses and the defendant. The latter was throwing bricks at these witnesses, discrediting them, and pointing to their prison record. Perhaps the jury believed defendant was living in a glass house.

The jury, however, not the court, was the judge of the credibility of all the witnesses.

There is substantiation of the convicts' testimony in the voluntarily-told story by defendant to the F. B. I. agents, when, in vengeance, he sought to ensure the conviction of the person he believed had betrayed his son and himself. The agents' testimony concerned confessions not made in open court, and therefore 1887 was not admissible to prove the overt acts. They were properly received, however, to prove the intent with which those overt acts were committed.

We quote from the testimony of the witness Hamby.[23]

In the summer of 1939 defendant told a co-worker that he would never permit his boy to join the American Army. He would send him to Mexico and from there he could go to Germany and join the Air Force. He stated, "* * * he told me at the same time that if war broke out, that if the country would take him in the Army, he would crawl over the enemy lines and tell them our position. * * * he told me he had no feeling for the United States

[23] "Herbert Haupt told him that he came back on a German submarine. He said he did not believe it at first but the son convinced him that he had come back on a German submarine and he explained to Mr. Haupt the purpose, his purpose of coming back to this country, that he came back here to sabotage, to blow up the ammunition dumps, and many factories * * *, obstruct traffic, * * * everything possible, and he named one specific place, the Pressed Steel Company. * * * and he asked me * * * I have to come to you to help me. I will need help. Mr. Haupt told me he would assist him as much as he possibly could. * * * He gave Mr. Haupt some money, a large sum of money * * * and he also gave him money to buy an automobile, and Mr. Haupt told me that his son told him he did not think it advisable that he should buy an automobile and Mr. Haupt agreed that it was not advisable * * * so Mr. Haupt bought the car himself for Herbert * * * Herbert Haupt told his dad that he needed a car to get around, to do the work that he was supposed to do when he came back to this country. * * * Mr. Haupt told me that his son wanted a job in the Optical Company; * * * that his son wanted some plans which this factory * * * out of this factory, regarding some kind of a sight, but he was supposed to turn those plans over to Germany * * *."

at all. His feelings were only for Germany, and he wished Hitler would come over here * * *."

Reading the evidence, with the care which a treason charge demands, we are left free of all doubt as to the sufficiency of the evidence of criminal intent to support the verdict. It persuasively supports the contention that the overt acts here were done with a knowledge and with an intent to betray this country in time of war, and to aid the enemy, Germany. True, defendant was a scared man (the F. B. I. having investigated the Haupts before Herbert's return), but his heart was still strong for the German cause, even after the declaration of war. He could not refrain from aiding his son in his mission, knowingly and treasonously. The jury could hardly have found other than the defendant was proud his son was a German saboteur, bent on uncovering important war secrets and destroying war plants which were essential to our successful conduct of the war.

1888 Such action by Government counsel in offering all this evidence, we think, would be better commended than criticized.

In a case where criminal intent is so vital in the jury's determination of guilt, as in a treason case, it would seem to be highly desirable that the jury receive all the enlightenment obtainable. In fact, it must occur to a reader of the record before us that defendant would, if innocent, have acted more wisely had he taken the witness stand and explained or denied, if he could make denial, all the damaging testimony of the Government witnesses. Of course, he was not required to take the witness stand. He could, as he did, stand mute, and no unfavorable comment upon such fact could be made to the jury by the prosecutor. Determination of the course to be pursued depends largely on the facts and the state of the evidence produced by the Government. One thing is certain. The Government should not be condemned for offering all the relevant, competent evidence.

Counsel charges duplicity in the indictment and lack of particularity. In general these criticisms were covered in this court's opinion on the former appeal (136 F. 2d 661) and decided adversely to the defendant, upon an indictment sufficiently similar to the instant one to make the ruling there made, here applicable. We adhere to the ruling in that case on this point.

Sufficiency of the Indictment. Defendant argues the indictment does not state the crime of treason because the alleged overt acts are legally insufficient. We reject the contention for reasons heretofore given. Suffice it to say that the so-called "commonplace insignificant" overt acts charged when read "in their setting" are neither commonplace nor insignificant.

Error is also assigned because certain "withdrawn" overt acts such as 1, 4, and 8, which charged simply "conferring" with the enemy agent remained physically in the documentary indictment and were taken to the jury room. Evidence had been introduced which showed that such conferences had been in fact held at the various homes of the Froehlings, Wergins, and Haupts, so their recital in the overt acts could not have been prejudicial. This evidence was received as a part "of the setting."

It has been generally believed that the prosecutor occupies a position somewhat judicial in character; that he is inter-
1889 ested in presenting all the facts, those unfavorable to his case, as well as favorable. He does not perform as a skillful fencer matching wits with an able seaman especially skilled in defensive tactics in criminal cases. In other words, he is charged with the duty to fully disclose and fairly appraise all of the facts.

Defendant's criticism is that the prosecutor here held nothing back but disclosed all of defendant's acts and deeds, even though some of them were not established by two witnesses. Such one witness testimony was illuminating and material on the issue of intent rather than as proof of overt acts.

Denial of Bill of Particulars. Defendant complains of the denial of a bill of particulars which sought to inform him of the manner in which his accompanying his son to the homes of the former supervisory employers aided the son in securing employment, and in what manner and by what acts he harbored and sheltered his son, and how he aided his son's mission by purchasing a car. A mere statement of these requests shows their insubstantiality. There was no vagueness in the indictment's allegation which needed clarification by particularization—no surprise could be practiced on the defendant in proving the allegations.

Denial of Motion to Quash Indictment

Defendant argues that the trial court erred in refusing to quash the instant indictment inasmuch as the former indictment for treason, conviction under which was reversed by this court and the cause remanded, was still pending.

Neither side has cited authority to support its contention.

An examination of the two indictments makes it clear that they cover the same acts of treason, although the defendants were not the same. Nor were the overt acts. We have no doubt that should the instant conviction stand, an attempted retrial, upon the former indictment, would be subject to a plea of double jeopardy.

Our conclusion is that the grand jury may return several indictments against the accused grounded on the same criminal act.[24]

[24] Thompson v. U. S., 202 F. 401; Thompson v. State, 61 Neb. 209, 85 N. W. 62

The pendency of an indictment against the accused where defendant has not been placed in jeopardy upon it does not prevent 1890 a later valid indictment against him.[25] Generally speaking, the pendency of a previous indictment is not ground for quashing a second indictment,[26] although it is discretionary with the court to require the Government to elect upon which indictment it will proceed.[27] A few of the cases bearing on the subject are collected in the margin.[28] Especial attention is called to U. S. v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 672.

The practice is not commended in the ordinary case.

Errors in Admission of Evidence

Prewar Utterances. Error is charged for admission of pre-war utterances, one of which was made six years prior to the time of the offense, and the others about three or fewer years before. These utterances were strong pro-German statements. They have been detailed above. We believe such utterances were receivable as background evidence bearing on the intent with which the overt acts were committed.

As early as 1 U. S. (33) the question of the admissibility of words to enlighten as to motive, was discussed. There the Court said, "But, as it appears that the prisoner was actually with the enemy at another time, words indicating his intention to join them are proper testimony, to explain the motives upon which that intention was afterwards carried into effect." (Respublica v. Malin.) (See also U. S. v. Pelley, 132 F. 2d 170; U. S. v. Burr, 25 Fed. Cases, No. 14,693; American Jurisprudence, Vol. 20, "Evidence," Sec. 340.)

Admission of such evidence may be somewhat dangerous, but it may nevertheless be essential. In the instant case the trial court took care to guard the danger of misuse of such testimony by instructions both at the time the testimony was admitted, and at final submission of the case. He admonished the jury that such statements were not a basis for the charge of treason, that 1891 defendant had the legal right to freedom of expression. Such statements were to be considered only in determining what defendant's intent may have been after the declaration of war, in committing (if he did) any of the overt acts submitted to them.

No. 15,354, Nash v. State, 73 Ark. 399, 84 S. W. 497.

Treason can not be committed without treasonous intent, and intent being the subjective fact it is, statements of the accused are of real importance in the proof.

Evidence re Exhibits. Complaint is made of the introduction of pictures of the boxes of ammunition which were cached on the beach in Florida, of the saboteurs' caps, Herbert's ring with the Nazi crest, etc., as evidence not connected up with either Herbert or the defendant. The testimony of Burger, a member of the other saboteur party which landed in New York, connected it with Herbert. He had seen the exhibits in Germany when the two expeditions were being outfitted. The testimony of the F. B. I. agents, Connelly and Pryor, also tied it to Herbert.

As against the defendant this evidence was receivable to show the treason to which Herbert was a party. It was necessary for the Government to show treason and also that defendant was a party to said treason. This evidence tended to show treason. The burden was on the Government to show (a) a treasonable enterprise and (b) defendant was a party to it. This evidence was part of the proof tending to establish (a). And the crime of treason is not child's play. It's a most serious matter. In all its naked wickedness, it is shocking. To offer evidence that the actors used high power explosives to destroy war industries, to kill large bodies of workers, to obtain war secrets of great value to the enemy, was no doubt highly impressive and persuasive with a jury of loyal American citizens. The complaint of counsel, however, should not be directed to the inadmissibility of such evidence. It should be directed to the action of defendant and his son. As against each of them such evidence would not have been harmful, had Hans and Herbert not been actors playing a leading role in the perpetration of said treason.

Errors re Instructions. One instruction complained of (No. 8) charged in substance that the jury was not to find the defendant guilty unless they believed him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Defendant contends the constitutional "two witness" requirement of proof should have been inserted. Had there been no precise instruction on the absolute necessity of two witness proof 1892 in order to have conviction, there would be more merit in defendant's assignment of error. Each paragraph of an instruction deals with a different aspect of the law and if all the requirements were to be incorporated in each paragraph confusion, not clarity, would result.

We find no error in instruction No. 9 defining "reasonable doubt." It couched in layman terms the degree of doubt barring conviction.

Instruction No. 13 is said to give a convict's testimony a build-up rather than cautionary. We do not so read this instruction, which states that proof of conviction of a felony is evidence tending to impeach the witness' credibility, but the fact that a witness has been convicted does not mean that he can not tell the truth.

Instruction No. 26 consisted in part of reading some of the indictment, including the reading of overt acts not submitted to the jury, and thereby an unfavorable impression was left with the jury of many extraneous illegal activities of the defendant. The court admonished the jury to consider only the submitted overt acts, and, to consider the evidence adduced in re the unsubmitted overt acts, in the determination of the intent with which defendant did the submitted overt acts. The jury was sufficiently apprised that the indictment was but the pleading. It had to be proven. It was not evidence.

The same answer to the objection to Instruction 36 holds good as to No. 8, above.

Instructions 39, 40, and 44, defining an "overt act" might not stand the test of the definition in the Cramer case as to what constitutes an overt act in the crime of treason, but we can see no prejudicial error therein. The duty of the jury was to determine guilt under the submitted overt acts. The court determined the legal sufficiency of all overt acts relied on for conviction. In this case, the overt acts submitted to the jury measured up to the correct definition of a legally sufficient overt act.

Counsel contended that the sentence in Instruction 47, "The Court is submitting to your consideration as possible overt acts of treason, the following alleged acts * * *," is not a neutral statement of submission, but indicates to the jury those acts have been sufficiently proved. We do not so construe that language.

As to instruction No. 49, wherein the trial court charged:

"49. Since the law requires that there shall be no 1893 conviction of treason unless there are two direct witnesses to the same overt act, all the other alleged overt acts charged in this indictment are hereby withdrawn from your consideration as overt acts of treason, for even if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt they were performed, they may not in themselves be made the basis of a conviction under the Constitution. However, if you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did actually perform any of these other alleged overt acts which were not proven to the degree required by the Constitution, you may consider any such act in determining the question of the intent with which the defendant may have performed, if you find beyond a reasonable doubt he did perform, any of the above alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration and not withdrawn, and which other possible overt acts, not withdrawn, you find from all of the evidence are proven beyond a reasonable doubt by two direct witnesses to the same overt act."

The objection was that it was error to send to the jury the unsubmitted counts, for any purpose, in view of the "two-witness" rule. We have discussed above our interpretation of the Cramer case which specifically states the "two-witness" rule is applicable to the overt act aspect of treason, and not to intent; therefore it was permissible to consider the evidence under the unsubmitted counts if relevant to a determination of intent with which the submitted overt acts were done.

The most seriously argued objection to the charge arises out of instructions 50 and 51. In essence, these instructions told the jury that they were to find the defendant guilty if they found he performed any one of the treasonable overt acts submitted, to which acts two witnesses had testified. A plurality of overt acts was submitted. A general verdict was returned. The Cramer case (in footnote 45), 325 U. S. 1, 36, states a general verdict must be set aside "if any of the separable acts submitted was insufficient."

If it were not for the fact that our study of the evidence as summarized above supports the jury's verdict of guilt on any or all of the overt acts submitted, reversal would on this theory follow. We have reached the conclusion that each of the overt acts submitted to the jury was legally (or constitutionally) sufficient.

1894 It follows, we think, that if the jury was satisfied by the necessary quantum of proof and by two witnesses, that one or more of the submitted overt acts were proven, the crime was established.

Another phase of this question not argued, tends to support the validity of instructions 50 and 51.

Is the overt act an element of the crime?

In other words, the Constitution specifically defines the crime: "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." After the definition of treason is given, there is added a provision as to the quantum of proof necessary to convict: "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court." It calls for two witnesses to prove one of the acts committed by the defendant in the effectuation of the treason.

The definition of the crime, whether of treason or perjury, where also two witnesses were required, does not include as an element of the crime, the testimony of witnesses whose evidence established the crime so defined. Just as any two witnesses, if believed by a jury, will suffice, so will any one of the legally sufficient overt acts suffice, if proved by two witnesses, provided it is held that said overt act is not an element of the crime.

In the Cramer case the Court said, "The crime of treason consists of two elements: adhering to the enemy; and rendering him aid and comfort." Inferentially this excludes the overt act as an element of the crime.

There seems to be good reason against its inclusion as an element of the crime. If it is an essential element then there would be as many treasons as there are overt acts. As one convicted of treason can give his life but once, there could be but one punishment, if the punishment be death. On the other hand, if acquitted on the first trial, the defendant could be tried times without number. For each overt act, if it be an essential element of the crime, makes for a separate and distinct crime. If the overt act be an essential element of the crime, then each overt act, being different, there would be no limit to the number of treason crimes a defendant could commit in a single day.

On the other hand, consistency appears in the argument that the second sentence of Article III, Section 3, the only 1895 one which mentions overt acts, is merely directed to the sufficiency of the proof of treason. It would be more logical to say that one treasonable enterprise exists although numerous overt acts in carrying it out may be shown. Not until one treasonable enterprise was ended, could a second treason begin.

On this theory there could be no criticism of either instruction 50 or 51, for obviously if the treason were committed and one of several overt acts were established, a case would be made out.

This view of the crime of treason does not relieve the Government of proving the two elements essential to the crime (a) adhering to the enemy, and (b) rendering the enemy aid and comfort. It is necessary to prove an act or a deed showing the traitor has passed from a state of mind, from the mental, to the doer stage.

Support for this line of reasoning may be found in many cases (Goode v. U. S., 159 U. S. 663; Clifton v. U. S., 4 How. 242; Powers v. U. S., 223 U. S. 303; Dunbar v. U. S., 156 U. S. 185; Evans v. U. S., 153 U. S. 584; Claassen v. U. S., 142 U. S. 140; Coffey v. U. S., 116 U. S. 427; Snyder v. U. S., 112 U. S. 216) where it is held that one good count in an indictment containing several counts will support conviction where a general verdict has been rendered.

It is, however, not necessary to sustain the judgment that we adopt this construction of the Constitutional provision although it is an inescapable conclusion. For all of the overt acts charged in the cases before us were legally sufficient and there being proof that defendant adhered to the enemy by giving aid and comfort, the crime was committed when and if any one legally sufficient overt act was found by the jury to be established.

As to instructions 53 and 54, in regard to intent, defendant complains of the phrase "before you can find the defendant guilty" and the statement, "This does not mean, however, that you must find that the defendant went through any specific mental process as a result of which he was conscious of the specific thought 'I am going to commit treason.'" He cites the Cramer case statement that to "make treason the defendant not only must intend the act, but he must intend to betray his country by means of the act."

We think the contention is answered by a reading of the whole of the instruction, and by the language of the Cramer case.

1896 "Since intent must be inferred from conduct of some sort, we think it is permissible to draw usual reasonable inferences as to intent from the overt acts. The law of treason, like the law of lesser crimes, assumes every man to intend the natural consequences which one standing in his circumstances and possessing his knowledge would reasonably expect to result from his acts. Proof that a citizen did give aid and comfort to an enemy may well be in the circumstances sufficient evidence that he adhered to that enemy and intended and purposed to strike at his own country."

Exhaustion of Jury. The verdict is attacked because the jury deliberated 28 hours without sleep.

The case was one which necessitated extended deliberation by the jury. The trial was a long one and the issues, many. The indictment charged an offense which is the most serious which could be preferred against a citizen. The life of the defendant demanded full and careful consideration of the evidence, and the extended instructions of the trial judge impressively placed a heavy responsibility on each juror. More serious would be the criticism if the said jury had deliberated but a few hours and returned a verdict against the defendant.

The cases are many where the jury remained in deliberations 28 hours or more without sleep. Experience wisely leaves such matters to the discretion of the trial judge. We must reject defendant's argument in this respect. Hyde v. U. S., 225 U. S. 347, 383; Bernal v. U. S., 2141 F. 339, 342.

Illinois Statute on Harboring Member of Family. Error is assigned because the court refused to admit in evidence the Illinois Statute, Chap. 38, Par. 584, which provides that any person "not standing in the relation of * * * parent * * *" who harbors a felon shall be held as an accessory after the fact, and liable for punishment. Complaint is also made because the court failed to instruct as to this statute.

There was no error in the court's action. Treason is a Federal offense. A state criminal statute cannot exculpate a violator of the Federal criminal law. As a matter of fact, a parent merely harboring a son would not be guilty under the Federal treason statute. He must possess a treasonous intent—an intent to betray his country by means of the act. The District Court so instructed the jury.

1897 Numerous other assignments of error* have been urged which we have duly and carefully considered. We think a separate, extended discussion of each one is unnecessary and unjustifiable. We do not find merit in any one of them. Each and every one has been considered and is rejected either because it is not well taken or because the charge is unsubstantiated by the record.

The judgment is affirmed.

KERNER, Circuit Judge, Concurring. I concur in affirming the judgment, but not in all that is said in the opinion.

Dissenting opinion

MAJOR, Circuit Judge, Dissenting. "But the basic law of treason in this country was framed by men who, as we have seen, were taught by experience and by history to fear abuse of the treason charge almost as much as they feared treason itself." Cramer v. United States, 325 U. S. 1, 21. Acting on such fear, treason was deliberately made a difficult crime to prove by providing in the Constitution: "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court." The opinion by which this judgment is to be affirmed is a striking illustration that the fear entertained by the makers of the Constitution was well founded. The reasoning of the opinion is in my judgment, so grievously and palpably erroneous that I find myself compelled to dissent. The opinion states that it is "unfortunate that the trial occurred before the decision in Cramer v. United States." Presumably this means that the trial court would have tried the case on a different theory if it had had the benefit of that decision. I doubt not that such would have been the case. In this connection, it can be said with equal propriety that it is even more unfortunate that the majority of this court in their zeal to affirm this conviction have been faced with the law of treason as announced in that decision.

Defendant was entitled to have the question of his guilt determined by a jury in accordance with the law and the Constitution pertaining to treason. As I view the matter, the function of this court is confined solely to the question as to whether his 1898 guilt was thus determined. If not, the judgment should be reversed, irrespective of any personal opinion we may entertain on that issue. Any other view amounts to usurpation of the province of the trial court and the jury. If this view be correct,

*Rejection of tendered instructions, rejection of evidence of Illinois statute, inflammatory argument of counsel, exhaustive period of deliberation of jury, reading of witnesses' testimony to jury after commencement of deliberations, verdict and sentence.

the conclusion to affirm receives little, if any, support from the voluminous recitals of the opinion designed to show that the defendant is guilty.

I shall therefore overlook numerous erroneous statements and innuendoes found in the opinion and come at once to a consideration of certain legal questions with which I take issue and which, in my judgment, require a reversal. These legal questions no doubt arise in the main from the fact that the case was tried and a conviction obtained upon a theory diametrically opposed to that on which the government seeks an affirmance in this court. The case was tried and the jury was instructed (instructions will be hereinafter discussed) on the theory that proof of one or more overt acts by the direct testimony of two witnesses was sufficient to authorize a conviction. In seeking an affirmance in this court, it is conceded by the government that such is not the law and that a reversal is required if there was a failure of proof as to any one of the overt acts submitted. While it is difficult to be certain on what theory the judgment is affirmed due to the inconsistent conclusions which are reached, it is my understanding that the majority embrace and affirm on each of these incompatible theories.

I shall therefore first show the theory upon which the case was presented to this court and later that upon which it was tried. Twelve overt acts were submitted to the jury. The judgment rests upon the jury's general verdict of guilty. No position was taken by the government in its original brief as to whether the judgment could be sustained in the event this court concluded there was a failure of proof as to one or more of such acts. During oral argument an inquiry was specifically directed to government counsel concerning such an eventuality and leave was granted to the parties to file a supplemental brief directed solely to this question, which brief was filed by the government October 26, 1945. In order to dissipate some of the fog created by the opinion, I quote from this supplemental brief:

"During the oral arguments in the above-entitled cause our attention was directed to the question of whether or not, if any of the overt acts, either as alleged or proven, submitted to 1899 the jury as possible overt acts upon which it could base a conviction for treason, were insufficient, it would be necessary for the court to reverse the conviction. We have therefore addressed ourselves to that problem, keeping in mind Instruction No. 51 (Bill of Exceptions 1591), by which instruction the jury were told:

"'It is not necessary for the Government to prove by two witnesses the performance of more than one of the submitted overt acts, providing, of course, the other elements of the alleged crime are proven beyond a reasonable doubt as heretofore defined in these instructions.'

"It would seem from a review of the authorities, including Cramer v. United States, 65 S. Ct. 918, 89 L. Ed. Advanced Sheet No. 13, page 937, et seq., footnote 45; Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359, 368; Williams v. North Carolina, 317 U. S. 287, 292; and Roth v. Swanson, 145 F. (2d) 262, 269 (C. C. A. 8), that the failure to prove or the insufficiency of any of the submitted overt acts would require a reversal of the conviction."

Certainly there can be no doubt but that the government after due deliberation with honesty and frankness conceded that a failure of proof as to one or more of the overt acts submitted would require a reversal. In fairness to the government, it should be stated that it was also urgently insisted, as had been done in the original brief, that all of the submitted acts were properly proven. Furthermore, as I understand, it was and is the government's contention that instruction 51, which embodies the theory on which the case was tried in the court below, was not prejudicial error because all of the submitted acts were adequately proven.

That the opinion recognizes the government's concession as sound and as the law of the case is also clear. The opinion states:

"Concededly there must be direct proof, by two witnesses, to each overt act, submitted to a jury, upon whose general verdict the sentence in a treason case is pronounced. There may be overt acts of legal sufficiency and established by the direct testimony of two witnesses, but the conviction will fall if the court sub-1900 mitted to the jury certain alleged overt acts which were charged in the indictment but which were either legally insufficient or not sufficiently established to present a jury question, by the direct testimony of two witnesses."

Also:

"The law being as announced in the Cramer case, it is our duty to carefully examine the long record here involved and determine if the requisite constitutional measure of proof was adduced by the Government. In performing this task, we have, as we read the respective witnesses' testimony, recorded the evidence relevant to any submitted overt act, to the said overt act to which it appertains. Because of the indispensability of such proof on one theory which has been advanced by government counsel, as to each overt act submitted we set forth such evidence and overt acts seriatim."

At this point I challenge the statement, "on one theory which has been advanced by government counsel." This at least implies that the government presented to this court both of these inconsistent theories as grounds for affirmance. Such is not the case.

This double-headed monstrosity was conceived in this court and not in the mind of government counsel.

At another point the opinion points out that the prosecution might have withdrawn several of the alleged overt acts charged in the indictment and made its conviction less vulnerable to attack. Unless the author of the opinion thought that proof of all the overt acts was required, how can it be said that a withdrawal of some of the acts would have made the government's position less vulnerable to attack? Also, the theory on which the case was tried did not require the exercise of such judgment on the part of either counsel for the government or the trial court. By that theory it was sufficient if only one of the overt acts submitted was properly proven.

Furthermore, the opinion sets forth each of the twelve overt acts and relates in detail all of the evidence found in the record, which it is thought proves each. If an affirmance of this judgment is to be had on the theory here advanced by the government, this would seem essential. If, on the other hand, the judgment is to be affirmed upon the theory on which the case was tried, the setting forth of this voluminous testimony is an idle and useless gesture.

1901 True, the author of the opinion appears to have been in some doubt as to the purpose of reciting all of the submitted overt acts, together with the proof relied on in support of each. Prior to so doing, the opinion states that it is for the purpose of determining "if the requisite constitutional method of proof was adduced by the government." After consuming some eighteen pages in detailing this testimony, it evidently was discovered that it was for some other purpose. The opinion states:

"It would seem inexcusable to set forth the lengthy statement of witnesses which supports or tends to support the numerous so-called overt acts. We feel like apologizing therefor. Yet, on the theory advanced by the defendant's counsel we have found no way to avoid it." [Italics supplied.]

Whether the narration of this voluminous testimony was for the purpose of sustaining the government's theory, as stated at one point in the opinion, or whether it was for the purpose of disproving the defendant's theory, as stated at another point in the opinion, is really unimportant. The main point is that the effort was without purpose except in recognition that an affirmance could be had only upon adequate proof that each of the submitted overt acts had been proven.

Having shown that the majority (up to this point) proceed on the theory that the judgment can be sustained only by the direct testimony of two witnesses to each of the submitted overt acts, I now reach the first major premise with which I take issue. For the purpose of such issue, I am willing to assume that the overt acts as alleged are legally sufficient, as the majority have found. In other words, if that were the only question involved, I would not dissent, notwithstanding the dubious propriety of such a holding in view of the Cramer case. Especially is this so as to the acts which charge that Herbert Haupt was harbored and sheltered in the home of his father (and mother). No claim is made and there is no proof that he was concealed in this home; on the other hand, the testimony indicates that he entered and departed therefrom the same as any son might be expected to do. There is proof that he was on one occasion furnished food to eat and a bed in which to sleep. Just how the action of his parents in this respect was of any assistance to the government of Germany or any harm to the United States is not easy to discern. I 1902 suppose in order to have escaped a charge of treason it would have been incumbent upon the parents to have slammed the door to their home in his face. Even this would not have been sufficient under the reasoning of the majority if perchance they had given him a sandwich to eat as he made his departure.

The opinion on its face, however, is so clearly wrong in its conclusion that all the submitted acts were properly proven that I pass to that question. As the opinion concedes, on this phase of the case a reversal is required if one or more of the acts are without sufficient support. I shall therefore direct my discussion only to acts 12, 17, 20, 21, 22, and 23, the so-called harboring acts. These acts are all in substantially the same phraseology except that each designates a different date. They each charge that on a certain date the defendant "harbored and sheltered the said enemy Herbert Haupt at the home of Hans Max Haupt, 2234 N. Fremont Street, Chicago, Illinois." The dates alleged are: in overt act 12, June 22, 1942, in overt act 17, June 23, 1942, and in overt acts 20 to 23, inclusive, June 24 to June 27 1942, inclusive. As heretofore stated, the majority opinion sets forth in detail the proof held to supply the requisite support for each act. For the purpose of my position, I think it may be safely assumed that the record has been carefully searched and all the testimony offered in support of each act properly and fully set forth.

At this point it is pertinent to observe that the entrance to 2234 N. Fremont Street, set forth in each of these acts and oftentimes referred to by the witnesses, is not the entrance to the apartment occupied by the Haupts but is the entrance to a 3-story apartment building, and that the home of the Haupts was the third floor apartment reached by a stairway which extended from the entrance of the apartment building to and by each of the other apartments, that is, one located on the first and the other on the second floor.[1] In considering the testimony relied upon by the majority in support of these various overt acts, it should also be kept in mind that they are each separate and distinct, and in accordance with the constitutional mandate must be proven by the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court."

"Every act, movement, deed, and word of the defendant charged to constitute treason must be supported by the 1903 testimony of two witnesses." Cramer v. United States, supra, page 34. More than that: "The case of treason stands upon a peculiar ground; there the overt acts must, by statute, be specially laid in the indictment, and must be proved as laid. The very act, and mode of the act, must, therefore, be laid as it is intended to be proved." United States v. Gooding, 25 U. S. 292, 301.

It would serve no useful purpose and would unduly prolong this discussion to point out the insufficiency of the proof as to each of these harboring overt acts. The evidence speaks for itself. I assert with confidence that the only one which is possibly supported by the direct testimony of two witnesses is act 17. As to that act, there is the testimony of two witnesses who were in the Haupt apartment and testified that Herbert Haupt was there with his parents. I suppose that proof of his presence in the apartment would constitute proof that he was harbored. As to the other five harboring acts, there is no direct proof. The evidence relied upon is entirely circumstantial. I call particular attention to overt act 23, which charges the defendant with harboring on June 27, 1942. The proof in support of this act is on its face glaringly insufficient.

As will be noted, the five witnesses whose testimony is relied upon by the majority in support of this act are all F. B. I. agents. Every word uttered by these witnesses which proved or tended to prove that Herbert Haupt was in the home of the defendant (the third floor apartment) on June 27, 1942 is purely circumstantial. There is not a word of direct proof in support thereof. More than that, it should not be overlooked that Hans Max Haupt and not Herbert Haupt is the defendant in this case, and there is not a scintilla of testimony, either direct or circumstantial, that the former was either in or about the apartment on this date. In fact, his name is not even mentioned by the witnesses. Just how the defendant was shown, by the direct testimony of two witnesses, to have committed this act, without even a mention of his name, is one of the several imponderabilities presented by the majority opinion.

[1] Actually, this 3-story apartment building contains six apartments, three in the rear and three in the front, and each set of apartments is reached by a separate stairway.

The proof concerning overt act 12 is likewise wholly deficient insofar as it pertains to this defendant. There is no proof either direct or circumstantial that this defendant was in or about his apartment on June 22, the date alleged. As the proof related in the majority opinion in support of this act shows, three 1904 of the government witnesses testified that Herbert Haupt, together with his parents, made a short visit with the people who lived in the first floor apartment. Three F. B. I. agents testified to seeing Herbert Haupt and his parents enter the apartment building. One of these agents stated that on one occasion he saw Mrs. Haupt and Herbert enter the apartment building and shortly thereafter the lights in the Haupt apartment were extinguished. The proof relied upon in support of the other harboring acts (except act 17) is purely circumstantial, as a reading thereof will disclose.

It is easy to perceive the great difficulty experienced by the majority in bridging the gulf with which they were confronted by the holding in the Cramer case that an overt act could not be supported merely by circumstantial evidence but that it required, as a minimum, the direct testimony of two witnesses. It was essential, however, that the gulf be bridged if an affirmance was to be had. At this point it appears my brethren were on the verge of repudiating the direct testimony rule of the Cramer case. The opinion states:

"It is worthy of passing note that it is the decision in the Cramer case, not the definition found in the Constitution, which adds the necessity of 'direct evidence'."

This insinuation directed at the Cramer decision overlooks the fact that the dissenting opinion in that case takes no issue with this rule pronounced by the majority; in fact, the dissent by inference approves of it.

Moreover, the court in the Cramer case was not the first which has held that an overt act must be supported by the direct testimony of two witnesses. Judge Learned Hand (then a District Judge) in United States v. Robinson, 259 F. 685, so held. On page 694, he states:

"I conclude, therefore, that it is necessary to produce two direct witnesses to the whole overt act."

He points out:

"* * * the case rested upon circumstantial evidence, which, while well-nigh conclusive in fact, was not direct as required. There seems to me no question whatever that without disregarding the whole theory of the Constitution I could not allow a verdict to stand if I received it. I must therefore direct it for the defendant."

1905 Furthermore, it is difficult to think that any court could hold otherwise. To say that the two witness rule can be met by circumstantial evidence is to render meaningless the constitutional requirement. The strength of circumstantial evidence does not depend upon the number of witnesses. One such witness might make a strong case or, on the other hand, a dozen such witnesses might prove little or nothing. Therefore, reasoned on any rational basis, the precise act as alleged must be supported by the direct testimony of two witnesses.

Notwithstanding the insinuation that the direct evidence rule of the Cramer decision was wrong, the opinion proclaims, "We must and do follow the court holding." This profession, however, is of little consequence in view of what follows. In summarizing the proof concerning these overt acts, the opinion states:

"As to several of these days (acts) there was simply the testimony of F. B. I. agents that they saw the saboteur, Herbert, and his father leaving and going into the front entrance of the six apartment building wherein the Haupts lived."

Then follows this remarkable pronouncement:

"In our opinion the testimony of persons who saw the son enter the front entrance which led to the front three apartments of the six apartment building, on the third floor of which the defendant-father lived, saw lights either go on or off in the third floor apartment soon after entry of the persons, saw the son emerge in different garments than that in which he entered that same entrance some time before; saw the son leave many hours after having entered—is direct testimony that said son was being quartered in the father's home."

It will at once be noted that the majority completely ignore the law which requires that each overt act must be proved as laid. Instead they combine a number of circumstances, some shown with reference to one act and some another, and conclude that these circumstances are "direct testimony that said son was being quartered in the father's home." Still more remarkable, however, is the fact that the majority are willing to hold that these circumstances in their combined form are direct proof. If such be the case, there is no longer any such thing as circumstantial evidence 1906 and all the court opinions and text books which have distinguished between direct and circumstantial proof might well be destroyed. It is another illustration of the length to which my brethren are willing to go in order to affirm this conviction.

So at this point we have an unmistakable holding by the majority consistent with the government's theory before this court that failure of proof by the direct testimony of two witnesses as to any of the overt acts submitted would require a reversal. With this proposition of law I agree. The majority escape the duty to reverse only by holding, erroneously I think, that all of the acts submitted were sufficiently supported. The majority, however, in escaping from one dilemma find themselves confronted with another, and that is the theory on which the conviction was obtained. Such theory is embodied in instructions 50 and 51. Instruction 50 authorized a conviction if "Hans Max Haupt with treasonable intent performed any of the above alleged overt acts submitted to your consideration and that two direct witnesses have testified to such act." Instruction 51 (heretofore set forth in the quotation from the government's supplemental brief) is of like effect.

Referring to instructions 50 and 51, the opinion correctly states:

"In essence, these instructions told the jury that they were to find the defendant guilty if they found he performed any one of the treasonable overt acts submitted, to which acts two witnesses had testified."

Then follows the statement:

"If it were not for the fact that our study of the evidence as summarized above supports the jury's verdict of guilt on any or all of the overt acts submitted, reversal would on this theory follow."

I confess my inobility to comprehend this statement. "* * * reversal would on this theory follow." What theory? The one on which the case was tried or the one on which it was here submitted?

It appears, however, that this is the first step in the process by which the majority are to shift their position. This they must do when faced with the dilemma presented by the instructions. The second step by which the shifting process was completed is immediately disclosed by the following statement:

"It follows, we think, that if the jury was satisfied by the necessary quantum of proof and by two witnesses, that one or more of the submitted overt acts were proven, the crime was established."

If there be any doubt that their position has shifted, compare the conclusion just quoted with the following pronouncement previously made:

"There may be overt acts of legal sufficiency and established by the direct testimony of two witnesses, but the conviction will fall if the court submitted to the jury certain alleged overt acts which were charged in the indictment but which were either legally insufficient or not sufficiently established to present a jury question by the direct testimony of two witnesses."

Thus, instructions 50 and 51 are held to state properly the law of the case, notwithstanding the government's concession that the "failure to prove * * * any of the submitted overt acts would require a reversal of conviction," notwithstanding that the majority have heretofore held the concession made by the government to be the law of the case, and notwithstanding the fact that the opinion devotes some eighteen pages in an effort to show that each of the overt acts submitted was supported by the direct testimony of two witnesses. The ability of my brethren to so abruptly and dexterously change horses is amazing. It seems to me that any kind of consistency would have required that this charge be held erroneous.

Without any apparent relevancy, it is also reasoned in support of these instructions that an overt act is not an element of the crime of treason. This is another illustration of the confused state of mind which has seized my brethren in the consideration of this case. It appears that the majority are of the view that an overt act need not be even alleged. It further appears from the argument on this point that they have decided that which is previously intimated, that is, the Cramer decision is bad law. As I read the Cramer decision, no single principle relative to the law of treason is so thoroughly established as that an overt act is an essential element of the crime. The majority so hold, at least by plain implication, and the minority so hold by direct statement. In the opinion of the former (page 29), it is stated: "* * * but so long as he commits no act of aid or comfort to the enemy, there is no treason." In a footnote to the dissenting opinion (page 54), it is stated: "It is well established that the overt act and the intent are separate and distinct elements of the crime of treason under the Constitution." (Citing many cases.) More than that, as the Supreme Court held in United States v. Gooding, supra, the overt acts must be specifically laid in the indictment and must be proved as laid.

I agree with the government's theory that all of the overt acts submitted to the jury must be proven as laid in the indictment. It follows from this that the court's charge to the jury was fatally defective. As I have pointed out, there was a failure of proof by the direct testimony of two witnesses as to some of the acts submitted. Furthermore, even though all of the acts had been properly proven, as the majority have held, a reversal would still be required because of the erroneous instructions. An affirmance under such a situation means that the defendant has had a trial by this court on the acts submitted but not a trial by jury. While I have stated I agree with the government's theory that all of the overt acts must be properly proven as laid, I also think that the only possible theory on which this judgment could be affirmed with any degree of consistency and without repudiating the express language of the Supreme Court would be by a forthright holding that the instructions properly stated the law of the case. The door to such a holding has been almost but not entirely closed by the Supreme Court. In the Cramer case (footnote page 36), the court held: "* * * the verdict must be set aside if any of the separable acts submitted was insufficient." Cited in support of this statement is Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359. The court in that case (page 367) stated:

"The verdict against the appellant was a general one. It did not specify the ground upon which it rested. As there were three purposes set forth in the statute, and the jury were instructed that their verdict might be given with respect to any one of them, independently considered, it is impossible to say under which clause of the statute the conviction was obtained."

Thus it appears that in both the Cramer and Stromberg cases the court was referring to an act or charge without legal force. Although the question may not be free from all doubt, I am of the view that the same reasoning must apply in a treason case where the quantum of proof as to each overt act is prescribed by the Constitution. It is this fact which distinguishes treason
1969 from all other crimes. Such being the case, I am unable to differentiate between a situation wherein one of the acts submitted is legally insufficient and a situation wherein there is a failure as to one of the acts to meet the requirements of the Constitution in respect to proof. I am unable to believe but that a general verdict in one instance would be subject to the same deficiency as in the other. In either instance, the defendant would be deprived of a constitutional right.

The one certain thing about the opinion is that the judgment is at all hazards to be affirmed, because the majority think the defendant is guilty. In order to reach this goal, the opinion holds that all of the submitted overt acts must be proven by the direct testimony of two witnesses and that a failure of proof as to any one or more overt acts would require a reversal. It then holds that the court properly instructed the jury that it was authorized to convict the defendant if one or more of the submitted overt acts had been proven by the direct testimony of two witnesses. In order to sustain the conviction on the former theory, it was held that all of the submitted overt acts had been properly proven by the direct testimony of two witnesses. In doing so; however, the opinion treats and holds as direct proof that which is purely circumstantial. In sustaining the court's instructions to the jury, the theory on which the case was presented to this court, including the express concession of government's counsel, has been repudiated. I am unable to join in a result brought about by such inconsistent and illogical reasoning. In my opinion, the constitutional provision on treason has been nullified and the decision of the Supreme Court in the Cramer case (both the majority and minority opinions) emasculated. This is so, notwithstanding that the opinion is replete with numerous protestations to the contrary.

I would reverse the judgment.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PLAINTIFF-APPELLEE

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT, DEFENDANT-APELLANT

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

Judgment

December 20, 1945

This cause came on to be heard on the transcript of the record from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, and was argued by counsel.

On consideration whereof, it is ordered and adjudged by this Court that the judgment of the said District Court in this cause appealed from be, and the same is hereby, affirmed.

1912 In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit

[Title omitted.]

Petition for rehearing

Filed Jan. 2, 1946

May it please the Court:

We respectfully urge that a rehearing be granted in the case at bar and that the grievous errors committed in the trial of this case may be reexamined, insofar as the same identical or similar errors, committed in the case of Cramer v. United States, 325 U. S. 1, were made the basis for a reversal of that case by our Supreme Court. As stated in the opinion of this Honorable Court, the Cramer case may make conviction in treason cases difficult (and, without doubt, the framers of the Constitution so intended it to be), but the law as there announced by the Supreme Court must be followed.

We shall mainly address ourselves to the endeavor of showing that there is no appreciable difference between certain of the errors committed in the trial of the instant case and similar errors committed in the Cramer case, and that, consequently, the Cramer decision requires a reversal of the conviction in the case at bar.

Counsel do not wish to be understood as waiving any of the points raised in the original brief and reply brief of appellant, which are not dealt with herein.

Construction of the Law of Treason as Laid Down by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Cramer Case

For a better understanding of the appellant's contention, 1913 we desire to give our construction of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Cramer case as follows:

An overt act of treason consists of an act of giving aid and comfort to the enemy, performed with a treasonable intent. The overt act must be proven by the direct evidence testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act. The treasonable intent may be inferred from the treasonable character of the overt act to which such two witnesses have so testified, and the act must have been pleaded as an overt act of treason in the indictment. However, if the overt act, though legally sufficient, is of colorless, insignificant or innocent nature on its face, then the treasonable intent with which the same is alleged to have been committed, must also be proven by the direct evidence testimony of two witnesses with reference to the same overt act. Treasonable intent, inferrable from some other alleged overt act of treasonable character per se, pleaded in the same indictment, which act, however, has not been proven by the direct evidence testimony of two witnesses, cannot be transferred to supply the required evidence of treasonable intent to a colorless, insignificant act, of innocent nature on its face. (Proof by confession in open Court has been omitted in the foregoing statement.)

If the foregoing is correct, as we shall undertake to prove presently, then it follows that in the law of treason certainly any overt acts withdrawn for lack of two-witness proof and any so-called background evidence (such as statements made by the defendant as long as six years before the happening of the overt act), testified to by only one witness, cannot supply the required element of treasonable intent to an overt act laid in the indictment. (All so called background evidence in the case on appeal was testified to by only one witness.)

1914 To prove our construction of the decision of the Cramer case, we quote from the Court's opinion thereof: (The pages referred to are those of the original opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States.)

Page 20—325 U. S. 30:

"While to prove giving of aid and comfort would require the prosecution to show actions and deeds, if the Constitution stopped there, such acts could be inferred from circumstantial evidence. This the framers thought would not do. So they added what in effect is a command that the overt acts must be established by direct evidence, and the direct testimony must be that of two witnesses instead of one. In this sense the overt act procedural provision adds something, and something important, to the definition."

Page 21—325 U. S. 31:

"Bearing in mind that the constitutional requirement in effect is one of direct rather than circumstantial evidence, we must give it a reasonable effect in the light of its purpose both to preserve the offense and to protect citizens from its abuse. What is designed in the mind of an accused never is susceptible of proof by direct testimony. If we were to hold that the disloyal and treacherous intention must be proved by the direct testimony of two witnesses, it would be to hold that it is never provable. It seems obvious that adherence to the enemy, in the sense of a disloyal state of mind, cannot be, and is not required to be, proved by deposition of two witnesses."

"Since intent must be inferred from conduct of some sort, we think it is permissible to draw usual reasonable inferences as to intent from the overt acts."

Pages 23 and 24—325 U. S. 33, 34, and 35:

"From duly proven overt acts of aid and comfort to the enemy in their setting, it may well be that the natural and reasonable inference of intention to betray will be warranted. The two-witness evidence of the acts accused, together with common-law evidence of acts of others and of facts which are not acts, will help to determine which among possible inferences as to the actor's knowledge, motivation, or intent are the true ones. But the protection of the two-witness rule extends at least to all acts of the defendant which are used to draw incriminating inferences that aid and comfort have been given."

"The controversy before us has been waged in terms of intentions, but this, we think, is the reflection of a more fundamental issue as to what is the real function of the overt act in convicting of treason. The prisoner's contention that it alone and on its face must manifest a traitorous intention, apart from an intention to do the act itself, would place on the overt act the whole burden of establishing a complete treason. On the other hand, 1915 the Government's contention that it may prove by two witnesses an apparently commonplace and insignificant act and from other circumstances create an inference that the act was a step in treason and was done with treasonable intent really is a contention that the function of the overt act in a treason prosecution is almost zero. It is obvious that the function we ascribe to the overt act is significant chiefly because it measures the two-witness rule protection to the accused and its handicap to the prosecution. If the overt act or acts must go all the way to make out the complete treason, the defendant is protected at all points by the two-witness requirement. If the act may be an insignificant one, then the constitutional safeguards are shrunken so as to be applicable only at a point where they are least needed."

"The very minimum function that an overt act must perform in a treason prosecution is that it show sufficient action by the accused, in its setting, to sustain a finding that the accused actually gave aid and comfort to the enemy. Every act, movement, deed, and word of the defendant charged to constitute treason must be supported by the testimony of two witnesses. The two-witness principle is to interdict imputation of incriminating acts to the accused by circumstantial evidence or by the testimony of a single witness."

Pages 27 & 28—325 U. S. 38 and 39:

"The shortcomings of the overt act submitted are emphasized by contrast with others which the indictment charged but which the prosecution withdrew for admitted insufficiency of proof. It appears that Cramer took from Thiel for safekeeping a money belt containing about $3,600, some $160 of which he held in his room concealed in books for Thiel's use as needed. An old indebtedness of Thiel to Cramer of $200 was paid from the fund, and the rest Cramer put in his safe-deposit box in a bank for safekeeping. All of this was at Thiel's request. That Thiel would be aided by having the security of a safe-deposit box for his funds, plus availability of smaller amounts, and by being relieved of the risks of carrying large sums on his person—without disclosing his presence or identity to a bank—seems obvious. The inference of intent from such act is also very different from the intent manifest by drinking and talking together. Taking what must have seemed a large sum of money for safekeeping is not a usual amenity of social intercourse. That such responsibilities are undertaken and such trust bestowed without the scratch of a pen to show it, implies some degree of mutuality and concert from which a jury could say that aid and comfort was given and was intended. If these acts had been submitted as overt acts of treason, and we were now required to decide whether they had been established as re-1916 quired, we would have a quite different case. We would then have to decide whether statements on the witness stand by the defendant are either 'confession in open court' or may be counted as the testimony of one of the required two witnesses to make out otherwise insufficiently proved 'overt acts.' But this transaction was not proven as the Government evidently hoped to do when the indictment was obtained. The overt acts based on it were expressly withdrawn from the jury, and Cramer has not been convicted of treason on account of such acts. We cannot sustain a conviction for the acts submitted on the theory that, even if insufficient, some unsubmitted ones may be resorted to as proof of treason. Evidence of the money transaction serves only to show how much went out of the case when it was withdrawn."

General Comment of Court's Opinion Herein

A. CONCERNING LEGAL SUFFICIENCY OF PROOF

(a) Overt acts Nos. 12, 20, 21, 22, and 23, charging harboring. It is our contention that not a single one of the overt acts has been proven by the direct evidence testimony of two witnesses. Not a single witness saw either Hans Haupt, the defendant, or Herbert Haupt, his son, inside of the Haupt apartment, being one of the six apartments located in an apartment building served by two house entrances, each entrance leading to more than one apartment.

Testimony to the effect that the entry or exit of Hans Haupt or Herbert Haupt was made through such house entrance, can only be and does constitute merely circumstantial evidence, and not direct evidence, as to harboring of Herbert by Hans Haupt inside of his apartment. Merely by inference can it be stated that Herbert Haupt, after the entry through the house entrance, went into the apartment of his father and mother, or that Hans Haupt was present in said apartment at such time or times.

It must be observed that the fact testified to by the FBI Agents was merely as to entry to the building and not as to any 1917 conduct of the defendant or any act of "harboring" by him.

'Direct' and 'circumstantial' evidence differ merely in their logical relations to the fact in issue. Evidence as to the existence of the fact is 'direct'. 'Circumstantial' evidence is composed of facts which raise a logical inference as to the existence of the fact in issue." United States v. Greene, 146 F. 803, 824.

1. Greenleaf on Evidence, paragraph 13, defines direct evidence as being given when the thing to be proved is directly attested by those who speak from their own knowledge of its existence; circumstantial, when the thing to be proved is to be inferred from other facts satisfactorily proved. See, also, Wells, on Cir. Ev. C. 2, paragraph 1. People v. Palmer, 11 N. Y. St. Rep. 817, 820.

"An instruction that evidence is of two kinds, direct and circumstantial, and that 'direct evidence' is when a witness testified directly of his own knowledge of the main fact or facts to be proven, and that circumstantial evidence is proof of certain facts and circumstances in a certain case from which the jury may infer other and connected facts which usually and reasonably follow according to the common experience of mankind, is correct." State v. Gatlin 70 S. W. 885, 888, 170 Mo. 354; State v. Hillman, 127 S. W. 102, 103, 142 Mo. App. 510.

To the same effect are the following cases, and others too numerous to mention: Webb v. State 203 S. W. 955, 140 Tenn. 205, 15 A. L. R. 1034; State v. Riggs, 201 p. 281, 61 Mont. 25.

The defendant's contention in the case at bar is not only "that there is no direct proof that Herbert was actually in the Haupt apartment, the FBI testimony being circumstantial proof", but also that there was no direct proof (save in the case of overt act No. 17) that the defendant himself was in the apartment at any time when Herbert was there.

1918 As was pointed out by his Honor, Judge Major, in his dissenting opinion herein (page 55):

"More than that, it should not be overlooked that Hans Max Haupt and not Herbert Haupt is the defendant in this case, and there is not a scintilla of testimony, either direct or circumstantial, that the former was either in or about the apartment on this date (i. e., June 27, 1942 in re overt act No. 23). In fact, his name is not even mentioned by the witnesses."

Other than as to the occasion specified in overt act 17, there were no witnesses to the presence of the defendant in the apartment at the same time with Herbert, or regarding any act of the defendant relating to the charge of harboring etc., Herbert.

The opinion of the Court herein, at page 32, with respect to the "harboring and sheltering overt acts" states that "there can be little doubt that on the respective dates alleged, the son, Herbert, stayed overnight in his father's home, ate meals there", etc. This Honorable Court may be convinced thereof, but will it deny to the defendant the benefit of the Constitutional provision that "No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act"?

Here, as stated in the Cramer case, "It is not relevant to our issue to appraise weight or credibility of the evidence apart from determining its constitutional sufficiency."

At page 31 of the Court's opinion, in the case at bar, your Honors grant the necessity of the two-witness proof of overt acts, thus:

"Of great importance is also this statement: 'It is only overt acts by the accused which the Constitution explicitly requires to be proved by the testimony of two witnesses.'"

1919 There being no testimony of witnesses to acts by the accused at the times and places charged in overt acts 12, 20, 21, 22 and 23, the defendant is entitled to such a finding from this Honorable Court upon a rehearing, which he prays may be granted herein. As pointed out in your Honor's opinion, failure of proof on any of the submitted overt acts requires a reversal of the case.

(b) Overt act No. 17, charging harboring. We respectfully point out that the testimony of witnesses set forth in the court's opinion relative to Herbert's eating food in the apartment of his parents, is not all-inclusive, and, therefore, of ambiguous nature. In footnote 18 on page 19 of the opinion, Gustave Zermer is quoted as testifying to the effect as follows: "* * * Testified on redirect examination that Herbert and Hans came in the apartment. Says they went right into the kitchen and had supper. Defendant and Herbert were in the apartment. They were eating supper."

However, it is not shown in the opinion that on cross-examination and on recross Zermer admitted, that during his visit he was sitting in the parlor at a place from where he could not look into the kitchen; that he did not see Hans and Herbert go into the kitchen; that he himself did not go into the kitchen, while Hans and Herbert were supposed to be eating there; that he did not see them eat and he did not hear any noises in the kitchen. (Appellant's Brief, pages 29 to 31.)

It is also omitted in the opinion regarding this act of eating, that Gerda Melind Saure testified, that Herbert did not have any food at all in the home of his parents during the time referred to By Zermer; that various FBI agents testified, that Herbert had Hans Haupt, together with Herbert's mother, ate their supper in a restaurant on that day, from 6:00 p. m. until 6:45 p. m. Zermer fixed the time of the alleged eating of the supper in the home as being at 8:00 p. m. (Appellant's Brief, page 31 and Appellee's Brief, page 18.)

1920 It is therefore a proper statement, that there was not a single witness to Herbert Haupt having any meal or meals in the home of his parents.

(c) Overt Act No. 16; making a further payment in cash towards the purchase of an automobile and completing arrangements for the purchase of said automobile, and purchasing an automobile for the enemy, Herbert Haupt, on June 24, 1942.

There was but one witness to this alleged overt act, namely, Farrell. It is contended by the court that Vinson's testimony regarding receiving money by Vinson from some unspecified source, is direct testimony to the act of Hans Haupt paying over such money. However, there is no testimony to the effect that Vinson saw Hans Haupt pay over the particular money. The Government established by definite questions put to Farrell, that Haupt paid the money, but it evaded such questioning with reference to witness Vinson who merely testified "he received the money that had been put down" without stating from whom he received it. In fact he testified he only saw Hans and Herbert Haupt come into the sales room on June 24th and did not talk to them. Concerning the note mentioned in the testimony, it is clear that the same was signed on June 23rd, when the mortgage was made out.

The overt act No. 16 as charged in the indictment states that Hans Max Haupt "made a further payment." An overt act must be proved as laid by the direct evidence testimony of two witnesses. There was no second witness who testified that he saw Hans Max Haupt make such payment. There was no direct testimony to such fact by a second witness.

It is also stated in overt act No. 16 as follows: "Said Hans Max Haupt * * * did purchase said automobile for said 1921 enemy Herbert Haupt * * *." An overt act must be proven as laid. But there were not two witnesses to this charge. Witness Vinson testified as follows:

Q. * * * Do you know who purchased the car?

A. Yes, Hans Haupt.

Q. And was there any conversation as to whether it was a car for Hans or for someone else?

A. No. (Bill of Exceptions P. 470.)

The act was not proven as laid and as required by the Constitution of the United States, as it was necessary for the Government to prove by two witnesses that the car was purchased for Herbert Haupt.

(d) Overt acts Nos. 10 and 11, accompanying Herbert to regain employment in Simpson Optical Company. On page 28 the Court states in its opinion:

"There can be no doubt that the father * * * sometimes volunteered information as to the son's whereabouts in the interval since he left the employ of the company, or that the son had now registered for the draft, etc. This was established by the testimony of two witnesses."

The Court is in error in making the foregoing statement, as not even a single witness present at the visits of the three Haupts at Koch's or Grunau's home testified that Hans Haupt spoke one single word about his son's whereabouts in the interval since he left the employ of the company. And concerning the registration for the draft, only one witness, Mr. Koch, testified as follows.

"At that time Hans Haupt said, 'I sent him out this morning to the draft board and the FBI'." (Bill of Exceptions 368–373 and 421–424.)

CONCERNING LEGAL SUFFICIENCY OF CERTAIN OVERT ACTS CHARGED

Assuming full and sufficient proof (i. e., by two direct witnesses) of certain of the overt acts charged, neither the proof nor the allegation constitute, or could constitute, treason as declared by the Supreme Court in the Cramer case. We refer specifi-
1922 cally to overt acts 10, 11, 13, and 15. Each of these overt acts merely charge the defendant with the act of "accompanying" Herbert Haupt, with only a variation as to the time and destination stated.

Essentially, the same charge of accompanying (plus conferring, treating and counseling with) Werner Thiel, an enemy of the United States, was made in overt act No. 2 of the Cramer case. The act of Cramer in accompanying Thiel, as charged in overt act No. 2, was fully proved in that case, viz.:

"By direct testimony of two or more agents it was established that Cramer met Thiel and Kerling on the occasions and at the places charged and that they drank together and engaged long and earnestly in conversation. This is the sum of the overt acts as established by the testimony of two witnesses."

The Supreme Court reversed the Cramer conviction, making the following specific ruling:

"We hold that overt acts 1 and 2 are insufficient as proved to support the judgment of conviction, which accordingly is reversed."

Referring to the Government's proof of overt acts 1 and 2 in the Cramer case, the Supreme Court said:

"But if it showed him (Cramer) disposed to betray, and showed that he had opportunity to do so, it still has not proved in the manner required that he did any acts submitted to the jury as a basis for conviction which had the effect of betraying by giving aid and comfort. To take the intent for the deed would carry us back to constructive treasons."

On page 31 of the opinion, this Honorable Court states:

"The overt acts here involved were harboring an enemy, buying a car, accompanying to seek reemployment, the first an essential to any accomplishment of the saboteurs' mission, the latter two were directly ordered by the saboteur's superior. Their seeming harmlessness therefore is dispelled when they are viewed in their 'setting,' their 'environment.' During the week the son was with the father, little else was done (except visits to restaurants, cinema, taverns, and friends)."

1923 Overt act No. 11 charging the defendant, "accompanied the said Herbert Haupt to the home of Heinrich Koch, 7240 N. Odell Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, for the purpose of further assisting said enemy in procuring employment * * *;" and Overt Act No. 15 charging the defendant, "accompanied the said enemy Herbert Haupt to the Warner Motor Sales, 958 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, Illinois, to complete the arrangements for the purchase of an automobile for said enemy, * * *" are both in the same class. Now, we have definitely established that the Government failed to prove Overt Act No. 16, which involved the actual doing of the thing, for which the defendant accompanied Herbert Haupt as charged in Overt Act No. 15. Is Overt Act No. 15, a most innocent act on the face of it, a legally sufficient overt act? All it charges is the act of accompanying. In the Cramer case it was held, that such act is not a legally sufficient overt act.

In fact, overt act No. 15, as well as the other overt acts, Nos. 10, 11, and 13, charging merely "accompanying" are not separate overt acts, but are merely parts of the particular overt acts which involve the ultimate purpose, and should not be pleaded as separate overt acts. As separate overt acts they are legally insufficient. If it were permitted to split one overt act into any number of parts, and then plead each one of such parts as separate overt acts, it would only be necessary to ascribe a treasonable intention to each one of such overt acts, and there could never be failure of proof of some of the overt acts, namely, those which contain the actions of commonplace, everyday occurrences, such as "accompanying." However, this ingenious method does not work, as such overt act would necessarily be legally insufficient to constitute treason.

And so it was held in the Cramer case, where the action of "accompanying" was fully proven by direct evidence testi-1924 mony of two or more witnesses.

This Honorable Court, in its opinion in the instant case, concedes that the case must be reversed if any of the overt acts submitted were "either legally insufficient or not sufficiently established to present a jury question, by the direct testimony of two witnesses." (Opinion pages 7 and 45.)

The Government likewise makes this concession (brief filed by Government after oral argument), which, in view of the foregoing facts, amounts practically to a confession of error.

We urge the Court to re-examine overt acts 10, 11, 13 and 15, and the decision of the Cramer case with respect to the parallel overt act No. 2 of Cramer.

C. CONCERNING MISCELLANEOUS FACTS AND CONTENTIONS

We respectfully point out some discrepancies in the Court's opinion. On page 32 the Court states:

"One of the instructions Herbert received was to obtain a car to facilitate transportation of the explosives from the beach in Florida, for delivery to the various points of sabotage, and as a means of travel for the members of the expedition. The purchase of the car was arranged for within a couple of days of Herbert's return—showing urgency of his duty. The old Plymouth car had not become obsolete, in fact it was used by the Haupt family during the week of surveillance. There would not have been the rush to buy the new car, without the pressing need for it."

A reading of Burger's testimony will disclose that his recital of events in Germany was objected to as hearsay evidence, and that time and again it was asserted by the Government that such testimony was merely for the purpose of proving the enemy status of Herbert Haupt, and that the testimony regarding the instructions given to Herbert Haupt and regarding other events in Germany were specifically restricted to that one point.

1925 We, therefore, believe it is error for the Court to now use this testimony for any different purposes. Also the other conclusions seem to be erroneous. There was no need for Herbert Haupt to acquire an automobile immediately upon his return because of "urgency of his duty." The saboteurs were not to begin operations until at least three or four months after they had landed. (Appellee's Brief p. 5; Bill of Exceptions 111.) And while it was true that the father's car, the old Plymouth, had become obsolete, it should be remembered that the father used the car daily in his business as a painter, decorator and bricklayer. (Appellant's Brief 69 to 75.)

It is perhaps the common experience of every father, who has a son or sons at home, that it is very hard for the father to have the use of the family car, as the son or sons seem to have constant and urgent need therefor. And it seems that most fathers know that such constant and urgent need occurs the very day when the son or sons return, as so many have done in recent months. In the present case it must be remembered that Herbert Haupt had owned a car, which he left behind, and which the father had taken over and practically converted into a painter's truck.

It is not correct that the defendant did little else, except visiting restaurants, cinemas, taverns and friends, as may be inferred from the Court's comments on page 32 of the opinion, stating, "During the week the son was with the father, little else was done except visits to restaurants, cinemas, taverns and friends." In fact, all of this was something the defendant did not do. The evidence shows that Hans Haupt, the defendant, worked at his trade every day, including Sunday, while his son was here, after the son's return, up to the day of the son's arrest.

The record does not show any post-war utterances of the 1926 defendant to the effect that he cooperated in Herbert Haupt's mission (page 38), except by the testimony of one witness, the life-termer Hamby. There is nothing to show in the record that the jury believed Hamby, whose testimony must be read to be appreciated.

"But the jury was weighing the story of the witnesses and the defendant. The latter was throwing bricks at these defendants, discrediting them, and pointing to their prison record. Perhaps the jury believed defendant was living in a glass house." (Opinion page 38.) Perhaps. But perhaps the jury became misled and confused; perhaps there were erroneous instructions to the jury; perhaps the jury could not separate the evidence, introduced merely to show the enemy status of Herbert Haupt, the son, from the acts of the defendant, the father; perhaps the jury became prejudiced through the many exhibits, such as incendiary bombs, timing devices and other destructive devices, also introduced merely to show the enemy status of Herbert Haupt, perhaps the jury was affected by the fact, that we were at war, or the disloyal utterances made by Hans Haupt, as long as five years before his son left for Germany may have been a deciding factor.

Concerning Evidence re Exhibits, the Court states on page 43 of the opinion:

"As against the defendant this evidence was receivable to show the treason to which Herbert was a party. It was necessary for the Government to show treason and also that defendant was a party to said treason. This evidence tended to show treason. The burden was on the Government to show (a) a treasonable enterprise and (b) defendant was a party to it. This evidence was part of the proof tending to establish (a). And the crime of treason is not child's play. It's a most serious matter. In all its naked wickedness, it is shocking. To offer evidence that the actors 1927 used high power explosives to destroy war industries, to kill large bodies of workers, to obtain war secrets of great value to the enemy, was no doubt highly impressive and pursuasive with a jury of loyal American citizens. The complaint of counsel, however, should not be directed to the inadmissibility of such evidence. It should be directed to the action of defendant and his son. As against each of them such evidence would not have been harmful, had Hans and Herbert not been actors playing a leading role in the perpetration of said treason."

It is respectfully submitted that Herbert Haupt has never been charged with the crime of treason, nor tried therefor; nor had any high powered explosives been used to destroy war industries, or to kill large bodies of workers (contrary to the assumptions made on page 43 of the Court's opinion). No act of sabotage was ever committed either by Herbert Haupt or by the defendant. It has been the theory of the defense in the case at bar, that Herbert Haupt abandoned his mission after he reached America, and counsel believe such to have been the fact. We are informed that such defense was made on behalf of certain of the saboteurs at the military trial and is now confirmed by information recently released to the press by the Department of Justice.

The exhibits of explosive devices, admitted over defense objections, were not admissible against the defendant, and were not even connected up with Herbert Haupt. In fact, the exhibits and the entire testimony of Burger and of the FBI agents and experts was specifically restricted, when admitted in evidence, to show the enemy status of Herbert Haupt.

It was counsel's duty to object to incompetent evidence, just as it was counsel's duty to point out the criminal record of the witness Hamby, to which certain references are made on page 38 of the Court's opinion.

1928 III

THE JURY WAS ERRONEOUSLY INSTRUCTED WITH RESPECT TO THE QUESTION OF TREASONABLE INTENT OF THE DEFENDANT. DEFENDANT REQUESTS A REVIEW UPON THIS IMPORTANT QUESTION WHICH THE COURT SEEMS TO HAVE MISAPPREHENDED

The accused must intend to betray his country by means of the act charged; the act must be one that gives aid and comfort to the enemy; and the accused must commit the act with treasonable intent (Cramer v. United States, 325 U. S. 1).

A man cannot commit treason and not know it.

The case was tried on the erroneous theory that the specific treasonable intent was not required to be shown on each submitted overt act.

The Court instructed the jury in instructions Nos. 53 and 54 to the effect that the defendant in committing a treasonable act, need not be conscious of the specific thought that in doing the act, he is "going to commit treason."

The jury were further instructed by the Court, in instruction No. 49, that if they "believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did actually perform any of these other alleged overt acts which were not proven to the degree required by the Constitution, you may consider any such act in determining the question of intent with which the defendant may have performed any of the above overt acts submitted to your consideration and not withdrawn", etc.

Attention is called to the fact that this instruction does not even required the belief of the jury regarding the so-called "withdrawn" overt acts to be supported by any evidence whatsoever, and 1929 it particularly states that such acts need not be proved by two witnesses as required by the Constitution.

These instructions are directly at variance with the principles of law established in the Cramer case, viz.:

Page 21—325 U. S. 31:

"Of course, the overt acts of aid and comfort must be intentional as distinguished from merely negligent or 'undesigned ones. Intent in that limited sense is not in issue here. But to make treason the defendant not only must intend the act, but he must intend to betray his country by means of the act. * * *

Page 24—325 U. S. 34, 35:

"Every act, movement, deed and word of the defendant, charged to constitute treason, must be supported by the testimony of two witnesses. The two-witness principle is to interdict imputation of incriminating acts to the accused by circumstantial evidence or by evidence of a single witness. The prosecution cannot rely on evidence which does not meet the Constitutional test for overt acts to create any inference that the accused did other acts or did something more than was shown in the overt act, in order to make a giving of aid and comfort to the enemy. * * *

Pages 27 and 28—325 U. S. 39:

"But this transaction was not proven as the Government evidently hoped to do when the indictment was obtained. The overt acts based on it were expressly withdrawn from the jury, and Cramer has not been convicted of treason on account of such acts. We cannot sustain a conviction for the acts submitted on the theory that, even if insufficient, some unsubmitted ones may be resorted to as proof of treason."

Conviction was made doubly sure, and defendant's chance to have good motives considered by the jury with respect to his intent and purpose in doing the acts with which he was charged, was destroyed by the following charge contained in instruction No. 54, viz.:

"* * * the fact that his motive may not have been to aid the enemy is no defense."

and also that,

"* * * the fact that you may also believe that his motive in so doing, if you find that he did, was for example, to help his son, would not in such event change the fact that he had a criminal and treasonable intent."

1930 A further erroneous and most prejudicial instruction was given to the jury in instruction No. 58 to the effect that statements made by the defendant prior to our declaration of war with Germany (testified to by only one witness) might be considered by the jury, sic:

"* * * may be borne in mind by you in determining what his intent may have been after this country was at war with Germany, in committing, if you find beyond reasonable doubt that he did so commit, any of the various overt acts charged in the indictment and submitted to your consideration by the court in these instructions."

In the Cramer case, the Supreme Court held that:

Page 24—325 U. S. 35:

"The two-witness principle is to interdict imputation of incriminating acts to the accused by circumstantial evidence or by testimony of a single witness."

And the Court there made the further comment, as follows:

Page 31—325 U. S. 44:

"To use pre-war expressions of opposition to entering a war to convict of treason during the war is a dangerous procedure at best."

Needless to say, we subscribe to the comments made by his Honor, Judge Major in his dissenting opinion in the case at bar. For the foregoing reasons, and for the reasons stated in said dissenting opinion in the case at bar, we respectfully request that a rehearing may be granted herein to the defendant, and that upon such rehearing the judgment of conviction and sentence of life imprisonment may be reversed and set aside by this Honorable Court.

Respectfully submitted.

Answer to defendant's petition for rehearing

Filed Jan. 11, 1946

May it please the Court:

In his petition for rehearing, the defendant contends:

First: That the majority of the Court has misconstrued the law as enunciated in the Cramer case.

Second: That the majority of the Court erred in holding that Overt acts, Nos. 12, 20, 21, 22, and 23, all of which charged the harboring of the German saboteur, Herbert Haupt, were proved by the direct testimony of two witnesses.

1934 Third: The majority of the Court erred in holding that Overt Act No. 16, charging that Hans Haupt made a further payment in cash towards the purchase of an automobile and completed arrangements for this purchase, was proved by the direct testimony of two witnesses.

Fourth: Assuming full and sufficient proof by two witnesses had been made of Overt Acts Nos. 10, 11, 13 and 15, the majority of the Court nevertheless erred in holding that these acts, which were acts of accompanying Herbert Haupt to the Warner Motor Sales and to the homes of Grunau and Koch, constituted acts of treason under the Cramer decision.

Fifth: That there were "miscellaneous discrepancies" in the opinion of the majority of the Court.

Sixth: That instructions Nos. 49, 53, 54, and 58 were erroneous in law.

In support of his first contention the defendant argues that treasonable intent may not be proven by extraneous evidence and must be proven by two witnesses. This theory was thoroughly argued in the defendant's original brief and completely answered by the Government in its brief. The majority of this Court correctly held adversely to the defendant's contention. In holding against the defendant's contention, this Court fully and completely buttressed its views with liberal and applicable quotations from the Cramer case. Further discussion of this contention would be repetitious.

The second contention of the defendant is devoted to a quibble as to whether or not the testimony establishing the harboring of Herbert Haupt in the home of Hans Haupt was direct or circumstantial. We agree with the majority of the Court that the characterizing of such testimony as circumstantial rather than 1935 direct is the "extreme of tenuity." It is our firm conviction that the harboring of the enemy saboteur, Herbert Haupt, by the defendant, as alleged in each overt act, was conclusively established by the direct testimony of two witnesses. The proof showed that the building entrance into which the Haupts disappeared was the only entrance leading to their apartment. It further showed that they leased the apartment on the third floor. Two witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Kluczyk, the occupants of the first floor, testified that Herbert Haupt was not staying in their apartment or in the basement. Two witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Proost, the occupants of the second floor, testified that Herbert Haupt was not staying in their apartment. Numerous witnesses testified that the defendant, his wife, and Herbert Haupt, came in and out of the building in which the defendant resided, a great many times during the week in question, frequently together. Herbert Haupt went into and came out of the building thirty-five times during that week. Each and every entrance and exit made by Herbert Haupt during that time was testified to by the direct testimony of at least two witnesses. Two witnesses, Mr. Zerner and Mrs. Saure, testified that they were inside the defendant's apartment with the defendant, his wife, and Herbert Haupt, and carried on discussions with these individuals in the defendant's apartment. Numerous times F.B.I. agents saw lights either go on or off in the third floor apartment of Hans Haupt soon after the entry of Herbert Haupt and on occasions saw the son emerge in different garments than those he wore when he entered the building earlier. In the face of such testimony, it is truly the "extreme of tenuity" to contend that the evidence establishing the harboring of Herbert Haupt in his father's apartment, was circumstantial rather than direct.

The third contention is likewise without merit. It was 1936 raised in the defendant's original brief, and fully argued therein. The Government fully answered this contention in its original brief. In its Opinion, this Court completely and correctly sets forth the testimony establishing the commission of Overt Act No. 16. It did not misapprehend this evidence or misinterpret its significance. We feel that, under the circumstances, no useful purpose can be served by rearguing this point.

The fourth contention of the defendant, briefly stated, is that the acts of accompanying Herbert Haupt to the Warner Motor Sales and to the homes of Grunau and Koch, even though established by direct testimony of two witneses, are insufficient acts of treason under the Cramer decision, in that they were colorless and insignificant acts. This is the same argument that was made in the defendant's original brief and dwelled upon at length in oral argument. The Court has completely and correctly disposed of this contention adversely to defendant and a rediscussion of this point would serve no useful purpose. In their setting, as indicated by the Court, these acts were clearly treasonable.

The fifth contention of the defendant is entitled "Concerning Miscellaneous Facts and Contentions." Under this heading, the defendant, aside from finding fault with the use by the majority of this Court on page 43 of its Opinion of the word "used" immediately preceding the words "high power explosives to destroy war industries", when it apparently meant to employ the words "intended to use," the defendant contends that the majority of the Court misused the testimony of Burger in discussing on page 32 the purchase of an automobile and in discussing on page 43 the admissibility of the pictures of the boxes of ammunition which were cached on the beach in Florida, etc. The defendant, in passing, also criticizes the view of the majority of the Court that urgency existed in the purchase of the automobile and states that no urgency existed for the reason that the saboteurs were not to begin operations for 3 or 4 months. It is apparent from a reading of the Opinion of the majority of the Court that there has been no misuse of the testimony of Burger by this Court in its discussion of the legal sufficiency of Overt acts concerning the purchase of the automobile. Berger's testimony established the nature of the saboteur's mission and it was established by other witnesses that the defendant well knew the mission of Herbert Haupt and his urgent need to procure an automobile. In this connection, this Court's attention is particularly called to the testimony of Hamby as set forth in Bill of Exceptions 985.

1937

The defendant's claim that the exhibits, such as photographs of boxes of ammunition, establishing the enemy status of Herbert Haupt, and his mission here as an agent for Germany, was misused by this Court in the majority Opinion, has no merit, whatever. It is clear from the majority Opinion, that it regarded this evidence as establishing only one essential element of the crime, namely, that Herbert Haupt was an enemy of the United States. The other essential element of the crime, of course, was very definitely and clearly established by other evidence, which disclosed that the defendant treasonably gave aid and comfort to this enemy.

The sixth contention of the defendant concerns instructions Nos. 49, 53, 54, and 58. The arguments now made against the giving of these instructions by the trial court are identical with those previously advanced by the defendant in his earlier brief filed with this Court on this appeal, and since they were fully answered by the Government in its brief earlier filed with this Court, we see no necessity of reargueing the propriety of 1938 these instructions. The correctness of all the legal principles involved in each of these instructions was thoroughly considered by the Court in its Opinion, and the defendant's contention, now reiterated, was properly rejected.

We cannot close this reply to the defendant's Petition for Rehearing without answering the apparent misconception by Judge Major of the meaning and extent of the supplemental memorandum filed by the Government after oral argument of this cause. At no time has the Government adopted two theories of this case. At all times it has consistently advanced but one theory. This theory was advanced in the trial of this case and adhered to throughout all proceedings of this cause on appeal.

So that there be no misunderstanding we emphatically state that we believe it to be a correct principle of law that proof of one or more overt acts by the direct testimony of two witnesses is sufficient to authorize a conviction for treason. We further believe that the evidence introduced in this case fully supported the jury's verdict of guilt on any and all of the overt acts submitted.

We also affirm the correctness of Instructions 50 and 51 which as Judge Evans states told the jury that they were to find the defendant guilty if they found he performed any one of the treasonable overt acts submitted to which two witnesses had testified. As long as each of the submitted acts were attested to by two witnesses and were sufficient as acts of treason the instruction is perfectly correct. That was our belief in the trial court and that is our belief now.

Two obvious misconceptions are apparent in the Opinion of Judge Major. It is apparently his belief that the Government tried its case in the lower court upon the theory that there was no necessity for having all of the submitted overt acts constitutionally sufficient and proven by two witnesses, as long as there was one adequately proven treasonable act.
1939 That this belief never existed in the mind of Government counsel is apparent from the fact that they voluntarily withdraw from the Jury's consideration numberous Overt acts which were clearly Overt acts of treason, but which were only proven by one witness. As an example, we may point to the withdrawal of the overt acts testified to by Zerner and Eggert. The Government counsel were at all times consistent in their belief that the submitted overt acts should be sufficient in law and proven by two witnesses, as required by the Constitution. It was further the Government's conviction that each of the overt acts submitted to the jury were such acts.

On page 50 of his dissenting Opinion Judge Major states:

"The case was tried and the jury was instructed on the theory that proof of one or more overt acts by the direct testimony of two witnesses was sufficient to authorize a conviction. In seeking affirmance in this court, it is conceded by the Government itself, that such is not the law and that a reversal is required, if there was a failure of proof as to any one of the overt acts submitted." [Emphasis supplied.]

The Government in its Supplemental Memorandum did not concede that the instructions referred to in the above quotation enunciated an incorrect principle of law. We stated, in substance, only that there must be direct proof by two witnesses to each treasonable overt act submitted to the jury because of the general verdict returned by it and because of the giving of Instructions Nos. 50 and 51. It was our belief that in the light of those instructions (which undoubtedly correctly stated the law and which, contrary to the Opinion of Judge Major, we did not concede to be an erroneous enunciation of a legal principle governing the law of treason) and in the light of the general verdict the submission of a legally insufficient or unproven act might require a re-1940 versal by the court. It was further our belief, of course, and is our belief now that a reversal would be improper for the reason that the evidence supported the jury's verdict of guilt on any and all of the overt acts submitted.

Of course, this is by no means a concession that a conviction for treason requires that the jury find that a defendant performed more than one of several legally sufficient submitted acts of treason. Under the Constitution only one overt act need be proven.[1] Therefore, if a defendant were shown to have committed only one treasonable act, proved by the necessary two witnesses to that same Act, he could be guilty of the crime of treason.

For example, let us say that two Overt acts are submitted to the jury. As to Act No. 1, there is no contest. Two witnesses clearly establish that to be an act of treason. As to Act No. 2, there is a contest. Two witnesses affirm that this act (an act of treason) was committed by the defendant. Two other witnesses, however, contend that the defendant did not perform this act, so that the jury, as the triers of the facts, must determine, as a matter of credibility, which set of witnesses is telling the truth. In such a situation it most certainly would not be erroneous to instruct the jury that they may convict if they find that one of the two acts was committed by the defendant. As long as both acts are legally sufficient acts and as long as two witnesses attest to both acts, then either act, if believed by the jury, would warrant a verdict of guilty.

[1] Judge Major in expressing the opinion of the court on the first appeal of this cause (United States v. Haupt, 136 F. (2d) 661, 665) stated:

"The Constitutional requirement of two Witnesses to the same overt Act' forms no part of the definition of the offense. It relates solely to the proof required before a conviction can be had. The crime itself may be established in the same manner as any other crime, but before there can be a conviction on act in its promotion must be established by two witnesses." [Italics supplied.]

The Government has in no way shifted its position. In-1941 structions Nos. 50 and 51 have a most solid basis in the law, the Constitution itself, which states, "There shall be no conviction of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act." It will be noted that the word used is "act" and not "acts." There is no authority whatsoever for the contention that more than one overt act must be proven to convict of the crime of treason.

Conclusion

In closing, the Government most respectfully submits that the majority of this court thoroughly and correctly analyzed the evidence and correctly enunciated the law of treason insofar as it is applicable to this case. We know of no instance where a Court of Appeals has analyzed the facts and law relative to a case with greater care, industry, and irrefutable logic than is disclosed by the opinion of the majority of the Court in this case. Every contention advanced by the defendant has been thoroughly explored and has been carefully and exhaustively considered. The result is, in our opinion, eminently correct, both in law and in fact. We most earnestly urge that the Defendant's Petition for Rehearing be denied.

Respectfully submitted.

It is ordered by the Court that the petition for a rehearing of this cause be, and the same is hereby, denied. Hon. J. Earl Major filed a written opinion this day, dissenting from the order of the majority of the Court denying the petition for a rehearing.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PLAINTIFF-APPELLEE

vs.

HANS MAX HAUPT, DEFENDANT-APPELLANT

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division.

On petition for rehearing

January 24, 1946

Before EVANS, MAJOR, and KERNER, Circuit Judges

Petition for Rehearing denied. MAJOR, Circuit Judge, dissenting. Ordinarily, there is no occasion for a dissenter to analyze an answer to a petition for rehearing. In the instant case, however, the government has so completely demonstrated the fallacy of its position that some further comment seems to be in order. The government asserts that the writer of the dissenting opinion has misconceived the situation. The writer admits that such a characterization of him is often in order. In the instant case, however, I think it can be demonstrated by their own words that it is the learned counsel for the government who have not only misconceived the situation but have exposed their failure to grasp the fundamental issues of the case. As a famous American was prone to say, "Let's look at the record."

I only desire to examine the government's present position as stated in its answer to the petition for rehearing concerning 1945 that which I have heretofore labeled as the two theories, inconsistent in their nature, upon which the judgment is to be affirmed: All through the government's most recent exposition runs the basic fallacy epitomized in the last paragraph of its answer. "Instructions No. 50 and No. 51 have a most solid basis in the law, the Constitution itself, which states, 'There shall be no conviction of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act.' It will be noted that the word used is 'act' and not 'acts.' There is no authority whatsoever for the contention that more than one over' act must be proven to convict of the crime of treason."

Of course, as an abstract proposition that is the law, with which I doubt any member of the Bench or Bar would take issue. The "fact is, however, that it is entirely beside the point and wholly irrelevant to any issue in this case. This abstract proposition would be pertinent in a case where only one overt act was submitted to the jury. Here, however, twelve of such acts were submitted and the question is whether under such circumstances proper proof of one act is sufficient to authorize a conviction or whether all of the submitted acts must be properly proven.

The answer states: "It is apparently his belief (Judge Major's) that the Government tried its case in the lower court upon the theory that there was no necessity for having all of the submitted overt acts * * * proven by two witnesses, as long as there was one adequately proven treasonable act." The answer then asserts: "That this belief never existed in the mind of Government counsel * * *." How this disclaimer can be advanced, in view of the fact that the jury was authorized by the court's instructions to convict if one act had been sufficiently proven, is beyond my comprehension. Not only did I think that the government tried its case on the theory stated, but the majority must also have thought so. The opinion aptly states: "In essence, these instructions told the jury that they were to find the defendant guilty if they found he performed any one of the treasonable overt acts submitted, to which acts two witnesses had testified."

In the interim between the trial of the case and its presentation to this court, the Cramer decision was rendered by the Supreme Court. By that decision a serious question was raised as to the validity of the theory embodied in the court's instructions. Government's counsel, after mature deliberation, in a supple-1946 mental brief stated its position as follows: "It would seem from a review of the authorities, including Cramer v. United States (also citing other cases), that the failure to prove * * * any of the submitted overt acts would require a reversal of the conviction." In other words, it was the government's position that proof of all the overt acts was required and that the failure to prove any of such acts would (not might, as asserted in the answer) require a reversal.

So, surely there can be no doubt but that the case was tried and submitted to the jury on the theory that sufficient proof as to one of the submitted overt acts would sustain a judgment of conviction and that it was presented to this court on the theory that proof of all the submitted overt acts was required.

Notwithstanding that these two diametrically opposed and inconsistent theories have been advanced by the government, one in the trial court and the other in this court, the government in its answer boldly asserts: "At no time has the Government adopted two theories of this case. At all times it has consistently advanced but one theory. This theory was advanced in the trial of this case and adhered to throughout all proceedings of this cause on appeal."

The following paragraph in the answer demonstrates not only the confusion attending the labor of government's counsel but it reaches heights of inconsistency rarely found in a legal document: "We also affirm the correctness of Instructions 50 and 51 which as Judge Evans states told the jury that they were to find the defendant guilty if they found he performed any one of the treasonable overt acts submitted to which two witnesses had testified. As long as each of the submitted acts were attested to by two witnesses and were sufficient as acts of treason the instruction is perfectly correct. That was our belief in the trial court and that is our belief now." Assuming that the word "attested" in the second sentence of this paragraph means proved, then the paragraph as a whole carries the inescapable and absurd meaning that the jury could convict upon proper proof of one act, providing 1917 it was also determined, in some unknown manner and by some undisclosed authority, that the other eleven acts were also proven in the manner required by the Constitution.

The answer also states: "So that there be no misunderstanding we emphatically state that we believe it to be a correct principle of law that proof of one or more overt acts by the direct testimony of two witnesses is sufficient to authorize a conviction for treason." The answer then proceeds to contradict this statement. Referring to the concession made in the government's supplemental brief, the answer states: "We stated, in substance, only that there must be direct proof by two witnesses to each treasonable overt act submitted to the jury * * *. It was our belief that, in the light of those instructions * * * and in the light of the general verdict the submission of a * * * unproven act might (in the brief it was the word 'would' and not 'might') require a reversal by the court." I admit my inability to follow a contention so patently preposterous. By these two statements we are told that it is the government's position that proof of one of the submitted overt acts by the direct testimony of two witnesses is sufficient, but that unless all of the submitted overt acts are proven by the direct testimony of two witnesses a reversal is required.

I do not withdraw from the view that the government tried the case on one theory and presented it to this court on another. The record and the answer filed to the petition for rehearing make that conclusion inescapable. The law on this feature of the case either is that proper proof of one act is sufficient or that proper

---

If this assertion be correct, it is pertinent to observe, even though of minor importance, that it stamps government's counsel as men of tremendous prophetic vision. They must have anticipated the holding of the Supreme Court in the Cramer case, otherwise, that decision alone would have necessitated a shifting of position. As already pointed out, government's counsel so recognized in its supplemental brief filed in this court.

proof must be made as to all of the submitted acts. There can be no middle ground.

If the law requires proper proof as to all the submitted overt acts, as I think it does and as the government conceded in this court, a reversal is required even though all of such submitted overt acts have been properly proven. (As originally shown, I disagree with the conclusion of the majority that all of the submitted overt acts were properly proven.) This is so for the reason that the case was tried and submitted to the jury on the theory that proper proof of one act was sufficient to authorize a conviction. If proper proof of all the acts is required, then the theory on which the case was submitted to the jury is erroneous, and prejudicially so.

1948 I would allow the petition for rehearing and reverse the judgment.
